Santoro feels fortunate to have been raised in a working class family.

"My parents have instilled in me a great sense of values and I appreciate things so much more than most people," Santoro said.

Coish spoke of the dire economic situations which some students are placed in, and said that they receive little to no assistance or sympathy from the University.

"I know a lot of people are faced with money problems and when it spirals out of control and they face suspension, eviction or expulsion," Coish said. "Students who have financial problems get treated pretty shabbily. It is one of my dreams that the students of color and the white working class students will form a coalition on this campus, work towards consciousness raising and finally make some changes."

■ alumni

continued from page 1

teaching, research and community service, Goodhue said, and to eventually fund an endowed faculty chair.

Goodhue also told the Senate not to worry about Board of Higher Education Chairman James Carlin's recent attacks on tenure.

"His bombastic attacks are nothing more than that," Goodhue said. "If they become more, he will experience my fury and the fury of our 170,000 alumni."

Faculty Senate President John Bracey said he was reassured by the support of the Alumni Association and the administration on the issue of tenure.

"We should be aware that we are not in this fight alone," Bracey said. "We have strong support in our alumni and our administration."

In other business, the Research Library Council presented the last three white papers (preliminary plans) on library restructuring to the Senate.

The papers are the result of the library staff's planning efforts to improve the library system at UMass in the coming years.

They outline goals for the library system and offer possible ways of meeting those goals. For example, one goal is to improve the services and appearances of the main floor. An expansion into the current courtyard area is one possible method of achieving this goal which is outlined.

Julie Brigham-Grette, the acting chair of the council, asked for faculty response to the papers, while Margot Crist, Director of Libraries, said it is essential to plan for the future of the library system.

"We are seeing a timeline where these facilities will be less and less adequate in the coming years," Crist said. "Absolutely we have to think of what the future is for those spaces."

Correction

Wednesday's article entitled "A nice mix of comedy and safe sex," incorrectly implied that Not Ready for Bedtime Players actor Brian Burns has the AIDS virus. The character he portrays in the sex-education theater production has AIDS. The Collegian regrets the error.

"I'm wide awake
I'm not sleeping..."
When you snooze, you loose, so write for NEWS, or something...

Pearl Street NIGHTCLUB
PARTY MUSIC FROM:
Beastie Boys
Dave Matthews
Coolio · Beck
Bjork... and more
10 Pearl St, Northampton, MA
413-584-7771
ANIMAL HOUSE
Every Friday Night
ABSOLUTE MAYHEM
1.50 16oz Drafts
18+ • 21+ No Cover
Tooters & Jello Shots
MEET OTHER AREA COLLEGE STUDENTS
Dispated Drivers: Free Admission/Free Soda

Hungry?
Call 586.7772
$5.99
Large Pepperoni
$10.99
Two Large Cheese Pizzas
MENTION THIS AD TO RECEIVE SPECIALS
PIZZA
PAPA JOHN'S
331 Russell St • Rte 9 • Hadley
Better Ingredients.
Better Pizza.
No Limit • No Coupon Necessary • Offer expires 11/30/97

LAUREN KOSKY \ COLLEGIAN

Bird's eye view
A view from high atop Herter Hall gives us a bird's eye view of the goings on at Haigis Mall.

■ life

continued from page 1

with our spirituality.

"There is a relationship between how one lives this life and the nature of the soul after death. It is not permissible for us to know completely what is beyond this life. If we knew what the next life was like, we would not want to stay here," Rutstein said.

The panel discussion was moderated by UMass Baha'i junior Erica Stengel.

"[The panel discussion] is such a wonderful opportunity for all these religions to share ideas," Stengel said.

According to Will Johnston, a history professor at UMass, the Inter-Religious Project was created only eight weeks ago.

"Eight weeks ago none of this existed. With the help of very active students, well over 200 individuals came to one or more [inter-religious dialogue] event," Johnston said.

The week of lectures was planned and hosted by students from the UMass Inter-Religious Project. A follow-up discussion and planning for future events will take place on Wednesday, Dec. 3, from 7–9 p.m. in Campus Center 805.

Community rallies behind parents of new sextuplets

By Sharon Cohen
Associated Press

CARLISLE, Iowa— They rolled out the new van yesterday with seven new names brightly stenciled on the side.

Seven car seats will follow. And apple juice for 16 years. By then, it'll almost be time for those seven college scholarships. Oh, and don't forget the seven years of free cable. It will be hooked up, of course, in a new house, designed to accommodate 14 little feet.

Bobbi and Kenny McCaughey took their place in medical history on Wednesday when they became parents of septuplets, four boys and three girls. By Thursday, it seemed as if they had won the lottery, seven times over.

Corporations across America stumbled over each other to be the first to show their generosity, pledging everything from free groceries for a year, a lifetime supply of diapers (that's about 31,500), toys, a washer and dryer, lumber, steel, paint, windows and other materials needed to give the McCaugheys a new roof over their heads.

"It's very humbling," Ken McCaughey Sr., grandfather of the seven, said yesterday outside Missionary Baptist Church.

The outpouring of gifts — including a 1998, 15-seat van donated by the dad's employer, a Chevy dealer — is just part of the grand plan to help the McCaugheys as they raise their septuplets and 2-year-old daughter, Mikayla.

Townspeople in this hamlet of 3,400 — make that 3,407, according to a new sign here — are also doing everything they can.

"We get people calling all the time saying, 'You make sure you put me on that baby-sitting list!'" said grandmother Valerie McCaughey, who herself received a steady stream of casseroles. Ellen Warner, a neighbor, might be on the top of that list. "I plan on running across the street every now and then to say, 'OK, it's time to take a break,'" said Mrs. Warner, the mother of two boys. "Monetary [assistance] is fine, but they'll need the emotional support, too."

Kaczynski shows annoyance as Unabomber trial heats up

By Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Theodore Kaczynski showed a flash of annoyance yesterday when a prospective juror disparaged the Unabomber's 35,000-word, anti-technology manifesto.

"I read part of the manifesto and quit reading it after a while," said a businessman during jury questioning.

The defendant, an irritated expression on his face, took off his glasses, crossed his arms across his chest and rocked back and forth in his chair at the man's remarks.

The man was dismissed from the jury pool after saying he strongly believed Kaczynski is the Unabomber, and insisting that he would not be able to set aside his opinion.

Questioning of potential jurors has focused on their views of the death penalty. U.S. District Judge Garland Burrell Jr. is seeking a pool of 64 prospects from which lawyers will choose the final 12 plus six alternates.

Five prospects were allowed to remain yesterday, bringing the total of qualified panelists to 37.

Prospective jurors interviewed yesterday said they wished society didn't need the death penalty, but said if warranted by a horrible crime, they could impose what a middle-aged man of Vietnamese ancestry called "a necessary evil."

"It would be unpleasant, but in life we have to make some uncomfortable decisions," he said.

As jury selection proceeds, prosecutors and the defense have been skirmishing over how much jurors will be told about Kaczynski's mental health.

Wednesday, the government released undated journal entries in which Kaczynski allegedly wrote, "I intend to start killing people," and insisted he was not a "sickie."

Documents filed by psychiatrists for the defense, meanwhile, portrayed the defendant as a tortured genius plagued by schizophrenia but unwilling to acknowledge he was mentally ill. Prosecutors have objected to the defense introducing claims of mental illness at trial because Kaczynski has refused to be examined by government psychiatrists.

The 55-year-old former professor is accused of 16 bomb attacks that killed three people and injured 29. He is charged here with four bombings that killed two Sacramento men and maimed two others. The government is seeking the death penalty.

■ Iraq

continued from page 1

down. Officials emphasized that the United States stood ready to veto any efforts by Russia or others to ease the United Nations' tough sanctions against Iraq.

"There is absolutely no understanding. There's no deal. There's no concessions," Berger said at a White House briefing.

However, officials also said the United States would support increasing the amount of oil Iraq is permitted to sell to raise money to buy food and medicine.

While the United States asserted that Saddam had failed, the three-week crisis exposed divisions among allies about the use of force against Iraq. And it allowed Saddam to once again assert himself on the world stage. But it also focused world attention on Iraq's efforts to acquire weapons of mass destruction.

The test of the allies' unity and resolve could come as early as today when a U.N. special commission meets to make arrangements for inspections. Russia, with some French support, may try to narrow the monitoring. Saddam has contended the U.S. inspectors were actually spies.

Clinton, at a prayer breakfast with religious leaders, said, "The United States must remain and will remain resolute" in preventing Saddam from developing nuclear, chemical or biological weapons. "In the coming days we will wait and see whether he does, in fact, comply with the will of the international community."

Iraq reversed course under an arrangement brokered by Russia, which promised to press for the lifting of sanctions. Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz said Russia had promised to work for a "just and fair diplomatic solution." But he acknowledged that the U.N. Security Council's permanent members had offered no specific commitments.

The United States declared it was not party to the Russian deal. "It is not binding on us or on the U.N.," Berger said. "It is not something that we are obligated to in any respect, or the U.N."

■ Hoffa

continued from page 1

the court, neither the interim election officer nor the membership will know on Dec. 5 the status of previously nominated candidates," Mansfield wrote. Edelstein, who administers a 1989 consent decree the union signed with the Justice Department to avoid racketeering charges, has swiftly granted requests for delays on two previous occasions this year.

The order to investigate Hoffa came Monday from Kenneth Conboy, another court-appointed officer involved in the federally monitored cleanup of the union. At issue is $1.8 million in small, unitemized donations to Hoffa.

Conboy disqualified Carey from the rerun, ruling that he had taken part in a series of schemes that resulted in $885,000 being funneled from the union treasury into his campaign coffers. The 1996 contest was annulled.

Carey has said he will appeal, but there is doubt that Edelstein will reverse Conboy. Meanwhile, a federal grand jury in New York and the union's Independent Review Board were investigating. The Carey campaign welcomed Mansfield's petition, expressing confidence that her probe would spell trouble for Hoffa. Hoffa spokesman Richard Leebove accused Mansfield and the Justice Department of conspiring to give Carey's supporters time to find a successor.

"Obviously the opposition is in complete disarray, and this is nothing but a stall tactic to help their next chosen candidate put a campaign together," Leebove said.

Carey's decision to appeal squelched talk among his supporters about a new candidate to take on Hoffa.

George Cashman, a Boston local president, was interested in a run but lacked the support of the union's hard-core reformers. Tom Leedham, head of the union's warehouse division, was another contender with close ties to the reform caucus. Teamsters for a Democratic Union.

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
Buy at wholesale prices right at the show! Save up to 60 companies (150 exhibit tables) featuring the IBM/PC compatible market. From full systems to libraries of CDs. It's all here. Adm $7.48, with ad $6.48 after 1:00 pm $4 ea w/ad only
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST
SUN, NOV 23

HOCKEY EAST
UMass HOCKEY
Vs.
PC HOCKEY
7pm Friday, November 21 at the
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst

Wanted
Professionals
Team of PC Experts
• C/C++PROGRAMMERS
• PC TECHNICIANS
• NETWORK ENGINEERS
• SALES
• Serving New England Since 1979
• Three Locations: Southwick, Worcester and Milford, MA
• 70+ Full Time Employees
visit our website @ http://www.wca.com
Please Fax or Mail Your Resume to:
Whalley Computer Associates, Inc.
Attn: Personnel - Service Dept.
549 College Highway
Southwick, MA 01077
fax# 413-569-4320

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Tax act is good for working women

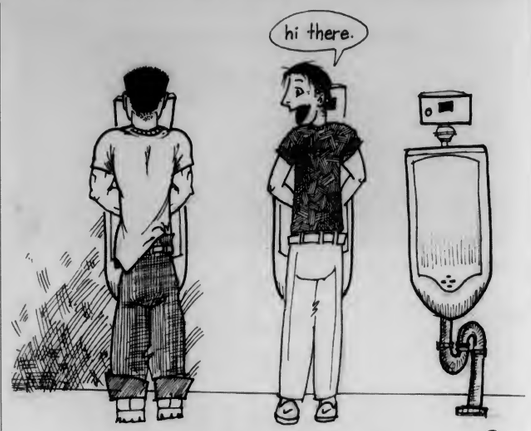
Newt Gingrich supports it. The Christian Coalition supports it. The Traditional Values Coalition supports it. And so should every feminist in America. I'm referring to the Marriage Tax Elimination Act, a measure recently introduced in the House by Republican Reps. David McIntosh of Indiana and Jerry Weller of Illinois.

The bill aims to eliminate the "marriage penalty" from our tax system. What is the marriage penalty? Basically, it is the way that the tax code forces married spouses to file their taxes jointly and thus pushes them into a higher tax bracket. It's why a married couple who each earn $30,000 a year will have a higher tax bill than an unmarried couple with the exact same earnings. The Marriage Tax Elimination Act would give married couples the option of filing separately so that they may avoid this penalty. And while it has largely been viewed as a conservative measure, its main beneficiaries will be working women. Because they are the ones who have suffered the brunt of the marriage penalty. In fact, traditional, single-earner families do not even pay a marriage penalty. But for some reason, Democrats have shied away from the bill. At press time only about a dozen of the bill's 222 supporters were Democrats.

FOCUS ON WOMEN

SARA ECKEL

"This is a bill that Democrats and feminists should definitely support," says Edward McCaffery, law professor at the University of Southern California and the California Institute of Technology. "But unfortunately, they are asleep at the wheel." As McCaffery points out in his recent book "Taxing Women" (University of Chicago Press), the "marriage penalty" is essentially a tax on working wives. Because the joint filing system compels married couples to identify a primary earner and a secondary earner, and usually the wife falls into the latter category. Therefore, from an accountant's point of view, the wife's first dollar of income is taxed at the point where her husband's income has left her. If the husband is making substantially more money than the wife, the couple may even conclude that it is not worth it for the wife to earn income. In fact, McCaffery's book details the plight of one woman who realized that her job was actually losing money for her family.



The marriage penalty is not the only factor that can make working prohibitively expensive for American women. Social Security is another problem. In fact, when the system was designed in the 1930s, discouraging wives from working outside of the home was actually one of the intents of this system. McCaffery quotes a leading member of the Social Security Council as saying that the system would "take away the urge (for the married woman) to go back and compete with the single woman."

Here's how it works: The secondary earner (again, usually the wife) is entitled to Social Security credit for her own OR half of her husband's income, whichever is greater. So women who don't earn income and women who earn less than half of what their husband earns are both getting the same Social Security credits. In both instances, the family is receiving no Social Security credits on the wife's labors, and 150 percent credit on the husband's. Because the wife will receive the exact same benefits whether she works or not, the incentive is for her not to work.

It's the same with health benefits. Two-income couples usually end up with superfluous benefits. That might not seem like a big problem, but think of how much better off they'd be if they had the option of receiving cash payments instead. This would come at no cost to the employer, as the company would merely transfer the money being sent to the insurance agency and instead put it into the pocket of the employee.

Hopefully, someone in Congress will tackle the issues of Social Security and medical benefits for working wives. I had always assumed that someone would be a Democrat. But as the marriage-penalty bill has proved, one cannot be fussy about these things. If the Democrats won't throw working women this lifeline, then we should be only too happy to take it from the Republicans.

Sarah Eckel is a nationally syndicated columnist. Send comments to the author in the care of this newspaper or send her e-mail at saraeum@aol.com.

Letters to the Editor

Fan of Live responds

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Kevin Monahan's review of the Live concert held last Thursday night at the Mullins Center.

I believe that Monahan was completely off base with the entire article. Not only was it a great show, but one well worth raving about. Before Monahan makes such harsh criticisms, I think he should get his facts straight.

First of all, they did not perform for "barely an hour." In fact, with the encore, the show lasted almost two hours. Next, the band did not ignore music off their first album. "Beauty of Grey," which is on Mental Jewelry, happened to be the second song they played. As far as them playing mostly music off their "mediocre" album Secret Samadhi, this is only logical seeing as how it was "The Secret Samadhi World Tour."

Monahan's criticisms about Edward Kowalczyk's performance, referred to as "bad acting," are completely unfounded. Kowalczyk expressed an energy that can only exist through a live performance. Regardless of the performance, the music itself should be more important than the actual presentation.

If Monahan were a true Live fan, he would have been interested in any of the songs they performed, not just their most famous tracks, or in his words, "songs that earned them a fan base."

Taking everything into account, I think it is fair to say that Monahan's malicious review was preposterously inaccurate. Thursday night's Live concert was a great show, and while Monahan is entitled to his own opinion, as a journalist he should not exaggerate and distort the facts.

Cortney Drury
Southwest

Welcome to (D)U(MB)Mass

To the Editor:

Just when things were looking up at UMass — after we suffered a 32 percent cut in state support (the biggest in the nation), four years of no pay raises for faculty, buildings and classrooms left unrepaired and a library budget so decimated the University almost lost its accreditation status — Acting Governor Celluci and his attack dog James Carlin have unleashed a new assault. This time they're after the faculty. They want an end to tenure, an increase in faculty teaching load, and a two-tier system in which some faculty teach and others do research.

As bad as this latest assault on the faculty may be, it pales beside an even more serious problem for students seeking a first-rate education at UMass. Faculty are now retiring. In droves. And they are not being replaced. A potential disaster lies around the corner. In the next few years, close to three quarters of the professors in many departments will have reached retirement age. These losses are coming on the heels of others. In order to cut costs in the wake of the state budget crisis of the late 1980's, the University lost two hundred tenured faculty and replaced less than 5 percent of them. Astonishingly, there are at present no plans to hire new faculty. In fact, the University plans to cut at least another 200 professors.

Thus far, the UMass faculty have managed to staff their courses and continue to function productively in the face of sustained adversity. The faculty cannot continue to do so if new professors are not hired in large numbers. Starting now. And the high-caliber people UMass has attracted in the past will not come to a university where tenure is not an option, where research and teaching are not integrated, where distinguished faculty achievements are insulted and ignored instead of rewarded. If corporate-minded politicians who want to continue "downsizing" UMass have their way, students will soon be going to a dumbed-down university, an anti-university where they may come to class only to find themselves waiting, and waiting, and waiting for a professor to show up to teach them. Welcome to (D)U(MB)Mass.

Richard Burt
Assoc. Professor of English

Dissatisfied with coverage on Iraq

To the Editor:

I would like to express my dissatisfaction to Christine Soh, the Collegian's Multicultural Affairs editor's editorial regarding the American press's treatment of Iraq, which appeared in the Wednesday, Nov. 19, 1997 issue of the Collegian. The editorial was Ms. Soh's attempt to fight back against the "malicious" Western media, which has stigmatized Iraqis and fellow Middle Easterners as fanatic terrorists, or at least as active haters of the U.S. Ms. Soh claims that the U.S. press offers "only generalizations and distortions" of the truth regarding the nature of Iraqi society, and concludes the article by basically saying that there should be an end to "the ostracism of entire ethnic groups or specific ideologies." Despite her noble proposal, Ms. Soh very conspicuously points the finger at the state of affairs in Israel twice, claiming that the issues surrounding Israel are heavily ignored by the press in the fifth paragraph, and makes a vague assumption as to what is "the opinion of most Middle Eastern people, not to mention the rest of the world, on the question of Palestine" in the end of the seventh paragraph.

In case Ms. Soh hadn't noticed, the Iraqi government has very clearly violated the United Nations' code regarding inspection of nuclear weapons. It is for this reason that the western press has shifted its interest towards Iraq, and uncovered a stream of protests against the U.S. and Israel in the process, which were heavily documented. This had as much to do with the Iraqi government as it did with the western press. If the Iraqi government was so concerned for its public image it wouldn't construct nuclear weapons, or allow these vicious protests to go on in front of western photographers. The Iraqi government is obviously interested in "War Propaganda," but Ms. Soh only mentions the Iraqi government once in her editorial, and fails to mention the nuclear weapons issue as a possibly valid reason for the western press's ostracism of Iraq and its inhabitants.

Why did Ms. Soh mention Israel twice in her article? neither one of her ill-founded remarks had any place in an article that was suppose to discourage "ostracism of entire ethnic groups or specific ideologies." I agree with Ms. Soh that the Israeli national affairs are in the spotlight of the Western press at the moment, but her assumption that the press is generally ignoring the pressures put on Israel, and the sad state of affairs in Israel is simply ludicrous. The respective tones in the ending of Ms. Soh's seventh paragraph ("Lack of news coverage given to the opinion of most middle eastern people, not to mention the rest of the world on the issue of Palestine"), and her other comment regarding the Israeli issue are insinuating that the world is strictly pro-Palestine. In reality, the world is heavily torn between humanitarian sentiments for the Palestinians and the concern for Israeli security. This is a perfect example of the type of vicious "generalizations and distortions" which Ms. Soh is trying so hard to protest against, and by writing opinions that will invariably "ostracize" an ethnic group (Israel in this case) Ms. Soh does nothing short of contradicting herself.

Michael Colin McNamara

Mid–East peace policy

To the Editor:

In response to the Nov. 19 Collegian article, "U.S. Mid– East policy continues to implode," I want to express my aversion to the argumentative and insulting nature of this article. I'm no journalist, and I'm not pretending to be one here, but I would like to encourage writing that genuinely seeks the truth while offering real solutions. I also want to initiate alternate views to some of the issues brought up by Hussein Ibish.

The language of this article is filled with petty and demeaning statements with factual reporting seemingly only included to illustrate irrelevant details. Hussein Ibish portrays the view that he is against everything American and that Iraq has always been in the right. The article draws a hard line against this conflict and seems unconcerned with truth or facts, only winning a war of words against the other side, presumably the equally biased die hard pro–American voices. I think it is clear that both governments have performed poorly in this conflict and that, as in every reality, the lines are muddled in shades of gray and there are very few good guy/bad guy scenarios.

None of this is conveyed when degrading descriptions are used to belittle opponents. There was rhetoric like this for every antagonist to Iraq in this article. The U.S. was continually called the American Empire, the Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu was the Israeli chieftain, the Israelis as a whole were called recalcitrant. (I had to look that one up, if you're wondering it means resistant to authority.) and the head of the U.N. Weapons Commission, Richard Butler, was described as uncouth without explanation. Madeline Albright was even put down for investigating the suffering of her family during WWII. I don't know why that's a bad thing, unless it was to explain that she's Jewish and maybe that alone implies that she is an enemy to Iraq.

I am sure that when CNN or The New York Times uses this kind of language to describe the Iraqi government, Hussein Ibish would be the first to condemn their unprofessional attitude, and rightfully so. Why then should those tactics be used on such an embarrassing scale?

From my point of view, the article could have a very strong message, saying that the U.N. sanctions against Iraq, influenced by the U.S. are wrongfully persecuting the Iraqi people. It is a common account in the history of American foreign policy, where the U.S. manipulates conditions in other countries creating conditions favorable to the U.S. In my opinion, this has lead to countless acts of immorality. But in Iraq, I believe that the policy was at least motivated by a clear and universally beneficial goal of allowing the Iraqi citizens to establish a new government. This policy, though, has failed miserably, and innocent people are paying for it.

Instead of focusing on this, however, the article seemed insistent on trivializing the threat of Saddam Hussein and the need to monitor him. I believe that this argument is pure emotional opinion and not based on the facts. This recent conflict began when Richard Butler wrote Iraq's Deputy Prime Minister and asked that the U.N. Weapons Commission be allowed access to certain suspected weapons facilities. The request went unanswered and then the U.S. members of the commission were ejected from the country and Iraq threatened to shoot down American U–2 spy planes viewing Iraqi territory. That's not proof, but it doesn't sound like somebody with nothing to hide.

According to The Boston Globe, Iraq imported 17 tons of the raw materials to make anthrax. When the weapons commission first went into Iraq, they found videotapes of anthrax being tested on animals. British intelligence estimates that Iraq has 900 pounds of anthrax and still has the missiles to deploy them. Considering Saddam Hussein's past record, that is a risk that has to be addressed.

It is naive to think that Iraq is no longer a threat to other countries. It is the U.N.'s and America's responsibility to make sure that Iraq is not given another military opportunity to attack another country. On the contrary, they would be held accountable if Saddam Hussein was allowed to cause further destruction in the region.

I believe that it is necessary for the weapons inspectors to return to Iraq and that the country be under continued surveillance. It also seems equally obvious that the sanctions be reevaluated. This is apparently where the conflict is headed as Russia negotiates a settlement and the U.S. offers its token relief by proposing to allow Iraq to sell more oil to buy food and medicine. Despite the threatening stances taken by the U.S. and Iraq it appears, and hopefully will turn out that peaceful settlements can be made.

Steve Barg
Amherst

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor

Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independents from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1984. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The Christmas season is upon us, let the greatest hits parade begin

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

BEYOND AND BACK
X
Elektra

ALL FOR NOTHING/NOTHING FOR ALL
The Replacements
Reprise

Every fall, as the inevitably inane Christmas decorations begin appearing out of nowhere, box sets and best-of-retrospectives by old favorites start crowding out new releases on record store shelves. They're sure sellers for the holiday season, and any profits are pure gravy for the labels, which in most cases already own the material.

Billy Joel, the Doors, the Beach Boys, Joan Jett & The Blackhearts, John Mellencamp, the Pixies and Soundgarden are just some of the proven moneymakers that have been conveniently repackaged this year. But in a new twist, this year's list also includes a couple bands that — despite their huge influence on later "alternative" outfits — never quite succeeded on the same level: X and the Replacements.

With newer alt–rock entries stiffing left and right despite the industry's best efforts, capitalizing on nostalgia for the progenitors is a logical move. But it's certainly not as easy as slapping together another Billy Joel collection: fans of X and the 'Mats tended to be obsessive about them — they bought all their records. So the compilers of each two-CD retrospective had to dig deep into the vaults to find stuff those listeners might be missing.

The seminal proto–alternative outfit X gets the retrospective treatment on Beyond and Back.

COURTESY KEN MARCUS

X's Beyond and Back (Elektra) pulls it off, including some genuinely relevant rarities in the context of a vivid portrait of the band's history. But almost all the "previously unreleased" material on the Replacements' All For Nothing/Nothing For All (Reprise) should have stayed that way, and the set brushes over some of the band's best work as if it never even happened.

Beyond and Back is a flashback to the last time the Los Angeles music scene really mattered, back when the city was an incubator for hardcore punk. The booklet is filled with fond, witty reminiscences by the band's contemporaries, including Mike Ness of Social Distortion, Pat Smear of the Germs, original Black Flag singer Keith Morris, Concrete Blonde's Johnette Napolitano and Go-Go Jane Wiedlin. There are also some by famous fans — Jakob Dylan, Matthew Sweet, and, oddly, Jennifer Jason Leigh. While they're all blatantly nostalgic, they do evoke the climate that spawned X.

When 1982's Under the Big Black Sun and 1983's More Fun in the New World failed to attract anything more than critical acclaim, X responded by nudging its sound toward the mainstream. It proved to be the band's undoing. Billy Zoom left soon after the faux–metal flop Ain't Love Grand and See How We Are, recorded with Dave Alvin of the Blasters on guitar, gained some middle–of–the–road converts but lost as many of the faithful. After a five–year hiatus came the country–inflected Hey Zeus!, but by then it was obvious the band was running on fumes, and one middling live album (Unclogged) and one tour later, X was done for good.

Trax On Trax Off

Beyond and Back captures the journey, speed bumps and all, though it wisely goes light on X's later work. Of the 44 selections, 27 are previously unreleased, so rather than album version of gems like "We're Desperate" and "Blue Spark," for example, we get the rare, pre–album Dangerhouse single of the first and a studio alternate of the second.

One crucial difference between the X set and the Replacements set is that the compilers of Beyond and Back — among them band members John Doe, Exene Cervenkova and drummer Don Bonebrake — went the extra mile to license the early stuff from Slash. The only effort the Replacements made toward putting together All For Nothing/Nothing For All was approving its release, and the label rep who handled the job took the path of least resistance.

The first disc acts as a greatest–hits package, collecting four songs from each of the band's four Sire albums (Sire, like Reprise, is a Warner Bros. affiliate). The other disc is filled with B–sides, unreleased stuff, and a live track from the same period. Apart from recording dates, absolutely no context is given for any of these tracks, which is nothing less than criminal.

But the worst omission is that of the three albums and one EP the Replacements cut for the Minneapolis indie Twin/Tone between 1981 and 1984. Without that material, All For Nothing is nothing close to all, tracing only half the curve of the band's career, and the downward half to boot.

The Replacements at their best captured the inspired boredom and self–doubting honesty of singer and guitarist Paul Westerberg's songs. As the pressure to crack the charts took its ugly toll, he became more and more self–absorbed and gave the rest of the players less and less to work with. Even the excellent Sire debut, Tim, isn't as good as its immediate predecessor, Let It Be. And as incoherent (more literally than you think) as their initial offering, Sorry Ma, Forgot to Take Out the Trash, may be, its accidental charms are still preferable to the polished final whimper that was 1990's All Shook Down.

Let's give Sire the benefit of the doubt and say Twin/Tone wouldn't license the early material. But still, those years are barely even mentioned in the booklet. Founding guitarist Bob Stinson got the boot (reportedly for the substance abuse problem that eventually killed him two years ago) just before the band's fourth album, Pleased to Meet Me, yet from the liner notes and photos you'd think that his bland replacement, Slim Dunlap, was the principal guitarist. Actually, the set does include an outtake of "Can't Hardly Wait," a song ruined by the Memphis Horns on Pleased to Meet Me, that was recorded with Stinson during the Tim sessions. Too bad it's the only worthwhile rarity here.

Like X's, the Replacements' booklet is reminiscent rather than historical, but the voices are mostly industry types and critics, cooing about so–called private moments shared with Westerberg.

The Replacements themselves were without question half– assed (they'll even admit to this); indeed, they were endearingly so. But that's no excuse for a half–assed retrospective. As with X and so many other proto–alternative bands that tried to make the leap, their marginal success was their ruin, and the least they deserve is an honest eulogy.

Beyond and Back — A–
All For Nothing/Nothing For All — D+

The Arts desk is looking for writers who are interested in writing about movies and fine arts. Come down and talk to Adam Levine or Emily Trask or call them at 545-1491.

The Daily Collegian Pool Hall...Now Open for your PLAYING TIME needs
8 THE DAILY COLLEGIAN 8
THOUSANDS AND MILLIONS OF FREE COPIES-DAILY
Write, design and come play for Arts, Sports, Ed-Op, News & MORE!!

R&P Liquors
•Weekly Specials on Regular Beers •Low Prices•
Largest Selection of Micro-Brews in S. Amherst
• Fridge Rentals

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
(91 North exit 19 turning right onto Rte 9 • 4 miles left at Dakins onto Rte 116N. first right is right, left is Comer 1-91 S. take exit 20
Buy at wholesale prices right at the show from up to 60 companies (150 exhibit tables) featuring the IBM/PC compatible marked. From full systems to libraries or CDs. It's all here. Adm. $7 ea. with ad $5 ea. after 1:00 pm $4 ea. w/ad only
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST SUN, NOV 23

amc
Movies in Different
Advance in Golden. No cash under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm
Mt. Farms 4 •584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Jackal (R)
• Today at (5:00), 8:00, 10:50 • Sat at 1:50, (5:00), 8:00, 10:50 • Sun at 1:50, (5:40), 8:30
The Man Who Knew Too Little (PG)
• Today at 8:10 • Sat at 2:00, 8:10, • Sun at 2:00, 8:30
Rainmaker (PG13)
• Today at (4:50), 7:50, 10:40 • Sat at 1:40, (4:50), 7:50, 10:40 • Sun at 1:40, (5:30), 8:20
Boogie Nights (R)
• Today at (4:40), 7:40, • Sat at 1:30, (4:40), 7:40 • Sun at 1:30, (5:10)
Devil's Advocate
• Today at (4:40), 10:40 • Sat at (4:40), 10:40 • Sun at (5:50)
Red Corner (R)
• Today at 10:50 • Sat at 10:50 • Sun at 8:20
Hampshire 6 •584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Bean (PG 13)
• Today at (5:20), 8:00, 10:40 • Sat- Sun at 12:40, 2:50, (5:20), 8:00, 10:40
Anastasia (G)
• Today at (5:10), 7:50, 10:10 • Sat- Sun at 12:30, 2:40, (5:10), 7:50, 10:10
Starship Troopers (R)
• Today at (4:50), 7:30, 10:00, 12:30 • Sat - Sun at 1:10, (4:50), 7:30, 10:00
Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil (R)
• Today at (4:40), 7:40, 10:40 • Sat- Sun at 1:00, (4:40), 7:40, 10:40
Mortal Combat 2: Annihilation (PG 13)
• Today at (5:00), 7:50, 10:10 • Sat - Sun at 12:30, 2:40 (5:00), 7:50, 10:10
Walt Disney's The Little Mermaid (G)
• Today at (5:30), 8:00, 10:20 • Sat- Sun at 12:40, 2:50, (5:30), 8:00, 10:20
$2.50 (Two Lite) Show Daily
Special Engagement, no Passes or Coupons

January
Winter Session at UMass Boston
Make the most of your January break by taking a course or two at UMass Boston. You can choose day or evening classes in a variety of disciplines. Courses meet January 5 through January 23. The undergraduate course fee is $135 per credit, and you can charge your fees to a MasterCard, VISA, or Discover account. To receive a copy of your Winter Session schedule, send in the coupon, email us at dce@umbsky.cc.umb.edu, or call 617 287-7904
Please send me information about UMass Boston's January Winter Session.
Name
Address
City, State, Zip
Return to:
Division of Continuing Education
UMass Boston
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125
Fax: 617 287-7922
UMASS Boston

The UMass Theatre Guild & University Productions and Concerts Present
The Legendary Rock Opera by Pete Townshend
THE WHO'S TOMMY
I PLAYED THE SILVER BALL ME FEEL ME TOUCH HEAL ME
Conceived and Developed by Pete Townshend & Kit Lambert
Book By Pete Townshend & Des McAnuff
Lyrics and Music by Pete Townshend
December 4th, 5th, 6th at 8 P.M.
6th and 7th at 2 P.M.
Student Union Ballroom
UMass - Amherst
UMass Students and Senior Citizens: $5
General Public: $7
Tickets Available At:
NBO NORTHAMPTON BOX OFFICE 584-8686 413-TIX & TIX UNLIMITED 545-0412
For more info Call UPC at 545-2892 or UMTG at 545-0415
Appears at no cost to the Commonwealth.

Julie Doiron to share bill with Wilco duo

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

Much like fellow introverted pseudo-folkie Elliott Smith, Canada's Julie Doiron serenely documents her life through music. Sparse arrangements on her acoustic guitar serve as the sonic backdrop for her distinctive blend of introspective frankness.

Following the demise of Canadian indie darlings Eric's Trip — a group in which she played bass — Doiron set out on her own, writing songs and touring. Her first solo offering, 1996's Broken Girl, was released on her own Sappy Records label and was showered with a good deal of acclaim in her native land, although few Stateside took notice.

She recorded her second full-length for the Seattle-based indie giant Sub Pop, the emotively moving Lotellest in the Morning, in Memphis with help from Dave Shouse of the Grifters and Howe Gelb of Giant Sand, among others.

Seeing as her musical blueprint could easily be titled "My life as an open book," it's interesting that she lives happily with her husband and two children in Sackville, New Brunswick. On Monday night at Northampton's Iron Horse, Doiron takes a break from domestic bliss as she shares (with a backing band) what should be a fine double bill with Jeff Tweedy and Jay Bennett of Wilco.

As for the headlining duo of Tweedy and Bennett, fans can expect them to play a hearty helping of tunes off Wilco's first two albums, A.M. and this year's two-disc opus Being There. Both outings are prime examples of why Wilco, along with Son Volt and the Jayhawks, are at the forefront of the current alternative country movement. As a result of Tweedy's time in the seminal alt-country/rock outfit Uncle Tupelo, he has gained a reputation as one of America's premier songwriters, an accolade he's fully earned. Monday night should provide a glimpse as to why.

Jeff Tweedy and Jay Bennett of Wilco, along with Julie Doiron play at Northampton's Iron Horse Music Hall on Monday November 24 at 7:00 p.m. Tickets are $12 and the show is all ages. Call 584-0610 for more information.

COURTESY JULIE DOIRON CLAYTON

Canadian Julie Doiron opens for Jeff Tweedy and Jay Bennett of Wilco at the Iron Horse Monday night.

COURTESY DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC & DANCE

The University Chamber Choir performs Sunday at 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Bowker hosts University Chamber Choir

By Emily Trask
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Chamber Choir and Madrigal Singers, under the direction of Dr. E. Wayne Abercrombie, will perform a joint concert this Sunday at 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

The group's conductor, Abercrombie has twice been awarded a grant from the UMass Office of Research Affairs to specifically bestow the music of Bach to the University. The funding from this grant allowed Abercrombie to take part in the Oregon Bach Festival under the world renowned conductor Helmuth Rilling. Over the past five years, the Chamber Choir has performed one piece by Bach each year: the Motets Nos. 1 and 3, two cantatas and the Magnificat.

This concert will feature the Bach Motet No. 2, "Der Geist Hilft," for double choir. Abercrombie enjoys drawing on many languages and cultures to enhance his choral programs, in order to give leave singers and listeners a feeling through music of the similarities and contrasts of cultures and historical periods.

The Chamber Choir will also perform "Frogs: A Choral Suite," a suite of six settings of haiku.

"I expected a flippant, comical approach to the subject, but Dinerstein's pieces turn out to be elegant humor comparable to the subtle style and wit of haiku. These a cappella pieces are challenging, often in six parts, and reflect a very original composer's voice," Abercrombie said.

Norman Dinerstein was on the faculty of the University of Cincinnati for many years. He is relatively unknown by the general public, although among choral and compositional circles he is a highly respected figure.

Drawing on the English tradition of great church music, the Madrigal Singers will perform several pieces by William Byrd, a Roman Catholic composer who was a favorite of Elizabeth I, a protestant. Selected movements from Byrd's "Mass for Four Voices" will be heard, along with several of his madrigals, particularly " Sussannah Fayre," taken from the apocryphal book "Sussannah and the Elders."

Tickets for this event are $4 for students, seniors and children and $8 for the general public. They can be purchased through the Fine Arts Center box office (545- 2511) or at the door.

Affordable
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Rings Happy B'day Cards Earrings Sweaters Skirts
Posters India Print Bedspreads Candles Incense
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The Mercantile GreatGifts
Visa / MC Th.Fri.9PM Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St. Amherst-Carriage Shops

The UMass Theatre Guild Presents:
The Passion of Dracula
Bowker Auditorium Nov. 20, 21 & 22 8:00 pm w/ a Saturday Matinee at 2:00 pm
Tickets on sale at the FAC Box office, 545-2511 or at the door. $4 students and seniors $6 Adults
For more info. Call 545-0415
This production was made possible (in part) by a grant from the UMass Arts Council

Happy Thanksgiving from UMass Woman's Tennis and thanks to our coaches:
Judy, Tom, Julie, Doug
for their hard work this Fall.

KEVIN SPACEY JOHN CUSACK
Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil
Starts Friday November 21st

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
STARTS FRIDAY ON OUR GIANT SILVER SCREEN!!
FRI. & SAT. 6:00 & 9:00 SUN - THURS 7:15
"THE MOST INVIGORATING, DEEPLY ENTERTAINING AMERICAN MOVIE THIS YEAR SO FAR !"
BOOGIE NIGHTS
MARK WAHLBERG JULIANNE MOORE BURT REYNOLDS DON CHEADLE JOHN C. REILLY WILLIAM H MACY HEATHER GRAHAM
WRITTEN AND DIRECTED BY PAUL THOMAS ANDERSON
NEW LINE CINEMA
ACADEMY OF MUSIC Opera House 584-8435 NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

PRIZES & GIVE-A-WAYS
NO COVER
THIS FRIDAY
2 YEAR ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION
DRINK SPECIALS 99¢ DRAFTS
INFO: 6686094
COLLEGE I.D. REQUIRED
18+
CLUB METRO

hockey

continued from page 10

for Providence. In their home opener, the Friars dropped a 2-0 loss to last season's conference cellar dweller Northeastern. The next night, PC had to go to overtime to beat Union College at home, and that 5–4 win started a streak in which the Friars won the next four out of five games.

Diminutive 5-foot-5 junior forward Mike Omicioli leads the team in scoring with three goals and seven assists, and sophomore Fernando Pisani is second in team scoring with five goals and four assists. Freshman goaltender Boyd Ballard has made Friars fans temporarily forget about the departed Dan Dennis with a 4-0 mark, and a .915 save percentage.

Providence is coming off a 5–3 win against Lowell last Sunday night, the same team that beat UMass by a 5-4 score in overtime last Friday night. With 32.8 seconds left, senior captain Mike Nicholishen threaded a seeing-eye, wrist shot through a pack of players in front of senior goalie Brian Regan for the game-winner.

The loss of the Alumni Cup — which goes to the winner of the season series between the sister campuses — to the River Hawks was a stinging one, but the Minutemen were able to bounce back the next night with a 4–1 win over Union. Senior forward Dean Campanale scored two goals for UMass in the win, while senior defenseman Brad Norton added three assists for a total of six on the season, good for the team lead.

Mallen liked what he saw out of his team for two periods last Friday night, and for a complete game against Union. At this point of the season, the Minutemen need to start emphasizing the positives to get into the win column.

"We really showed a lot of jump after our slow start," Mallen said. "At our Saturday morning coaches meeting, we wanted to deal with the positives overall, and the negatives with some individuals.

"We needed to come out with some positive energy for our game against Union and get a win, and we did that."

The Lowell game brought about a pair of firsts for UMass, as freshmen Kris Wallis and Nick Stephens both scored their first career goals in the comeback bid. It was a good sign for the team that in the eight goals it scored over the weekend, leading scorer Tim Lovell (four goals, three assists) was directly involved in only one.

"Some of our freshmen really stepped up their play, and they're starting to earn their playing time," Mallen said. "They're keeping within themselves, and sticking to our system of play, doing what we want them to do on the ice."

volleyball

continued from page 10

(1–17, 11th).

"If I'm not involved with volleyball over Thanksgiving it will certainly feel different," Kenny said. "But no matter what happens this has been a great group to be able to coach this season."

The true test of the weekend for the Minutewomen will come against Temple. The Owls are led by outside hitters Tamu Cooper and Sharia Bryant who are deadly at the net. They come in as the No. 1 team in the A-10 with a perfect 18-0 record.

The Minutewomen appear ready to face the challenge.

"I've liked our work ethic," Kenny said. "Hopefully we'll play a little better this weekend and maintain consistency and intensity."

If UMass can do that, it's a possibility it can contain Temple and possibly extend the season. If not, it will be the last collegiate matches for senior outside hitter Lesley Nolan and fellow graduate, middle blocker Michelle Paciorek. Both will be sorely missed next year as they have certainly left their respective indelible marks on the program and those associated with it.

Nolan leaves as one of the best Minutewomen volleyball players ever as she joined Dionne Nash as the only players to eclipse 1,000 digs and 1,000 kills.

Paciorek leaves after earning the title "Ms. Get It Outta Here" by unifying all three UMass career block records.

"If we don't make it I know they won't like it either," Kenny said. "That will be why we'll have to work that much harder this spring."

men's swimming

continued from page 10

finishing at a 1:25.58 clip.

The key to UMass' dominance over the BU squad came from double victories by four Minutemen in eight different events.

Anderson was first as he took both the 50 free (21.12) and 100 free (48.12). It was then Wisniewski's turn as he managed to capture both the 200 back (1:55.54) and 200 individual medley (1:59.67).

Freshman Billy Brown would not be left out and made his own dual win contribution as he claimed the 100 breaststroke (59.57) and the 200 breast (2:10.12) titles. Fellow freshman Matt Andrews joined in as he won the 200 fly (1:55.25) and the 500 free (4:45.38).

After UMass' two meets this weekend the Minutemen have a two-week hiatus to focus themselves for their first invitational of the year (and to eat lots of turkey, of course).

After their first invitational the Minutemen have nearly a month before their next meet which will be similar to the type of races they will see after they travel to Penn State. They will travel to West Palm Beach, Fla. for the annual Lake Worth Invitational on Jan. 3 before they have to quickly regroup for their third invitational meet in a row, Jan. 9–10 at Rhode Island.

After that the team returns to its regular season schedule, as the Minutemen gear up for a run at a third straight Atlantic 10 title.

women's swimming

continued from page 10

man Shannon Rowell in the 100 and 200 backstroke, senior Karen Sonnwald in the 200 free, sophomore Lia Lansky in the 200 fly, and senior Barbara Hickey in the 500 free. Newcomb is in his 14th year at the helm of the UMass women's swimming and diving team. Newcomb was the New England Swimming and Diving Coach of the Year in both 1988 and 1989. The women's team has compiled a 92–61–1 mark during Newcomb's tenure. The Minutewomen will hit the road following Saturday's meet for a stretch of three in a row away from the friendly confines of Rogers Pool. The Penn St. Invitational will be on Dec. 4–6, followed up by a trip to sunny (and much warmer) West Palm Beach, Fla. on Jan. 3 for the Lake Worth Invitational. The road trip will round out with a hike over to Interstate 95 to battle Rhode Island and La Salle in Kingston, R.I. on Jan. 9–10. The Minutewomen will then round out their season by hosting Dartmouth, Connecticut and Fordham, and traveling to New Hampshire and Rutgers.

Koenig

continued from page 10

Monday Night Football trio. When watching the big Monday night game, you can just see Al Michaels and Dan Dierdorf rolling their eyes when Gifford says something stupid. Case in point: One game a couple of years ago the Bills were playing on Monday night. The Buffalo punter at the time, Rick Tuten, trotted onto the field to punt the ball, and Dierdorf came out with the quip, "Rootin' Tuten to give a bootin'!" Gifford, unable to let the joke stay humorous, added, "and everybody will be bootin' and hollerin', too!"

No. 4: Pat Summerall. Okay, I know I'm going to get heat for this one, and he's not nearly as bad as Glanville, but in my mind, he belongs here. I know what you're thinking, that he's been in a booth with John Madden so long it feels natural. Well, if you'd been wiping with sandpaper all your life, that would feel natural, too. What happens, is Madden makes a comment, and Summerall will follow up with something that seems like it's kissing his ass in complete agreement. Summerall is a yes–man, and he lacks a personality. Even play–by–play men need some kind of personality.

Best No. 1: Marv Albert. Say what you want about him, but Albert's accomplishments have finally put him in the same sentence as some of the more prominent figures in history. Of course, those figures are J. Edgar Hoover and, well, I guess Pac Man, but they are no less prominent. Sexual prowess aside, Marv Albert is one of the best there is when it comes to calling football games.

No. 2: Al Michaels. Michaels saves Monday Night Football from Gifford's idiocy. He knows his stuff, and he can follow the action with intelligence and confidence. While listening to him, the game makes sense and is interesting.

No. 3: Sean McDonough. He certainly isn't flashy, but he's solid, and in this day of complete morons minding the mics, he makes the cut.

No. 4: Keith Jackson. Football is a complex sport, but when a good old boy like Jackson throws in his two cents, it seems so much more down to earth. Oh, and he agreed to be on those Bud Bowl commercials a few years back in a valiant effort to resurrect what was a proud tradition of beer bottles playing football before Budweiser watered down their advertising scheme. It was a noble try, Keith, and we salute you.

This rounds off my best and worst booth tenders. Look for these guys when watching the games, and use the remote control accordingly.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian staff member.

KAI CHI WE DELIVER 586-2774
Sun -Weds Thurs-Sat noon-midnight noon-2am

University Dental Associates
Dr. David A. Brown • Dr. Marjan Z. Khodadoust
Convienient Hours • Insurance Accepted
New families Welcome •Dentistry for Children
Cosmetic Dentistry
267 Amherst Rd, Sunderland 665-5005

COMPUTER FLEA SALE
TRI-STATE FAIRS
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST SUN, NOV 23

PHISH-TICKETS
GREAT SEATS AT UNBELIEVABLY LOW PRICES!!
• HARTFORD, NOV 26
• WORCESTER, NOV 28-30
CITY TICKET: 1-800-865-8070

ATTENTION
February 1998 Graduates
If you are a member of the February 1998 graduating class who received Federal Perkins Loans while enrolled at UMass you should have recently received a certified letter about those loans.
We know this is a very busy time for you so we've mailed this information rather than having you attend a meeting.
However, there are serious consequences if you fail to return these documents by 12/1/97 as instructed in our letter.
If you haven't received our letter but think that you should have or if you have any questions about what you did receive,
Call 545-2377.

TRAVEL SMART!
LONDON $162 $295
PARIS $218 $399
ROME $274 $473
MADRID $226 $415
PRISM TRAVEL

CLASS INTERSECTIONS
a week-long focus on issues of class and classism on campus and in the community, taking place at UMass, Amherst November 13 -November 21, 1997
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21
WORKSHOP: RACISM AND CLASSISM, with Professor Barbara Love, 10AM-12PM, Campus Center Room 162-175
SPEAKOUT: STUDENTS AS WORKERS: STUDENTS SPEAK OUT ABOUT WORKING CONDITIONS AND ECONOMIC INSECURITY, sponsored by Undergraduate Employees Organization, 12-2PM Campus Center Room 803
WORKSHOP: IN THE ACTIVIST KITCHEN : CREATIVELY COOKING UP TROUBLE, by Art for a Fair Economy, 12-2PM, Campus Center Room 911
PANEL: CLASS AND DISABILITY, with Professor Patricia Silver 4-6PM Campus Center Room 803
CULTURAL EVENING: THE ANTI-CLASSISM CABARET, featuring: Boston-based Art for a Fair Economy presenting a variety of skits, music by Tom Juravich and Sandy Mandel, and readings by UMass workers, 7-9PM, Bartlett Auditorium, Room 65 visit web page: http://www.umass.edu/stonewall/classinter.html

The University of Massachusetts' Something Every Friday Presents:
Comedienne/Actress
Robin Montague
Friday, November 21, 1997
UMass Campus Center Auditorium, 8pm
"Face Off" shown following performance (approx. 9:30pm)
"Face Off" starring John Travolta and Nicholas Cage.
Will also be shown on Sunday, November 23, 8pm & 10pm, in the Campus Center Auditorium.
For more information, check out our website at: http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/sef.htm
Campus Activities 545-3600
This series is made possible by a grant from the UMass Auxiliary Services Department, the Office of the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, and the DAILY COLLEGIAN

The Campus Activities Office Presents A
NEW YORK CITY BUS TRIP
December 6th, 1997
$20.00 Per Person
Bus arrives ... and leaves ...
Upon arrival ... free to walk ... and sounds of ...
Ticket Are On Sale ... Student Union Building
TIX: 545-0412
Please check out our Website: http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calendar2.htm

NOW HIRING
ALL SHIFTS
COMPETITIVE WAGES
• Flexible schedule around classes
• Monday, Wednesday, Friday Shifts
• Tuesday, Thursday Shifts
• Discounted Meals
• Enjoyable Work Atmosphere
• Advancement Opportunities
BURGER KING
Join the Burger King® Team Today!
You will be working for people who really care about you as an individual.
Apply Within
353 Russell Street (Route 9) • Hadley, MA

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom Apt. Easthampton. $485 per month. Take over lease ASAP. 527-9410

AUTO FOR SALE

Dodge Colt 1989 Two door, standard. Very reliable. $1400 or best offer. Call Wen at (413)532-8184

Nissan 240SX 89 Excellent condition, all extras. New tires, brakes, clutch, muffler. $4400 or B/O. Marcos 549-6926

Subaru StationWagon 1987 For Sale. High mileage but runs great. $1300 or B/O. Call Franziska 253-2163

1987 Olds Delta 88 Power seats, doors, etc. New tires. $1000 or B/O. 586-8164

1985 VW Quantum Wagon, auto, new parts, needs work. $600 or B/O. Call 549-1995

1988 Buick Century Wagon Tip top shape. Great winter car. $3000 or B/O (413)253-2232

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

EMPLOYMENT

Can you write good project proposal? Then make brisk money. Call Evelyn 256-4176 Urgent.

EMPLOYMENT

Part-Time Job Available Collegian Classifieds, on-campus, earn great experience, flexible hours. Apply now for next semester. Applications are available at the Collegian Office, Rm 113, Campus Center.

LIVE-IN Room/Board + Salary & TIPS. Two openings Dec. 19 to early/mid April or longer. Do dishes, rooms, wait tables, prep, etc. in southern Vermont inn. Work hard. Must be energetic and pleasant. Call today- Elaine (802)874-4140.

Jobs For The Environment
Campaign with MassPirg to reduce pesticide use.
Flexible schedule
$50-$75/day
Call Terry @ 256-6434

Young Entrepreneurs- We are looking to sell our odd job/temp service. Perfect for business or management grads. 582-7956

CRUISE SHIP & LAND-TOUR EMPLOYMENT- Learn about national/int'l Cruise Lines and Land-Tour companies. Excellent benefits + bonuses! World Travel! Many workers earn up to $2,000+/mo. Call Cruise Employment Resources. 517-336-0573 Ext. C50011

FOR SALE

Phish Tickets Great seats at great prices. City Tickets (800)865-8070

Laptop Computer and Printer with software. $725 or B/O. 253-0258

Willpower In A Bottle
Lose Weight
Doctor Recommended
100% Natural
Moneyback Guarantee
(413)259-1922

Nutrition Supplements Creatine 400G. $29
Designer Whey Protein $26
Met RX $38
Fat Burners & More..
Call. 253-1850

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

COMPUTERS! New P166MMX from $995. Laptops, peripherals. ZarVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

FOR SALE

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

LOST

Found- Keys in Reading Room on 11/18/97. 256-0304

ROOM FOR RENT

1 bedroom in Salem Place on Main Street. Private parking, washer, dryer, dishwasher. On bus line. $325/month. Jan 1st to end of May. No summer hassle. Call 253-2961.

Room For Rent Private home, furnished, kitchen privileges, parking, laundry, quiet, friendly. $335 a month. Jan 1st. Barbara 549-4853

One bedroom for rent in 4 bedroom house in Leverett. Oil heat, washer/dryer, yard. $275+ Available immediately. Call 548-8081

Room For Rent in house. On bus route. Close to center of Amherst. Available immediately. Call Sheldon @ 253-9410

One room available on Main St. On bus route and short walk to town. Call 259-9282. Available immediately.

ROOM FOR RENT

Looking for 1 female to share 4 bedroom apartment in Alpine Commons with 3 females 2 full bathrooms. Right on bus route. $300/month (everything included). Starting 1/1/98. Call Cara at 256-6351.

I'm graduating! Take over my room in a 6 bedroom house. Great house, good company. 1.5 miles from campus. Washer/Dryer. For more info call Lianne at 253-9898

Room for rent in 4 bedroom apt. $300/month inc elec. Available Jan 1. Call 549-9959

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking for female to share two bedroom apartment in Puffton. $320/month. On bus line. Call Candy 549-9293

Share a huge room offcampus. Live closer than the dorms! 549-9951

SERVICES

GET NOTICED! Number One secret to resume writing for college students and gen-x. Send $6.00 check/money order + business size SASE to: Nina Smith, 507 Central Avenue, No. 2, New Haven, CT 06515

SERVICES

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Spring Break '98- Sell Trips, Earn Cash, & Go Free!!! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus reps, group organizers. Guaranteed, lowest prices to Jamaica, Mexico, & Florida. Visit us @ www.ststravel.com or call 1-800-648-4849

Quebec City- Ski/Snowboard Trip Dec 5-7. Two nights hotel, bus, 2 days riding. $149. 545-3437. UMass Ski N Board Club

Jamaica SPRING BREAK 7 days in Negril from $529. Go with who you trust. UMass Ski N Board Club 545-3437

New Year's Party- Quebec City 5 days/4 nights. R/T bus and Hilton Hotel. Call 545-3437

TRAVEL

Killington: Ski & Party Week Jan 4-9. 5 nights condo/5 days skiing. $285. Call 545-3437

WANTED

Looking for any women cigar smokers for my Journalism class assignment. If you are interested please call Rana at 253-2099

COMING SOON

NEW CLASSIFIED HEADINGS

JUST ONE MORE WAY THE CLASSIFIEDS MAKE YOUR LIFE EASIER

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, NOV. 21

Conference — "Class Intersections," a week-long focus on issues of class and classism on campus and in the community including: workshop — "Racism and Classism" with Professor Barbara Love, 10 a.m.–2 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 162–175; speakout — "Students as Workers: Students Speak out About Working Conditions and Economic Insecurity", sponsored by the Undergraduate Employees Organization, noon–2 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803; workshop — "In the Activist Kitchen: Creatively Cooking up Trouble" by Art for a Fair Economy, noon–2 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 911; panel — "Class and Disability" with Professor Patricia Silver, 4–6 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803; cultural evening — "The Anti– Classism Cabaret" from 7–9 p.m. in Bartlett 65.

Discussion — The Tibetan Students Association will celebrate Buddha's Descent on Earth with a discussion and video titled, "Future of Tibet," 7 p.m. in Campus Center 101.

Service — Shabbat service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. Join this special service which will be led by UMass Professor Julius Lester.

SATURDAY, NOV. 22

Comedy — MISSION: IMPROVable will be performing its free weekly comedy improv show at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163.

Sports — Women's ice hockey vs Skidmore College at 1 p.m. in the Mullins Center practice rink.

SUNDAY, NOV. 23

Hike — Explore Mt. Toby, meet at 1 p.m. at the Hillel House. Sponsored by the Jewish Environmental Group.

Blood drive — American Red Cross blood drive from 10:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 101.

MONDAY, NOV. 24

Educational Social — An educational social featuring the movie "Gattaca Fear". This is an opportunity to bring our often separated houses together to learn about how racism affects us and how to break down racism in our communities and society from 7–9 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 101.

Film — Italian Club Film Night, "Fiorile" in Italian with English subtitles, at 6:30 p.m. in the Foreign Language Resource Center, classroom 2 in the basement of Herter Hall Annex.

NOTICES

Applications — The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team is accepting applications for its training this January 12–16. Applications are available for any UMass student at 222 Hampshire House, Legal Studies. For more information, contact Leah at 545-5882.

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition, which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545–0792.

Art Exhibition — "Here I am Now!" a glimpse into the lives of Cambodian and Vietnamese youth through images. Nov. 24–Dec. 6 with an opening reception on Nov. 24 at 6 p.m. in the Wheeler Gallery in Central Residential Area.

Art Exhibition — The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space presents "Elan Vital" by Janice Starmer from Monday, Nov. 17–Nov. 21 with an opening reception on Nov. 18 from 5–7 p.m. Gallery Hours are Mon.–Thurs. 10 a.m.–5 p.m. and Fri. 10 a.m.–3 p.m. The gallery is located in the south side of the Student Union Building.

Art Exhibition — An exhibition of more than 30 one–of–a– kind artist books and scrolls by William Schade will be on view from Nov. 11–Jan. 25 at the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum. Museum hours are Tuesday–Friday, 11 a.m.–5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday, 1–5 p.m. and is closed on academic holidays from Wednesday, Nov. 26–Monday, Dec. 1 and from Tuesday, Dec. 16–Monday, Jan. 6. For more information, call 538–2245 or fax 538–2144.

Club — The UMass Amateur Radio Club Station W1PUO is returning and looking for people to join in Ham radio. Anyone interested in radio/electronics and a desire to learn and communicate are welcome. The club will sponsor FCC approved volunteer examination sessions for all license levels. For more information, contact Richard Strychacz N1MFT at 549–6000 ext. 6000 or leave a message at facility services.

Fill–A–Bus — Help fill a PVTA bus with clothing, toys, and non–perishable food to benefit needy individuals and families in the Amherst area on November 24 and 25 and December 1–5 from 11 a.m.–3 p.m. daily in front of the Student Union. Volunteers to staff the bus and collect donations needed. Contact the UMass Community Service Program at 545–3368 for more information.

Food Drive — The UMass NSSLHA chapter along with Amherst Survival Center are sponsoring a food drive in honor of hunger awareness month. Bring non–perishable food to Arnold House, School of Public Health throughout November.

PSAs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PSI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN SI
25	Headline News
28	UCTV
27	TBS
28	BET
28	TV Land
30	Univision
31	Comedy Central
32	Cartoon
33	Much Music

545-3500

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — NOVEMBER 21, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Connecticut Journal		Livelyhood "Shift Change"		McLaughlin	Religion
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Reel TV	"The Rockford Files: Murder and Misdemeanors" (1997, Drama)				Neah Bridges "Bombshell"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	"The Rockford Files: Murder and Misdemeanors" (1997, Drama)				Neah Bridges "Bombshell"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Sabrina-Witch	Teen Angel	Funniest Home Videos		20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Full House	Boy-World	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	"Who Killed Roger Rabbit" (1988, Fantasy) Bob Hoskins.				News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Players "Con Amors"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Cheers	Med Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	"Trading Places" (1983, Comedy) Eddie Murphy, Dan Aykroyd.				Grace Under		Vibe
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Players "Con Amors"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Freaker	Walker "Home Is"		Millennium (In Stereo) (PA)		News		Seinfeld	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Players "Con Amors"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Community	Follow Money	Livelyhood "Shift Change"		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Freaker	Sabrina-Witch	Teen Angel	Funniest Home Videos		20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Med Abo. You	Med Abo. You	Seinfeld	Freaker	Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Sentinel "Red Ice" (In Stereo)		News		M*A*S*H	Seinfeld	Freaker
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach		"Road House" (1989, Drama) Patrick Swayze, Kelly Lynch.						"National Lampoon's Animal House" (1978)
A&E	53	Northern Exposure		Law & Order		Biography: John F. Kennedy Jr.		America's Castles (R)		Grand Tour (R)			Law & Order "Right to Counsel"
CNN	20	21 World View		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Borden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	24	Comic Relief	Make-Laugh	Paula Poundstone		Brett Butler	Jeneene G.	1 Night Stand	Pulp-III	Lounge Liz.		"Gidget Live" (1980, Comedy) Glida Radner.
DISC	48	See Wings "The Scout" (R)		Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery "Jurassic Reel"		News	Storm	Fangs! (R)		Justice Files (R)
ESPN	51	Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Georgetown vs. Wake Forest					College Basketball: Preseason NIT Second Round		Tennis ITA	Sportscenter
LIFE	52	Superm'arket	Diet	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Moment of Truth: Staking Back" (1993) Shanna Reed.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	55	MTV Live (In Stereo)		Vacation	Week in Rock	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Yo! (In Stereo)		Unplugged (In Stereo)			Loveline
NICK	59	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Kablam!	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Bewitched	I Love Lucy	Odd Couple	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI	60	Seeing Thing	Swamp Thing	Night Stalker		"The Legacy" (1978, Horror) Katharine Ross. (In Stereo)				Friday the 13th: The Series		Night Stalker
TLC	49	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Home Again	Home Again	Real America: 48 Hours		Great Cities of the Ancient		Killer Virus (R)		Real America: 48 Hours (R)
TNT	54	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clerk-Superman		NBA Basketball: New Jersey Nets at Boston Celtics. (In Stereo Live)					Inside-NBA	"Silent Rage" (1982)
USA	62	Baywatch "Windward" (R)		Highlander: The Series		"Radioland" (1997, Drama) Kurt Russell, William Sadler. (In Stereo)						"Silver Bears" Cliff Robertson
HBO	63	3:00	Storyteller	Inside the NFL (In Stereo)		"The Glimmer Man" (1996) Steven Seagal		"Mean Guns" (1997, Drama) Christopher Lambert, Ice-T				"R"	Chris Rock
MAX	65	(4:30)		"Little Nikita" (1988) Sidney Poitier, "PG"				"The Cable Guy" (1996, Comedy) Jim Carrey. "PG-13"				"Poison Ivy: The New Seduction" (1997)	Inside Out
SHOW	66	"The Big Picture" (1989, Comedy) Kevin Bacon. "PG-13"				"The Mirror Has Two Faces" (1996) Barbra Streisand.				Stargate SG-1 "Brood Divide"		Hunger (R)	"Point Killers"

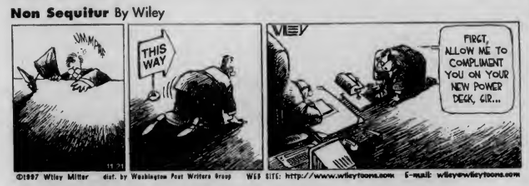
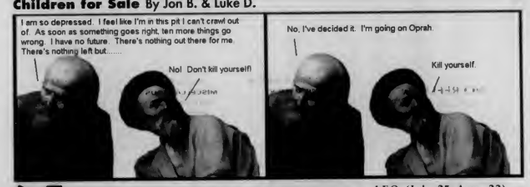
Bruno By C. Baldwin



Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Children for Sale By Jon B. & Luke D.

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Sven By Steven Higgins

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You can get things done well ahead of schedule today if you stick to what you know has to be accomplished first. Be sure to prioritize.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Do not jump to conclusions today regarding a friend's feelings; you may not be seeing things as they really are. Avoid a conflict.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — An energy disturbance of sorts may keep you from adopting a productive rhythm during the first part of the day. Later, all should even out.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may have to endure a delay of sorts today, not because of anything you could control, but because of the system. Be patient.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You can impress others with your creative energy today, but can you inspire them to match you in your efforts? Evening will bring the answer.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You are going to have to be clear and instructive when speaking to those younger than yourself today. You have a responsibility to fulfill.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Following someone else's example may not be as easy as it seems today. You will have to trust your instincts on numerous occasions.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Though you're a firm believer in the truth, today you may have to tell something of a lie in order to get to a larger truth later.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Loved ones may be worried by your apparent lack of involvement. You can put everyone at ease by revealing your motives.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You may be after something that is confusing to others, but a brief explanation will have many clamoring to support you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You will be expected to do more for yourself than usual today. Look at this as an opportunity to prove you have what it takes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You may be having trouble cutting through red tape and dealing with bureaucratic slowdowns today. You are in the right; give it time.

Quote of the Day

"Everything will work out in the end"

–UMass Outing Club motto

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Oh yeah, now I remember. The roofing contractor left a message saying you should call him ASAP."

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Tart n' Tasty Taco
Vegetable Taco (also tart n' tasty)
C-C-Clam Roll
Reuben Sandwich on Rye

DINNER
Savory Baked Chicken
Risotto Italiano
Spaghetti/Tomato Lentil Sauce
Burger of Ham (beef, actually)

Worcester

LUNCH
Captain's Catch on Sesame Roll
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Fettucini/Tomato Sauce
Black Eyed P's

DINNER
Savory Baked Chicken
Pineapple Ham Steak
Korean BBQ Tofu
Pastabilities: Ravioli Alfredo

Hampshire

LUNCH
Moo Moo Burger
Choco Mountain Chicken Pucks
Wario's Catch on Sesame Stadium Roll
Bowzer's Castle of Grilled Cheese

DINNER
Toad's Baked Chicken
Glazed Harvest Ham a'la Donkey Kong
Mario Kart Casserole
Yoshi's Valley of Pez

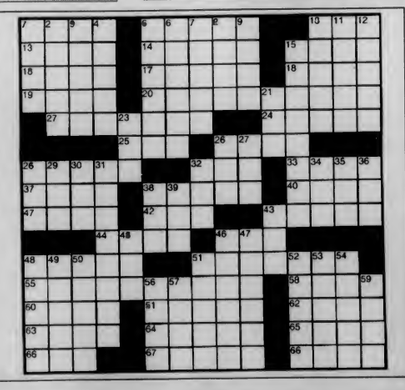
Berkshire

LUNCH
El Cap-i-tan's Catch on Sesame Roll
Fettucini/Tomato Sauce
Grilled Milk Product (cheese) Sandwich
Black Bean Chili

DINNER
Savory Baked Chicken
Broccoli Stuffed Flounder (with stuff stuffing)
Tempeh Stir Fry
Pastabilities: Ravioli Alfredo

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Casey Kane
Photo Technician — Kenneth W. P. Scott
Copy Editor — Luke Meredith
Production Supervisor — Leon Latino
Production Staff — Keren Charles, Teresa Rodrigues



ACROSS
1 Blemish
5 Roomy
10 Kept secret
13 Capital of Peru
14 Incus
15 Empty
16 Tel —
17 Tidies the garden
18 Aid and —
19 "Loded" place
20 Shade of red
22 Deliberate together
24 — space
25 Wis. neighbor
26 Giant in fairy tales
28 Precise
32 Time period
33 Waiter's checks
37 Small stream
38 Tricks
40 "The Mouse — Roared"
41 "Lovely —, meter maid"
42 Cookbook amt.
43 Stop
44 Request
46 Nabokov novel
48 Flash flood
51 Water or electricity
55 Women's wear
58 Dreary
60 Industrial safety agcy.
61 Comedian Steve —
62 Honolulu's spot
63 Beat
64 Lift
65 Zoo favorite
66 Young fellow
67 Miss —, of "Gunsmoke"
68 Vegas machine

DOWN
1 Shut noisily
2 Kind of duty
3 Protein-building acid
4 Black bird
5 Legit
6 "Married With Children" star
7 Manifest
8 Fashion
9 If not
10 Nun's attire
11 Peace goddess
12 Discourage
15 Oblong gem
21 Neither's partner
23 Take a chair
26 Bauxite, e.g.
27 Vapor
28 Goof
29 Caesar's dozen
30 Model Carol — Cain
31 Nonsense
32 Sixth sense: abbr.
34 Triumphant exclamation
35 — -relief
36 Sault — Marie
38 Hwy.
39 Neighbor of Can.
43 Lo- —: not fattening
45 Luau garland
46 Certify
47 Cartoon king
48 Forbidding look
49 Turkish official
50 Plant parasite
51 Dark
52 Fans' favorites
53 Footpath
54 Boor
56 Place for pencs
57 Jai —
59 Baseball strategy

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

S	P	A	N		R	A	J	A		Q	U	E	L	L
A	R	N	O		E	M	I	L		U	N	D	U	E
R	A	N	T		T	U	B	E		A	L	I	G	N
A	M	O	E	B	A	S		C	O	V	E	T	E	D
			P	R	I	E	S		S	E	A
O	B	J	A	I	N		H	O	A	R	S	E	S	T
P	R	O	D	S		P	O	R	K		H	U	L	A
R	A	T		K	N	E	E	C	A	P		B	O	W
A	V	E	R		A	R	I	A		O	N	I	O	N
H	O	M	E	S	P	U	N		S	L	E	E	P	Y
			A	G	E	L	E	S	S		T	A	R	T	E	S	T
M	I	X	U	P		A	W	O	L		E	L	M	O
A	N	I	S	E		S	O	L	O		G	L	U	M
H	A	T	E	D		H	E	L	M		G	A	I	T	E

11-21-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

SPORTS

N.Y. fans are obnoxious, aren't they?

Are all New York sports fans obnoxious? Yes.

It's a curse that every year the Collegian is blessed with the presence of at least one obnoxious New York sports fan.

This year, the tradition has continued.

As I sat with one of my sports cohorts on Wednesday at the weekly sports luncheon, reveling in the speaker's lambasting of my so-called negative article on our fall sports, that whiney voice whispered in my ear once again.

"How about those Rangers?"

Jorma Kansanen
2/0/0
Arrogant Jerk

"What happened to your Red Sox this year?"

"Gee, how about the Jets at the top of the AFC East? And, the Pats are really playing well lately, huh?"

Well, first of all, he was serving me lunch, and cleaning up my dirty plates (and by the way, with no tip because he was a bus boy at a UMass function). Secondly, he's from New York, and he's a Jets fan — there has to be something wrong with that. Thirdly, there's a difference between reality and expectations. In the spirit of this column, let's take each question one–by–one:

"How about those Rangers?" — Yeah, how about that geriatric ward? It's obvious that a team emphasizing free agent acquisitions, thus ballooning your salary, while not using your farm system will have a certain amount of success. Truthfully, Wayne Gretzky would make the 3–14–5 Calgary Flames look good. Really. He would.

But, the fact is when you replace an All–World talent like Mark Messier with a china doll like Pat LaFontaine, you replace an aging superstar with an aging superstar who will shatter when he falls. LaFontaine has a propensity to suffer concussions, which as we all know (except in the inimitable wisdom of GM Neil Smith) is not a good thing.

But, the team is just old — flat out. That was the problem last season, and it will be a problem again this season. That is why Messier wanted to leave, because Smith can't get that fact through his thick skull.

OK, the Bruins are 11–7–3, and the Rangers are 7–7–4. That could be enough said, but it isn't.

The B's were not expected to do well this season, even with the addition of coach Pat Burns. But through prudent free agent acquisitions, and with emphasis placed on youth, Boston has put together a team which has used timely goal scoring from three lines to establish a winning record.

Youth has been served.

The reality for New York is it is expected to win, even with the loss of Messier, and it is mediocre.

"What happened to your Red Sox this year?" — Once again, the BoSox were not expected to be a great team this past year, but the Yankees were. If you thought the Red Sox would have a better record than the Yanks at the end of this past season then you really need to seek some help.

Just one question: who traded away a top pitching prospect in Tony Armas Jr. for a non–defensive entity like Mike Stanley? Yeah, if he was a great acquisition, then why will he probably be suiting up for someone else next season?

Hideki Irabu. That could be enough said, but it isn't.

Once again, the fact is New York was expected to return to the World Series again this year, and they lost to that team — oh, that so-called doormat team — yeah, Cleveland.

I won't get into the Garciaparra–Jeter debate.

But, basically, Boston went with youth this season, and New York went with a bunch of old farts. In that sense, I'll take the Red Sox youngsters against whatever youth the Yankees possess.

And oh, WE got Pedro Martinez.

A prudent free agent acquisition, eh? Say no more.

"Gee, how about the Jets at the top of the AFC East?" — Gee, how about one of the least difficult schedules in the NFL this season? Right now, the Pats are awful, but they do play one of the hardest schedules this season. If they stumble just a little, teams like Green Bay and Denver make them pay for their transgressions.

The Pats might be on the verge of playoff elimination, but they do have the better divisional record, and that is what the AFC East will come down to this season.

Youth vs. experience. Expectations vs. reality. Out of the gates, New York might have the lead, but Boston will win it down the stretch. Gee, why didn't he mention the Celtics (5–6) and the Knicks (6–4)?

Don't get me started on that one.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore defenseman Dean Stork will be on of many Minutemen needed to step up this weekend in a home–and– home with Providence.

UM has pair with Friars

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

When you are PC, you go out of your way to deal with offensive matters. But then, you also go out of your way to deal with defensive matters.

For all of you out there in PC land, the Providence College Friars will make their first appearance of the season at the William D. Mullins Center tonight at 7 p.m., facing the Massachusetts hockey team in the front half of a home– and–home series. The Minutemen will travel to historic Schneider Arena for Saturday night's game, with game time also scheduled for 7 p.m.

Friars coach Paul Pooley will be bringing his neutral–zone trap defensive philosophy to the Valley, but PC (5–2, 1–2 in Hockey East) will be looking to turn up the offense on UMass (2–5, 0–4 HE). After losing last year's season series to the Minutemen, UMass coach Joe Mallen feels the Friars will be dangerous in more ways than one for tonight's game.

Hockey
Massachusetts vs. Providence
Tonight @ 7 p.m.

"For one thing, they'll be looking for revenge because we took two out of three against them last year," Mallen said. "And another thing, they're on a roll, and they have won four in a row. Overall, the league is a lot better this year then the last few years, and Providence is one of those teams that have stepped up.

"They've played well so far, and if we can get on the winning side against them, this will be a great opportunity for us to get back in the conference race."

The season started out with a less–than appetizing loss

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

UMass starts season at Fresno St.

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's basketball team will begin its quest to reach the NCAA tournament for a seventh straight season Saturday night on the west coast when it takes on Fresno State.

The game will be televised on ESPN2, scheduled for midnight.

The No. 13 Bulldogs (1–0) met the Minutemen for the first time last season and handed UMass a good, solid 102–81 whipping at the William D. Mullins Center. Massachusetts native Chris Herren lit up Mullins for 25 points, including three 3–pointers, to lead the barrage.

Herren, a junior, is one of two starters returning to a patchwork squad of talented transfers and newcomers. The 6–foot–3 guard is considered one of the more explosive backcourt players in the country.

Herren led the Bulldogs with 17.5 points per game last season and shot 36 percent from beyond the arc. Rafer Alston will join him in the backcourt this season, taking the place of the graduated Dominick Young. Alston, a playground legend from Queens, N.Y., has the ability to elevate the game of the players around him with his all around skills, according to the Fresno State coaching staff.

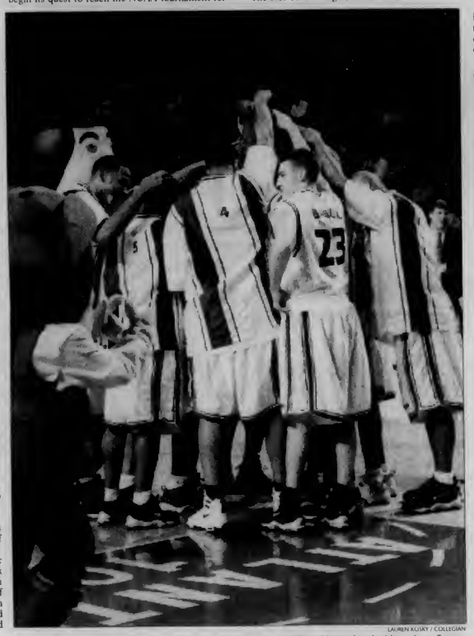
Men's Basketball
Massachusetts vs. No.13 Fresno State
Saturday, Midnight

Daymond Forney is the other returning Bulldog starter. The senior forward was Fresno's leading rebounder last season and trailed only Herren in scoring average (14.2).

"I think he can be our most improved player," Fresno State coach Jerry Tarkanian said. "He has a chance of being a great player this year."

Terrance Roberson, a 6–foot–7 forward, is the only other current Bulldog who was on last year's roster. Last season, Roberson averaged 9.0 ppg and led the Bulldogs with a .493 3–point field goal percentage. He will likely come off the bench behind Forney and talented transfer Tremaine Fowlkes.

Fowlkes played at California for two seasons and was the Pac–10 Freshman of the Year in 1995. He is a versatile swingman who has the strength to bang inside with the big men.



Fowlkes rounds out a talented squad that needs only to worry about creating a chemistry.

"This is the best personnel since I've been here," Tarkanian said. "I like our team. Potentially, we can be very good."

Potentially, this could be a well–played basketball game. Both teams come into the contest with certain things to prove.

The Bulldogs have to prove that they can play together and keep everybody happy. The Minutemen, on the other hand, have to show that the chemistry they have already developed can translate into production on the court.

Tyrone Weeks and Charlton Clarke will be the staples of what UMass wants to do this season. The two leaders of the Minutemen did not play well against Marathon after sitting out the Converse game due to violation of team rules. They will be looked upon to step up their play against a tough Bulldog team.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

The UMass men's basketball team will start its regular season slate this weekend with a trip to Fresno State on Saturday.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Sarah Watters hopes to serve some winners up in a critical A–10 weekend.

UM v–ball has crucial A–10 slate

By Jamie Jee
Collegian Staff

For the Massachusetts volleyball team, that light at the end of the season has now neared. Although the Minutewomen need to beat a strong (undefeated in the Atlantic 10) Temple team before they can even hope for the right circumstances that will usher them into the postseason, coach Bonnie Kenny and the rest of the team know that they still have two matches left.

UMass will finish out its regular season at the Curry Hicks Cage tonight against La Salle and Saturday against Temple. Both matches start at 7 p.m.

"There are a lot of variables we don't have any control over now, but it could still happen," Kenny said. "Hopefully, we can catch them off guard after Rhode Island, when they're not thinking about us and maybe if they're preoccupied with the tournament."

If UMass is to play in the A–10 tournament this Thanksgiving, George Washington (9–9, tied for fourth) would have to lose against both Xavier (8–10, tied for seventh) and Dayton (14–4, third). That's not all though. After beating both Temple and La Salle, the Minutewomen would have to hope for a Duquesne (9–9, tied for fourth) victory over Virginia Tech (9–9, tied for fourth) and for the Dukes to somehow lose to St. Bonaventure

Turn to VOLLEYBALL, page 7

The best and worst of football callers

Too often in sports columns these days, things are printed that are common knowledge. Let's face it, as sports fans, we all know who is good and who is bad, and to have someone tell us their opinion on that is just boring sometimes. What is printed less, but is just as much a part of watching the games, is the evaluation of the people in the booth. Now that football is reaching the juicy part of the schedule, I feel it's time to evaluate those who present the games to us.

Seth Koenig

Here are my worst and best four:

Worst No. 1: Jerry Glanville. If you've watched a game with Glanville as a commentator, no explanation is needed here. His whiny Texas accent and his annoying tendency to compare everything to Elvis make him easily the worst there is. To Glanville, Drew Bledsoe and John Elway are "Texas quarterbacks," despite news having anything to do with the state of Texas. You figure it out.

No. 2: Brent Musberger. ABC keeps Musberger on college ball as long as it can, which is an indecency in itself, but when the wild card weekend rolls around... well, there's only one "Frank, Al, and Dan," and there's two games for ABC to televise. Musberger makes it a point to add as much false drama to a game as he possibly can. If a low–ranked team was to kick an early field goal against a high–ranked team, Musberger would be the announcer to start yelling about an amazing upset victory in the making, and how the lower ranked team's offensive coordinator's grandmother's goldfish died two years earlier and how much that game meant to him because of that.

No. 3: Frank Gifford. Frank is the runt of the Turn to KOENIG, page 7

Minutemen face weekend pair

By Jamie Jee
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team has jumped out to a quick 2–0 start this year as its have come out and soundly beaten two strong squads in Providence and Boston University.

The Minutemen hope to continue that streak this weekend as they take on Columbia in a 6 p.m. meet time tonight and St. John's at 3 p.m. Saturday. Both meets will be held at the Joseph R. Rogers Pool.

UMass will be finishing up a four–meet homestand to start off the season before it travels to University Park, Pa. to take part in the Penn State Invitational on Dec. 5 and 6.

The Minutemen already defeated Providence by the score of 152–90 and whipped BU last week, 205–95.

UMass once again face talented squads in Columbia and St. John's but will go into this weekend's games riding a wave. In the win over the Terriers the Minutewomen relay squads went wild and set two records in the process.

The 200 medley relay team of junior Brian Wisniewski, sophomore Billy Hunter, freshman Diego Alcala, and senior Sean Anderson set the record time of 1:35.92

The 200 free relay team of Anderson, senior Kerry Huestion, Alcala, and sophomore Henry Turner set a record of their own

Turn to MEN'S SWIMMING, page 7

UMass swims with St. John's at home

Women look to buck injuries

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Once upon a time they were both Redmen.

But, as the social acceptability of school mascots has changed, so have the nicknames. And while Massachusetts changed its nickname to Minutemen in the 1970s, St. John's made the switch to the Red Storm earlier this decade.

Nicknames aside, both schools will square off against each other in a showdown at high noon on Saturday in a women's swimming matchup at Joseph R. Rogers Pool.

"St. John's is a talented team. They are stronger in the freestyle events than in the other events, but we can't take them lightly," UMass coach Bob Newcomb said.

The Minutewomen are coming off a 182–117 loss to Boston University, but have other problems to deal with, such as injuries. The 2–2 Minutewomen will be looking to finally piece together a full squad for the first time this season on Saturday.

UMass will also be looking to avenge last year's heartbreaking loss to St. John's. The Red Storm eeked out a 122–121 win last season in Jamaica, N.Y. Overall, the two schools have split their two lifetime meetings.

A pair of freshmen paced the Minutewomen against BU last Saturday. Sarah Newell and Julie Dragon picked up the lone victories for UMass in a meet which saw the Terriers win 14 out of 16 first place finishes.

Newell also won three races earlier in the week in a meet against Northeastern and is continuing to emerge as the team's most consistent swimmer. On the other hand, Dragon continues to show superb progress since arriving in Amherst, as evidenced by her first ever collegiate victory on Saturday.

This meet will round out the slate for UMass in the month of November, a month that has seen the Minutewomen go 2– 1 thus far. After diving into action against the Red Storm, UMass will not hit the water again until Dec. 4 in the Penn State Invitational. The next dual meet of the season for UMass will not be until 1998, when the Minutewomen will host the Big Green of Dartmouth on January 18.

Minutewoman Notes: In addition to Newell's three victories against Northeastern, the Minutewomen also received individual wins from fresh-

Turn to WOMEN'S SWIMMING, page 7

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVII Issue 53 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, November 24, 1997

Soap dish

The world of soap operas are constantly changing. Check out who's hot and who's not (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Fresno State makes statement

Jerry Tarkanian's Fresno St. Bulldogs showed the country why they're ranked No. 13 after beating UMass 82–64 Saturday night (see Sports, page 10).

Do the Write Thing participants witness peace process at work

BRYAN SCHWARTZMAN / COLLEGIAN

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and his wife Sarah, receive an award from the General Assembly of the Council of Jewish Federations.

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

Editor's Note: Bryan Schwartzman is the Jewish Affairs editor for the Collegian. He attended a workshop for Jewish Journalists called Do The Write Thing. The workshop was held in conjunction with the 66th annual General Assembly for the Council of Jewish Federations. Do The Write Thing participants were given media access to General Assembly events.

INDIANAPOLIS — Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and President William Jefferson Clinton (via satellite), along with other members of the Israeli/American political establishment presented their viewpoints on the Middle East Peace Process to the 66th General Assembly for the Council of Jewish Federations (CJF).

Both leaders reaffirmed their belief in the peace process, but offered few specifics to the over 4,000 delegates from six countries who attended the General Assembly.

The General Assembly is the annual gathering of representatives from the CJF, the largest Jewish organization in North America. The CJF holds political and economic influence on the national and international sphere.

The delegates of the General Assembly, who essentially represent North American Judaism, were anxiously awaiting remarks pertaining to the stalling peace process. This past January, the Netanyahu government signed the Hebron Accords with the Palestinian Authority, arranging partial Israeli military deployment from the West Bank City. However, all sides agree there have been no significant breakthroughs since then.

Issues which have not yet been agreed upon include: the final status of Jerusalem, the possibility of a safe passage between the West Bank and Gaza, and the prospects for Palestinian air and sea ports.

Netanyahu addresses General Assembly

On Sunday night, the Indiana Convention center was filled to capacity and was crawling with security for an evening which was attended by both the Governor of Indiana, Frank O'Bannon, and the mayor of Indianapolis,

Turn to CJF, page2

UM-Dartmouth TA voices opinion on JFK conspiracy

By Michelle Fongemie
Collegian Correspondent

A presentation entitled "The Conspiracy to Kill JFK," given Wednesday night by Chris Basley, attempted to prove that John F. Kennedy was not killed by Lee Harvey Oswald, as the Warren Commission concluded.

Basley, currently a teaching assistant at University of Massachusetts–Dartmouth, has been researching the Kennedy assassination since 1988.

The presentation began with film footage of the actual shots that were taken at Kennedy. Basley immediately said the film shows Kennedy's head being blown backward, not forward like the Warren Commission tried to prove.

The Warren Commission, in its final report, concluded that the deadly shots were taken by Lee Harvey Oswald from a sixth floor window of the Texas Schoolbook Depository. The Commission concluded that there were three shots fired.

Basley, however, provided information which said the contrary. First of all, Basley said, not only are there audio tapes which recorded seven distinct shots, but people around the grassy knoll gave statements that they heard shots and saw smoke coming from this grassy area.

Basley spoke of one witness, a Vietnam veteran who was sitting on the curb with his family below the grassy knoll, who gave a statement to police that he heard bullets whizzing by his ears. Basley provided slides of this witness and his family ducking their heads with bodies flat on the ground.

Slides were shown of a puff of smoke coming from the area of the grassy knoll, as well as the mysterious figure which the Warren Commission dismissed as a tree. Basley pointed out however that there are consecutive film shots of the grassy knoll area and the "tree" disappears.

"I can guarantee you that there was nobody there with a chainsaw that day," Basley said.

In addition to the photos Basley said there is medical evidence that shows what the Warren Commission concluded was false. Basley showed a slide of the statements made by the doctors who treated Kennedy.

The Warren Commission stated that the deadly shot came from behind and went from the back of Kennedy's neck through the front of his neck. The statement made by Dr. Ronald Jones however, said "The hole was very small and very clean cut, as you would see in a bullet that is entering rather than exiting from the patient."

This in itself, Basley said, "was enough evidence to prove that the shot did not come from the Texas Shoolbook Depository," which was located behind the car Kennedy was riding in.

However, there was more medical evidence Basley said. The Warren Commission stated in its report that there were three shots fired, and one of the shots went through Kennedy's upper chest, then through Governor Connely's back, then through Connely's right wrist and finally through Connely's left thigh.

A picture of the bullet which the government claimed did all this damage was printed in one of the 26 printed volumes of the findings by the Warren Commission. The bullet appears in perfect shape. A non–government funded agency, Basley said, decided to do a test of their own. A corpse was used with

Turn to JFK page3

WORLD

North Korea agrees to joining peace talks

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — North Korea agreed to join four-party Korean peace talks only because it was assured the agenda will include the withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea, North Korea's Foreign Ministry said yesterday.

"It has been promised that the talks will focus on the U.S. troop pullout and the conclusion of a peace agreement between (North Korea) and the U.S., as we demanded," the North's official Korean Central News Agency quoted an unidentified Foreign Ministry spokesman as saying.

"That is why we agreed to hold the talks," the spokesman said. It was North Korea's first public reaction to an agreement reached in New York last week among the two rival Koreas, the United States and China to open Korean peace talks in Geneva on Dec. 9.

The report is contrary to South Korea's contention that North Korea had dropped its long-standing demand for a U.S. troop pullout as a condition to the peace talks.

NATION

Dionne quints warn against exploitation

NEW YORK (AP) — Multiple births should not be seen as entertainment or a marketing tool, the surviving Dionne quintuplets warned the parents of the Iowa septuplets.

In a letter printed in Time magazine's Dec. 1 issue, Annette, Cecile and Yvonne Dionne tell Kenny and Bobbi McCaughey their septuplets' lives "should be no different from that of other children."

"Multiple births should not be confused with entertainment, nor should they be an opportunity to sell products," the 63-year-old sisters wrote.

Conceived before the era of fertility drugs, the five identical sisters were born on May 28, 1934, in Ontario, Canada. Weighing less then 2 pounds each, they were the first known surviving quintuplets and became a tourist sensation.

Three movies were made of their lives and Dionne dolls were the rage of the 1930s. The girls lived in "Quintland," a virtual theme park across the street from their family, where the girls were put on display. As many as 6,000 people a day would watch them play behind a one-way screen.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 36 LOW: 17	HIGH: 40 LOW: 23	HIGH: 42 LOW: 20

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI .....page 8
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Environmental Horticultural club returns to UMass campus

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Staff

A once defunct Registered Student Organization (RSO) has been revived this semester by several students who have renewed the Environmental Horticultural (Envhort) club.

"Right now, we're just trying to get things started," said Steve LeClair, a second–year Stockbridge, nursery management major.

"I was looking for something to do on campus that was related to my field," LeClair said.

"The whole club just gives us a chance to try something, to see what we can accomplish, and what we can learn from it," said Helen Mezger, junior plant and soil science major.

Students not only joined Envhort to further their interests outside of the classroom, but also to meet other people with similar interests.

"It [Envhort] gives us a chance to build some really good friendships," LeClair said.

Thomas Boyle, professor of horticulture, is the faculty advisor for Envhort.

"They wanted to go up and beyond the classroom experience," Boyle said.

The members of the Envhort club have just finished their first fundraiser, selling 22 Thanksgiving centerpieces which they arranged themselves. Envhort is already working on additional fund raisers.

The Envhort club will soon be taking orders for Christmas wreathes, and will be selling some items at the annual UMass Holiday Show. On the first Friday in December, floral design students sell their work at the Holiday Show. On Dec. 5, at French Hall room 105, the Envhort club will also take part in the show.

Many of the flowers and wreathes which the club is designing have been donated by various places. Bulbs from Holland were donated, and will be used for a Valentine's Day fundraiser. The bulbs, which were placed in a "growing media" and "canned," were put in a cooler in Bowdage Greenhouse.

"We planned them just right, so they'll be ready for Valentine's Day," said Christine Rivera, second–year Stockbridge commercial floriculture major.

Envhort will use the money raised to take a trip or get a speaker. According to LeClair and Boyle, the group may take trips to horticultural sites such as Naumkeag, which is famous for its beautiful gardens. Envhort may also go to several garden shows in the spring and visit nurseries and commercial greenhouses.

The club does not exclude students from outside the horticultural majors, and welcomes students from all different majors.

"We try not to get too in depth or technical," LeClair said. "I'm learning just as much as everyone else."

According to several members, the best way to get involved with Envhort is to attend one of their meetings at the French Hall Library at 5 p.m. every Wednesday.

Focus on Latino identity at UMass lecture tonight

By Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

Tonight, at 7 p.m. at the Malcolm X Cultural Center, lecturer and poet Minister Muhammad Abdullah will be speaking about an array of topics centering around the meaning of the "true Latino" identity, and the importance of black and Latino unity.

This event is sponsored by the Collegiate Coalition for Black Males for Community Consciousness, Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity Inc., Zeta Phi Beta Sorority Inc., Black Student Union, Office of ALANA Affairs, Casa Domincana, Haitian Student Association, AHORA and the Distinguished Visitors Program.

Muhammad Abdullah, formerly known as Diogenes Rodriguez–Muhammad, has been working in community service for over 25 years. In 1972, he helped establish the first Spanish Mosque in New York City, and served as its minister under the leadership of the Honorable Elijah Muhammad and Minister Louis Farrakhan.

Muhammad Abdullah is also a theater director and a writer. He was nominated best director in 1982 for his interpretation of Don Quixote. He performs poetry and satires about the Spanish and English speaking of those of African and Native American descent.

He is a founding member and the coordinator of the Confraternity for the Education and Development of the Afro–Latin American (CEDALA), which was formed with the purpose of correcting the mis–education of the historical distortion of Latin American culture, and to promote unity among people of the African and Native American diasporas.

Muhammad Abdullah has traveled to South America, and acquainted himself with the leaders of the Afro–Latin human rights and liberation movements. He appears regularly on TV, radio talk shows, college campuses and community events, lecturing on many provocative subjects: topics dealing with identity and slavery, and subjects with African– American, Afro–Latino, Native indigenous and Muslim themes.

TSA event celebrates Lhaba Duechen

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Correspondent

The newly formed Tibetan Students Association (TSA) sponsored their first event last Friday to celebrate Lhaba Duechen (Buddha's decent on earth).

The event included a discussion of issues presently surrounding Tibet and a video concerning the United States' deeming of most favored nation status to China

Tibet, where Buddhism is the prominent religion, is located in Asia, above India and Nepal and to the west of China.

In 1949, China invaded Tibet in an attempt to colonize the country. Over a million people died due to starvation, torture and execution. Many Buddhist monasteries were destroyed and the Dalai Lama, the spiritual and political leader of Tibet, and thousands of Tibetans fled from the country.

Today, people in Tibet can be imprisoned and tortured for non–violent expression of their views or for carrying a picture of the Dalai Lama.

Some of the questions discussed during the TSA meeting were why China invaded Tibet, was Tibet ever historically free and what could Americans do to help. Thondup Tsering, who was born in Tibet and a founding member and general secretary of the TSA, said Americans can inform their local congressman or become aware of some of the companies that do business in Tibet, for example some toys are manufactured in Tibetan prisons.

Tsering said at the moment China has a state–sponsored movement of Chinese into Tibet. He is hopeful that ultimate-

Turn to TIBET, page2

Iraqi weapons watch to continue

By Waiel Faleh
Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — U.N. experts spread out in and around Baghdad yesterday to search for chemical, biological and nuclear weapons, while helicopter crews watched overhead for any suspicious activity on the ground.

For the roughly 75 weapons monitors, who include four Americans, it was the second day back at work after a 24-day U.N. standoff with Saddam Hussein. Inspection team chief Nils Carlstrom refused to say what the inspectors were finding, saying only that the Iraqis were cooperating.

"We have had clear access into the sites without problems," Carlstrom said.

Iraq's inspection liaison officer, Hussam Mohamed Amin, insisted the U.N. experts came across nothing illegal in their daylong search of nine sites, which he said was "conducted ... in a professional, scientific and objective way."

Despite the cooperation, Iraqi U.N. Ambassador Nizar Hamdoon told

Turn to IRAQ page3

YVONNE YANG / COLLEGIAN

Express yourself

Dan Perrone, a freshman environmental science major, kicks off MassPirg's Fight Hunger and Homelessness Week with an emotional photo exhibit last Monday evening in the Campus Center.

Tibet

continued from page 1

ly Tibetans will be able to go back to Tibet because it is very costly for China to control the country.

The mission of the TSA is to educate young people to the realities of Tibet and to translate awareness into action through non-violent political, economic and social campaign.

The celebration of Lhabab Duechan is held on the 22nd day of the ninth month on the Tibetan calendar.

According to Tsering, in the Buddhist religion it is believed that at the age of 41, Buddha goes up to heaven where he is reborn, and to show thanks to the mother for this, he stays in heaven and teaches. While he is in heaven, there is no teacher on earth. Then on the 22nd day of the ninth month, Buddha returns to earth. The first meeting of the TSA was a celebration to mark this occasion.

The TSA has about 40 members and is open to any students or faculty from the five college area.

Tsering said there is a diverse group in the TSA, which includes Tibetan students along with people of all races, UMass and Five College faculty and students.

In addition to Tsering, Karma Dolma, TSA president, and Yeshi Chodon, TSA program officer, are founding members.

BRYAN SCHWARTZMAN / COLLEGIAN

Former media advisor to late Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin spoke of Rabin's legacy to participants in Do The Write Thing.

CJF

continued from page 1

Stephen Goldsmith. The evening culminated with Netanyahu's address.

"I am convinced that only this government is capable of uniting the people of Israel behind a permanent peace settlement with the Palestinians and a peace treaty with Syria," said Netanyahu, who canceled a scheduled press conference earlier in the day.

"Our hand is also extended to our Arab neighbors," he said.

Netanyahu said Israel is always willing for peace, but peace will not come at the expense of security. He said the final status of Jerusalem must remain the undivided capital of Israel, and that Israel would not relinquish control of air and sea space, for fear of terrorism.

"I have not drawn any precise maps to define what we have in mind for an agreement with the Palestinians," he said.

"But I know that I represent a broad national consensus when I declare that the Jordan Valley must be Israel's strategic border," Netanyahu said.

He also commented on the stability of the nation and the strength of the economy.

"We have already surpassed the European average for individual income, and we are on the way to making Israel one of the most developed and prosperous nations in the world," he said.

Prime Minister supports Clinton

In a perceived snub, President Clinton said he did not have time to meet with Netanyahu during his American tour, while Clinton did host Leah Rabin and Shimon Peres in the White House last week.

However, Netanyahu expressed support for President Clinton and his stance on Iraq [with regard to the President's pressure for the expulsion of weapon's inspectors].

"At this moment, when his is facing down Saddam Hussein, President Clinton deserves to know that all who cherish peace and freedom support him," he said.

On Tuesday evening, Clinton addressed a smaller audience via satellite transmission. He thanked the CJF for supporting him, but did not discuss the performance of the Likud government or the peace process.

"Saddam Hussein cannot be allowed to expel weapons inspectors," Clinton said.

Likud government criticized

Chairman of the Labor party (the opposition party to Netanyahu's Likud government) Ehud Barak questioned the Likud government handling of the process and his economic policy.

"We cannot accept a peace process or an economy which is going backwards," said Barak in an address to the General Assembly Monday afternoon.

Barak said he does not want Rabin's assassination to have been in vain and that the government should pursue a more active role in the peace process.

However, Barak did not support the Oslo accords when it came before the Knesseth (Israel's legislature) several years ago.

Barak said he would not support the division of Jerusalem or an autonomous air and sea port for the Palestinian authority.

"In order to live together, we must live apart," Barak said, in a press conference following his address.

He also said while Israel's technology industry may be booming, the government has not helped conditions in the periphery of Israeli society. Life is still difficult in development towns and there are far too many homeless, he said.

Independent assessment reached

The peace process has not been helped by the present government, said Ehud Ya'ari in an address made specifically to participants in the Do The Write Thing program.

Ya'ari is the Commentator for Arab Affairs for Israel Television and is one of the most well known journalists in Israel.

"Oslo should be perceived as a breakthrough, a breakthrough into deadlock," Ya'ari said.

He said while he disagrees with Netanyahu, he does believe the Prime Minister cannot take the risk of giving control of air and sea space for fear of terrorism.

Ya'ari believes that the only way to secure peace is for Israel to enter a tri-lateral agreement with Jordan and Palestine. This agreement would give Israel control of the Jordanian border, thus acting as a buffer for any possible attacks on Israel's most strategically vulnerable border. In exchange, Ya'ari believes Israel should give up control of East Jerusalem, an idea very few politicians on either the left or the right have embraced.

"A united Jerusalem is an illusion; Jews don't go to East Jerusalem and Palestinians don't go to Jewish Jerusalem except for manual work," he said.

If the West Bank and Gaza are granted sovereignty, it will only be enough territory to house roughly half of the people who identify themselves as Palestinian. He said any final peace must discuss the fate of Palestinian refugees, and Israeli Arabs.

"It is in our interest to make peace with all of the Israeli Arabs, not just some of them," he said.

The role of the diplomat

"No matter how difficult the process there will be peace... because there is no other alternative," said United States Envoy Dennis Ross.

Ross, who was the mediator who negotiated the Hebron accords, discussed his philosophy of diplomacy and what needs to be done to secure peace, with the assembly on Tuesday morning.

"Those who are opposed to peace can't have hope," he said.

All peace processes must go through three phases. Ross said that first a psychological intent for peace must be established, then there must be a written manifestation or conceptual agreement, and finally the realization of the textual peace.

Ross said the 1991 Madrid peace conference symbolized a psychological agreement, Oslo represented the conceptual agreement and the as yet undetermined final status of the region will be the textual agreement.

"It's not a question of if, but when there will be peace and how many innocent people die before it is reached," Ross said.

Students voice their opinion

Students in the Do The Write Thing program had a variety of reactions after witnessing and participating in media/political events.

"I was quite disillusioned with Clinton and Netanyahu's speech," said Neil Simon, a sophomore at Northwestern University.

Throughout the conference, Simon did live updates several times a day for his campus radio station.

"I expected [the situation in Iraq] to be played as a larger issue than it was at the General Assembly. War is not far from the minds of many families of the US military and I was hoping more attention would be given to that volatile situation," Simon said.

"Even if what they said [Netanyahu and Dore Gold, Israel's ambassador to the United Nations] is untrue, political babble, I think they made a great team and learned a lot about the realities right now," said Barbara Heller, a theater student at the University of Florida, Gainsville.

Ben Pastcan, a student at the University of Southern California and an editor at The Leviathon, a Jewish student publication said, "Today, the Palestinians are being treated the same way we [the Jews] were once treated in Egypt. Is that justified, does that bring security to Israel?"

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON
Suggesting Rev. 1
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $162 $295
PARIS $218 $399
ROME $274 $473
MADRID $226 $415
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave., NY NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

Ticket City
Tickets for all occasions
Your Source For:
Concerts, Theatre, Ballet, Sporting Events & Sold Out Shows
Even Gift Certificates!
AND MUCH MORE!
Call TICKET CITY at 617-787-2370
for Prices and Showtimes!

If we Sold Out Shows! TICKET CITY Has Tickets!
Phish
Friday, Saturday, and Sunday Nights November 28, 29, and 30, at the Worcester Centrum
Call 617-787-2370

Hungry?
Call 586.7772

$5.99
Large Pepperoni
$10.99
Two Large Cheese Pizzas
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
MENTION THIS AD TO RECEIVE SPECIALS
331 Russell St • Rte 9 • Hadley
Better Ingredients. Better Pizza.
No Limit • No Coupon Necessary • Offer expires 11/30/97
VISA MasterCard

Tuesday Night
KICK OFF
Your Thanksgiving Break at
Featuring Boston's Best Acoustical Guitarist: Chad La Marsh
November 25
10:00p.m. - 1:00a.m.
fun•food•spirits
THE PUB
amherst
$2.00 Cover Charge
No Cover before 10:00
$2.00 Pub Drink Specials
Seabreeze
Rum & Coke
Miller Lite
Don't Miss Out on the Pre-Holiday Festivities at The Pub
Located in Downtown Amherst on East Pleasant Street • 549-1200

Student Affairs Special Services

Student Speaker
Undergraduate Commencement

Is there something you would like to say before graduating? If so, you are invited to submit a proposal for consideration as the Student Commencement Speaker.

Who is Eligible:	Graduating Amherst Campus Senior (Class of 1998).
Subject Matter:	Your proposed speech should be of general interest to graduating seniors as well as to parents and other guests, and address your impressions and experience(s) both academic and extra-curricular.
Format:	Submit approximately three word-processed/typewritten pages, double-spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time. Speeches exceeding this limit will not be considered.
Selection Process:	Authors' names will be deleted [by a non-voting staff person] after which a committee of students (majority), staff, and faculty will review the proposals. Three to five individuals will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March), after which the speaker will be selected.
Deadline:	Wednesday, February 11, 1998, 4:30 p.m.
Submit Proposals To:	Paul R. Appleby, Chair, Student Speaker Selection Committee, 305 Whitmore (545-3464).

JFK

continued from page 1

approximately the same bone structure of Connely and a shot was fired into just the wrist of the skeleton, using the exact same type of bullet that was pictured in the findings.

The bullet used in this test, said Basley, was clearly bent out of shape, and this resulted only by shooting it at one wrist, let alone through the body of Kennedy and Connely, as the Warren Commission concluded. Basley showed a slide of the bullet that the Warren Commission said was used and the bullet that was used in the test, and the one used in the test if clearly bent out of shape.

"I think right there is enough proof to show us that one bullet could not have done all that," Basley said.

There is other, more obvious evidence which proves that Lee Harvey Oswald is an innocent man, Basley said. After the shooting, there was a police officer that ran into the Depository building and saw Oswald standing there drinking a Dr. Pepper. This was approximately one minute and 30 seconds after the shooting. The police officer is sure it was Oswald he saw.

"Oswald supposedly took the last shot from the sixth floor window, wiped off the prints on the gun [because the gun that was found had no prints on it), hid the gun, and then ran across the sixth floor of this large building, ran down five flights of stairs and got in line, fumbled to get change out of his pocket and buy a Dr. Pepper," Basley said.

"This was impossible," Basley said. Basley pointed out that football players were brought in by a non-government funded agency and asked to do the same thing in 90 seconds or less.

"They didn't even come close," Basley said.

In addition to all this evidence alone, there was even more information which Basley said he found intriguing.

When Kennedy's body was shipped off to Maryland, it was wrapped in a white sheet and placed in a standard size black coffin. When it arrived in Bethesda, people who were witness to the unloading of the body said that it arrived in a small tin coffin, much like those used to carry dead soldiers in Vietnam, and also, the body was in a zip-up bodybag. Worse than this inconsistency Basley said, was that there was literally a portion of Kennedy's brain that was missing. Basley showed the audience slides of the drawings that were made of Kennedy's skull before the trip to Maryland, and then what Kennedy's brain looked like when it arrived in Maryland. Part of Kennedy's brain was indeed missing.

"This inconsistency is absolute nonsense," said Basley. "This part of his brain was gone and hasn't been seen since."

Towards the conclusion of his lecture, Basley brought up one more fact he said the audience needed to know. The shots that hit Kennedy were dead on shots, said Basley, pointing specifically to the shot right below the Adam's apple in the middle of the neck.

"All his [Oswald's] buddies in the Marines said that he was a lousy shot," Basley said. On a scoring sheet, which Basley showed on a slide, an official record indicated that Oswald scored a 191 on his shooting test. A score of 190 was needed to get the lowest score of a marksman.

"A low marksmen qualification indicates a fairly poor shot," were the words of A.G. Fidgem Jr., Lt. Colonel U.S.M.C., the signature of whom appeared on the official document that Basley showed the audience.

According to Basley, the gun that they found on the sixth floor of the Depository had a scope that was 11 inches off, and it was an older model rifle where the shooter of the gun had to cock the barrel himself. The shots alone, Basley said, occurred at too close an interval to be shot from that gun. Again, Basley pointed out, outside non-government funded agencies tested the same type of gun allegedly used, and even an expert shooter could not make the shot that Oswald supposedly made, let alone make the shots fired that close together.

"No expert riflemen could do what Oswald allegedly did that day," Basley said.

Pointing to a slide showing the 26 volumes which documented the findings of the Warren Commission, Basley said, "There it is, 26 volumes of junk."

Basley's presentation, which usually runs about four hours he said, was cut down to about two and a half hours for the presentation which was held in the Southwest area Hamden room.

The presentation was coordinated by Keri Heffernan, a Resident Assistant in the James/Emerson cluster of Southwest.

Postal strike aids e-mail, couriers

By Barbara Borst
Associated Press

TORONTO — The courier business is booming and e-mail is gaining new fans by the day as Canadians cope with a nationwide postal strike.

For many, the inconvenience is minor, but for charities and mail-order businesses girding for their busiest season of the year, the 5-day-old strike is a disaster in the making. Solicitations aren't getting out, and the dollars aren't coming back.

The Canadian Union of Postal Workers, which is demanding higher wages and job security, has promised to deliver social-security and welfare checks during the strike.

Canada has had two other postal strikes in the past 10 years, but this one is less disruptive to some Canadians because of advances in telecommunications.

"I use a lot of e-mails, and that's really convenient," said Ruth Sawatzky, of Langley, British Columbia. "They (the strikers) may be out of luck if they don't go back to work, as more people are going to catch on and send stuff other ways."

Timothy Taylor, a Vancouver management consultant, said he uses e-mail and couriers at work, and isn't worried about possible Christmas-card delays.

For mail-order businesses, though, things aren't so easy. John Gustavson, president of the Canadian Direct Marketing Association, said the strike is having an "immediate and devastating" impact.

Lands' End, the Wisconsin clothing catalogue company, arranged in advance for Loomis Courier Service to deliver its Canadian orders, then found out Loomis couldn't handle the volume. It now advises customers there may be delays and is seeking alternatives. L.L. Bean of Maine suggests Canadians add a fee to cover Federal Express delivery of its outdoor clothing and gear.

YVONNE TANG / COLLEGIAN

Attention!

Marta MacRostie of Amherst, Steve Thebesge of Amherst, and Ana Smith of Amherst, enjoy a little economic justice theatrics in a Stonewall Center sponsored activism workshop, taught by Andrew Boyd, from a non-profit Boston organization called United for a Fair Economy, last Wednesday evening in the Campus Center.

Iraq

continued from page 1

NBC's "Meet the Press" that Iraq will persist in barring the inspectors from Saddam's palaces, citing national security concerns.

"The only sites that we will restrict to them are the sites that are directly related to the president, and we think that those sites should not be visited," Hamdoon said.

Three carloads of nuclear experts were among those at work yesterday. The nuclear team leader, who refused to identify himself, told reporters he hoped to enter "sensitive" sites but would not elaborate.

Helicopter crews backed up the U.N. teams on the ground, there to take high-resolution photographs and watch for any suspicious activity during the inspections.

In the past, weapons inspectors have accused the Iraqis of secretly removing documents from sites even as the experts were going in from other entrances.

PHISH TICKETS
GREAT SEATS AT UNBELIEVABLY LOW PRICES!
• HARTFORD, NOV 26
• WORCESTER, NOV 28-30
CITY TICKET: 1-800-865-8070

amc
There Is a Difference!
Silence In Golden. No child under 6 in any PG 13 or R rated film after 6pm.
Mt. Farms 4 •584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Jackal (R)
• Today - Tues at (5:40 @ 2:50) , 8:30,
• Wed - Thur at 1:50 (5:00 @ 2:50) 8:00,10:50
The Man Who Knew Too Little (PG)
•Today - Tues at (5:50 @ 2:50)
•Wed - Thur at 2:00, 8:10
Rainmaker (PG13)
• Today - Tues at (5:50 @ 2:50), 8:20
• Wed - Thur at 1:40 (4:50 @ 2:50), 7:50,10:40
Boogie Nights (R)
• Today - Tues at (5:10 @ 2:50)
• Wed - Thur at 1:30, (4:40 @ 2:50), 7:40
Devil's Advocate
• Today - Tues at 8:20
• Wed - Thur at (4:40 @ 2:50), 10:40
Red Corner (R)
• Today - Tues at 8:30
• Wed - Thurs at 10:50
Hampshire 6 •584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Bean (PG 13)
• Today - Tues at (5:50 @ 2:50), 8:40
• Wed - Thur at 2:00, (5:50 @ 2:50),8:00,10:40
Anastasia (G)
• Today - Tues at (5:40 @ 2:50), 8:30
• Wed- Thur at 1:50, (5:10 @ 2:50),7:50,10:10
Starship Troopers (R)
• Today - Tues at (5:30 @ 2:50), 8:20
• Wed - Thur at 1:40 (4:50 @ 2:50), 7:30,10:00
Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil (R)
• Today - Tues at (5:10 @ 2:50), 8:20
• Wed - Thur at 1:30, (4:40 @ 2:50), 7:40,10:40
Mortal Combat 2: Annihilation (PG 13)
• Today - Tues at (5:40 @ 2:50), 8:30
• Wed - Thur at 1:40,(5:00 @ 2:50),7:50,10:10
Walt Disney's The Little Mermaid (G)
• Today - Tues at (5:50 @ 2:50), 8:40,
• Wed - Thur at 2:00 (5:30 @ 2:50) 8:00,10:20
$2.50 (First Film) Illinois Daily
Special Engagement, no Passes or Coupons

The UMass Theatre Guild & University Productions and Concerts PRESENT
The Legendary Rock Opera by Pete Townshend
THE WHO'S TOMMY
I PLAYED THE SILVER BALL ME FEEL ME TOUCH HEAL ME
Conceived and Developed by Pete Townshend & Kit Lambert
Book By Pete Townshend & Des McAnuff
Lyrics and Music by Pete Townshend
December 4th, 5th, 6th at 8 P.M.
6th and 7th at 2 P.M.
Student Union Ballroom
UMass - Amherst
UMass Students and Senior Citizens: $5
General Public: $7
For more info Call UPC at 545-2892 or UMTG at 545-0415
Tickets Available At:
NBC NORTHAMPTON BOX OFFICE
& TIX UNLIMITED
Sponsored in part by
DAILY COLLEGIAN

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

America can abide a gay ambassador

FOCUS ON WOMEN

SARA ECKEL

Columnists are always searching for news events that are ripe for parody, but sometimes the news outdoes us. Sometimes the news is parody. Such is the case concerning the nomination of James C. Hormel as ambassador to Luxembourg. Hormel, an openly gay businessman and heir to the processed-food company of the same name, was nominated to the post by President Clinton, and the nomination was approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee earlier this month.

But recently the appointment hit a snag. Two Republican senators — James M. Inhofe of Oklahoma and Tim Hutchinson of Arkansas — have blocked the nomination, delaying the vote until next year. The senators say they have a few problems with the San Francisco philanthropist, but they want to make one thing very clear: their objections have nothing to do with the fact that Hormel is gay.

"Our concern is about this nominee's political views," Inhofe spokesman Gary Hoitsma told the New York Times. "He's been an outspoken promoter of things like same-sex marriages, things that we don't agree with." Do you understand that distinction?

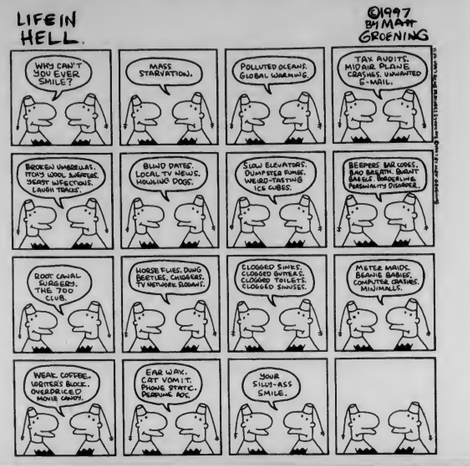
Perhaps Hutchinson spokeswoman Sue Hensley can clarify: the problem, she told the Times, was Hormel's "long history of actively promoting the gay rights agenda."

See, the senators don't think it's a problem that Hormel is gay. They aren't against gay people. They don't think we should start arresting them or lynching them or burning their homes or anything like that.

No, the problem with Hormel is that he supports gay rights. So you can see how that's very different. It's one thing to allow homosexuals to eat and sleep and breathe, but we don't actually have to give them rights. Sure our Declaration of Independence might say "All men are created equal" but that doesn't mean gay men (and certainly not gay women!). All that stuff about Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness — it's just not applicable here.

The senators' loopy logic on gay rights isn't even the most astonishing part of the situation. After all, there is a very vocal minority of Americans who truly believe all of the above. While the rest of the country is watching "Ellen," they are sending faxes and working phone banks and trying to convince our leaders that Americans really care what their neighbors are doing in their bedrooms.

No, the most astonishing part is their suggestion that Hormel could actually do damage to their agenda as ambassador to Luxembourg. I mean, this is a country that is smaller than Rhode Island. Are we to believe that Inhofe and Hutchinson wake up screaming in the middle of the night at the thought of a gay takeover of U.S.-Luxembourg relations?



Somehow, the senators must have gotten it into their heads that making a show of their anti-gay bias will score points with the voters back home. And the troubling part is, this isn't a completely outrageous calculation. After all, they will certainly win the hearts of the aforementioned wowsers. And thus far, it's unclear whether such brazen acts of bigotry will hurt their standings with the rest of Americans.

Because while it's great that most Americans have better things to do with their time than fret about the sexual preferences of others, this indifference toward homosexuals can be a problem if it means we are unconcerned when their civil rights are violated.

Tolerance is simply not enough. We need to let politicians like Inhofe and Hutchinson know that it is bigotry, not homosexuality, that the American people will not abide.

Sara Eckel is a nationally syndicated columnist.

Send comments to the author in care of this newspaper or send her e-mail at saraeum@aol.com.

Letters to the Editor

Police brutality a serious problem

To the editor:

In response to Mr. Angelo's letter (Nov. 20) "Police are victims of obscene injustice" — are you joking? I certainly hope so. Not only are your points unfounded, they are blatantly ignorant. The police are the only victimizers in any case of police brutality. You say you "...don't condone police violence..." yet your letter is filled with justifications for police violence.

You make the point of saying that if people were subjected to a little bit of "...police distributing their own form of justice" then things would be a whole lot better in the country. I have one thing to respond to that with: wrong! The police in this country already consider themselves, for the most part, above the law. If we gave even more power to the police, it would be both a tragedy of justice and the destruction of any kind of social freedom left in this country. The police already have proven themselves to be racist fascists in most cases.

If you don't believe me, then how can you justify the beating of Louima Abner this summer in Brooklyn, New York while cops yelled racial epithets at him? Is it because it was his fourth offense speeding? No. Is it because he was running from the police, resisting arrest, and they attacked him in the streets? No. He was subjected to acts of sodomy, while under police custody in the police station. No one deserves this type of treatment.

Your ignorance of the facts, and obviously of our freedom of speech, really and truly shines through with your statement "Don't ask me to get upset if some punk gets the back end of a police flashlight because he's giving the officer some lip..." Whatever happened to our freedom of speech? Time and time again the police have arrested, shot, beaten and killed innocent victims because they said things that the cop didn't like, or agree with.

Who gives them the power to shoot someone because they may represent a different point of view? Just because they wear a badge, they can do what they please? No. They are still subject to the same laws and rules that we are subject to.

The cries that you make for an increase of power for the police force culminate with "If you want to end police violence, give the police a justice system that actually works." You want to give the police even more power? So the next time a police officer commits an act of wanton and uncalled for violence, instead of hiding behind the blue wall of silence, they can sit in the open, tell us that he beat the hell out of someone, and there isn't a damn thing we can do about it?

I just can't wait for the day that you're driving through Louisiana and you get pulled over for being from out of the state and the police harass you. Only then do I think you will be able to see the ignorance in your statements. If there is anything the police need, it's less power, or at least a stronger system of checks and balances.

What your letter boils down to is, if someone doesn't look and talk the part of the middle of the road, law-abiding citizen, then the cops should be allowed a free-for-all on that individual. If you're looking for a totalitarian state, where the people live in constant fear of the police striking them down for no reason, then please, by all means immerse yourself in an Orwellian novel. For me, and hopefully the rest of us, I will continue to try and educate people about the horrors of police brutality.

Todd Kennedy Greenough

Expecting good food from the dining halls

To the editor:

I must totally disagree with Brian Surette's reasons for the lack of quality food in our dining commons (Nov. 20). He has missed the point altogether.

Now, you probably think I am just another student complaining about the dining commons' (DC) food. Regarding students like me, Surette finds himself "wondering what exactly these students are expecting."

I challenge him to take a look at (and taste of, for that matter) the food served at other large, public state schools, most of which cost less to attend than UMass does. Go to Kansas University and see the difference. There is absolutely no reason why underclassmen, who are forced to be on the meal plan, should be fed unsavory "food."

The main problem is our food delivery service. Since the director of Food Service has just recently passed away, we should take this opportunity to change the food provider of our dining commons. Perhaps the equipment used to cook the food is also a part of the problem. I urge the Food Service administration to look into the meal service method of other large universities, such as Kansas, and mimic their practices.

Also, if I recall correctly, we are paying more for our meal plans this semester than last semester and, with that increase in cost, we are supposed to see an improvement in the quality of food. Considering that you are a freshman, Mr. Surette, I guess you didn't realize that. I am still waiting for the improvement. That is what I expect, Mr. Surette.

Geoffrey Harm Southwest

In defense of Meredith

To the Editor:

Everyday at breakfast, lunch and in between classes I glance over the Collegian. One of the pieces I first look for is Luke Meredith's column.

Being a Merrimack Valley boy who finds some of life's meaningless instances funny, I feel the need to respond to an attack-filled, rambling letter written by Ted Hart.

While I don't feel the need to write a long, babbling letter, I just wanted to give Hart a bit of advice. It's easy to sit back in front of the computer and complain. But instead, why don't you take some time and write what you would consider a "non-idiotic" editorial.

Maybe if your writing is half decent, then the Collegian will publish your column every week and that way you and your followers will have something to look forward to.

Luke Meredith, keep those columns flowing.

Jason B. Grosky
grosky@student.umass.edu

To the Editor:

We are writing in response to the letter by Ted Hart (Nov. 20). This is for all of the Luke Meredith fans out there. He is a smart, witty and entertaining writer. He has the uncanny talent of being able to put down on paper what many other people (Hart not included) are thinking.

While the majority of the other editorials address social issues facing our society, Meredith's humorous comments on ordinary, everyday events bring the lighter side of life to the editorial page.

It is a shame that Hart is unable to find in himself even the slightest trace of a sense of humor, so that he, too, may laugh out loud as he forms a mental picture of a man in a lawn chair floating by an airport.

Anne Devoy and Heather Peterson Southwest

Photo request

To the Editor:

Please run a picture of Laura Barcella in the next issue of the paper so that if I ever run into her I know to get out of her way, and not to hold the door open for her.

Michael Martineau Orchard Hill

The President's new digs

To the Editor:

It is important to set the record straight concerning the University of Massachusetts President's Office move for Gerrit Deyoung ("President Bulger's new office," Nov. 19) and any others who have been grossly misinformed of the facts.

First, readers of the Collegian should understand that Mr. Deyoung's recent column on the move was based on a distorted report in another newspaper. It is clear he made little, if any, attempt to verify any of his information.

We strongly believe that our move from 18 Tremont St. to One Beacon St. — not a Boyleston St. brownstone as Deyoung claimed — is both strategically and financially sound.

Mr. Deyoung acknowledges he "can't remember the exact figures" regarding the move, so allow me to refresh his memory.

We had an opportunity to bring four Boston-based University functions under one roof, to establish a downtown business education center for the University of Massachusetts–Boston, assume an existing state agency obligation to pay for this space, and receive a highly- attractive long-term rental agreement. For those reasons, the move to One Beacon St. was a no-brainer for the University, state, taxpayers and students.

Combining these functions, some of which were scattered around downtown Boston, at 18 Tremont St. would have cost $840,000 at current advertised rates. Combining them at One Beacon St. costs a total of $872,175 (not the $1 million claimed by Deyoung). The former office space, however, did not have the room for us to combine these key University functions, which we consider vital to our effectiveness.

The move allows the University to do several things. It will establish a downtown Boston classroom presence for the University for the first time in a quarter century. This will attract a whole new set of students to the University and help us forge links to the corporate center of Massachusetts.

The move will also strengthen links between the University of Massachusetts Foundation, the University's fundraising arm, and the President's Office as part of the effort to more aggressively raise private funds. This is an established priority of the Governor and Legislature, one we strongly agree with because it will result in more support for scholarship, student services and academic programs.

At One Beacon St. we will be able to achieve a closer working relationship with the Donahue Institute's economic development and public service programs. We can also bring the University Building Authority in-house, which is projected to save additional money and streamline our five-year, $434 million facility improvement program, a large portion of which is being targeted toward the Amherst campus.

In moving to One Beacon St. the University has secured a long-term (7.5 years) rental rate that is far below current market rates. No new state dollars are being spent because the University is assuming a portion of lease already held by the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency.

The rental rate at One Beacon St. is $29.50 per square foot. Similar downtown office space ranged from $36 to $45 per square foot as of July. In 2005, the final year of the One Beacon St. lease, the University will pay $34.50 per square foot, significantly less than today's rents in downtown Boston.

The projected 1998 rate for 18 Tremont St. is $28 per square foot and would likely increase in succeeding years. The lease was due to expire in December.

Also, the One Beacon St. lease contains a "no–tax– escalation clause," meaning the University is protected from increases in property taxes. When the lease expires, the University has the option of renewing the lease for an additional 10 years at a below–market rate.

This move was about positioning the University for the future and building on its recent success of cutting costs to students, increasing standards, and building public & private support.

If Deyoung would like to inspect these new offices, he's more than welcome. Just tell him not to go in search of the presidential brownstone on Boyleston St.

John Hoey, Director of Communications President's Office

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Write for Ed/Op!

The Collegian Editorial page needs new writers. We want you to write humor, politics, satire, lifestyle, or any of a thousand other styles — let us be as broad as the student body is.

We especially encourage material that relates to current issues at UMass.

Anyone who is interested should submit material by email (letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu), fax (545-1592), or by dropping it off at the Collegian offices for Dan Bodah.

Editorials should be 500–700 words long and should include a phone number so we can call you back.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor-in-Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor

Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Aiberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Waltros to leave "Guiding Light," Hunter Tylo sues Spelling

Jacob Fanning's Soap Chat

Well, there's some bad news on the "Guiding Light" front this week. Sources close to the show have said that Cynthia Waltros (Annie) has decided to leave the soap after her contract expires (I believe it's in January of next year). The actress apparently wants to test her wings. That's a huge loss to the show considering the fact that she is one of the reasons, if not the reason, for "GL's" recent Nielsen revival (the show has continued to show its highest ratings ever). She's been nothing short of exceptional (certainly always entertaining) in her portrayal of the over-the-top Annie Lewis and is one of the reasons I started watching "GL" again after a long dry spell — that and because it's my "job" (or at least that's what I tell my Dad when he asks me why I watch "that" crap). There are no plans to recast the role, a smart move on "GL's" part. I mean, could anyone replace Cynthia and not seem lame in comparison. It's a dark day in Springfield, my "GL" friends.

There are a few more notable departures this week... Diego Serrano has reported that he will leave "As the World Turns" after his contract expires in January, which doesn't come as much of a shock to me since he's been reduced to a prop these last few months.

Rence Allman (Danielle) has been axed by "Port Charles" due to storyline reasons. She dies this Monday from injuries sustained in the car accident (another victim of Rex's manipulations). Sniff...I was rather fond of her character too. It's a shame that such great drama has to come at the Danielle's expense.

There's been rumors concerning the axing of Laura Harring from "Sunset Beach." What a stupid move! Note to "Sunset Beach," you need all the help you can get and firing one of the more talented actors doesn't help matters. Maybe the fact she could actually act intimidated the other cast members...

In case you haven't heard, Hunter Tylo (Taylor, "Bold & Beautiful") has filed suit against Spelling Enterprises claiming that she was "wrongfully" terminated from "Melrose Place." She was originally slated to play the role of Taylor (a role that has been more than adequately filled by the talented Lisa Rinna) but was let go after she announced that she was pregnant. There's been much heated debate about the issue (it's been in the headlines for months now) and I thought I'd throw in my two cents.

I'm not endorsing the dismissal of pregnant women from their jobs but at the same time I can understand Spelling's argument (at least in this one instance). Why he hired Mrs. Morality to play the role of "MP's" nastiest vixen is beyond me. I mean this is the woman who was quoted as saying that she refused to conform to "Melrose's" style and she wanted to play the moral right of the show (I wasn't aware that the show had one. Isn't that part of the appeal?).

Generally, a dismissal of this sort is discrimination, plain and simple, unless it in some manner impairs the person's performance. In this case, I think it does to the extent that it limits the character's options and potential (Can you picture a pregnant Tylo throwing Michael down on the bed and straddling him, with a mini skirt on no less). The head writers would have to completely retool their earlier conception of the character, scrap their plans and find a way to work around it — clearly a royal pain in the butt (always has been in the industry).

One more thing, Tylo is all too aware of how the industry works. Part of the reason she was hired was because of her looks (Spelling is notorious for hiring only the most beautiful and glossy... Heather Locklear, Antonio Sabato Jr., need I say more). Is it a flaw? Yes, but it's often the way the industry is and she knows it. It's the industry she's a part of and the one that has made her a success.

As much as we hate to admit it, we like seeing hotties like Vanessa Marcil and Steve Burton strut their stuff, who with a pulse wouldn't? She knows the score — this is just her chance to whine about it. Is it justified? Maybe. Does it stink? Yes. Is she a victim? Only Judge Judy can decide.

I was recently reminiscing about the old days of the soap world with my friends about "Santa Barbara" and "GH's" stories of the past and it got me thinking about daytime's crowning achievements, daytime's best. I thought about the time on "One Life To Live" when Tina (the only Tina as far as I'm concerned) accidently killed Cord's mother during their struggle, Marlena's possession on "Days of Our Lives" and the beautifully written love story between Stone and Robin on "GH."

Next week I thought I'd dust the cobwebs in my brain and, with the help of my friends, pull together the top 10 most incredible moments in soap opera history. I could really use your help though so if you have any special moments that you think are worthy, I'd love to hear them.

Sink or Swim:

Sink :

- Shane on "Another World." Stop whining and get over it. Vicky's made her choice and desperation is so unbecoming to your dashing image. Forget Eric — I'm beginning to think that this guy is Sami's twin (they both seem to carry that desperation gene).
- James' betrayal on "Bold and the Beautiful." Hope the sanctimonious jerk suffers for what he's done to Sheila... and he has the gall to say that she fights dirty.
- The current game of musical chair writers on "All My Children" and "AW." I'll be addressing this later because it's definitely detrimental to the soaps.

Swim :

- I forgot to mention this last week but I want to give a shout out to Vanessa Marcil and Steve Burton (Brenda and Jason on "GH") for their little confrontation. It was some pretty powerful stuff, had me glued to the seat.
- The kidnapping of Max's children. Gives James DePaiva the chance to shine and he has not disappointed. "OLTL" has been fantastic as of late and is without a doubt one of daytime's best kept secrets. If you're not watching, sucks to be you...
- Finally Gloria has snapped out of her annoying coma. I was discussing this very matter with an acquaintance of mine at the Bluewall and we both agreed that she definitely goes through these phases. Annoying and naive one moment then cool the next.
- Laura and Stefano's confrontation on "Days." Did you catch the two of them at each other's throat last week? Meow.
- Victoria and Ashley's little feud at Cole's cabin on "Young and the Restless." Never has bad been so much fun!

Jacob Fanning is a Collegian columnist. You can e–mail him with any comments or questions at jfanning@student.umass.edu. Soap Chat appears on Mondays.

THE ARTS & LIVING DESK IS LOOKING FOR A RESPONSIBLE PERSON TO COVER FILM. APPLICANTS SHOULD HAVE KNOWLEDGE OF FILM, STRONG WRITING SKILLS AND BE COMMITTED TO REVIEWING UP TO TWO FILMS A WEEK. THOSE INTERESTED IN WRITING ABOUT FILM SHOULD FILL OUT AN APPLICATION AND SUBMIT A SAMPLE REVIEW OF A MOVIE TO THE COLLEGIAN. STOP BY THE COLLEGIAN OR CALL 545- 1361 AND TALK TO SEEMA GANGATIRKAR OR ADAM LEVINE FOR MORE INFORMATION. GET INVOLVED. YOU'LL LIKE IT.

Holly Days

CLASSES END DEC. 12! NOW'S THE TIME TO GET GIFTS FOR YOUR FRIENDS!

GIVE YOURSELF A GIFT THIS HOLIDAY SEASON!

DID YOU KNOW THAT THE UNIVERSITY STORE RETURNS ALL OF ITS PROFITS TO THE CAMPUS CENTER?

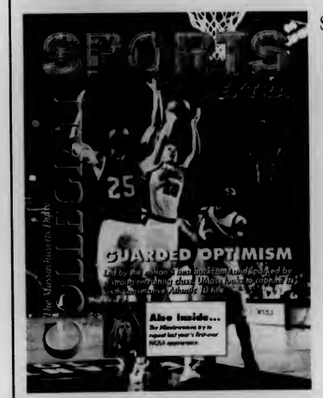
IT'S TRUE! EVERY STUDENT WHO SHOPS AT THE UStore GIVES A GIFT TO THEMSELVES AND THE WHOLE CAMPUS!

UStore — UNIVERSITY STORE IN THE UMASS CAMPUS CENTER

HOURS: M-F 9 TO 5 SAT. 11 TO 4 (413) 545-2619

WE ACCEPT AMEX, DISCOVER, MC, VISA, AND THE UCARD!

Special Holiday Events:



HOLIDAY UMASS CLOTHING SALE — ENDS TODAY! CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE

HOLIDAY BOOK SALE — STARTS MON. DEC. 1! CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE

RAY BRADBURY BOOK SIGNING — MON. DEC 8, 1PM - 4PM CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE

CARD AND WRAP SHOWCASE — EVERY DAY IN THE UNIVERSITY STORE!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Sponsored by:

PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S

UMass basketball

- Delivered FREE to all on-campus mailboxes
- Available at select on-campus locations
- Available at all home games

COMING DEC. 2ND

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN — New England's Largest College Daily

113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003

Phone: (413) 545-3500 • Fax: (413) 545-1592

The Campus Activities Office Presents A

NEW YORK CITY BUS TRIP

Please check out our Website: http: www.umass.edu campact events calendar2.htm

EARN $7.50 per hour

Work Local to Your Home

Mornings, Evenings, and Weekends

Taking Inventory

Paid Training

Advancement Potential

Call our Jobline 24 hours a day

1-888-242-RGIS

Equal Opportunity Employer

Interview with RGIS Inventory Specialists on the Campus Center Concourse

December 2nd, 3rd, 10th, & 11th

9:00am to 3:30pm

NASA approves decision to rescue tumbling satellite

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Astronauts aboard the space shuttle Columbia will attempt a daring satellite rescue — the first in 5 1/2 years — under a plan approved by NASA yesterday after considerable study.

More than anything, the space agency wants to avoid a collision. The slowly spinning, 3,000-pound satellite could do serious damage if it struck the shuttle or the two spacewalkers during tonight's salvage effort.

Mission operations representative Bob Castle told reporters the risk of a collision is "very, very small."

"We feel very confident that this is going to work," Castle said at a news conference. "The crew is quite capable of doing this. The flying tasks of bringing the orbiter up close to the tumbling spacecraft, I think, are very doable."

The $10 million reusable science satellite, called Spartan, has been tumbling out of control since Friday, when Columbia's crew released it, saw it wasn't working and then failed to recover it with the shuttle robot arm.

When the six astronauts last saw it, before the shuttle backed off to a safe distance, Spartan was spinning at a rate of two degrees a second, making a full revolution every three minutes. It's a 5-foot cube with the ends of an 11-foot telescope protruding from opposite sides.

Castle said engineers are confident the satellite won't be spinning any faster when astronauts Winston Scott and Takao Doi try to catch it with their gloved hands — if anything, it might be rotating more slowly if a control system kicks in.

Here's the plan:

The spacewalkers will be positioned on opposite ends of a platform that spans the shuttle cargo bay, their feet secured by straps. They'll lean all the way back as Columbia creeps up to the satellite, their backpacks brushing against the cargo bay sills.

"It's going to take a considerable amount of patience," explained Mike Hess, NASA's lead spacewalk officer. "They may just have to sit and wait until it rotates into a position in which they can grab it."

Once the Spartan satellite is between the two men at head level and the 20-inch-diameter telescope tube is pointed their way, they'll reach out and grab the ends of the tube at the same instant. Then they'll gently lower the satellite into the cargo bay.

"We don't expect it to be too particularly difficult although they're going to have to be careful," Hess said.

The other option that was considered — having Scott grab the satellite by himself while standing on the end of Columbia's 50-foot robot arm — was deemed to be more difficult and dangerous. Hess estimates it will take two hours for Scott and Doi to capture Spartan, leaving four hours for them to test an extendible crane intended for NASA's future space station.

The spacewalkers were supposed to test more station equipment, but the tasks were nixed in order to save the satellite. One of the biggest casualties is a free-flying robotic camera that would have hovered behind the astronauts and observed their work out in the cargo bay.

"That's unfortunate," Hess said. "Perhaps we'll fly it on another mission."

If Spartan is rescued and its malfunction can be corrected by computer commands — and if the shuttle has enough fuel — NASA might consider sending the craft back out for the two days of solar observations it missed, Castle said.

But that's another worry for another day.

Pacific Rim focus of economic summit

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Trying to calm global jitters about economic turmoil in Asia, President Clinton set a reassuring tone yesterday for a summit with Pacific Rim leaders, declaring, "This is the time for confidence in the future of Asia." He was joining other leaders to craft a package of international financial support.

As leaders arrived for the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum, several thousand demonstrators marched in unity protesting a variety of causes. Street artists, bagpipe players and drummers mingled with the protesters, who hoisted signs reading "Workers solitary has no borders" and "Stop China's genocide in Tibet." In two days of talks beginning today, the 18-nation Asia-Pacific leaders will endorse a financial rescue effort led by the International Monetary Fund with additional resources provided by wealthy nations such as the United States and Japan.

"The IMF is a first line of defense; then perhaps we might need a second line of defense," Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chretien said at a news conference after a meeting with the president. "I think that's the right approach," Clinton agreed.

Nonetheless, he dismissed Asia's recent counting bank failures, currency devaluations and stock market plunges as "a few little glitches in the road here," adding, "We're working through them."

At the airport, there was a steady stream of VIP arrivals in the rain. Chinese President Jiang Zemin landed at midday, followed several hours later by Japanese Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto. Clinton will see them separately today. The meeting with Jiang comes just days after Wei Jingsheng, China's most prominent democracy advocate, said that only continued pressure from the West could help free more Chinese political prisoners.

Clinton's reassuring words could not erase the fact that Asia's turmoil has produced doomsday scenarios of a global economic downturn if the situation isn't stabilized. On the eve of the summit, the crisis claimed its biggest victim as South Korea was forced to ask for a $20 billion-plus bailout.

Earlier, Indonesia received emergency IMF funds of $25 billion, while Thailand got $17 billion. All three nations were represented in discussions here.

Thailand — the first country ravaged by the currency crisis that has swept Asia — cautioned that if the summit's outcome were "anything less than large and dramatic," there would be a worsening of the economic turmoil. That warning spurred the 18 nations represented here to produce an expanded agreement to tear down tariffs and open trade in nine areas, from environmental products to toys, covering $1.5 trillion of commerce.

The president said the IMF deal would not require an enormous investment from any one country. "Our commitment is limited but significant enough" to send a reassuring signal in tandem with allies, he said.

Clinton arrived here with a weakened hand, after Congress — led by his fellow Democrats — refused to give him expanded trade negotiating authority. The president also was embarrassed by Congress' rejection of his request for $3.5 billion in additional financing for the IMF.

Pointedly offering a rosy assessment, Clinton said, "I think this is a time for confidence in the future of Asia and confidence in the future of our relationship with them." Indeed there are fears that Asia's problems will dampen demand for U.S. exports and slow the American economy.

On the summit's eve, IMF envoys arrived in South Korea to begin their financial rescue mission. South Korean Finance and Economy Minister Lim Chang-yuel said his government will use the IMF's intervention to overhaul its inefficient economy.

"It's shameful to try to overcome a foreign currency crisis with the help of the IMF, but it could rather serve as a good opportunity if we use it to strengthen the long-term growth potential of our economy," Lim said.

Clinton was upbeat in Vancouver about South Korea, the world's 11th largest economy. "Certainly, I don't see how anyone could be less than hopeful about the long-term prospects for the South Korean economy given their achievements over the last few decades."

Commerce Secretary William Daley, meanwhile, prodded Japan to use economic reforms to boost domestic demand to cut the soaring U.S. trade deficit with Tokyo, which climbed 6.9 percent in September to $5.1 billion. Daley said he wants Japan "to make sure these trade numbers do not get out of hand."

Iraqi sanctions will not end unless Hussein cooperates

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Bolstered by a strong endorsement from U.N. weapons experts, American officials stressed yesterday that Iraq has no hope of seeing economic sanctions lifted as long as it balks at total access for inspectors trying to ferret out biological and chemical weapons.

"It is clear that there is a massive amount of work that has to be done there, especially in the chemical and biological inspection areas," President Clinton said in Vancouver, British Columbia, at a trade summit of Pacific Rim nations. Clinton said he is determined that weapons inspectors be free to carry out their mission.

Baghdad's United Nations ambassador countered that sanctions should be lifted now. The Iraqis have destroyed their weapons themselves, he said.

"The sanctions will stay in place. There is no hope of them being lifted" so long as Iraq continues to obstruct weapons instructors and ignore other U.N. resolutions imposed after the 1991 Persian Gulf War, Defense Secretary William Cohen said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"They are nowhere close on any front. So we don't see sanctions being lifted. There's absolutely no reason to do that," the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Bill Richardson, added on "Fox News Sunday."

U.N. weapons inspectors resumed their work in Iraq Saturday after a three-week standoff sparked by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's demand that Americans be removed from the team and contention that sanctions crippling Iraq's economy be ended. Yesterday the roughly 75 U.N. monitors, including four Americans, fanned out around Baghdad as helicopter crews overhead watched for suspicious activity on the ground. Inspection team chief Nils Carlstrom refused to say what they were finding but said the Iraqis were cooperating.

U.S. officials have emphasized the crisis is not over because Iraq continues to withhold access to 63 sites, including Saddam's 47 presidential compounds. Cohen spoke of a "pattern of deception and lies, deceits and cover-ups" including concealment of biological and chemical weapons that could kill millions of people.

"We don't know at this point whether he (Saddam) simply has had a change of tactics or a change of heart," Cohen said. "Based on past experience, I suspect it's more a change of tactics."

The U.N. weapons experts, known as UNSCOM, supported that view Saturday in a report to the U.N. Security Council that agreed banned weapons remain concealed. The report recommended an even stricter inspections regime and rejected efforts by Russia to ease sanctions.

UNSCOM chief Richard Butler, on NBC, said the United Nations must stand firm on Iraq because "Iraq is a test case for something much wider," whether people in the 21st century will live under a cloud of potential biological and chemical destruction.

On the other side, Iraq's U.N. ambassador, Nizar Hamdoon, speculated Saturday on CNN over the possibility of a new confrontation over the weapons inspectors unless Russia, which has been more sympathetic to Iraq and helped broker a deal allowing inspections to resume, can persuade the United Nations to allow changes in the team.

Septuplet mom released; babies getting stronger

By Jordan Lite
Associated Press

CARLISLE, Iowa — Septuplet mom Bobbi McCaughey left the hospital and returned home yesterday while her seven babies stayed behind in intensive care, continuing to impress doctors with their resilience.

Even the last-born of the seven — Joel Steven — who had been listed in critical condition shortly after Wednesday's birth and was dubbed "underdog" by doctors, was taken off a ventilator yesterday and upgraded to fair condition.

"Last week we had very high expectations for these babies, and to this point, they have fulfilled all of those expectations remarkably well," Dr. Robert Shaw, director of the Iowa Methodist Medical Center, said yesterday on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Mrs. McCaughey, 29, arrived yesterday afternoon at her home in Carlisle, 10 miles south of Des Moines, with her husband, Kenny. Hospitalized for more than a month, she walked into her home slowly and without anyone's help.

The McCaugheys made worldwide news when their septuplets were born by Cesarean section nine weeks' premature. Doctors have said the babies will be hospitalized into January.

Kenneth, the first-born, has been breathing on his own since Friday. The other five — two boys and three girls — remain in serious condition at Blank Childrens Hospital's neonatal intensive care unit.

In Carlisle, about 100 members of Missionary Baptist Church, where the McCaugheys worship, gathered to celebrate what they say is a miracle birth.

"Our hearts are so full this morning, we can hardly speak," said Mrs. McCaughey's uncle, the Rev. Henry Hepworth of Innisfale, Alberta, as he led the congregation in a prayer of thanks. The altar where Bobbi and Kenny McCaughey were married in 1992 was decorated with four "It's a boy" and three "It's a girl" balloons.

About 15 reporters scribbled notes through the service and later converged upon family members, while camera crews crowded around relatives outside.

But the family appeared to be growing weary of the media attention.

"We would like to get back to normal as soon as can be," said Peg Hepworth, Mrs. McCaughey's mother.

In a letter printed in Time magazine's Dec. 1 issue, the surviving Dionne quintuplets warned the McCaugheys that multiple births should not be seen as entertainment or a marketing tool.

"Multiple births should not be confused with entertainment, nor should they be an opportunity to sell products," the 63-year-old sisters, Annette, Cecile and Yvonne Dionne, wrote.

Conceived before the era of fertility drugs, the five identical sisters were born on May 28, 1934, in Ontario, Canada. Weighing less then 2 pounds each, they were the first known surviving quintuplets and became a tourist sensation.

Rev. Hepworth said he was in awe of the McCaughey babies.

"They're all delicate, but they are so perfect," he said. "There's not a bent nose or squashed head in the bunch." Mrs. McCaughey's father, Bob Hepworth, said holding the babies was thrilling.

Aid workers held captive

By Haroun Hassan
Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Clan elders negotiated yesterday for the release of five U.N. and European Union aid workers, held captive for two days in a dispute between rival factions in northeastern Somalia.

U.N. officials were closely monitoring the talks in El Ayo, a town on the Gulf of Aden coast, said a source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

It was impossible to determine whether the hostages had been harmed.

Fighters with the Wasangeli subclan kidnapped the five aid workers Friday, apparently in retaliation for the seizure of a Palestinian businessman by a rival subclan, the Marjeteen, earlier that day, the source said by satellite telephone from El Ayo. The Palestinian — a partner of two Somali charcoal dealers — was freed yesterday as part of the negotiations. The reason for his kidnapping was not clear.

Attempting to rescue the hostages, the Marjeteen attacked the Wasangeli late Saturday, resulting in the deaths of two fighters on each side, the source said.

The five hostages include one British employee of the European Union and four United Nations aid workers: two Kenyans, an Indian and a Canadian, a U.N. source said on condition of anonymity. One of the Kenyans was a woman, sources in El Ayo said yesterday. The five were taken at gunpoint from a boat moored off El Ayo, in the northeast corner of the self-declared independent Republic of Somaliland. The region declared its independence from the rest of Somalia in 1991.

Crime falls; safe to go outside

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second time in two weeks, the Clinton administration is telling Americans that streets are getting safer in all regions of the country.

Two of the most feared crime categories, murder and robbery, showed declines of 9 percent each from January to July compared with the first six months of 1996, the FBI announced yesterday.

"It's no accident," President Clinton said in a statement. "With community police at the center of our efforts, we have worked to give communities the tools they need to rid their neighborhoods of gangs, guns and drugs."

Clinton said his next priority was to take on juvenile crime. The preliminary figures from the Uniform Crime Reporting Program — culled from the nation's law enforcement agencies — also showed drops in motor vehicle theft, aggravated assault, arson and burglary.

Just last Saturday, in a separate survey, the Justice Department touted figures showing that violent crime dropped 10 percent below the previous year.

The most significant drop of 17.6 percent was in rapes and sexual assaults, according to the National Crime Victimization Survey conducted by the Bureau of Justice Statistics.

"Crime has been falling for several years, because policy makers, law enforcement and ordinary Americans are coming together to do the right thing," Attorney General Janet Reno said in a statement. "President Clinton has put more police on the streets, and more people are coming forward to work with them. Now we must build on our progress by doing more as a nation to keep young people on the right path."

The FBI reported the Northeast had the largest decrease in serious crime — 6 percent — followed by 5 percent in the Midwest and West and 3 percent in the South. All the figures are compared with the first half of last year.

The latest FBI figures show:

• Violent crime decreased 5 percent, and property crime was down 4 percent.

• Aggravated assault fell 5 percent, forcible rape 2 percent, arson decreased 9 percent, motor vehicle theft and burglary 5 percent each and larceny-theft 4 percent.

• All the nation's cities showed a decline in serious crime for the six-month period, with cities of more than 250,000 population recording an average decline of 6 percent. Suburban areas saw a 3 percent drop, rural areas 1 percent, the FBI said.

IMF to aid South Korean economy

By Paul Shin
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — International Monetary Fund envoys opened their South Korean rescue mission yesterday, promising to help the nation through an economic crisis with global implications.

The three-member delegation, the first of two from the IMF, came to study the country's financial sector before setting terms for a $20 billion-plus aid package being sought by South Korea.

The second IMF delegation, due in Seoul early this week, will check on South Korea's general economic condition.

A meltdown in South Korea's economy, the world's 11th largest, would have a profound impact worldwide. Nearly a third of South Korea's imports come from the United States and Japan.

"We're here to help the Bank of Korea and the South Korean government," Peter Hayward, a member of the IMF delegation, said at a news conference at Seoul's Kimpo Airport.

The officials refused to comment on Seoul's tentative target of a $20 billion-plus bailout package, but said South Korea can ask for more funding than that given to Thailand and Indonesia earlier this year. Indonesia received emergency IMF funds of $23 billion, while Thailand got $17 billion.

Former Treasury Undersecretary Jeffrey Shafer, lead official for dealings with the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation bloc, has said he thinks South Korea needs at least $50 billion.

Earlier yesterday, South Korean Finance and Economy Minister Lim Chang-yuel said his government will use the IMF's intervention to overhaul its inefficient economy.

"It's shameful to try to overcome a foreign currency crisis with the help of the IMF, but it could rather serve as a good opportunity if we use it to strengthen the long-term growth potential of our economy," Lim said.

He said his government is prepared for radical changes in its growth-oriented economic policy, and South Korea's economy will emerge even stronger if it succeeds in eliminating inefficiency with the help of the IMF.

The IMF's conditions for providing a bailout are expected to include tighter government spending and elimination of debt-ridden banks, which will result in higher unemployment.

Chinese separatists attacking religious leaders; Aronghan still recovering

By Charles Hutzler
Associated Press

KASHGAR, China — Imam Aronghan Aji looked the image of respectability as he set out in clerical robes and white turban to lead morning prayers at the ancient Adighar Mosque.

But the leader of state-sanctioned Islam in China's rugged western reaches never made it. He was stabbed by assassins intent on wiping out Chinese rule. A year and a half later, the dignified octogenarian's health is frailer, his gait slower, his psyche shaken and his assailants' message clearer.

"Bribed and incited by separatists, these people were told others would rally around them if they killed patriotic religious leaders," said Imam Mamatmin, an aide to Aronghan.

A call to rise up is reverberating among Muslims in China's Xinjiang region. Separatists, better financed and better armed than ever before, are feeding on age-old fears and new discontents. Anti-Chinese sentiment has grown explosive on a volatile mix of religious ferment from the Islamic world, nationalism from newly independent Central Asian countries and anger that Chinese migrants seem to be getting richer while native Turkic-speaking Muslims remain poor.

Although small in number, the separatists can count on support from disaffected Muslims at home and a network of lobbyists championing their cause from Istanbul to Washington.

Since attacks began in early 1996, pro-Chinese clerics have been assassinated in at least four cities — seven on one day alone; bombs exploded nearly simultaneously on three buses in the regional capital of Urumqi; and a border city erupted in a riot. The separatists also are suspected of blowing up a bus in Beijing, 1,400 miles away.

Authorities have closed mosques, conducted mass arrests and deployed army patrols, but the attacks have continued. Months after last February's riot in Yili, police were uncovering plots for more unrest and finding caches of guns, explosives and separatist propaganda, the state-run Xinjiang Daily reported.

Western investors keen on developing Xinjiang's oil reserves are already being warned by industry analysts that the violence may disrupt their business.

Friction in Xinjiang is a function of geography. Through its rolling grasslands, snow-capped mountains and forbidding deserts run rich oases that form China's best land routes to the rest of Eurasia.

The ancient Silk Road that carried luxury goods between China and the Roman Empire traversed Xinjiang (pronounced sheen-jyahng). British spies fought Russian agents, first imperial and then Bolshevik, for influence in the region in the espionage epic known as "the great game."

"The history of Xinjiang is one of great game politics and the new great game is bigger and badder than the old great game," said Dru Gladney, an expert on China's Muslims at the University of Hawaii.

As China opened Xinjiang's once closed border over the past decade, Muslim traders and pilgrims traveled the region and brought back radical views of Islamic nationalism. Saudi Arabia, Turkey and Iran have sent money to spur trade and religion and sway public allegiances. From Afghanistan come arms and opium.

Talk in the bazaars of Urumqi and Kashgar, an oasis city on the western border, is not of revolt but resentment. Uighurs, members of Xinjiang's largest ethnic group, complain that incoming ethnic Han Chinese have unfairly benefited from the still poor area's recent rapid growth.

Few Uighur faces are found among the oil workers in the Tarim Basin, a Texas-sized wasteland. A new town of gleaming white-tile buildings built to service the industry in the ancient caravan town of Korla mainly houses 4,500 workers from other parts of China. Anger swells even in Kashgar, an overwhelmingly Uighur city near the Kirghiz and Tajik borders where Chinese influence seems limited to the writing on shop and street signs and a statue of Mao Tse-tung.

The border trade that helped the city thrive a few years ago has stagnated. A swath of the city's huge bazaar set aside for small traders from neighboring countries stands empty, much of their business taken over by state firms.

"Business is bad. Uighurs can't get permission to do the things that the Han get easily. Conflict between us is becoming more intense," said Adil, an unemployed Uighur hanging out in Kashgar's new town center.

Despite the simmering resentment, Uighurs in Kashgar seem to farm, trade and worship without regard to the Chinese, whom they outnumber 3-to-1.

Muslim men young and old crowd by the thousands into the 550-year-old Adighar Mosque, Xinjiang's largest, for midday prayers. Imam Aronghan insists his state-sanctioned mosque is flourishing harmoniously and free from government interference. The imam, a member of Xinjiang's top government advisory body, would not answer questions about the attempt on his life on May 12, 1996. His assistant, Imam Mamatmin, described the assassins, later caught by police, as people from

■ hoop

continued from page 10

Clarke and Herren, who had been exchanging unpleasantries all night, got into a series of brief altercations during the stretch. There were no fouls called, but Fresno's intensity went up a notch afterwards.

The Minutemen led by as much as eight points in the first half, thanks to a decided advantage in the paint. Weeks was joined by junior center Lari Ketner, each of whom scored 10 points in the first half. UMass jumped out to an early 11–3 lead, thanks to an early 8–0 rebounding advantage. The Minutemen kept the lead for most of the first half, but with time running out Clarke was called for a five–second infraction, and celebrated juco transfer Rafer Alston buried a deep three–pointer to bring Fresno within one at halftime.

Mike Babul, in his first start since early last season, scored six points and added seven rebounds. Monty Mack struggled from the floor, going 6–for–20, but still knocked in 15 points. Clarke added five points and eight assists.

Massachusetts (0-1)
Babul 3-7 0-0 6, Weeks 8-16 4-4 20, Ketner 8-16 0-0 16, Clarke 1-7 2-2 5, Mack 6-20 0-0 15, DePina 0-1 0-0 0, Smith 0-1 0-0 0, Basit 1-7 0-0 2. Totals 27-75 6-6 64.
Fresno St. (2-0)
Fowlkes 5-9 0-0 10, Roberston 7-11 0-0 19, Jones 8-14 0-0 16, Alston 3-6 2-2 10, Herren 8-16 1-4 19, Forney 2-6 2-2 6, Porter 0-0 0-0 0, Abney 0-1 0-2 0, Laurie 0-0 0-0 0, Farley 1-2 0-0 2. Totals 34-65 5-11 82.
Halftime-UMass 35, Fresno St. 34. 3-Point goals-UMass 4-13 (Mack 3-9, Clarke 1-4), Fresno St. 9-19 (Roberson 5-8, Alston 2-5, Herren 2-5, Fowlkes 0-1). Fouled out-None. Rebounds-UMass 52 (Weeks 15), Fresno St. 31 (Roberson 9). Assists-UMass 20 (Clarke 8), Fresno St. 20 (Herren 6). Total Fouls-UMass 16. Fresno St. 14. A-10,220.

■ friars

continued from page 10

three straight games against the Huskies, which will signify this attempt to get back into the conference race. Even last season's HE doormat team, Northeastern, has three conference wins to their credit this season, and winning a three–game series over them is not as automatic as it seemed at the start of the season.

UMass has already lost the season series against two conference opponents (Providence and Lowell), and are down one game to both Boston College and Boston University. So, the Minutemen need to take the season series against teams like Northeastern and Merrimack to expect to finish above the ninth spot in HE.

Expecting to take two out of three games against national powers like No. 2 BU, No. 5 New Hampshire, No. 6 BC and No. 9 Maine is an uphill battle at best — but crazier things have happened. With a season–high 45 shots on freshman Boyd Ballard last Saturday night, the 5–3 loss was not for a lack of trying. For UMass coach Joe Mallen, the team needs to continue that kind of effort if they want to get back into the hunt, and if they do, the wins will come.

"I don't think playing Northeastern is going to be easier than playing Providence right now," Mallen said. "If we continue to get those types of shots on goal, we're going to win games in this league.

"All we have to do right now is hold the fort, work on the positives, and just keep moving forward. We certainly can't erase anything we've done so far," Mallen said.

One important player for the Minutemen that would like to erase this weekend is senior defenseman Mike Gaffney. After a stellar junior season that saw him miss the all–time scoring mark for a defenseman by only two points, Gaffney's game has sputtered so far this season.

You could see the Worcester native's game stall out Friday night after he accidentally knocked in a goal at the 7:23 mark of the second period. Then, after UMass took a 3–2 lead on Saturday night, a lapse on his defensive zone coverage resulted in Doug Sheppard's goal at the 5:22 mark of the second period. Gaffney was stripped of the puck behind the net by Jon Coe, and a bang–bang play with Sheppard in front of the net tied the game.

For Mallen, his play has been a microcosm of the hit–and– miss play plaguing the team. If he can get his proverbial engine to work on all cylinders, Mallen sees a brighter future for both him and the team.

"Mike potentially is a better player, and recently, he's been trying to find his own game," Mallen said. "The good news is that his better hockey is ahead of him, and when he as well as some of our other veterans kick in with some better performances, that's when things will start to turn around.

"It'll look like everybody is firing on all cylinders on the same night, and that's what we haven't got so far this year. We need all our guys to work hard on the same night."

This season's restart for the Minutemen could be against Vermont, so you better watch. I know I will.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

PC's Troy Lake notched the game–winner at 12:00 of the final period when he took advantage of a wide open net following a series of misses up close.

The Minutemen's rally from 4–1 down Friday night fell just short as PC added a late empty net goal and escaped the Mullins Center with a 5–3 win.

Once again, Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen received exceptional efforts from his freshmen group.

"These guys are playing a good brand of hockey," Mallen said. "They are earning more and more playing time."

Trailing 2–0 midway through the second period, freshman R.J. Gates broke out with Jeff Blanchard on a 2–1 break and fired a wrist shot in between Ballard's legs.

The Friars added two more tallies before freshman Matt Smith pulled UMass to within two goals again at 12:50 of the third period. Attacking late, Fawcett punched in the rebound off a Dan Juden rush to make the score, 4–3.

Massachusetts had several opportunities in the final moments of the game, but came up empty.

"That kid (Ballard) made all kinds of big saves tonight. But we can't put ourselves in positions to win and not finish it," Mallen said. "We're so close to doing that now, it's ridiculous."

Mallen also felt that four controversial calls from the officiating crew prevented UMass from getting back in the game.

A second period shot from Steve MacKinnon appeared to ricochet off the inside of the net, but was missed. Then, with UMass close to killing off a 2–man advantage for PC, Dean Stork was whistled for a borderline cross–checking call. The resulting goal was contested when two Friars appeared to be lurking in Regan's crease. Then, a Lovell goal was disallowed after an official claimed he kicked the puck in.

"When you're the new kid on the block, there's a lot of things that happen out there that you just don't understand," Mallen said.

JORMA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN

UMass sophomore Jeff Blanchard battles PC's Jason Ialongo for the puck in Saturday night's game at Schneider Arena.

■ volleyball

continued from page10

tion, held her own, passing for 27 assists and recording 12 digs.

Temple upped their record to a perfect 20–0 in the Atlantic Ten conference and will move onto the conference tournament as the number one seed.

Against LaSalle, Nolan lead the charge once again, hitting a solid .448 at the net with 13 kills and no errors on 29 attacks, to go along with two service aces. Meyers also played well, registering ten kills and five digs.

The roles, when compared to the Temple match, were reversed as it was the Minutewomen who were hindering the LaSalle attack. LaSalle hit .000 on the night while UMass countered with a .214 hitting percentage.

"We did what we were needed to do. Whether we go or whether we don't go, we're playing to win," Kenny said after the LaSalle match.

The answer to that is that the Minutewomen will not make an appearance on Thanksgiving weekend in Dayton. The Temple match proved to be only for pride as with a George Washington win on Friday night over Dayton, UMass was officially knocked out of the battle for the fourth and final playoff spot.

"I think this was a rebuilding year, but down the road, although I won't be around to help them, I know this team's gonna rock," Nolan said. "They're definitely on their way up."

LOSE WEIGHT NOW!
You will:
Our products are:
• Doctor Recommended • Feel more energy
• 100% Natural • Lose up to 30 LBS in 30 days
• Guaranteed • Have more willpower
FREE SAMPLES
CALL: (413) 259-1922

REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS
INDEPENDENCE PL. AMHERST
253-9526

Students Want it. Students Need it... For the Holidays!
JC Penney
K-Mart
Media Play
EMS & over 60 other Great Stores
Hampshire Mall
Route 9, Hadley, MA
(413) 586-1900
STUDENT TUESDAY DISCOUNT CARD
Discount Corner Adventure
A Student Reward Program extended holiday hours
Friday 11/28 8am - 10pm
Saturday 11/29 10am - 10pm
Sunday 11/30 10am - 7pm
Isn't It Good To Be A Student?

Gobble. Gobble!
SPRING BREAK
BEST PARTIES CANCUN JAMAICA FLORIDA BEST PRICE
Call today! Space is limited
1 800 648-4849
STS TRAVEL SERVICES
On campus call Giancarlo Grieco @413-546-3147

Auto Glass Center
Corner 2 Town
• Same Day Service
• Billed Directly To Insurance Company
• Windshields Replaced
North Amherst Motors
A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-2880
(On bus route - one mile from UMass)

Asthma Sufferers
You may qualify for FREE Study Related CARE and FREE Study MEDICATIONS for your asthma as part of a research study.
• At least 15 years old
• Have had asthma for at least one year
• Are a non-smoker
Call NOW 413-584-4010

Come see our nifty holiday decorations starting Wednesday November 19
1997 Holiday Events
Holiday UMass Clothing Sale
Wed. Nov. 12 - Fri. Nov. 21
Campus Center Concourse
Holiday Book and Gift Sale
Mon. Dec. 1 - Fri. Dec. 12
Campus Center Concourse
Holiday Card and Wrap Showcase
Mon. Nov. 15 - Fri. Dec. 12
In the University Store
Holiday Gift Ideas for Every Budget!
Every day, throughout the University Store
Some events may not run every day during their scheduled slots. Visit the Campus Center Concourse or the University Store if you have questions.
Holly Days
Gift giving time is here again!

AWARD WINNING LOCAL SERVICE
• Full Service Autobody Insurance Approved
• Full Selection of genuine GM Goodwrench parts.
• Mass. State Inspection Station #3243
• Fine Selection of new and used cars & trucks.
• Ask about our FREE 18 point maintenance check
PAIGE'S Chevrolet Amherst Geo
DICKINSON ST • BETWEEN RT 9 & MAIN ST • 253-3444

CASTAWAY LOUNGE
Rte. 5 & 10
Whatley, MA
413.665.8733
Adult Entertainment
Coming
AMATEUR NIGHT
Ladies must apply in person
Our beautiful V.I.P Room is available for private parties
North of 91, Exit. 22, Take Rte. 5 & 10 North 2 miles
South of 91, Exit. 24 Take 5 & 10 South 2 Miles

PROUDLY PRESENTS:
EVERY MONDAY NIGHT IS FOOTBALL NIGHT
at the Castaway Lounge with
4 Beautiful Exotic Dancers
Starting at 4pm til 1am
$2.00 Draft Michelob & Bud Ice
All other days entertainment
Starting at 7 pm till 1 am

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom Apt. Easthampton. $485 per month. Take over lease ASAP. 527-9410

AUTO FOR SALE

Nissan 240SX 89 Excellent condition, all extras. New tires, brakes, clutch, muffler. $4400 or B/O. Marcos 549-6926

1988 Buick Century Wagon Tip top shape. Great winter car. $3000 or B/O. (413)253-2232

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

1986 Dodge Charger 60k miles $1200 BO. Call Lorraine

EMPLOYMENT

CAT LOVERS
Looking for someone interested in having two loveable cats live-in. We will retain ownership of the cats and we will pay for food, litter, and vet care. You provide the home and the love! Call for details. 546-4550

Attention Slackers!! Use e-mail? Know others who do? Little effort = Big money! Call (800)546-0744

Part-Time Job Available Collegian Classifieds, on-campus, earn great experience, flexible hours. Apply now for next semester. Applications are available at the Collegian Office, Rm 113, Campus Center.

LIVE-IN Room/Board + Salary & TIPS. Two openings Dec. 19 to early/mid April or longer. Do dishes, rooms, wait tables, prep, etc. in southern Vermont inn. Work hard. Must be energetic and pleasant. Call today- Elaine (802)874-4140.

FOR SALE

Dining Table and other furniture. Must sell now! Call 665-0241

WANT MY SAX? Conn Tenor Saxophone. $200. Needs new pads. Call Katherine 546-7065

Phish Tickets Great seats at great prices. City Tickets (800)865-8070

Willpower In A Bottle
Lose Weight
Doctor Recommended
100% Natural
Moneyback Guarantee
(413)259-1922

Nutrition Supplements
Creatine 400G. $29
Designer Whey Protein $26
Met RX $38
Fat Burners & More...
Call: 253-1850

Free Motorola Pagers Limited Supply. Great x-mas gift. 1-800-784-6452 ID# 624421

FOR SALE

Unfinished
LA Wood, Inc.
401 Main St.
Amherst, MA
Formerly Loc. Video To Go
Cubes — Bookcases — Futons
Wardrobe clothes dryers — Desk & Dressers

Furniture

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily

COMPUTERS!
New P166MMX from $995. Laptops, peripherals. ZarVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

I & 1/2 month old Iguana needs a home BADLY! All included $60 or BO. Jill 546-4933

FOUND

Found- Keys in Reading Room on 11/18/97. 256-0304

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Hannah Mary Donovan Happy 30th Birthday Big Girl!
Your Loving Sister

LOST

Wallet lost maybe in Machmer or Berkshire DC. Purple with zipper covered with daisies. Please call 546-4727

ROOM FOR RENT

Bedroom Available Jan 1 $342.50/month includes heat and hot water. Contact Kelly 253-1898

Room in house in South Amherst. $375/month, ALL INCLUDED. Next to bus line. Start 1/1/98. Call 253-9452

1 bedroom in Salem Place on Main Street. Private parking, washer, dryer, dishwasher. On bus line. $325/month. Jan 1st to end of May. No summer hassle. Call 253-2961

One bedroom for rent in 4 bedroom house in Leverett. Oil heat, washer/dryer, yard. $275+. Available immediately. Call 548-8081

Room For Rent in house. On bus route. Close to center of Amherst. Available immediately. Call Sheldon @ 253-9410

ROOM FOR RENT

One room available on Main St. On bus route and short walk to town. Call 259-9282. Available immediately.

Looking for 1 female to share 4 bedroom apartment in Alpine Commons with 3 females. 2 full bathrooms. Right on bus route. $300/month (everything included). Starting 1/1/98. Call Cara at 256-6351.

Room for rent in 4 bedroom apt. $300/month inc. elec. Available Jan 1. Call 549-9959

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking for female to share two bedroom apartment in Puffton. $320/month. On bus line. Call Candy 549-9293

Housemate needed for spring semester. Share with 2 grads.$283 / month available Jan 1. 549-4492

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

GET NOTICED! Number One secret to resume writing for college students and gen-x. Send $6.00 check/money order + business size SASE to: Nina Smith, 507 Central Avenue, No. 2, New Haven, CT 06515

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Book Early and Save Great Spring Break destinations. Best prices. Free parties, drinks and food. Call Eve 546-2111

RELIABLE SPRING BREAK TOURS
Bahamas, Cancun & Ski Trips! FREE FOOD AND FREE DRINKS! Sign up before Nov 30. Organize a group- travel free. Call for details and free brochure. Call (888)SPRING BREAK Today!

Book Early and Save! Great Spring Break destinations. Best prices. Free parties, drinks and food. Call Eve 546-2111

Killington: Ski & Party Week Jan 4-9. 5 nights condo/5 days skiing. $285. Call 545-3437

WANTED

Looking for any women cigar smokers for my Journalism class assignment. If you are interested please call Rana at 253-2099.

SPRING BREAK
CANCUN
JAMAICA
BAHAMAS
FLORIDA
1-800-234-7007

Classifieds are available in the "BOX " on the concourse or call us at 545-3500.

COMING SOON !

NEW CLASSIFIED HEADINGS

Just one more way the Classifieds make your life easier.

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the person placing the as filled in on the classified. (undergraduate students must provide one of the driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, NOV. 24

Blood Drive — American Red Cross blood drive from 10:30 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 101.

Educational Social — An educational social featuring the movie Color of Fear. This is an opportunity to bring our often separated houses together to learn about how racism affects us and how to break down racism in our communities and society from 7–9 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 101.

Film — Italian Club Film Night, Fiorile in Italian with English subtitles, at 6:30 p.m. in the Foreign Language Resource Center, classroom 2 in the basement of Herter Hall Annex.

Meeting — The UMass Outing Club is holding a general meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 142 including "Everything you Need to Know About State Parks" slide show. Everyone welcome.

TUESDAY, NOV. 25

Meeting — The Index (UMass Yearbook) will hold a general meeting at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Union, room 304. All are invited. For more information, contact Jill Aordkian at 545-0848.

NOTICES

Applications — The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team is accepting applications for its training this January 12–16. Applications are available for any UMass student at 222 Hampshire House, Legal Studies. For more information, contact Leah at 545-5882.

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the "Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition" which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545–0792.

Art Exhibition — An exhibition of more than 30 one–of–a– kind artist books and scrolls by Nicholas Schade will be on view from Nov. 11–Jan. 25 at the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum. Museum hours are Tues–Fri, 11 a.m.–5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday, 1–5 p.m. and is closed on academic holidays from Wednesday, Nov. 26 through Monday, Dec. 1 and from Tuesday, Dec. 16 through Monday, Jan. 6. For more information, call 538–2245 or fax 538–2144.

Club — The UMass Amateur Radio Club Station W1PUO is returning and looking for people to join in ham radio. Anyone interested in radio/electronics and a desire to learn and communicate are welcome. The club will sponsor FCC approved volunteer examination sessions for all license levels. For more information, contact Richard Strycharz N1MFT at 549–6000 ext. 6000 or leave a message at facility services.

Fill–A–Bus — Help fill a PVTA bus with clothing, toys and non–perishable food to benefit needy individuals and families in the Amherst area on Nov. 24–25 and Dec. 1–5 from 11 a.m.–3 p.m. daily in front of the Student Union. Volunteers to staff the bus and collect donations are needed. Contact the UMass Community Service Program at 545– 3368 for more information.

Food Drive — The UMass NSSLHA chapter along with Amherst Survival Center are sponsoring a food drive in honor of hunger awareness month. Bring non–perishable food to Arnold House, School of Public Health throughout November.

Internships — Environmental and Hunger

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Internships available for credit. Opportunities include helping to organize a Five College Earth Day, protecting Endangered Species and organizing the Spring Hunger Clean–up. For more information, call Robyn at 545–0199.

Notice — The Student Employment Office will be closed on Friday, Nov. 28. Work study students who work at one of our off–campus agencies can pick up their paychecks on Wednesday, Nov. 26 after 10 a.m. On Friday, Nov. 28, paychecks can be picked up after 10 a.m. at financial aid services, 255 Whitmore.

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

Daily Listings sponsored by:

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN	Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN SI
25	Headline News
26	UCTV
27	TBS
28	BET
28	TV Land
30	Univision
31	Comedy Central
32	Cartoon
33	Much Music

545-3500

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — NOVEMBER 24, 1997

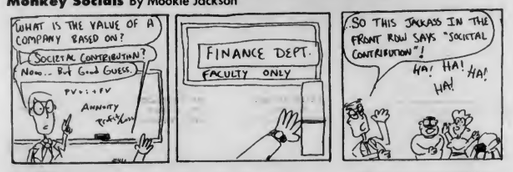
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Full Circle		Liberty! The American Revolution (In Stereo) [Part 2 of 3]				Connecticut Journal (R)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hard TV	Cosby	Raymond	Murphy Brown	George & Leo	Brooklyn South (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Cosby	Raymond	Murphy Brown	George & Leo	Brooklyn South (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Champions of Magic 2		NFL Football: Oakland Raiders at Denver Broncos. (In Stereo Live)
WLVI	56	Full House	Boy-World	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	7th Heaven "Truth or Dare"		Buffy the Vampire Slayer		News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Fired Up	Caroline	Naked Truth	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Cheers	Med Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Good News	Sparks	News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Sudden-Susan	Fired Up	Caroline	Naked Truth	Dateline (In Stereo)		Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Malcom Place (In Stereo)		Breaking Magician's Code		News		Simpsons	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Fired Up	Caroline	Naked Truth	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Full Circle		Liberty! The American Revolution (In Stereo Live)				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Champions of Magic 2		NFL Football: Oakland Raiders at Denver Broncos. (In Stereo Live)
WSBK	38	Med Abo. You	Med Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Good News	Sparks	News		Med Abo. You	Real TV
WTBS	17	Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach	Coach	Ally McBeal "Cyber Love" (In Stereo)		Ally McBeal "Cyber Love" (In Stereo)		Ally McBeal "Cyber Love" (In Stereo)		Weasy Bowes	Drama Rappin'
A&E	23	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Black Tie"		Biography "Anastasia"		Point "Double Sin"		Miss Marple [Part 1 of 2]		Law & Order "Virtue"
CNN	24	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
CON	29	A-List	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money	Late Show With David Letterman						Late Show	Stein's Money
DISC	25	Strange Planes		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Turkey		Science of Magic		CIA-Secret Warriors		Justice Files	Scammed
ESPN	21	Up Close	Sportscenter			NFL Prime Monday		Bloopers	College Basketball: George Washington vs. Kentucky				Sportscenter
LIFE	31	Supermarket	Dolce	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"No Greater Love" (1996, Drama) Sally Field, Tom Selleck				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	27	MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	MTV Live (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Daria	Loveline
NICK	26	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Reenthroned	I Love Lucy	Odd Couple	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI	28	Twilight Zone	Men in Black	Time Trax "To Kill a Billionaire"		Seaquest DSV "Silenced"		Forever Knight (In Stereo)		Miss. Genesis	Resurrection	Time Trax "To Kill a Billionaire"
TLC	32	Hometime	Hometime	Home Again	Home Again	Diana's Story		Castle Ghosts of England		Windsor Restored		Diana's Story
TNT	15	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		WCW Nitro (In Stereo Live)				WCW Nitro
USA	33	Baywatch "Death Beat"		Nightender: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		WWF Raw (In Stereo)		WWF War Zone		Silk Stalkings
HBO	42	[2:00] "The Saint in New York" (1938) Louis Hayward.			Storyteller			Free "She's the Other" (1996) Jennifer Tilly.		Comedy Hour	Tonight: Larry: Lock 'n' Load	Calling Dr. Kavorkian
MAX	43	(5:00)	Cats "Armed and Dangerous" (1986) John Candy.					Free "Patriot Games" (1992, Suspense) Harrison Ford.				Free "Phantom of the Opera" (1989, Drama) Gerard Butler.
SHOW	44	Free "Deliverance" (1972, Drama) Jon Voight.				Stargate SG-1	Brisco Divide	Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman				Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Monkey Socials By Mookie Jackson

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Sven By Steven Higgins

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Your originality is on the rise, and you might encounter more than your share of criticism for trying something unconventional.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — After a long period of productivity today, you may be tempted to sit back and let others take control. This is not a wise choice just yet.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You will have no trouble following the rules today, but later you'll feel the urge to get out of the game altogether. Time for a vacation?

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Last night's dreams are likely to stay with you throughout much of the day. Their impact on your mood is likely to be quite dramatic.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You will receive a message from someone who is unable to fulfill his or her end of a bargain. Do not overreact; simply change your plans.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You may not want to be quite as aggressive as usual today, but if you are too laid back you may find that a competitor can overtake you easily.

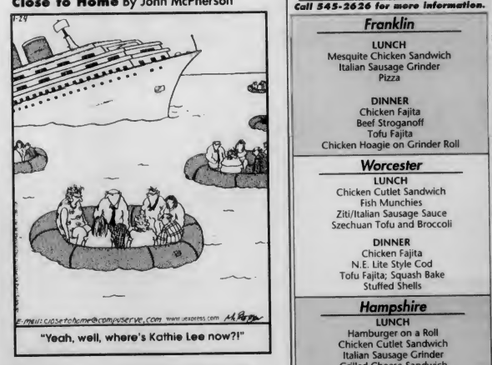
GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You will be in a position to make decisions for many people today. Do not try to be dictatorial; get the input of those around you.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — The only mistake you can make today is that of inactivity. Once you are on the move and keeping busy, success is assured in some way or another.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You will not be able to trust that your lead over a competitor will last. You must be willing to explore options and investigate new avenues.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Surely, you have a head for business, but today it may seem as though facts and figures are as foreign to you as a message from outer space.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — The more optimistic and lighthearted you can be about serious matters today, the more likely you are to overcome obstacles.



SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — It is time today to get in touch with a friend who has been out of the picture for some time. Together, you can come up with quite a plan.

Quote of the Day

"I'd rather have a bottle in front of me than a frontal labotomy."

–Tom Waits

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Italian Sausage Grinder
Pizza
DINNER
Chicken Fajita
Beef Stroganoff
Tofu Fajita
Chicken Hoagie on Grinder Roll

Worcester
LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Fish Munchies
Ziti/Italian Sausage Sauce
Szechuan Tofu and Broccoli
DINNER
Chicken Fajita
N.E. Lite Style Cod
Tofu Fajita; Squash Bake
Stuffed Shells

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Italian Sausage Grinder
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
DINNER
Chicken Fajita
Beef Stroganoff

Berkshire
LUNCH
Pizza
Hamburger on Roll
Ziti/Tomato Sauce
Macaroni, Lentil and Tomatoes
DINNER
Beef Stroganoff
Chicken Fajita
Tofu Fajita
Stuffed Shells in Sauce

ACROSS
1 Sea captain's command
6 Compass heading
10 Skin an apple
14 Actress Reese
15 Actress Chase
16 Muslim prince
17 Satan
18 Pace
19 Caesar's garment
20 Transport to Mars
22 Sand hills
23 Furrow (the brows)
24 Roofing piece
26 Halloween creature
29 Elm or oak
31 "I'm Dancing as Fast — Can"
32 Airport info
33 Kernel
34 Docks
36 Footwear
40 Pen point
42 Set — start off
43 Not bumpy
46 O'Hara mansion
49 Alice's co-worker
50 Reporter's question
51 "Out, feline!"
52 Golfer's peg
53 Drains
57 Young foxes
59 Composer Copland
60 Beverage choice
65 Soft light
66 Ram or steer
67 Iman, e.g.
68 Freeway part
69 Flush
70 Iron
71 Stared at 72 Garden intruder
73 Make fun of

DOWN
1 Puts 2 and 2 together
2 Gore, to Clinton
3 Part of T.A.E.
4 Wily
5 Natural gifts
6 Voting age, for many
7 Jai —
8 — town: vamooses
9 Make lace
10 Bedding plants
11 Surrounded by 12 A bright star
13 Clean the slate
21 Father
22 Part of a place setting
25 Command to a mule
26 Mrs. Truman
27 Molecule part
28 Mexican-menu item
35 Floating device
36 Emery board
37 Wild plum
39 Showed submission (to)
41 Acrobatic feat
44 Like 67-Across
45 Cultivate
47 Banister
48 Try
53 Bird of prey
54 — Peninsula
55 Lying down
56 Barrel part
58 Made an oath
61 Out of the wind
62 Notion
63 Loch — monster
64 "Do it or —!"
66 Seagull

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

S	C	A	R		L	O	O	S	E		H	I	D
L	I	M	A		A	N	V	I	L		B	A	R	E
A	V	I	V		W	E	E	D	S		A	B	E	T
M	I	N	E		F	I	R	E	E	N	G	I	N	E
C	O	N	S	U	L	T		O	U	T	E	R
			I	L	L		O	G	R	E
E	X	A	C	T		E	R	A		T	A	B	S
R	I	L	L		R	U	S	E	S		T	H	A	T
R	I	T	A		T	S	P		C	E	A	S	E
		P	L	E	A		A	D	A
S	P	A	T	E		U	T	I	L	I	T	Y
C	A	P	R	I	P	A	N	T	S		D	R	A	B
O	S	H	A		A	L	L	E	N		G	A	H	U
W	H	I	P		S	A	I	S	E		L	I	O	N
L	A	D			K	I	T	T	Y		S	L	O	T

11-24-97 © 1997 United Feature Syndicate

Daily Crossword Staff

Night Editor	Seema Gangorikar
Photo Technician	Yvonne Yang
Copy Editor	Erin Murphy
Production Supervisor	Jocelyn Burrows
Production Staff	Matt Wolaver

SPORTS

No. 13 Fresno beats UMass 82-64

Young backcourt stymied by pressure from athletic 'Dogs

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

You really couldn't have asked for a tougher opening night assignment.

The Massachusetts men's basketball team had to travel over 3,000 miles to open the 1997–98 season at No. 13 Fresno State Saturday night. The site, sold out Selland Arena, was a hostile gym filled with a sea of Bulldog red, and the Minutemen had to open against a Fresno squad with a stable of talent that rivals coach Jerry Tarkanian's UNLV teams of the late '80s. And though they put up a fight, UMass ran into a team determined to show a national TV audience to believe the hype.

Fresno	82
Massachusetts	64

The Minutemen stormed out of the gates, and even took a 35–34 lead into halftime, but a tenacious pressure defense unravelled the young UMass backcourt in the second half, and Fresno State ran away with an 82–64 win. Fresno (2–0) shot 59 percent in the second half, including six of eight from three–point land, and outscored UMass 48–29 in the second half. Despite an outstanding game from senior captain Tyrone Weeks, who scored 20 points and pulled down 15 rebounds, the Minutemen fall to 0–1.

The story of the game was Fresno's press, which broke down UMass' guards and led to 22 turnovers. The Bulldogs came out in the second half and got UMass out of its game, led by Massachusetts native Chris Herren. Herren, a junior guard from Fall River who transferred from Boston College, followed up on his 25–point performance in last year's 101– 82 Fresno win over UMass at the Mullins Center with 19 points and six assists.

According to Flint, junior guard Charlton Clarke ran out of gas in the second half after a solid first half, and Fresno's intense pressure took UMass' young guards out of their game.

"They got all over us [in the second half] and we got 22 turnovers, which killed us," said Flint on the WHMP post– game show. "They made us play at a much quicker pace in the second half, and we just started throwing the ball everywhere."

Fresno won the game with an impressive run early in the second half that turned a one–point deficit into an eight point Bulldog lead.

Turn to HOOP, page 7

LAUREN KOSKY/COLLEGIAN

UMass junior guard Charlton Clarke dished out eight assists, but Fresno St. beat the Minutemen 82–64 in the season opener.

V–Ball ends season without A–10 bid

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

In an emotional weekend, the Massachusetts volleyball team could only muster up one victory, which wasn't good enough to propel them into the Atlantic Ten championships in Dayton. The fan support was there, the adrenaline was there, but the Minutewomen couldn't pull through.

This weekend summed up the entire 1997 edition of UMass volleyball. Since the beginning of the conference schedule, the Minutewomen couldn't beat the teams they needed to beat in order to be regarded as a power in the conference.

On Saturday, the unblemished Temple Owls came into town and beat on the Minutewomen (14–17, 9–11 in the A– 10), distinguishing themselves as the class of the A–10, with an overwhelming 15–4, 15–8, 15–9 victory. UMass was able to pick up a victory against LaSalle, defeating them in convincing fashion, 15–7, 15–7, 15–2.

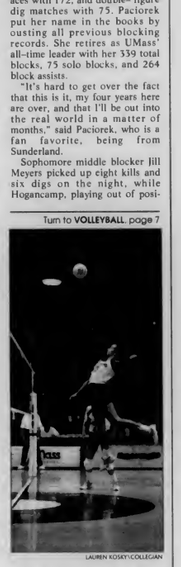
With the loss came the end of two very fine careers at UMass. Seniors Lesley Nolan and Michelle Paciorek played in their final matches in a UMass uniform. Prior to the match, the two who have had an immeasurable effect on the volleyball program at the university, were presented with commemorative game balls in honor of their outstanding play.

The Owl team, who themselves only have two seniors on the squad, overpowered the Minutewomen at the net, outhitting them .317 to .000. They were led by their Sharia Bryant — sister of Los Angeles Laker Kobe Bryant — and Tamu Cooper, who collected 11 and nine kills respectively. The Owls knocked down 43 kills to the Minutewomen's 32, while committing 20 less errors (12 to 32).

The Minutewomen suffered a tremendous setback this weekend with the void freshman setter Jennifer Drennan left at the net. Drennan was unable to play this weekend due to an illness. Sophomore outside hitter/setter Kari Hogancamp, who has been one of the more consistent hitters on the team this season, was forced to distribute the ball in place of Drennan.

"I think we did a great job adjusting to Kari setting the ball. Changing setters really affects hitting and timing," Coach Bonnie Kenny said.

In her final match, Nolan led the team with nine kills, but was disappointed with having to close her career with a loss.



"Well, unfortunately, I don't think we played as well as we wanted to play tonight, but looking back, I couldn't have asked for anything better," said the senior originally from Mission Viejo, Calif.

Nolan and Paciorek certainly left her marks on the UMass record books. Upon leaving, Nolan hangs it up as UMass' leader in digs with 1,483, service aces with 172, and double– figure dig matches with 75. Paciorek put her name in the books by ousting all previous blocking records. She retires as UMass' all–time leader with her 339 total blocks, 75 solo blocks, and 264 block assists.

"It's hard to get over the fact that this is it, my four years here are over, and that I'll be out into the real world in a matter of months," said Paciorek, who is a fan favorite, being from Sunderland.

Sophomore middle blocker Jill Meyers picked up eight kills and six digs on the night, while Hogancamp, playing out of posi-

Turn to VOLLEYBALL, page 7

LAUREN KOSKY/COLLEGIAN

The UMass volleyball team lost out on a chance to play in the A–10 tournament this weekend.

UMass hockey squad swept by Providence College

Minutemen play well; but fall twice to Friars

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

If good guys and good efforts were recognized in the standings, the Massachusetts hockey team would be faring much better in Hockey East. But as it stands, the Minutemen remain winless in conference play, following a pair of tight losses to the Providence College Friars this weekend.

Providence	5
Massachusetts	3

UMass (2–7, 0–6 HE) dropped Friday's home contest, 5–3, before falling Saturday in Providence by the same count.

In the midst of its best hockey of the season, UMass, unfortunately ran into a hot goaltender in Friar freshman Boyd Ballard. After winning the job from then–starter Mark Kane, Ballard has posted six straight victories. The streak continued this weekend as Ballard stopped 71 Minutemen shots to preserve two conference victories for PC that moves their record to 6–3, 3–2 HE.

Providence	5
Massachusetts	3

Saturday evening, UMass entered an electric Schneider Arena in desperate need of the weekend split. But it was PC who struck first, scoring when junior Mike Omicioli poked a loose puck past Brian Regan 18 seconds into the game.

UMass and PC engaged in a back and forth first period before sophomore Nathan Sell evened the score at 9:49. Shorthanded, Sell picked off a pass at UMass' blue line, skated the length of the ice and beat Ballard with a wrist shot right side.

After Omicioli put PC up again less than a minute later, Tim Lovell tied the game when he fired the rebound from a Chris Fawcett shot off the cross bar and into the net. UMass and PC were locked up, 2–2, after the first intermission.

An outstanding effort by freshman Kris Wallis in the opening stages of the second period gave UMass their first Hockey East lead since they led 1–0 at Boston University on October 31. However, the advantage was short–lived when a series of penalties and defensive blunders cost UMass three consecutive goals.

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

JORMA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN

Senior Tim Lovell beats Friar goalie Boyd Ballard for his fifth goal of the season last Saturday night, but UMass lost 5–3 to Providence.

Massachusetts hockey struggling for victories

The Massachusetts hockey team dropped two games to Providence College this weekend, both by 5–3 scores.

Now, I could go on and on about some distinct facet of both games relating to specifically why both losses to the Friars (7–2, 3–2 in Hockey East) came about for the Minutemen (2–7, 0–6 HE), because that's what this space is earmarked for — the story behind the game story.

But, I would rather take you on a little ride, so hop on aboard, and let's take a few steps back into the recent past...

A few years back, I owned a 1985 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme. Out of the minor things my new acquisition had wrong with it, one of the frustrating encounters I experienced with it was a clogged fuel line.

Jorma Kansanen

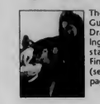
When the car was going downhill, and had momentum, it ran perfectly, and me and my Olds felt like a million bucks. However, when the car was going uphill, the engine sputtered and would stall. Simply said, when it had momentum — even with its fixable problem — it still ran.

A few years back, I began covering UMass hockey. Out of the minor things the new program has had wrong with it, one of the frustrating encounters I've experienced with the team is the proverbial clogged fuel line.

When the Minutemen get on a roll ("downhill," so to say), they hit on all cylinders and everyone involved feels like a million bucks. However, when things have not gone UMass' way ("uphill," so to say), everything begins to sputter and any comeback bid stalls. Simply said, when the team has momentum — even with this fixable problem — they still do a lot of good things on the ice.



Such was the case again this weekend, and I am not saying that UMass is a 1985 Olds Cutlass Supreme in a conference that at this time rides like a 1997 BMW. What I am saying is if the team does not fix the problem of losing quickly, they will be left at the side of the road when it comes to conference playoff time.

After tomorrow night's game against Vermont at the Mullins Center (7 p.m.), the Minutemen will have

Turn to FRIARS, page 7

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVII Issue 59 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Tuesday, October 25, 1997

Stage right

The UMass Theater Guild's Passion of Dracula won rousing applause and a standing ovation. Find out why inside (see Arts & Living, page 6).

UM looks for insurance win

Kara Tudman and the women's basketball team travel to Insurance–land for their second game of the season against Hartford (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Van Gogh still life a potential rip off

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP)— Created only to decorate his room, the bright sunflowers painted by Vincent van Gogh caused an international stir when one of the famous works drew a record $39.5 million bid ten years ago.

The same painting is at the center of attention again. This time, the art world wants to know whether the Japanese insurance company that bought the still life in fact paid for a masterful fake.

Van Gogh's first "Sunflowers" painting was created in August 1888 while he was living in Arles, France. Most art experts agree this original masterpiece — 14 flowers set against a pale yellow background — now hangs in London's National Gallery. A near replica that Van Gogh created later is said to be in the Van Gogh Museum in Amsterdam.

The Yasuda Fire and Marine insurance Co., believes it holds a third "Sunflowers," the work it bought at Christie's auction house in 1987, to try to determine, once and for all, the authenticity of the work.

Benoit Landais, a French writer who says he spent five years investigating works by the Dutch post-impressionist, contends that Yasuda's "Sunflowers" was actually painted by French artist Claude-Emile Schuffenecker.

NATION

Telecommunications agreement on table

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is about to make it easier for foreign companies to enter the U.S. telecommunications market, and that eventually could lower international rates for American callers.

The Federal Communications Commission's action, expected Tuesday, will implement a historic telecommunications trade agreement reached in February. The United States will be the first country to implement the pact.

The FCC plan would take effect by Jan. 1.

Regulators say the changes will attract more foreign companies — they don't know how many — to provide or invest in international phone services between the United States and other countries, thereby boosting competition and lowering consumer prices. The plan affords foreign companies easier entry into the U.S. domestic long-distance business, but regulators are emphasizing potential lower prices for international services because that's what foreign companies are most interested in.

They can provide those services more cheaply and efficiently than interstate long-distance service, regulators say.

U.S. customers on average pay 72 cents a minute for international calls and 12 cents a minute for domestic calls, the FCC says.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 37 LOW: 32	HIGH: 31 LOW: 27	HIGH: 42 LOW: 20

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Israel struggles with pluralism, American Jews face questions

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

Editor's Note: Bryan Schwartzman is the Jewish Affairs editor for the Collegian. He attended a workshop for Jewish Journalists called Do The Write Thing. The workshop was held in conjunction with the 66th General Assembly for the Council of Jewish Federations. Do The Write Thing participants were given media access to General Assembly events.

INDIANAPOLIS—The Israeli government does not wish to alienate North American Jews, but with the recent controversy surrounding religious pluralism and non– Orthodox conversions, they may have done just that.

Over four thousand delegates at the 66th General Assembly (GA) for the Council of Jewish Federations (CJF) anxiously awaited the Israeli establishment, including Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Minister of Finance Yaakov Ne'eman, to make scnse of the current situation.

The Orthodox coalition in the Knessett (Israel's legislature) along with religious leaders are pushing for bill which would only recognize Orthodox conversions performed in Israel. The bill angered North American Jews, 80 percent of which identify with the Conservative or Reform streams of Judaism, because the bill appears to raise questions about non–Orthodox Jewish identity.

"I want to state at the outset as emphatically as I can: no one, nobody, can deprive a Jew of his Jewishness," said Netanyahu in his address to the General Assembly.

Netanyahu took on difficult task of easing the North American Jews while trying not to anger his Orthodox supporters in Israel. The issue is more a symbolic one than a practical one, he said.

The bill would only affect several hundred immigrants (mostly spouses of Jews) seeking non–Orthodox conversions, and would not affect conversions performed outside Israel, or the status of Reform and Conservative Jews. Netanyahu said this is a great opportunity to resolve an issue which has divided Israeli's since the state was established 49 years ago.

"I don't want to go into the details of this controversy. All sides have agreed to a suspension of three months to allow Minister Ne'eman to work out a solution," he said to an audience which clapped politely, but did not cheer enthusiastically.

Ne'eman was appointed last June to head a committee on conversions to Judaism. The committee, which has five Orthodox members, one Reform, and one Conservative, has met over 40 times and is trying to solve the religious divide which has characterized Judaism for the last 200 years.

Ne'eman urged GA delegates to support the committees efforts to create a compromise on religious pluralism.

"We're trying to grapple with issues that are threatening to drive a wedge between North American Jews and the State of Israel," Ne'eman said.

Ne'eman discussed a few specific proposals, one of which was an idea to create pluralist schools (with Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform instructors) to teach those seeking conversion about Halakha, Jewish law.

"The unity of the Jewish people must be the ultimate goal of our committee," Ne'eman said.

Labor Party Chairman Ehud Barak criticized Netanyahu for his willingness to alienate American Jews.

"I will never support — and the Labor Party will never support — any legislation that threatens to divide the Jewish people," Barak said to an enthusiastic crowd.

"Israel's strength is magnified by the strength of countless others," Barak said.

Yet it will be extremely difficult for Ne'man's committee to produce a compromise which all sides can agree upon.

Professor Alec Lubuvsky, a member

Turn to QUESTIONS page 3

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

GEO Read–In inside Chancellor Scott's Office

History graduate students Tom Conroy, left, and Leo Maley, right, participate in yesterday afternoon's GEO read– in inside Chancellor Scott's office. The read–in was in protest to graduate students' lack of a contract.

11 Iraqi arms sites searched

By Waiel Faleh
Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — U.N. arms monitors searching for Iraq's banned arsenal inspected 11 sites without interference yesterday — including pharmaceutical factories where biological or chemical weapons could be produced.

But a new confrontation could still develop if U.N. inspectors try to search dozens of other sites, including President Saddam Hussein's many palaces, which Iraq considers sensitive to national security.

An American U-2 spy plane, which Iraq has threatened to shoot down, made another flight into Iraqi airspace yesterday, its third since the crisis over weapons inspections started more than three weeks ago.

A Pentagon official in Washington said the flight over central Iraq — part of the U.N. weapons inspection program — was completed without incident.

Monday's inspections went smoothly, as they have has since they were resumed Saturday. "They have had a normal inspection day with no problems reported," said Allan Dacey, a British spokesman for the U.N. monitors.

He said the inspectors were searching for missiles and biological, chemical and nuclear weapons, as well as examining arms imports and exports. Some inspectors flew in helicopters to check for any inappropriate activity on the ground; U.N. inspectors have accused Iraq of sneaking documents out the back doors of weapons sites even as inspectors were entering the front.

The arms inspectors' job is to certify that Iraq has complied with U.N. resolutions requiring it to eliminate weapons of mass destruction in line with treaties that ended the 1991 Persian Gulf War. Economic sanc-

Turn to IRAQ, page 2

Internet pornography shakes up UM Boston SGA & student paper

BOSTON (AP) — University of Massachusetts officials are investigating student government officers who allegedly used school computers to display pornographic pictures from the Internet. But administrators also are lambasting the editors of the student newspaper for dramatizing the allegations by printing one of the sexually explicit images on the front page.

"They could have gotten people's attention with clear, concise writing as opposed to reproducing these pornographic scenes on the front page of the paper," university spokeswoman Annemarie Lewis said.

Regardless of the means, the publication of the picture on the front page of Friday's Mass Media newspaper had achieved dramatic ends yesterday.

Many students and administrators said they were offended by the partly obscured image of a naked woman engaging in a sex act with a second person; two other photos inside showed computer terminals, allegedly inside the student government offices, with other pornographic images displayed.

"We were all offended by these images and the fact that there seemed to be a conspiracy going on in the student government office here to maintain them on their computers," editor-in-chief Sam Farrington said.

Lewis said the incident would likely hasten a university-wide policy now under consideration to prohibit the use of university equipment for sending, receiving or viewing pornographic images. That, said Farrington, was the idea.

"We wanted to make sure that it was taken seriously," Farrington said of the front-page picture, which he said was "a challenge to people to do something about it."

"We believe something good is going to come of this," he said. "We think there will be positive changes."

Farrington and other editors have been summoned to a meeting with university administrators Tuesday "about their lack of judgment," Lewis said.

An undergraduate English major, Farrington said the editors will attend the meeting.

"I don't want to avoid dialogue about this, and I may have a few questions for the administration here as well," he said.

"We want to know whether they knew anything about" the alleged misuse of university computers by student government officers.

The officers could not be located for comment Monday.

The weekly Mass Media usually distributes 3,000 copies on the urban campus of 12,680 students, but printed 4,000 of Friday's issue.

Board of Health advances enactment of smoking ban

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — In less than three weeks, it may be illegal to smoke in Amherst bars.

This will be the case if the Board of Health approves a ban which would extend the town's current ban on smoking in public places to include bars.

However, local bar owners and supporters were given a chance to persuade the Board of Health that it would be unwise to ban smoking in bars during a recent Board meeting held last Thursday evening.

The Board states, in their town smoking regulations, in part, that the ban's coverage is to be extended because:

"Conclusive evidence exists indicating that intentional and unintentional inhalation of tobacco smoke causes cancer, respiratory and cardiac diseases, negative birth outcomes, allergies and irritations to the eyes, nose and throat.

"Environmental Tobacco Smoke (ETS) has been designated as a Class A carcinogen by the Environmental Protection Agency (1993).

"There are no known safe levels of exposure to environmental tobacco smoke."

The Board is concerned that the risk of unhealthy ETS exposure threatens bar patrons and employees, who in return have said that they understand the risks of ETS, and feel they are unnecessarily being told by the Board what's good for them.

Each opponent of the pending smoking ban who wanted to speak at the meeting was given four minutes to address the Board.

Eugene O'Neil, a smoking ban opponent and owner of the Old Amherst Alehouse, came away from the meeting feeling that his and other bar owners' words had little effect.

"The whole meeting was useless," O'Neil said. "They had their minds made up last June."

The meeting was not the last opportunity for people to voice their opposition against the ban.

Community members who oppose the smoking ban may still write letters

Turn to SMOKE, page 3

North–South brinkmanship about global warming

By Charles J. Hanley
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Just a week before final talks, negotiators are still searching for a formula for limiting energy use in China and other developing countries to help fight global warming in the next century.

If they fail, so may the global warming treaty in the U.S. Senate.

Compromise ideas are on the table, including one from Brazil that American diplomats are studying. But the North-South jockeying over the climate treaty is expected to go down to the wire, in what one environmentalist calls a "game of brinkmanship."

Representatives of more than 140 nations gathered yesterday in Kyoto, Japan, for 10 days of talks to strengthen the 1992 climate change treaty, in which industrial nations pledged to cut emissions of carbon dioxide and other "greenhouse" gases to 1990 levels. Because those voluntary goals were not being met, governments decided in 1995 to negotiate mandatory rollbacks. That same year, an authoritative scientific panel warned that if emissions of the heat-trapping gases were not controlled, rising atmospheric temperatures would raise sea levels and disrupt the global climate. Any of several major issues in the complex negotiations could stall progress. The proposed mandatory cutbacks, for example, range from holding emissions at 1990 levels by 2012, as favored by the United States, to cutting them by 20 percent below 1990 levels by 2005.

But the North-South issue may be one of the toughest to resolve. The 1995 decision exempted developing nations from binding targets. It was acknowledged that the industrial world bore greater responsibility for loading the atmosphere with carbon from burning coal and oil.

But sometime in the next century the fast-developing South is expected to overtake the North in production of greenhouse gases. China's emissions, for example, are projected to double by 2010. Northern industries fear competition from a South free to burn all the cheap coal it wants.

In a resolution last July, the U.S. Senate threatened to withhold ratification of any treaty that did not impose limits on developing countries.

Washington's negotiators proposed requiring developing nations to agree, by 2005, to a timetable for later cutbacks. But strong opposition killed that idea in preliminary talks last month. As the Kyoto meeting nears, diplomats are bargaining over alternatives, in talks at this month's Asia-Pacific conference in Vancouver, B.C., and in video teleconferences between Washington and world capitals.

The Brazilian proposal for a "clean development fund" has gained some attention.

"It seems the United States sees possibilities there as a way to get the developing countries into things," said Samoa's U.N. ambassador, Tuiloma N. Slade, negotiator for island nations endangered by global warming's rising seas.

Under Brazil's plan, industrial nations that fail to meet the treaty's emissions targets would pay fines into a fund to finance clean energy and other projects that cut emissions in the developing world.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

The beaten path

A scene yesterday afternoon near the campus pond.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

Speed 3: The Food Drive

Andrea Soh, a sophomore anthropology major, distributes leaflets for the "Fill-A-Bus" clothing and toy drive in front of the campus center yesterday afternoon. Donations for the Amherst Survival Center will also be accepted today from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

■ iraq

continued from page 1

tions, imposed after Iraq's 1990 invasion of Kuwait that led to the war, have devastated the Iraqi economy. Despite the latest cooperation in Baghdad, American and Iraqi officials were still arguing over whether inspectors should search Saddam's many presidential compounds.

In Washington, deputy White House national security adviser James Steinberg said the United Nations had "clear authority" to look at the 47 presidential compounds.

"These presidential palaces seem to be getting larger, more numerous," U.N. weapons inspector Richard Butler said Monday on ABC television. "How many palaces can one have?"

Bill Richardson, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, also demanded the inspectors "have full access to all the sites.""We're talking about 47 presidential sites, 63 sites the Iraqis have deemed do not deserve access. How can you do your job?" he said. "This crisis is far from over."

But Iraq, citing national sovereignty and security, has long rejected the inspectors' contention that they should be free to visit any suspicious site.

Airport security concerns linger

By Jonathan D. Salant
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Over Thanksgiving, hundreds of thousands of travelers will walk to airport gates through security equipment that still does not check for plastic explosives and board airplanes where many packages haven't been screened for bombs. Seven years after a presidential panel urged drastic improvements in airport security, federal officials are just now beginning such long-awaited changes as the profiling of passengers to identify security risks and the mandatory matching of bags to passengers.

Critics say the changes, some of which take effect Jan. 1, have taken too long and fall short of recommendations the Federal Aviation Administration was first urged to implement in 1990. That's when numerous potential holes in the airport safety net were identified by a presidential panel convened after a plastic explosive hidden by terrorists inside a radio cassette player destroyed Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland.

Several times since then, most recently by a panel headed by Vice President Al Gore, government reports have stressed the importance of closing holes in the airport security system."They totally and consciously failed to address the screening of passengers and hand-carried baggage from an explosives detection standpoint," former FAA security chief Billie Vincent said. "They really failed miserably in looking at the overall system." Added Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., a member of the commission that studied security after the Flight 103 bombing: "Not much has changed. It doesn't even take a great deal of sophistication to bring about a tragedy."

FAA officials say they are addressing many of those concerns. To help, Congress boosted the FAA's 1998 budget by $785 million, to $9.1 billion, including about $100 million for security improvements and an additional $44 million for research and development.

"We are very much well on our way to have the security situation in the United States more effective in preventing acts of terrorism," said Cathal Flynn, the FAA's assistant administrator for civil aviation security.

The Campus Activities Office Presents A
NEW YORK CITY BUS TRIP
Dec... 1997
$20.00 Per Person Wi...
Bus arrives in ... and leaves ... Upon arrival in ... free to walk ... and sounds of ...
Ticket Are On Sale At TDC In The Student Union Building
TDC: 545-0412
Please check out our Website: http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calendar2.htm

Check out the Collegian at:
http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Have a
BLAST this WEEKEND
Let's Go Bowling!
DSICO BOWL FRIDAYS 10PM - 1AM LIVE DJ - LIGHT SHOW FULL GLOW BOWL - Prizes
RETRO 80'S SATURDAYS 10pm - 1am LIVE DJ - LIGHT SHOW FULL GLOW BOWL - Prizes
Saturdays & Sundays Noon to 5pm $1.99 per Game
NORTHAMPTON BOWL 584-4830

Dear Mom and Dad,
Don't send money.

Don't call home for cash. Call us for The Associates MasterCard Card:
- Get 3% cash back on purchases*
- Discounts on brand name merchandise
- No annual fee
- Credit line up to $2,500

To apply, call 1-888-SEND-ONE.
*See Rebate Terms and Conditions accompanying the credit card
Associates National Bank (Delaware)

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Sarah J. Kimmel • Photos by Thang Vo

How do you think campus safety can be improved?

"There should be security on duty just browsing where they know a lot of students will be at night, like by the Newman Center and by Southwest."

Monique Ward
HRTA, senior
Southwest

"I was shocked at how dark it is on campus. Going from the library to any building there are very dark areas. I try to avoid being on campus at night."

Brigid Ryan
Graduate Student
Sunderland

"We could have a few more of those yellow phones and possibly more lights. Every time I walk under the Fine Arts Center at night I'm afraid someone's going to jump me."

Julia Swanson
Spanish, junior
Central

"There needs to be more police officers to patrol around. Most of the time when I see them there's an accident. They should keep an eye out and know the campus."

Min Wei Lam
undeclared, junior
Northeast

"Better lighting, more walking security and a few more call boxes wouldn't hurt."

Ernie Casado
graphic design, junior
Southwest

"I think there should be penalties for people who go by security without signing in to ensure safety."

Russell Ikasalo
undeclared, sophomore
Sunderland

■ questions

continued from page 1

of the committee, said, "this is a real opportunity to solve this divide."

The Conversion Bill has brought to the surface a question that has lingered, mainly, who is a Jew? Questions involved include who is an appropriate Rabbi to perform a conversion, and how many laws do converts follow?

There are many streams to Orthodox Judaism but generally it stems from Eastern Europe and advocates a strict interpretation of Jewish law, while Reform and Conservative Judaism have their roots in 19th century western Europe, and attempt to blend Judaism with the realities of modern life.

Israel is largely comprised of Orthodox and secular Jews; the Reform and Conservative movements are very small in Israel. A popular Israeli Socialist sentiment is the synagogue I don't go to is an Orthodox one.

"Today we are divided and pitted against each other," said Ben Pastcan, a participant in Do The Write Thing, and a student at the University of Southern California.

pull quote–"Were trying to grapple with issues that are threatening to drive a wedge between North American Jews and the State of Israel," said Ne'eman.

■ smoke

continued from page 1

to the Board as a method of recourse, said Pub, Rafters and Seasons owner Jerry Jolly.

According to Jolly, anyone wanting to can write the Board of Health at 30 Boltwood Walk, Amherst, Mass. 01002.

O'Neil said the letters won't make a difference because the Board has already made a decision.

Yet, O'Neil said the ban is useless because there is no one to enforce it, and added that if enforcement was left up to the bar owners, he would not enforce the ban.

Similar sentiments have previously been voiced by Mike's Westview Cafe owner Trudy DiNatale and Spoke owner Douglas LeBlanc.

The idea of a smoking ban in bars is akin to the idea of an alcohol ban at UMass, in that neither can be adequately enforced, Jolly said.

According to Jolly, these sentiments are shared by his lawyer Steve Winniman.

"My clients can't enforce these regulations," Winniman said, "and they won't enforce them."

The Board of Health has already written up a revised set of town smoking regulations, which include bars as non– smoking areas.

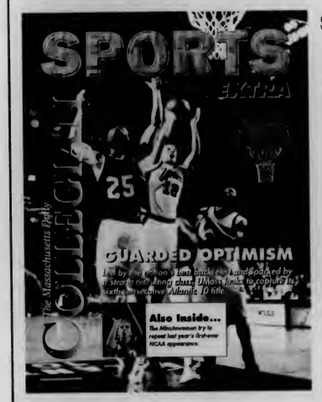
Individuals who illegally smoke in bars face a $50 fine for each infraction, and bars will be fined $100 for each day they refuse to comply with the ban.

In Section 7 of these regulations, it is undetermined who will enforce the no smoking measures. The only identified enforcement authority is the town health inspectors.

The regulations state that these inspectors will, "on their regular restaurant inspections, check for compliance with these [no smoking] regulations."

Other than this, the regulations only maintain that any citizen may file an anonymous complaint with the Board to initiate enforcement of these regulations.

It is written in Part 2 of Section 9 that enforcement of these regulations shall be implemented by the Amherst Health inspector or his/her designee. While it is unclear who this designee would be, it has been the Board's hope to avoid a situation similar to that in Belchertown.



The Belchertown Board of Health has already implemented a smoking ban it cannot enforce.

Ticket City
Tickets for all occasions
Your Source For:
Concerts, Theatre, Ballet, Sporting Events & Sold Out Shows
Even Gift Certificates!
AND MUCH MORE!
Call TICKET CITY at 617-787-2370 for Prices and Showtimes!

Three Sold Out Shows! TICKET CITY Has Tickets!
Phish
Friday, Saturday, and Sunday Nights November 28, 29, and 30, at the Worcester Centrum
Call 617-787-2370

jiffylube UNV1999 $19.99
Signature Service
COMPLETE OIL CHANGE SERVICE
AT 347 RUSSELL ST. & HAMPSHIRE PLAZA, HADLEY
JIFFY LUBE STORES WITH THIS COUPON
Most Vehicles • Not good with any other offer • Expires 12/31/97

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Sponsored by:
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
UMass basketball
COMING DEC. 2ND

- Delivered FREE to all on-campus mailboxes
- Available at select on-campus locations
- Available at all home games

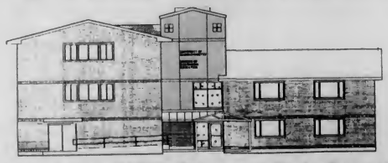
The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
113 Campus Center,
University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003
Phone: (413) 545-3500 • Fax: (413) 545-1592

IT AIN'T EASY, BUT IT'S SMART
Winter Session '98

Why Winter Session?
- Catch up so you can graduate on time
- Focus on just one class, one set of homework assignments
- Make up lost credits
- Take a usually overenrolled prerequisite for your major
- Earn three credits in three weeks

Smaller classes mean more individual attention.

Winter Session '98
January 5-26



Pick up a blue course catalog at Continuing Education in Goodell Bldg. or anywhere on campus; in town at stores, restaurants, banks.

Or call 545-0107 and we'll send you one.

Check out the updated course list at www.umass.edu/contined/

Winter Session
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst

The Division of Continuing Education is moving to 358 N. Pleasant St. in January.

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Giving thanks

Turkey, football, an inflatable six-story Snoopy, and a drunk uncle. What do these things have in common?

Thanksgiving.

It was almost 400 years ago that this holiday began. Pilgrims, Indians, harvests. It had been a bad winter for those fellas. It was time to celebrate. It was time to give thanks.

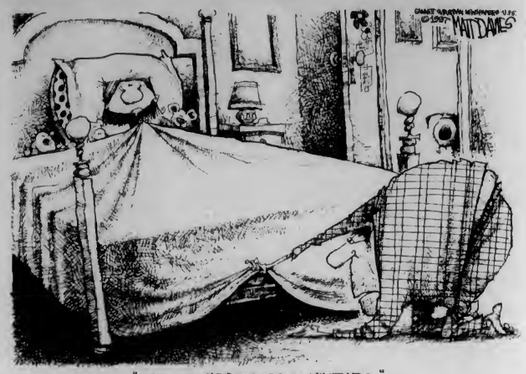
And although the tradition hasn't been lost, much of its meaning has. Thanksgiving has been reduced to "Turkey Day." Eat, drink and be merry. It has become a holiday of sheer gluttony. For a lot of us, Thanksgiving simply marks the beginning of the Christmas shopping season. But how many of us truly look at what we have, who we are, and find a reason to say, hey, I'm thankful.

Karen Sonnwald

This year, that's what I'm doing. I have a lot to be thankful for:

Antonio's. Who isn't grateful that we have this fine establishment in Amherst? I'm partial to potato-bacon, chicken blue-cheese, and beef taco. I don't mind the line. I don't mind the crowd. And I'm eternally grateful that plain old cheese went back to a buck a slice. I'm thankful for Antonio's.

I'm thankful for my friends, an assorted bunch though they are. There are some that dust me off when I've fallen into a big pile of "What-have-I-gotten-myself-into-now?" There are some that, not only laugh at me, but laugh with me — and help me to laugh at myself. There are the ones that remind me that most of the things I worry about really aren't a big deal. Really. There are the boys on Shumway that have become my social workers, my exhibitionist neighbors that frequent Walker's grill, the girls in Mackimmie who are the only, (and I really mean only), ones who share my nostalgia and appreciation for New Kids on the Block. For all these people, I'm thankful.



I'm thankful for my summer roommate, my best friend since birth. After all these years of college, with her in Miami and me in Amherst, we've managed, not only to grow up, but grow closer.

I'm thankful for Florida, my home state. And even though when people think of Florida, images of pink plastic flamingos and neon green come to mind, along with thong bikinis, halter tops, and roller-blading faux blondes, I can't help but love the place. Everyone moans about the crime, the elderly population, and the "tackiness" of the whole scene. But those are the same people that I run into when I'm home for spring break. I'm thankful for Florida.

I'm thankful for a lot. I think most of us are. But we're usually caught up in the hectic daily routines of life and can't seem to find joy in the little things. That's all it takes. The simple pleasures. It can be anything. A person, a place, a thing. As long as you're thankful for something.

So come Thanksgiving day, as you sit around the table with your family or your friends — as you're eyeing the bottle of Chardonnay — take a moment to think. And take a moment to say, "Thanks."

Karen Sonnwald is a UMass student.

The big birthday

There are odd things that happen on birthdays that are a lot bigger than simply being a year older. For one thing it is a year closer to death.

But every so often you hit a milestone. My 21st birthday kind of came and went. No big deal. I think most people consider 21 to be the most important milestone, but for me it's this one, 25.

Lately I have been thinking about where I have been and what were the big stories and events that shaped the last 25 years.

Joe Fountain

I can cover kindergarten through eighth grade pretty quickly. The Pope and President Reagan were shot and we sent get well cards. Neither Reagan nor the Pope responded. My second grade teacher, Mrs. Marrion, shot me down.

The bands Quiet Riot and Menudo were my favorites and we bombed Muhomar Quadafi in Lybia. This was my first effort at journalism for my school paper. I sent a copy to my then–hero Peter Jennings at ABC and, like the Pope and Reagan, he didn't respond. My fourth grade teacher, Ms. McDonald, shot me down.

The most important thing that happened during those years was the space shuttle disaster. I remember it like yesterday. We were sitting class and boom! It was all over.

Then of course sweet sixteen. The Celtics won the World Championship and I drank my first beer. I was 13. Maybe that's why my 21st birthday was no big deal.

High school was a little better because the Berlin Wall fell. Although I actually missed it happen (which was really funny). One day I am sitting in class about a week after the fall and my teacher says to the class, "I still can't believe the Berlin Wall has fallen."

I said, "Yeah, the Berlin Wall will never fall."

I think it was somewhere in here I had my first big crush, Natalia Kalinina. Yes, Justin, defecting to the Soviet Union before the fall of the wall was a bad idea to meet a gymnast. But hey, I was an immature kid.

The other major event during the old high school years was playing football. Besides Kate Colon wearing my football uniform and giving me a kiss before the Thanksgiving Day game these were the highlights for high school.

My political years have been odd since I have been described as an over–eager kid, somewhat bumbling, somewhat naive by a local journalist who shall remain nameless. I think I have done a pretty good job. I ran for city council once and have worked on several campaigns.

The biggest thing I have done thus far is to help the Ward Representation campaign going and start a new fight for civil rights in Springfield.

Though I think it will be my time here at UMass that I will remember as be my best years. I meet so many great people and made so many great friends. I am going to be sad when I graduate.

I think I will always love the nickname Sloppy Joe. No other nickname can possibly befit the genre of being at UMass.

However, it is not just friends and parties that I am going to remember. My professors who really took the time to get to know me over the years are really important too.

Stephen Oates' Civil War and Kennedy classes were the best.

John Brigham, who helped me file the lawsuit against Springfield. If it wasn't for his Constitutional law class Springfield might not be fighting for Ward representation.

Dean Robinson in political science is just brilliant. His class on black politics was one of the most thought provoking classes I have taken and it was the best of all my political science classes.

I love UMass.

Joe Fountain is a Collegian staff member.

Faith no more

A couple of Saturdays ago, I attended an evening Mass at the Catholic church in downtown Amherst.

A friend of mine, whom I consider to be highly enlightened, persuaded me to go with him, because he felt that we both needed to find some sort of spiritual guidance that is lacking in our lives. In order to find this guidance, he felt that attending Mass, a practice he and I had both been brought up to follow to gain a sense of our spiritual self and establish a set of guidelines by which to live, would somehow bring us both back to "the right path."

Joe Sullivan

Like the typical 20–year–old American Catholic, I had not attended a Mass since Christmas for a variety of reasons. The main one being that church, to me, does not coincide with what I think life is all about at this stage — I don't feel like making myself feel guilty all the time over little things, although I am very interested in finding spirituality.

When I entered the church at 4 p.m. on that overcast Saturday, it was just as I remembered it. There were towering stained glass windows with the depictions of the saints and the Virgin Mary, and the stations of the cross aligned the sides of the interior leading up to the depiction of the crucifixion above the altar. These sights are meant to evoke the spirit in each parishioner.

One thing that I also noticed about the church was that my friend and I were part of a group of about four college–age people in attendance. The rest of the congregated group was made up of people middle–aged or elderly. This is something which disturbed me a little bit, because I remembered the Catholic church at home and how I could always count on seeing many of my peers with their families consistently attending every Sunday. True, this was a Saturday Mass, and even back home Saturday Masses tended to draw an older crowd. But this is Amherst, where the lifestyle of college kids is to stay up and wake up late. I figured the time when I would see the largest number of college–age people, if at all, would be at the Saturday Mass. But there were only four of us.

Once the Mass and the priest recited the prayers and the congregation responded, I realized that this was not the place where my friend and I would find our long lost spiritual guidance. The entire ceremony was lifeless, devoid of any spirit. The priest gave his call monotonously, and the congregation gave its response robotically.

The Mass ended and my friend commented to me that the Catholic church is outdated, that its ceremony needs to be more conducive to the elements of the time. He didn't really elaborate because afterwards he had to go to work. About a week later he told me he was thinking of going to Colorado to find some relatives and study Buddhism.

My own response to the Mass was disappointment. I did not feel uplifted, much less that I was going to be saved. I was paralyzed by the whole experience, trapped between the values I had become accustomed to living by and the actual preaching of these values.

The basic point of the whole story is that neither of us were satisfied spiritually by the experience of attending church, and the fact that very few people our own age were in attendance shows that our peers felt the same way. This leads me to ask two questions: First, is there a lack of spirituality among people our age, or just among people our age who are Catholics? Second, if there is a lack of spirituality among people our age, what has it been replaced by, or has it been replaced at all?

Joe Sullivan is a UMass student.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Letters to the Editor

Attribution correction

To the Editor:

While the Collegian's coverage of the parking garage saga in downtown Amherst has been generally accurate, I would like to correct some information on comments and attitudes attributed to me.

In last Friday's story (Nov. 14) a comment I made in addressing Town Meeting, referring to the structural support necessary to carry the load of a town park ("a cubic yard of dirt weighs as much as a small car" etc) was credited in error to Larry Kelly.

In the Nov. 21 Collegian, I am characterized as "disgruntled" over the compromise. Though I strongly supported the Boltwood Place garage plan, I supported and praised the compromise on behalf of the Parking to the People Coalition, both at the Select Board meeting that evening, and in an open letter distributed to Town Meeting members and other interested parties.

While I agree with the point attributed to me about Amherst's garage plan being much less capacity than the projected need (while Northampton's garage is much bigger than the parking deficit reported at the time of its approval), I did not make that comment.

I never know how much to believe of what I read in the press, when every time I read something I know about (like what I said and felt) is inaccurate. Deadlines notwithstanding, more care is needed in getting the words, the intentions and the speakers properly aligned.

Ira Bryck
Amherst

Thanksgiving Grinch

To the Editor:

Someone has taken our "Celebrating 25 Years" sign from the wall outside the Curtain Theater. We can't imagine why. It has no commercial value — it was just a piece of plywood with yellow and blue scene paint, but it meant a lot to us. It was a source of pride and an invitation to celebrate. It also represented many hours of hard work by student volunteers who helped design, paint, and put it up.

Now it's gone and we feel a real sense of loss. If anyone knows where it is, would you please help us get it back? Let's not let the Grinch who stole Thanksgiving think no one cares.

Richard Trousdell
Chair, Theater Department

Differing views refreshing

To the Editor:

This letter is written in response to the articles written by Christine Soh, Hussein Ibish and Dr. Barbara Nimri Aziz which appeared in the Multicultural Affairs section on Wednesday, Nov. 19. I would like to thank these authors and the Collegian for finally presenting views on the conflict between the United States and Iraq that are not totally and completely biased. Every other article I have read or news reports I have watched has been nothing short of American propaganda praising President Clinton for standing up to that "madman" Saddam Hussein.

While I believe myself to be a fairly patriotic citizen who generally supports my country and actions taken by my government, for the last two weeks I have only been disgusted with the behavior of my government and the media. The remarks and the actions taken against Saddam Hussein and his people have simply been distortions and generalizations. There has been very little focus on the facts of the situation. Instead, the media forces Americans to see Iraq as a country filled with irrational people who blindly follow an even more irrational leader who will undoubtedly lead to the demise of their country.

It was so refreshing to read articles that not only offered a differing opinion, but also presented facts that are omitted from everything else I have seen. Obviously, the American government and the media do not want the people to know that the Iraqi people are adamant about their commitment to their leader and to their independence, that so many other countries in the Middle East are offering their full support to Saddam Hussein and that the sanctions placed on Iraq by the U.N. (led by the U.S.) are causing hundreds of thousands of needless deaths. If the American public was aware of at least some of these facts, surely the actions that are being taken against Iraq would not be praised, but seen for what they really are... utterly despicable.

If I can see beyond the war propaganda presented in every story covering this conflict, then anyone can. Some people may just need a little help. So, to the authors of these enlightening articles and to the Collegian for publishing them, I commend you and give you my sincere appreciation.

Nicole Rothgeb
Orchard Hill

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.
Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass Amherst MA 01003, or by email to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangasirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Aiberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Multicultural Affairs

Tuesday, November 25, 1997

Don't stop the singing, yet

By what sends the white kids
I ain't sent:
I know I can't be President.

What don't bug them white kids sure bugs me:
We know everybody
ain't free.

Lies written down
for white folks
ain't for us a–tall:
Liberty and Justice–
Huh! — For All?

Langston Hughes, "Children's Rhymes"

Terrell M. Hill

During the Civil Rights Movement of the 1950's and 1960's, one song that was very popular was, "We Shall Overcome." Any time we see a video or news clip we are led to believe that the message of the song no longer has validity or purpose in America. I suggest otherwise.

A recent poll of (300 black teens) published in the November 24, 1997 issue of Time showed 77 percent of the black teen respondents believed they had never been a victim of discrimination. I attribute their opinion to a lack of experience in life, since most have not tried to enter the work force or get a loan for a major purchase such as a home. In fact the article puts forth the notion that kids today no longer see race in the same light as their parents. So are we to infer that America has done away with her race problem? I believe that many in our society, and more particularly on our campuses, would like to think so.

The majority of white Americans just cannot believe that there is still racial discrimination in the United States, hence the big uproar over the continued use of affirmative action programs. They see the limited number of (reported) racial incidents as being caused by a very small pocket of radical whites, such as the Ku Klux Klan, skin heads, white separatists or similar groups.

They believe racism is no longer the norm on predominantly white college campuses, and go as far as to consider these institutions multicultural bastions. They deny the reality of discrimination and racism in education and society as a whole. They feel the problems expressed by blacks are created in their own minds. Even some blacks have begun to support such ignorant dogma. Shelby Steele (a black man), contends that most black students have "an unconscious need to exaggerate the level of racism on campus — to make it a matter of the system, not just a handful of students."

I know that whenever black people bring up issues of injustice, they are thought of as whining or complaining by white people. Many whites would argue that blacks are just looking for a scapegoat for their own lack of ability. In the view of Martin Seligman:

"The reflex of thinking 'racism' when thwarted or when justice is not done produces more hopelessness, giving up, and depression than do these alternatives. 'Racism,' the 'system,' and 'white people' are just as destructive explanations as 'I'm stupid' or 'I'm lazy' ever were."

Seligman is not alone in his mode of thinking. Richard Bernstein, states "there is a predominating antiracist ethos on campuses" and that college and university administrations are eager to assuage the anger of minority students." Allan Bloom, sees college campuses as places populated by white students who "just do not have prejudices anymore."

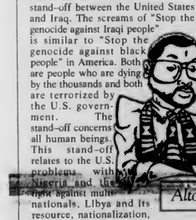
I find the poll and the varied opinions rather annoying. While it may be true that people are not hung in public (as far as we know) anymore, have the attitudes of the lynch mob's children really changed? We are all socialized, and for that matter, we are all socialized on a personal level by those closest to us. If this is true, how can we grow up with views opposing those of our most trusted educators — our parents? We can have our views changed or challenged, that is only after we have been presented with new information. This typically occurs when we enter college.

Many predominantly white colleges and universities have takes serious measures toward educating their student body around issues of diversity and race. Although these programs are not making gigantic strides, they are making some headway nonetheless. However, I would like to caution those who see these efforts as proof that all of our troubles are behind us.

Just as there are proponents of such measures, there are still many more who see these same efforts as negative. In their opinion, "the values of excellence and tolerance are frequently viewed as under attack from misguided administrators, radical professors, multiculturalists, and students and professors of color." Many of the same people who argue that blacks are always complaining and "crying wolf" about their lives are the same people who argue against multicultural or diversity courses being mandatory or even present at colleges and universities. They see this new awareness and inclusion as a sort of academic revolution headed up by black students and faculty. Some even argue that these students and faculty have gained control of the discussions and curricula planning at many schools. I would like to know where black people are in control. Public perception and media hype is amazing!

Bloom argues that there is "a large black presence in major universities, frequently equivalent to the black proportion in the general population." Actually, there are only two traditionally white schools in the country that have black enrollments exceeding the national census figure of about 12 percent. They are Wayne State in Michigan (24 percent) and Brooklyn College in New York City (21 percent). I would be remiss if I did not add that these school are in urban areas with heavy black populations.

Arthur Schlesinger sees the addition of multicultural courses into school curriculum as an "invasion of American schools by the Afrocentric curriculum." Ironically enough, Schlesinger has titled his book, "The Disuniting of America." I contend that unless something was untied from the start it cannot be disunited.



Everyone speaks of opportunities all too often, but the reality is blacks have to fight for everything they get from the "womb to the tomb." Society is quick to point out blacks who have "made it" in America, such as Michael Jordan, Clarence Thomas, and Oprah Winfrey. We know that these people and those in the same genre are truly exceptions and definitely not the norm for black people. Whites are always looking for those "exceptions that prove their rule."

At colleges all over the country, black students are finding that they are really not as welcome as the scholars, media, and others would have them to believe. In my opinion, black people have made some progress in this nations, but we still have a long way to go. Y'ALL KEEP SINGING!

Terrell M. Hill is a UMass Graduate student.

Iraq and Black America

Black America, as an international people, needs to be politically conscious and be concerned about the stand–off between the United States and Iraq. The screams of "Stop the genocide against Iraqi people" is similar to "Stop the genocide against black people" in America. Both people who are dying by the thousands and both are terrorized by the U.S. government. The stand–off concerns all human beings. This stand–off relates to the U.S. problems with Nigeria and the Arab nationals, Libya and its resource, nationalization, and the Sudan's human rights issues.

The stand–off is about profit and securing oil, gas and markets. Iraq holds the second largest oil reserves in the world and is also rich in other resources. Must President Saddam Hussein allow the continued exploitation of his country by U.S. and multinationals? No. Must Black America allow the continued exploitation of our communities by outsiders? The answer is no.

We need to turn off our televisions as the media continues to depict Iraq as a threat to world peace possessing weapons of mass destruction (even though weapons of mass destruction are held by Europe, America and Israel). Each day you stay brainwashed, more Iraqis are suffering and dying. The death toll is up to 1,200,000 since the end of the Gulf War and is rising. The television has and continues to make the victim look like the criminal and the criminal look like the victim. You have innocent American soldiers believing they're going to war fighting for democracy when in truth, they are fighting to keep multinational corporations rich. That's sick.

During the seven years of U.N. inspections and sanctions, Iraq was investigated from border to border. Satellites, spy planes and land monitoring devices have been used to record every Iraqi movement. Iraq must be watched to prevent it from being powerful enough to defend itself and have the upper–hand in negotiations of its resources.

Europe and America have already carved out and taken possession of most of the African continent and have subjected many of the natives to servile positions. Owning the land and the resources is the best and direct way of consuming capital. It's useless. Europe and America's development have a direct link to darker nation's underdevelopment, internally and abroad.

Now, the dark nations are saying enough. Nigeria, Libya, Sudan, Iraq and other African and Arab countries are no longer going to settle to have a few profit at the expense of a malnourished and uncultivated nation. Industrialized Europe and America is now facing a rising Africa, Arab, and dark world.

The question then becomes does America and Europe take a human position and atone for their past and present sins or continue repress and exploit weaker nations?

This is a human issue and we as human beings must not support any country or corporations that are responsible for the racist oppression in Iraq and other countries throughout the world.

America has been and is a racist country, and if the United Nations is dominated by America than the United Nations takes on racist policies regardless of who delivers the policies.

Alton Byrd is a UMass student.

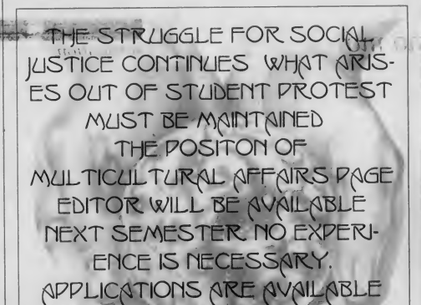
A Multicultural note

Voy Fernandes

Calling all campus organizations!

The Multicultural Affairs page is your opportunity to address some of the issues facing all students of color, news or campus events. Or maybe if you just want to throw the Multi page a line, go right ahead. We will be more than happy to try and address any news.

We want to hear from you, RSO's. It is imperative that any event involving student participation is fully recognized. It is the only way to let the Pioneer Valley and the rest of the UMass campus know the positive as well as the not–so– positive status of the students at UMass.



Please ask your public relations officers to submit any information as to date, time and place of campus events or activities so that we may prepare ourselves for your events. It is the ONLY way news can cross our tables.

We want to be up–to–date with news involving anyone or anything in the UMass community. We also want to represent the UMass community fairly in editorials and any news breaking news.

If you are interested in dropping us a line, stop by the Collegian or call 545–1851 to notify us of any news that is relevant to students.

Express yourself or be expressed by others!

Voy Fernandes is a Collegian staff member.

What's going on, Baby?

I have some things that I want to say to you.
I wish that I had said them long ago, but you know me, sometimes my thoughts are so noisy that I swear everyone can hear them. I see you, continuing to be strong. Laying there, on your back, trying to be brave.
Baby you can cry. You have earned that right. I cry.
I cry all the time. Behind closed doors. I know you told me that it was okay for men to cry, but like everything else you have told me, it usually takes time for me to understand.
Thank you. Thank you for everything. I could tell you from now until eternity and it still would not be enough.
As time goes by I realize this more and more.
You are the greatest.
Thank you for putting up with my bull for all of these years. You have been hurt so much by me that I feel the pain. I'm sorry. Thank you for the sacrifices.
Do you remember when you stayed up what seemed like half of the night to sew my Joseph costume for the 4th Grade Christmas Pageant?
Thank you for the Quality Time.
I loved sitting with you after school telling you about my day.
I always saved a dollar from lunch so that I could by snacks for us.
Thank you for making me a man.
Everything I see is because of you.
Not a day goes by that I don't think of that.
That is why I played the game so hard.
I have to represent you.
And till the day I die, I will continue to shine.
This is what you saw 21 years ago. You made it happen.
I Love You. You are my inspiration. Forever, you will always be my first love, even though you can say you loved me first.
It amazes me where I have reached. I wish you could really see.
Sometimes my life seems so perfect, but it's not. I wish you could really see.
BE STRONG, but I don't have to tell you that. I pray every night that you will once again be happy.
Every time that I look into your eyes, or hear your voice, I know.
When you regained consciousness on what you thought was your death bed, you did not ask for your daughters or your sons. You asked for me, your grandson.
It scares me. That kind of love. I don't know if I have it.
But, it is good to see that it exists.
Walk with the King, Baby.

— Aren Lee Kong

Campus Perspectives

How do you feel about the proposed and soon to be established honors college?

Compiled by Voy Fernandes • Photos by Brian McDermott

"I feel that the University wants to bring in better, more talented students to help the standards of the school [UMass].UMass is a safety net [for students]. [The University] wants to become one of their top choices"
Neb Abebe
freshman, engineer major

"I guess to allow an opportunity for people to get an above average education for average cost (especially for in–state students)."
Brooke Hauser
sophomore, biology major

"I think it's a good idea to bring in a lot of money, but it may cause some separation between honors college and regular students."
Michael Chiavaroli
junior, theater major

"It could either isolate the students or it's not going to create any change at all. It seems open but could be dangerous. It could keep money from going into other programs. It's more about the funding."
Hayden Vales
freshman, undecided

"The University needs to focus on a little more than bringing more white kids to UMass. It's funny how they (the University find money for other things but not for students."
James Ware
graduate, animal science

"Good teachers are going to wind up going to the Honors College. It's going to cause too much animosity."
Marielene Shafik psychology major

Guild's Dracula sucks audience in

By Karen Evans
Collegian Correspondent

THE PASSION OF DRACULA
Bowker Auditorium
Nov. 13-15

The University of Massachusetts Theater Guild closed its production of The Passion of Dracula, Saturday, in Bowker Auditorium, to rousing applause and a standing ovation.

Directed by English major Justin Smith, The Passion of Dracula is a play loosely based on the gothic novel by Bram Stoker.

For the most part, the story follows the typical Hollywood portrayal, with Rhydwyn Davies who made his entrance as Count Dracula in a cloud of fog and a swirling cape. The major differences between Stoker's novel and The Passion of Dracula are in the setting and a few changes to the traditional cast of characters.

The play opened up on the well designed set of the study of Dr. Seward, played by Erik Bergman, with the comical antics of Seward's maid Margaret, played by Elizabeth Bean.

Bean, along with John Kazlauskas, who played Dracula's servant Renfield, did a fair job of lightening the more macabre scenes with quirky humor.

Act one progressed through the burgeoning romance of Wilhemina Murray, Seward's niece, and Jonathan Harker, played by Laura Hale and Jeff Devergilio.

In contrast, the first act ended with the dramatic and bloody death of Dr. Helga Van Zandt (Michelle Alyse Ouelette) who was carried on stage by her hot-headed lover, Lord Gordon Godalming (Carl Bromley).

Acts two and three told the story of the hero's struggle and Dracula's eventual downfall, surprisingly at the hands of Wilhemina.

There were some great special effects, including a cross which burst into flames during a struggle between Dracula and Professor Van Helsing (Robert Davis), who discovers and reveals Dracula's true identity.

The actual passion of Count Dracula was somewhat lacking and, at times, it seemed as though he expressed more anger then passion towards the object of his desire, Wilhemina.

Although many of the men's lines were lost in too much yelling and difficult accents, the Guild's production of The Passion of Dracula was admirable for its intensity and drama.

Efforts to snare viewers questionable

By Lynn Elber
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Exclusive! This all-new column is coming to you via your daily newspaper. For the first time! Unless you're reading it on the Internet — exclusively and for the first time on your computer!

Or maybe you're scanning it while bundling the week's papers. Then it is new and exclusive pre-recycling!

Welcome to the world of promotion as practiced by television, where the effort to snare attention creates a questionable kind of delicately measured hype and sleight of hand.

And it took — what else? — the Marv Albert case to alert (OK, annoy) us. On his recent song-and-dance tour after pleading guilty to misdemeanor assault charges, the fired sportscaster dueted with Barbara Walters on ABC's "20-20" and Larry King on CNN.

Albert claimed his accuser lied, said reports of his kinky sex life were exaggerated, but admitted he went through an "experimental" phase.

Enough said? Hardly.

Because Albert still had dates on CBS' "The Late Show with David Letterman" and NBC's "Today," where he faced Katie Couric. So how could these Marv-come-lately networks persuade viewers to tune in again?

"First live interview with Marv Albert!" trumpeted a promotional spot for "Today" (first on broadcast, that is, after King on cable). That required Letterman's show to engage in pin-point bombing, announcing Albert's "first live interview before a studio audience!"

And here's what viewers got for investing more time in Marv: His claim that his accuser lied, that reports of his kinky sex life were exaggerated but he did, indeed, dabble in sexual experimentation.

"I just thought I had to tell the truth," Albert told a wisecracking Letterman.

"I had to get the truth out," he told a severe-looking Couric.

If truth be told, we felt used, hooked by a promise of something new and fed stale mush. There was no outright deception; Albert was delivered live, as promised.

Why we accept mere delivery, however, reflects how open to manipulation we can be even when we recognize it. And what pushovers we are when we don't or when the approach borders on flimflam.

A recent ABC spot for "Home Improvement" showed Jill (Patricia Richardson) kissing a man other than her husband (Tim Allen).

Watching the show, however, we find it was a dream sequence — a silly come-on for a smartly written episode about longtime marrieds trying to put the heat back in their relationship.

It's unfortunate what the pressure of the November ratings "sweeps" can do. But that's a small cheat compared to the serious offenses.

Consider the apparent show biz tidbits delivered in an "Entertainment Tonight" — like format by Rob Weller, a onetime anchor for that program. In the spots, labeled "Movie News," Weller gives us a peek at what's in theaters — from Disney, that is.

These are, it turns out, well-disguised advertisements for Disney movies, with the only hint coming in an oblique reference to Disney distribution unit Buena Vista Pictures, probably not a widely recognized connection.

Fooled us.

"Then we've done our job," said one pragmatic Disneyite.

An ad masquerading as a promo for a nonexistent news report. Now that's slick. But it's still not the worst kind of hucksterism.

That honor goes to the genuine TV news shows that have developed the habit of alerting viewers to potentially important stories, then withholding key facts to force people to keep watching. Local programs are the big culprits.

An L.A. commercial break in an afternoon talk show includes this booming announcement: "Construction accident at a Southland high school! Students and teachers injured. We'll have the latest" — but not until an upcoming newscast. Until then, we're left guessing about the school involved.

Or a weathercaster pops up between sitcoms to ask "Is a major storm headed this way? Find out on the 11 o'clock report." A station flashes a photo of a mountain lion with the shrill admonition "Is this stalking your neighborhood?" Until the answer is revealed, better stay inside and glued to your set.

Toying with the news and with viewers does not tend to foster trust in broadcast journalism.

But that's not the point, of course; drawing the attention of viewers is. And if playing carnival barker or snake-oil salesman is the easiest way, so be it. Those who do have plenty of company on TV, where you can't always get the bald truth.

Unless someone finally delivers Marv Albert without the toupee.

Watch what you eat this Thanksgiving

By Ted Listokin
Associated Press

The Good Book tells us that "man hath no better thing under the sun than to eat, and to drink, and to be merry." But as we move into the holiday season, a word to the wise might be more appropriate: too much food and drink can be the perfect recipe for heartburn, discomfort, and other digestive problems. For many people, holiday times spell a time for heavy feasting, such as second and third helpings of turkey, ham and mashed potatoes — and frequent trips to the punch bowl.

But a pinch of moderation and a dash of common sense can help prevent holiday dining from turning into a bout of heartburn and the discomfort that goes with it.

Pacing yourself and taking the time to enjoy the food you eat can help prevent some problems, but it also is important to monitor when and what you eat and drink. Watch out for the late afternoon or evening party — so commonplace during the holiday season. The cornucopia of food and drink usually presented can be a prescription for a raging case of heartburn, constipation, or worse.

Fatty foods, such as rich deserts, turkey and all its trimmings, and ham all work to make the digestive system toil harder. Fatty foods, which generally are tastier, are also the more difficult food items to digest.

But despite their best intentions, many people overdo their holiday cheer. If this is the case, over-the-counter medications, such as antacids or histamine receptor antagonists, are effective in reducing the garden variety of heartburn symptoms and indigestion. But these same medications also can mask or reduce symptoms of more serious digestive problems, such as peptic ulcers and esophageal diseases.

Here are some other tips to avoid holiday gastric problems:

Avoid an excess of alcoholic drinks or caffeinated beverages, such as coffee, tea, or colas. (all these drinks increase reflux of stomach acid into the esophagus). Limit the amount of fried or high-fat foods that you eat, such as gravies, sausage stuffing, and ham, for example. If you are on an exercise regimen, continue it through the holidays. Try to avoid eating and drinking late at night, or going to bed with a full, heavy stomach. If you have to, stay up for a few hours to give yourself time to digest your food.

Unfinished
LA Wood, Inc.
401 Main St.
Amherst, MA
Formerly Loc. Video To Go
Cubes — Bookcases — Futons
Wooden clothes dryers — Desk & Dressers
Furniture

LOSE WEIGHT NOW!
Our products are:
• Doctor Recommended
• 100% Natural
• Guaranteed
You will:
• Feel more energy
• Lose up to 30 LBS in 30 days
• Have more willpower
FREE SAMPLES
CALL: (413) 259-1922

Asthma Sufferers
You may qualify for FREE Study Related CARE and FREE Study MEDICATIONS for your asthma as part of a research study.
If You Are:
• At least 15 years old
• Have had asthma for at least one year
• Are a non-smoker
You may be eligible to participate
Learn more about your asthma as you receive treatment
Compensation up to $250.00 will be provided to study participants
Call NOW 413-584-4010

The UMass Theatre Guild & University Productions and Concerts Present
The Legendary Rock Opera by Pete Townshend
THE WHO'S TOMMY
I PLAYED THE SILVER BALL · ME FEEL ME TOUCH · HEAL ME
Conceived and Developed by Pete Townshend & Kit Lambert
Book By Pete Townshend & Des McAnuff
Lyrics and Music by Pete Townshend
December 4th, 5th, 6th at 8 P.M.
6th and 7th at 2 P.M.
Student Union Ballroom
UMass - Amherst
UMass Students and Senior Citizens: $5
General Public: $7
Tickets Available At:
413-586-8686 NBO NORTHAMPTON BOX OFFICE · BYTE-TICK · & TIX UNLIMITED 545-0412
For more info Call UPC at 545-2892 or UMTG at 545-0415

Dont Let The Marshall Catch You Going Anywhere Else!
Marshall STEINBECK
Collision Repair & Auto Body
• Imports and other unibody vehicles are our specialty
• Users of Sikkens paint products
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair
53 S. Prospect St.
Amherst Center
256-8157
Shop Reg. #RS1212

SPRING BREAK
BEST PARTIES · CANCUN JAMAICA FLORIDA · BEST PRICE
Call today! Space is limited
1 800 648-4849
Student Travel Services
On campus call Giancarlo Grisco @413-566-3147

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON
Beginning Nov. 1
One Way · Roundtrip
LONDON $162 $295
PARIS $218 $399
ROME $274 $473
MADRID $226 $415
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs/immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave. · NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420
800-272-9676 in NYC

■ women's swimming

continued from page 10

and Stacie Haymes in 3-meter diving.

"Stacie Haymes did a great job of diving," Newcomb said. "She finished first in the three-meter diving and second in the one-meter diving. In fact, all three of our divers had good days. Andrea also had a good day.

"She accomplished a lot of great things and is swimming very well at this point in the season."

Newcomb was also quick to point out the performance of Alexander.

"Julie was second in the 500 free, and she had a personal best time," Newcomb said. "She was also third in the 100 breast. She had a great last length of the 100 breast, and overall, she had a tremendous

■ men's swimming

continued from page 10

Alacla in the 100-freestyle, B.J. Brannan in the 500-freestyle, and Ed Hefferon in one-meter diving. Finally, Alcala, Turner, Davey, and Anderson teamed up to take the 400-freestyle in a time of 3:11.91.

The Minutemen also had several second place finishes in the triumph over St. John's.

Brannan was second in the 1000-freestyle, while Andrews finished second in the 200-freestyle. Tim Church took second in the 1-meter diving, while Rich Slingluff finished second in the 200-fly.

Henry Turner was second in the 100-freestyle, while Chris Arsenault took second in the 200-backstroke. Flynn was second in the 500-freestyle, while Hefferon was meet."

Now getting back to that other wish: a healthy team.

Health was a concern for the Minutewomen over the past few weeks, but Newcomb did see several swimmers return to action over the weekend.

"Hickey swam and finished first in the 1000 free, which was something that I didn't expect, and Hupp and Lansky also came back," Newcomb said. "The only swimmer who is still out is Karen Sonnwald. But the team will have a few days off after practice on Wednesday night, and I think that this break will help us get healthy again."

runner-up in the 3-meter diving.

The Minutemen had the luxury of opening up their season with four consecutive home meets.

Now, as UMass will head into the meat of their schedule, the rigors of road travel will have to be dealt with by coach Russ Yarworth and his crew.

First, the Minutemen will be travelling to Penn State for the Penn State Invitational on Dec. 5-6, then it will be West Palm Beach, Florida for the Lake Worth Invitational on Jan. 3, and finally Kingston, Rhode Island for the Rhode Island Invitational on Jan. 9-10.

UMass will return home Jan. 18th with a meet against the Big Green of Dartmouth.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Two for two
Sophomore guard Kelly Van Huisen capped off her WHMP/UMass Athlete of the Week Award with her A-10 Player of the Week selection. After tonight's game at Hartford, UMass will travel to Ohio State for Sunday's 2 p.m. game.

■ NBA

continued from page 10

McMahon, and, well, I guess Ty Detmer (close enough), have gain respect almost immediately. With the gridiron program they have over there, it's understandable.

If you're in the NBA as a Cougar, it takes a long time before people decide that they have to reckon with you.

Shawn Bradley is an NBA Cougar. Straight out of BYU, Bradley was a beefy 225 pounds and was a "project" from the beginning. Philadelphia drafted him and he was booed out of town. New Jersey picked him up, but opted to snag Sam Cassell out of Dallas.

So Bradley, the now 260-pound center, is having an outstanding year for the otherwise hapless Dallas Mavericks.

260 pounds? Say it ain't so. Well, he still looks like a toothpick, but that's a given when you're as tall as he is.

But, he's certainly held his own in this game of giants. He averages a double-double, registering 15 points and ten rebounds a contest. Perhaps Bradley will never be regarded as one of the game's premiere centers, but he will demand his silent respect.

Hey, if Aretha Franklin can demand it from people, I think a 7-foot-6 Cougar can do it.

Brett Mauser is a Collegian staff member.

Pats offense in a slump, stats down from '96–97

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO — It's an offense most teams would love — Drew Bledsoe, Curtis Martin, Ben Coates and Terry Glenn. So why is it so hard for the New England Patriots to get into the end zone? The AFC's highest scoring team last season has just one offensive touchdown in each of its last two games. And after scoring 15 offensive touchdowns in winning its first four games, it's managed 13 in its last eight, five of them losses.

"You hate to not be able to score on offense," running back Curtis Martin said yesterday. "It's an awful feeling."

The Patriots (7-5) did beat the Dolphins 27-24 on Sunday, tying Miami for second-place in the AFC East, one game behind the New York Jets. But two of New England's touchdowns came on interception returns and the third was a trick play — Dave Meggett's option pass to Troy Brown.

One week earlier, New England nearly was shut out by Tampa Bay. Only a 6-yard pass from backup quarterback Scott Zolak to backup tight end Lovett Purnell with 8 seconds left prevented that as the Patriots lost 27-7.

"We're not pressing yet," Brown said of the Miami game. "We won the game. We had some nice drives and didn't get any points." The Patriots only had the ball seven times to 12 for the Dolphins because Miami recovered two onsides kicks and New England's defense scored twice. Yet the offense settled for field goals after getting first downs at the Miami 20-yard line and the 12.

Despite the win, the inconsistent performance wasn't especially comforting to coach Pete Carroll.

"Coaching is kind of constantly being uncomfortable," he said. "We would think going into the season that we would be leading with the offense and scoring points.

"That's not happening, so there's a lot of ways to win games." It's just that they can't expect to return two interceptions for touchdowns every game.

"You hate to have to depend on the defense," Martin said. The Patriots most powerful offensive weapons haven't produced the way they did last year when they went to the Super Bowl. Glenn, who set an NFL rookie record with 90 catches last season, has been hampered by injuries and has just 27 receptions. That's enabled defenders to pay more attention to other receivers, like Coates.

Martin and Bledsoe haven't matched last season's performances either.

Through 12 games last season, Martin rushed for 895 yards compared with 1,094 now. But his rushing touchdowns are down from 13 to 4.

THE AMHERST DELICATESSEN
MEMBER O.C.M.P.
WE ACCEPT ALL MAJOR CREDIT CARDS.
Can We Build One For You?
Serving Sandwiches, Bagels & Lox, Fresh Soups & Salads, Take Out.
★ DELIVERIES CALL 549-6314 ★
★ OPEN UNTIL 9p.m. ★

OOPS! Fender Bender
• Free Estimates
• Lifetime Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center (On bus route - one mile from UMass)
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880

Holly Days
Don't forget Mom & Dad
The University Store has lots of new clothing and gifts just for your parents!
The new line of Nike™ UMass clothing is now available at the University Store!
They make great gifts for family, friends, or even yourself!
We accept AMEX, Discover, MC, Visa, and the UCard!
Season's Greetings
The Ustore University Store, In the UMass Campus Center
Hours: M-F 9 to 5 Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545-2619

Tuesday Night
KICK OFF
Your Thanksgiving Break at
Featuring Boston's Best Acoustical Guitarist: Chad La Marsh
November 25
10:00p.m. - 1:00a.m.
funfood·spirits THE PUB amherst
$2.00 Cover Charge
No Cover before 10:00
$2.00 Pub Drink Specials
Seabreeze
Rum & Coke
Miller Lite
Don't Miss Out on the Pre-Holiday Festivities at The Pub
Located in Downtown Amherst on East Pleasant Street · 549-1200

LIVE MUSIC TONIGHT!
Come See LABB at 10:00 p.m.
21 & over positive I.D. required
And get FREE Wings from 9:30 to 11:00
This Week's DRINK Specials
$1 Whiskey Sours
$2 16oz. Cap't & Coke
$2 Cover
WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
Dining • Take-Out • Live Music • Catering
Take-Out: 253-4040 • Delivery: 549-0077 • Fax: 413-253-3016
Member O.C.M.P. • All Major Credit Cards Accepted

We're worker-owned. We do it all, we do it cheap... 7 days a week.
CollectiveCopies

PHISH TICKETS
GREAT SEATS AT UNBELIEVABLY LOW PRICES!
• HARTFORD, NOV 26
• WORCESTER, NOV 28-30
CITY TICKET: 1-800-865-8070

amc Hampshire 8 •584-7550 Hampshire Mall
There is a Difference!
Silence is Golden - No child under 8 in ★★★ PG, 13 or R rated film after 6pm
Mt. Farms 4 •584-9153 Mt. Farms Mall
Jackal (R) Today at (5:40), 8:30
Wed, Thur. at 1:50, (5:00), 8:00, 10:50
The Man Who Knew Too Little (PG) Today at (5:50) • Wed, Thur. at 2:00, 8:10
Rainmaker (PG13) Today at (5:30), 8:20
Wed, Thur. at 1:40, (4:50), 7:50, 10:40
Boogie Nights (R) Today at (5:10)
Wed, Thur. at 1:30, (4:40), 7:40
Devil's Advocate Today at 8:20 • Wed, Thur. at (4:40) 10:40
Red Corner (R) Today at 8:30 • Wed, Thur. at 10:50
Bean (PG 13) Today at (5:50), 8:40
Wed, Thur. at 2:00, (5:20), 8:00, 10:40
Anastasia (G) Today at (5:40), 8:30
Wed, Thur. at 1:50, (5:10)
Starship Troopers (R) Today at (5:00), 8:00
Wed, Thur. at 1:40, (4:50), 7:30, 10:00
Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil (R) Today at (5:10), 8:20
Wed, Thur. at 1:30, (4:40), 7:40, 10:40
Mortal Combat 2: Annihilation (PG 13) Today at (5:40), 8:30
Wed, Thur. at 1:40, (5:00), 7:50, 10:10
Walt Disney's The Little Mermaid (G) Today at (5:50), 8:40
Wed, Thur. at 2:00 (5:30), 8:00, 10:20
$2.50 Til ex 1:45pm Show Daily · Special Engagement, no Passes or Coupons

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom Apt. Easthampton. $485 per month. Take over lease ASAP 527-9410

AUTO FOR SALE

Nissan 240SX 89 Excellent condition, all extras. New tires, brakes, clutch, muffler. $4400 or B/O Marcos 549-6926

1988 Buick Century Wagon Tip top shape. Great winter car. $3000 or B/O. (413)253-2232

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday 1-800-649-4795

EMPLOYMENT

CAT LOVERS Looking for someone interested in having two loveable cats live-in. We will retain ownership of the cats and we will pay for food, litter, and vet care. You provide the home and the love! Call for details. 546-4550

Attention Slackers!! Use e-mail? Know others who do? Little effort = Big money! Call (800)546-0744

EMPLOYMENT

Part-Time Job Available Collegian Classifieds, on-campus, earn great experience, flexible hours. Apply now for next semester. Applications are available at the Collegian Office, Rm 113, Campus Center.

LIVE-IN Room/Board + Salary & TIPS. Two openings Dec. 19 to early/mid April or longer. Do dishes, rooms, wait tables, prep, etc. in southern Vermont inn. Work hard. Must be energetic and pleasant. Call today-Elaine (802)874-4140

FOR SALE

1 1/2 month old iguana needs a home BADLY! All included. $60 or B/O. Jill 546-4933

WANT MY SAX? Conn Tenor Saxophone. $200. Needs new pads. Call Katherine 546-7065

Phish Tickets Great seats at great prices. City Tickets (800)865-8070

FOR SALE

Unfinished
LA Wood, Inc.
401 Main St.
Amherst, MA
Formerly Loc. Video To Go
Cubes — Bookcases — Pottery
Wooden clothes dryers — Desk & Dressers

Furniture

Willpower In A Bottle Lose Weight Doctor Recommended 100% Natural Moneyback Guarantee (413)259-1922

Nutrition Supplements Creatine 400G. $29 Designer Whey Protein $26 Met RX $38 Fat Burners & More... Call: 253-1850

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

COMPUTERS! New P166MMX from $995. Laptops, peripherals. ZarVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

FOR SALE

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

FOUND

Found: Red Neatbook with Theater and Japanese notes in parking lot between FAC and Franklin. 6-5148

LOST

Wallet lost maybe in Machmer or Berkshire DC. Purple with zipper covered with daisies. Please call 546-4727

ROOM FOR RENT

Room in house in South Amherst. $375/month ALL INCLUDED. Next to bus line. Start 1/1/98. Call 253-9452

Bedroom Available Jan 1 $342.50/month includes heat and hot water. Contact Kelly 253-1898

One room available on Main St. On bus route and short walk to town. Call 259-9282. Available immediately.

ROOM FOR RENT

Room for rent in 4 bedroom apt. $300/month inc. elec. Available Jan 1. Call 549-9959

ROOMMATE WANTED

Very quiet roommate wanted in Amherst on bus line. $260/month plus 1/3 utilities. 256-5402, 253-9457

Looking for female to share two bedroom apartment in Puffton. $320/month. On bus line. Call Candy 549-9293

SERVICES

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact The Student Legal Services Offices, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

GET NOTICED! Number One secret to resume writing for college students and gen-x Send $6.00 check/money order + business size SASE to: Nina Smith, 507 Central Avenue, No. 2, New Haven, CT 06515

SERVICES

SPRING BREAK
Cancun — From $599
Jamaica — From $699
Bahamas — From $629
Florida — From $99
NOW HIRING REPS!
1-800-234-7007
http://www.sunsplashtours.com

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Killington: Ski & Party Week Jan 4-9. 5 nights condo/5 days skiing. $285. Call 545-3437

WANTED

Looking for any women cigar smokers for my Journalism class assignment. If you are interested please call Rana at 253-2099.

WANTED TO RENT

Jan-May 97 One bedroom apartment/room. Will take over your lease. Call Franky 665-7831

COMING SOON!

NEW CLASSIFIED HEADINGS

Just one more way the Classifieds make your life easier.

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not accepted. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students 20¢ per word/day

All others 40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, NOV. 25

Meeting — The Index (UMass Yearbook) will hold a general meeting at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Union, room 304. All are invited. For more information, contact Jill Aordikian at 545-0848.

THURSDAY, NOV. 26

Thanksgiving Dinner — If you cannot get home for the holiday, The Stonewall Center Is offering a Thanksgiving Potluck Dinner, including movies, music, food and conversation. Members of the GLBT community and allies are welcome to attend. RSVP by 5 p.m. on Tues., Nov. 25 at 545-4824.

NOTICES

Applications — The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team is accepting applications for its training this January 12-16. Applications are available for any UMass student at 222 Hampshire House, Legal Studies. For more information, contact Leah at 545-5882.

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545-0792.

Art Exhibition — An exhibition of more than 30 one-of-a- kind artist books and scrolls by William Schade will be on view from Nov. 11 through Jan. 25 at the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum. Museum hours are Tues., – Fri., 11 a.m.–5 p.m. and Sat., and Sun., 1–5 p.m. and is cloned on academic holidays from Wed., Nov. 26 through Mon., Dec. 1 and from Tues., Dec. 16 through Mon., Jan. 6. For more information, call 538–2245 or fax 538–2144.

Club — The UMass Amateur Radio Club Station W1PUO Is returning and looking for people to join in Ham radio. Anyone interested in radio/electronics and a desire to learn and communicate are welcome. The club will sponsor FCC approved volunteer examination sessions for all license levels. For more information, contact Richard Strycharz N1MPT at 549-6000 ext. 6000 or leave a message at facility services.

Fill–A–Bus — Help fill a PVTA bus with clothing, toys, and non-perishable food to benefit needy individuals and families in the Amherst area on Nov. 24 and 25 and Dec. 1– 5 from 11 a.m.–5 p.m. daily in front of the Student Union. Volunteers to staff the bus and collect donations needed. Contact the UMass Community Service Program at 545– 3368 for more information.

Food Drive — The UMass NSSLHA chapter along with Amherst Survival Center are sponsoring a food drive in honor of hunger awareness month. Bring non–perishable food to Arnold House, School of Public Health throughout November.

Internships — Environmental and Hunger Internships available for credit. Opportunities include helping to organize a Five College Earthday, protecting Endangered Species and organizing the Spring Hunger Clean–up. For more information, call Robyn at 545–0199.

Notice — The Student Employment Office will be closed on Fri., Nov. 28. Work study students who work at one of our off–campus agencies can pick up their paychecks on Wed., Nov 26 after 10 a.m. On Fri., Nov. 28, paychecks can be picked up after 10 a.m. at financial aid services, 255 Whitmore.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Have a warm Thanksgiving!
from your friends at the Collegian

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 International
14 UMass Academic TV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN SI
25 Headline News
26 UCTV
27 TBS
28 BET
29 TV Land
30 Univision
31 Comedy Central
32 Cartoon
33 Much Music

545-3500

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — NOVEMBER 25, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	G. Auriemma	Women's College Basketball: Iowa at Connecticut. (Live)				Liberty! The American Revolution (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 3)				Vietnam Mem.
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	JAG "People vs. Rabb"		"Indefensible: The Truth About Edward Brannigan" (1997, Drama)		News		Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	JAG "People vs. Rabb"		"Indefensible: The Truth About Edward Brannigan" (1997, Drama)		News		Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Grace Under	Soul Man	Home Imp.	Spin City	NYPD Blue "Lost Israel"		News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Full House	Boy-World	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Thongs / Shrunk the Kids" (1969, Fantasy) Rick Moranis.		News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abo, You	Newsradio	Frasier	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		8	Cheers	Med Abo, You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Moesha	Clueless	Malcolm-Eddie	In the House	News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT		10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Med Abo, You	Newsradio	Frasier	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	11	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	"Home Alone 3 (Lost in New York" (1992) Macaulay Culkin.						Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP	9	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abo, You	Newsradio	Frasier	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Avalanche!" (In Stereo)		Liberty! The American Revolution (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 3)				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	28	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Grace Under	Soul Man	Home Imp.	Spin City	NYPD Blue "Lost Israel"		News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Med Abo, You	Med Abo, You	Seinfeld	Frasier	Moesha	Clueless	Malcolm-Eddie	In the House	News	M*A*S*H	M*A*S*H	Real TV
WTBS	22		Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach	Coach	"Look Who's Talking" (1989, Comedy) John Travolta.				"Robin Hood" (1973, Adventure) Voices of Peter Ustinov.
A&E	20		Northern Exposure "Cicely"		Law & Order		Biography: Rasputin: Mork		Touch of Frost "Appropriate Adults" (R)				Law & Order
CNN	23	23	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	35	35	Tompkins Sq.	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Comedy Hall	1 Night Stand	Young Comedians		Viva Variety	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	52		Wings "Hugging the Dock" (R)		Gimme Shelter (R)		World of Discovery		New Detectives (R)		CIA Secret Warriors		Justice Files (R)
ESPN	21		Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Maui Invitational Semifinal – Teams TBA				College Basketball: Maui Invitational Semifinal – Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	34		Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Convictions" (1997, Drama) Blair Brown, Cameron Bancroft.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	53		MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	MTV Live (R) (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Loveline (R) (In Stereo)
NICK	55		Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Bewitched	Love Lucy	Odd Couple	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI	45		Twilight Zone	Twilight Zone	Time Trax "Fire and Ice" (R)		Sequoia DSV "Photon Bullet"		Forever Knight (In Stereo)		Viewer "Promises to Keep"		Time Trax "Fire and Ice" (R)
TLC	29	26	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Home Again	Home Again	Trauma II: Life in the ER		Survival in the Sky (R)		Survival in the Sky (R)		Trauma II: Life in the ER (R)
TNT	25		Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		NBA Basketball: Los Angeles Lakers at Miami Heat. (In Stereo Live)				Inside-NBA		"The Slither" (1991)
USA	19		Baywatch (R) (In Stereo)		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		Boxing: Manuel Gomez vs. Shane Mosley. (In Stereo Live)				Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo)
HBO	33		"Lucas" (1986, Drama) Corey Haim. (In Stereo) PG-13				"Dear God" (1996, Comedy) Greg Kinnear. (In Stereo) PG		Alien Resurr.		"Independence Day" (1996) Will Smith.
MAX	54		(4:30)	"A Fine Mess" (1986) Ted Danson. PG			"Mission: Impossible" (1996, Adventure) Tom Cruise. PG-13		"The Trigger Effect" (1996) Kyle MacLachlan.		"Tango-Cash"
SHOW	56		(5:30) "A Star Is Born" (1978, Musical) Barbra Streisand. R				"The Mirror Has Two Faces" (1996) Barbra Streisand.				"Things to Do in Denver When You're Dead" (1995) R

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Loodoo By Mike Rybicki

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Now is the time for you to attempt a conversion; it will allow you to look at things from a more positive, enthusiastic perspective.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Today, even the most routine endeavors will seem quite tricky, and much of your time will be spent solving odd little puzzles. Hang in there.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — While you may have doubted your instincts in the recent past, you can express yourself with renewed confidence today.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may be feeling a little out of sorts during the first part of the day. Perhaps you've been overdoing it in some way recently.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — While others are clinging to the adage that "moderation is the key", you are more likely to go to extremes in a variety of ways today.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You may be considering a move of some sort at this time, but you mustn't back out of a recent deal you made with someone in authority.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You may have to find a substitute for something you seek today, as it may be completely unavailable to you at this time. Be flexible.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You may have to dig deep into your bag of tricks today in order to come up with just the right strategy for dealing with a stubborn problem.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You can cut your work time in half today simply by making a concrete plan in advance and sticking to it. Efficiency is the key!

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You shouldn't take for granted the fact that you are in the lead today. One of your competitors is on your tail, and he or she is unwilling to let up!

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Keep an eye on the clock today; your use of time will make the difference between success and failure — if not today, then one day very soon.

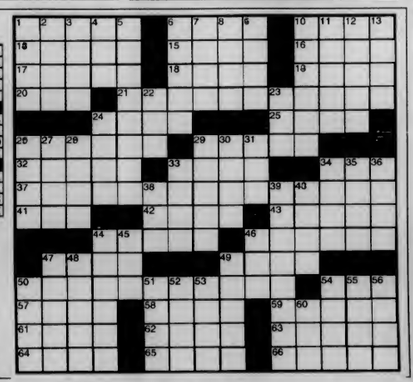
SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You mustn't back down once you've taken a stand. The fact that you can hold your ground will say more than any argument you could conceive.

Quote of the Day

"There are two kinds of college students; Jocks and Nerds. As a Jock, it is my duty to give Nerds a hard time."

–Homer Simpson

Close to Home By John McPherson



ACROSS
1 In the red
6 Sci-fi craft
10 Shoe part
14 Mexican title
15 PBS series
16 Adam's son
17 Certain Indian native
18 Tehran's place
19 Skin opening
20 Alphabet letters
21 Calabash
24 Heed
25 Bohemian
26 Rich pastry
29 Small flies
32 Pour liquid over
33 Quarry
34 "—, team!"
37 Swimming stroke
41 Speedometer info
42 Lock part
43 Greased
44 Wrap
46 Sightseer's "must"
47 Stare open-mouthed
49 Had on
50 Balloons and streamers
54 Kind
57 Not "pro"
58 Traveler
59 Basketball star Baylor
61 Court jester
62 Writer Wiesel
63 Cowhand's loop
64 Tangy
65 Luge or toboggan
66 Milkshake accessory

DOWN
1 Industrial safety agcy.
2 Fish trap
3 Taverns
4 Head motion
5 Dirtier
6 Concord
7 Knox, e.g.
8 Egg-shaped
9 Reasonable
10 Mists
11 Approximately 12 Cheerful
13 Beseeched
22 Above, to Keats
23 Pistol slang
24 Kiln for hops
26 Wax-coated cheese
27 Brilliant move
28 Luxuriant
29 Broil
30 Without ice
31 Writer Rand
33 Till the soil
34 Ivy League school
35 Wide-spouted pitcher
36 TV's Hawkeye
38 Kunstler's org.
39 Becomes less fine
40 Frost
44 Went bad
45 "— Alibi," Tom Selleck flick
46 Inmate
47 Italian port
48 Costner or Gibson
49 Courted
50 Foolish
51 Mimics
52 Type of road
53 Tennis player Nastase
54 Inventor Sikorsky
55 Mona —
56 Was aware of 60 House site

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

A	V	A	S	T		E	A	S	T		P	A	R	E
D	E	L	L	A		I	L	K	A		E	M	I	R
D	E	V	I	L		G	A	I	T		T	O	G	A
S	P	A	C	E	S	H	I	P		D	U	N	E	S
			K	N	I	T		S	H	I	N	G	L	E
B	A	T		T	R	E	E		A	S	I
E	T	A		S	E	E	D		W	H	A	R	F	S
S	O	C	K		N	I	B		S	A	I	L
S	M	O	O	T	H		T	A	R	A		F	L	O
			W	H	O		S	C	A	T		T	E	E
E	M	P	T	I	E	S		K	I	T	S
A	A	R	O	N		T	A	B	L	E	W	I	N	E
G	L	O	W		M	A	L	E		M	O	D	E	L
L	A	N	E		H	V	E	N		P	R	E	S	S
E	Y	E	D		W	E	E	D		T	E	A	S	E

11-25-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Hot & Heavy Chicken Wings
Macaroni and Cheese
Cheese and Macaroni

DINNER
Greek Style Lemon Chicken
Southern Fried Steak
Caponita with Pocket Bread
Chocolate Chicken Pot Pie

Worcester
LUNCH
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Texas Chili
Spaghetti with Meat Sauce
Vegan Falafel

DINNER
Greek Style Lemon Chicken
Sicilian Spaghetti w/Vegetables
Pastabilities
Jimmy Hoffa

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Chicken a la King/ Rice
& Other Assorted Army Surplus

DINNER
Greek Style Lemon Chicken
Southern Fried Steak
Southern Fried Nothing
Southern Fried Southern Fry

Berkshire
LUNCH
Macaroni and Cheese
Spaghetti with Tomato Sauce
Meatball Grinder
Harvest Burger

DINNER
Boneless Pesto Chicken
Sicilian Spaghetti w/Vegetables
Pastabilities
Country Style Ribs

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Chris Stamm
Photo Technician — Brian McDermott
Copy Editor — Petra van Zegeser
Production Supervisor — Rob Snow
Production Staff — Mike Krozy, Joe Savitch

UM plans to redeem heartbreaker

A different UVM returns to sight of their 4–3 overtime win with five seconds left

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

One year, 11 months, 16 days and however many hours ago, the Massachusetts hockey team experienced one of the most bone crushing defeats in the William D. Mullins Center era.

On Dec. 9, 1995, the UMass faced off with then –No. 4 Vermont in a game that was slated to be a one–sided affair — on the side of the Catamounts, that is. With thoughts of past upsets in mind, like their 4–2 win over then–No. 1 Maine on Jan. 28th of the same year, the Minutemen took it to the ECAC powerhouse.

The game went into overtime on two goals in the third period by then–sophomores Chris Fawcett and Dean Campanale, but the heartbreaker ensued as All–American Martin St. Louis fed J.C. Ruid for the 4–3 game–winner with only five seconds left in the game.

Revenge is a dish best served cold.

Payback is a circular concept — like karma.

Either or both of those statements will be in effect tonight at 7 p.m. at the Mullins Center as the two teams face off once again in their annual regional rivalry. For UMass coach Joe Mallen, that loss to the Catamounts was especially hard, and so was his recovery from it.

"To my recollection, I just remember the blood rushing up to the back of my neck after Ruid scored that goal, getting mildly upset and I wasn't able to loosen up for about four days afterward," Mallen said. "They were a top four team at the time, and that was a real tough loss for us at that point of the season.

"Rick Pitino said the other day that you shouldn't use revenge as a motivating factor, but hopefully the guys that were on that team will keep that loss in the back of their minds as they take the ice."

The resumption of the rivalry between the two state schools was prompted by both Mallen and UVM coach Mike Gilligan, but that was then, and this is now.

Almost two years later, UMass is not the same team, but Vermont is a total opposite of the team that reached the Final Four in the 1995–96 season. Including St. Louis, the Catamounts have also graduated two of their other superstars, the other half of the "French Connection," Eric Perrin and All–American goaltender Tim Thomas.

Men's Hockey
Massachusetts vs. Vermont
Mullins Center, 7pm

UVM is now on the opposite side of national success.

After their season–ending loss to Denver University in the first round of the NCAA Tournament last march in Worcester, the Burlington, Vt. residents have stumbled out of the gate this season with a 1–6–2 record. That mark includes a 0–2–1 home record in the historically hostile confines of Gutterson Field House, while only salvaging a 2–2 tie versus rival Dartmouth at home this past weekend.

Vermont has had a tough time trying to replace the immense offensive void left behind by Perrin, St. Louis and Ruid, while scoring more than three goals in a game only once this season, a 7–4 loss to Lake Superior State on November 1. Andreas Moborg leads the team in scoring this season with six points (one goal, five assists), with Stephane Piche right behind him at five points (one goal, four assists).

The loss of Thomas between the pipes has been hard as well, with three goalies sharing playing time this season. Andrew Allen has seen the most action for Vermont, compiling a 1–3–2 record with a 3.25 GAA and a .894 save percentage, while James Tierney (0–2, 4.00 GAA) and Marty Philips (0–1, 4.70 GAA) have also seen some time in the Catamount net.

"They have had a tremendous amount of change on their team, and they lost a lot of outstanding players to graduation," Mallen said. "But we've gone through some change as well, and despite both of our records, it should still be a good game."

Senior Brian Regan (2–6, 3.73 GAA, .881 save percentage) continues to be the man in the Minuteman net. However, he had to deal with a lot of vulcanized rubber this past weekend against Providence, with the Friars racking up 77 shots on the goaltender in consecutive 5–3 losses.

Those two losses have officially dug a tough hole for UMass in the HE conference race, and after Vermont, three straight games against Northeastern lie on the horizon — the first of them this Saturday evening at the Mullins Center (7 p.m.). Mallen believes the team can get some positive things out of their offensive output from this past weekend, but not so much on the defensive side of play.

"I thought Saturday's game against Providence was more than winnable," Mallen said. "We outplayed them, but we didn't outscore them. Offensively, we had our best game of the season, but defensively, we left a lot to be desired.

"We need to take one game at a time, and not look backward, but not look too forward. Our confidence is up, but we just need the little things to happen for us."

JORMA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN

Senior Dean Campanale scored the game–tying goal in the third period against UVM in 1995, but UMass eventually fell in OT, 4–3.

Women's hoop faces Hartford Hawks

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's basketball team heads to West Hartford tonight to take on the Hawks of Hartford University. The game is the first in a series of tough road games for the Minutewomen. After Hartford they will play away games at Kent, Ohio State, and Maine, before finally returning home on Dec. 7th.

UMass looks to continue its excellent play tonight, coming off of a 72–47 thrashing of Wagner College in its season opener on Nov. 16th.

Women's Basketball
Massachusetts vs. Hartford
@ Hartford, 7pm

Hartford, on the other hand, is looking to rebound from a season–opening loss against Yale. A small school from the America East conference, Hartford is being led this year by Maureen DiJulia.

Though a top–notch player, DiJulia is coming off a less than productive game against Yale. Through forty minutes of play, she only put in four points and three rebounds.

The Hawks are coached by Allison Jones, who is now in her sixth year as head coach at Hartford. Jones holds a 131–96 career record, and a 57–80 record with the Hawks. Hartford had a less–than–spectacular year last year, finishing with a 15–12 record, only good for fourth in their conference.

The Minutewomen have had a full eight days since their last game to prepare for the Hawks. In the game against Wagner, UMass put in a solid team effort, giving every player a chance to hit the court. UMass forced 23 turnovers in the game, and out–rebounded the Seahawks, 43–38.

Sophomore guard Kelly Van Huisen had a strong performance, pouring in a career–high 24 points, with her former career–high (21 points) occurring against Duquesne in last year's Atlantic 10 quarterfinals. She was 9–16 from the field against Wagner, including a perfect 3–3 from three–point land.

UMass overpowered Wagner from the start, jumping out to an 8–0 lead. Using a full–court press, the Minutewomen shut down Wagner's offense, pulling out a 9–0 run and taking a 39–23 lead into the half.

UMass continued its pressure through the second, holding the Seahawks scoreless through the first 7:11, while putting in 15 straight unanswered points.

Senior guard and co–captain Sabriya Mitchell also had a strong performance, putting in nine assists and ten points for the Minutewomen.

Van Huisen was rewarded for her efforts last week by being named the WHMP/UMass athlete of the week at last week's UMass sports luncheon. This week, the Haverhill native was rewarded yet again by being named the A–10 Player of the Week. This is the first time this season that Van Huisen has won this award.

Last year, she was twice named Rookie of the Week, and was named to the A–10 All–Rookie team. Ironically, Van Huisen was named an A–10 Player of the Week once last year for hitting a game–winning three in an overtime game against Wagner.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Fifth–year senior guard, and co–captain, Sabriya Mitchell and the Minutewomen will look to start the season off with a 2–0 record at Hartford tonight.

UMass swimming takes two

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts women's swimming and diving coach Bob Newcomb doesn't have the luxury of keeping a genie bottled up in his office for the sake of convenience alone.

So, when the head man for the Minutewomen wanted two wishes to come true in Saturday afternoon's meet against the Red Storm of St. John's, he really couldn't be too greedy — what would be better, a healthy squad for the first time this season, or a victory?

Well, Newcomb and his squad had to "settle" for a 131–112 win over the Red Storm. With the victory, the Minutewomen now improve to 3–2 on the season.

UMass	131
St. John's	112

"We had a very good meet," Newcomb said. "We did a good job of responding well to a one point loss that we had against them last year."

Freshman Sarah Newell, sophomore Andrea Spencer, and junior Julie Alexander each posted top 10 all–time marks in UMass history in the victory.

Newell posted a time of 1:07.46 in the 100–breaststroke, a mark that was good enough for second place on the UMass career chart. Spencer won the 200–individual medley with a time of 2:11.59, the third fastest time in the school history in that event. Finally, Alexander finished second in the 500–freestyle, a mark that was the 10th fastest in school history.

Other Minutewomen who had victories on the afternoon were senior Barbara Hickey in the 1000–freestyle, Newell in the 200–breaststroke, and the 400–medley relay.

Turn to WOMEN'S SWIMMING, page 7

JORMA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN

The women's swimming and diving team continued their successful start to the season with a win over St. John's last Saturday afternoon.

Minutemen walk to win

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Even though the weather outside has been hovering around the freezing point lately, the Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team continues to be "en fuego."

The Minutemen kept their 1997–98 record unblemished at 4–0 with a convincing 171–72 rout over St. John's on Saturday afternoon at Joseph J. Rogers Pool in Boyden Gymnasium.

Leading the way for UMass on the afternoon were senior Sean Anderson, junior Brian Wisniewski, and freshmen Billy Brown and Matt Andrews. Together, the four teamed up to win the 400–medley relay.

UMass	171
St. John's	72

However, on the personal side, all four swimmers accomplished impressive individual wins. Anderson won the 50–freestyle with a time of 21.34, and Wisniewski took the 200–backstroke in 1:59.65. Brown was a winner in the 200–breaststroke with a mark of 2:09.62, and Andrews captured the 200–fly in 1:59.50.

However, the Minutemen only rolled the Red Storm due to the contributions from several other swimmers.

In addition to the performances by the aforementioned quartet, UMass also received victories from Simon Flynn in the 1000–freestyle, Diego

Turn to MEN'S SWIMMING page 7

Difference is Knight and day for Cavs: Stanford alum is the cream of '97 crop

Brett Mauser on The NBA

On draft day, Brevin Knight sat and waited...

And waited...and waited.

The former Stanford superstar didn't really care where he would end up, but he just wanted to continue his basketball dream. Projected as a low lottery pick by many writers across the nation, Knight became the one player in every draft that seems to slide down the ranks.

Finally, with the 16th pick, the Cleveland Cavaliers nabbed the Cardinal's all–time leader in assists and steals.

Perhaps, by being selected by coach Mike Fratello — of all coaches — Knight had to be a tad bit on the pessimistic side going into training camp. With Terrell Brandon coming off a career year, and the Cavaliers still sporting their sloth–like offensive mentality, it didn't look as though the pick made sense.

That was until The Trade.

Fratello showed his belief in Knight immediately. With complaints from both the fans and the front office for lack of excitement, Fratello shipped Brandon and power forward Tyrone Hill to Milwaukee in a three way deal that brought Shawn Kemp to town.

To go with that, Fratello brought in swingman Wesley Person via trade, and rookies Derek Anderson and 7–foot–3 breakthrough Zydraunas Ilgauskas, the center/giant who sat out last year with an injury after the Cavs used a first round selection on him.

Although the Cavaliers find themselves at 6–6, and in the midst of a dogfight in the Central Division, they have yet to blend together as a team. Only time will tell what this team of five new starters can, and will, do. Inconsistency is the only facet of the game that can hold the sky blue, orange, and black down.

One night, they'll drop a home game to Orlando in overtime after losing a 20–point lead in the fourth quarter. Another night, they'll go on the road and dispose of the Minnesota Timberwolves by 23, and the Bulls at home by 21. Go figure.

Knight has been the center of attention since his arrival. Despite being dubbed as "too small for the NBA" all his life, the 5–foot–10 (it's a stretch) catalyst of the Cleveland offense is challenging for Rookie of the Year honors.

I know, I know. Tim Duncan is putting up some huge numbers down in San Antonio, but consider this. Knight is tops in the NBA in steals with a dash over three a game. He is fifth in the league in assists with 8.8 a night, while coming in sixth among point guards in the assist/turnover ratio category. Those numbers easily outdo any other rookie.

Give the man a break, he's a munchkin.

• I'll go out on a limb and say that the Los Angeles Lakers are having a pretty decent year. Not even I could have prognosticated an 11–0 start, especially with the schedule they had to endure.

If the Lake Show is going to show up in the record books for the best start to an NBA season, they certainly won't have to play their best basketball to come up with the illustrious 16–0 mark. In the next five games, the Shaq–less Lakers take on five teams with a combined record of 19–39.

One of the opponents is Miami, who, without their own superstar, Alonzo Mourning, has been carrying on quite well without the Georgetown alum, jumping out to a solid 8–4 record.

Remember Isaac Austin, the guy who came out of nowhere and won the Sixth Man Award last year?

The same guy that I was bashing a few weeks ago?

Well, he played kind of well against Toronto on Saturday. He had to settle for a 33–point, 22–rebound performance.

Not too shabby for a night's work.

In their quest for 16, the Lakers also have to "deal with" going to Denver, Toronto, and Boston, and also a home date with Philadelphia. Shouldn't be much of a problem.

What would be better than a Celtic triumph to break the streak? With that, we could inch towards basketball's version of a rapper–like East Coast–West Coast rivalry, much like the one we had in the Bird/Magic days...hmmmmm.

• From the campus of Brigham Young University have come some athletes with storied careers. Some have moved onto bigger and better things. Some have not.

If you're a Cougar, you either get respect or you don't.

If you're in the NFL as a Cougar, Steve Young, Jim

Turn to NBA, page 7

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 59 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Wednesday, November 26, 1997

All mixed up at Mullins

311 brought their unique stylings to the Mullins Center, but it wasn't necessarily a great show. Check out the review (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Not so foolish games

The Massachusetts basketball team heads to the Home of Jewel to participate in the Great Alaska Shootout starting tonight (see Sports, page 8).

WORLD

Baghdad to U.S.: Drop 'hostile policy'

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq warned the United States yesterday to drop its "hostile policy" toward Saddam Hussein if it hopes to resolve the standoff over U.N. inspections of presidential palaces. While officials in Baghdad and Washington differed over whether U.N. weapons inspectors had the right to search Saddam's many palaces, the teams completed their fourth day of searches at 12 industrial, agricultural and oil sites yesterday, the Iraqi News Agency reported.

One team flew in a helicopter over a site outside the capital, the agency said, looking for suspicious activity on the ground. In the past, inspectors have accused the Iraqis of sneaking materials out the back door as inspectors entered a site.

The U.N. team says it has not tried to visit any of the sensitive areas, including the palaces — some of which include orchards, farms and warehouses — where the inspectors believe Saddam is hiding weapons, chemicals and documents.

Iraq has not interfered with the inspections, which resumed Saturday after a three–week break caused by Saddam's decision Oct. 29 to expel American members of the team.

NATION

Mob tied to boost in health club's stock

NEW YORK (AP) — Reputed mobsters were charged yesterday with taking part in a scheme by executives of an Arizona health–club chain to manipulate the company's stock.

The arrests of 18 individuals, with a 19th expected to surrender later in the day, were announced at a news conference where authorities warned the securities industry to be wary of mob influence.

"The mob has never seen a market that they didn't want to manipulate," said James Kallstrom, assistant director of the FBI's New York City office.

Members of the Genovese and Bonanno crime families infiltrated HealthTech International Inc., a Mesa, Ariz., owner of health and fitness centers, said U.S. Attorney Mary Jo White.

Some of the defendants made more than $1.3 million in illicit profits through a scheme in which the company's assets and stock price were artificially inflated, White said.

The indictment alleged that the mob was brought in to raise pressure on stockbrokers to push the value of the stock up. HealthTech was a penny stock whose shares traded over the counter. Trading in the company's stock was suspended Nov. 14. Gordon Hall, chairman and chief executive officer, and Joe Kinkhorn, formerly the company's senior vice president and president of its medical operations division, were among those charged in a racketeering indictment that could bring the defendants up to 40 years in prison.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 46	HIGH: 41	HIGH: 37
LOW: 33	LOW: 20	LOW: 18

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 6
Comics.....page 7
Crossword .....page 7
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 6
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 8

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegion

Campaign to Ban Landmines makes stop at Student Union

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

KEN MC DONALD / COLLEGIAN

Senior history major Tom Gryta signs a protest letter that will be mailed to President Clinton, as Richard Trenholm, a world federalist, looks on.

The U.S. Campaign to Ban Landmines made the University of Massachusetts Student Union one of its final stops on its national tour yesterday.

Campaign members brought their educational materials to campus to encourage UMass students and community members to support a world–wide ban on landmines.

Loung Ung, the public relations director for the Campaign, said landmines kill 26,000 people worldwide each year. She also pointed out that landmines remain dangerous for decades after they are planted.

"Landmines never end. We are still digging up landmines from World War II," Ung said. "Refugees can't resettle in their homelands because the mines are still active."

Ung asked students to send postcards to President Bill Clinton urging him to join in signing the Landmines Treaty to ban all landmines, which is scheduled to be ratified by 115 countries next week in Ottawa, Canada.

The U.S. administration has said it will not sign the treaty as it is written and has asked for a 9–year delay in implementation of the treaty.

Ung said that U.S. support of the treaty would cause other countries to sign on as well.

"The United States has a lot of power," Ung said. "If the U.S. signs the treaty, so will 60 other countries."

Ung also said that the U.S. military does not need to use landmines, refuting one of the arguments the administration has used in asking for a delayed implementation of the ban.

"He [Clinton] said we need landmines for military utilities," Ung said. "We are the strongest military in the world. We have the capacity."

Activists like Ung hope that a comprehensive ban will stop landmines from

Turn to CAMPAIGN, page 2

Teamsters' Carey charged in campaign money scheme

By Kevin Galvin
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A federally appointed board filed internal union charges against Teamsters President Ron Carey yesterday just hours after he announced he was taking a leave of absence. The charges brought by the Independent Review Board followed an earlier decision by a court–appointed election officer to disqualify Carey from a rerun election against James P. Hoffa. The election officer found that Carey participated in a scheme that used $885,000 from the union treasury to bolster his campaign. Carey has denied the charges.

The review board's decision was announced late yesterday afternoon, but the report was not immediately available. The board, which consists of two former federal judges and a labor lawyer, oversees the ongoing government effort to fight corruption in the Teamsters union.

Earlier in the day, Carey asked the union's general board for a leave of absence "in the best interest of the membership and the reform movement." The move was a new low for labor reformers as their champion left under a cloud, but it cleared the way for a candidate to step forward to challenge James P. Hoffa.

Carey denied any wrongdoing in a letter to the union's general board. And he said anew that he would appeal the decision of a court–appointed monitor who barred him from the rerun.

While Carey challenged the integrity of a key witness against him, former campaign manager Jere Nash, he acknowledged that it would hurt his supporters if he stayed on the job while pursuing an appeal that few believe he can win.

"It is a sad day when the word of a convicted criminal prevails over the word of a man who has stood for integrity all his life," Carey said. "In spite of this injustice, I believe it in the best interest of the membership and the reform movement that I remove myself from IBT decision making while I fight my appeal." Carey's decision came one day after a federal auditor was named to oversee the finances of the 1.4–million–member

Turn to CAREY, page 2

KEN MC DONALD / COLLEGIAN

Give me some steam

John Langlitz, an employee of Palmer Paving, operates a steam–roller. The tar is being laid down in order to have a staging sight for a large crane which will be disassembling some of Old Chapel in the near future.

Bosnian Serb vote polarized

By Katarina Kratovac
Associated Press

PALE, Bosnia–Herzegovina — Latest results from the Bosnian Serbs' election indicated yesterday that the first place showing by supporters of war crimes suspect Radovan Karadzic is not enough for them to form a majority government.

Partial and unofficial results released by the Bosnian Serb electoral commission showed the pro–Karadzic Serb Democratic Party coming in first with 33 percent of the vote and its potential allies, the ultranationalist Radicals, in third place with 19 percent.

But their thin majority was almost certain to be diluted by the Muslim votes cast outside Serb–ruled territory, which have yet to be counted. The 150,000–300,000 Muslim refugees would be unlikely to support the Serb parties that led the campaign to purge the territory of other ethnic groups.

Muslims were expected to vote for the Muslim–led Party for Democratic Action, or for parties that could join forces with Karadzic's chief rival, President Biljana Plavsic. According to the results released yesterday, her Serb National Alliance garnered 20 percent of the vote, and the Socialists — potential Plavsic allies — came in fourth with 12 percent.

The remaining votes counted so far went to smaller parties. Seats in the 83–member parliament will be allocated according to vote totals.

"No party will have an absolute majority, nor will any coalition," predicted Zivko Radisic, president of the Socialists. Any final result still will need to be certified by the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, which supervised the elections.

Acknowledging that the pro–Plavsic party had become a force to reckon with since its birth only a few months ago, Serb Democratic Party leader Aleksa Buha said his party had scored only a "relative victory," the Bosnian Serb news agency SRNA reported. Karadzic's chief aide, Momcilo Krajisnik, said in an interview that he feared fraud among Muslims who cast ballots in the Muslim–Croat federation.

The conflict between Plavsic and Karadzic burst into the open this summer, leading to violent clashes between the two sides. Plavsic is supported by the West because she is more willing to respect the Dayton peace accords, which envision a united Bosnia composed of a Serb sub–state and a Muslim–Croat federation that allows freedom of movement for all ethnic groups.

The United States and its allies hope that Karadzic will weaken as Plavsic gains in stature, making it easier to bring the former Bosnian Serb leader to trial for his alleged war crimes.

Though forced out as leader after being indicted by a U.N. tribunal, Karadzic continues to wield power behind the scenes. Plavsic has accused Karadzic and his allies of corruption. The hard–line camp says she has weakened the Bosnian Serbs by cooperating with international officials.

Vlado Vrkes, another ruling party leader, said the elections "confirmed the strength of the [Serb Democratic Party] as the leading political party. The international community must understand that we intend to stay united."

KEN MC DONALD / COLLEGIAN

She's got a ticket to ride

Shari Rosenthal, a senior sports management major, waits for her transportation home as a bus waits off in the distance. Haigis Mall will be crowded today with many college students taking the bus home for the break.

Pentagon warns of chemical & biological weapon growth

By Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More than 25 nations have or may be developing nuclear, biological and chemical weapons and ways to deliver them, Defense Secretary William Cohen said yesterday, calling the threat "neither far–fetched nor far off."

"The front lines are no longer overseas," said Cohen, releasing a report that said Americans could fall victim to such an attack, because criminal organizations and cults — as well as nation–states — could deploy such weapons.

These weapons are "the poor man's atomic bomb — cheaper, easier to produce and extremely deadly," the defense secretary said. Cohen said that while headlines have been full of the United Nations' struggle to ferret out such weapons of mass destruction held by Saddam Hussein, "the threat is not limited to Iraq." Even so, the defense secretary said, Saddam apparently has been able to produce enough deadly toxin "to kill every man, woman and child on the face of the earth."

The report focused on Middle East and North African nations and singled out Iran, Iraq, Libya and Syria as trouble spots. They "are aggressively seeking NBC weapons and increased missile capabilities" and constitute "the most pressing threats" to stability in the region, the study said.

The Pentagon declined to list all 25 nations mentioned in the report, calling the information classified.

But it did specify other nations such as North Korea, China, India, Pakistan and Russia, whose programs may pose a threat to the United States.

On a positive note, the report welcomed "a dramatic reduction in the threat from the countries of the former Soviet Union." Six nations "that might have become nuclear powers — Ukraine, Kazakstan, Belarus, North Korea, South Africa and Iraq — have been turned away from that path," it said.

The study, the second such Pentagon report on the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, largely repeats last year's report. But it warns that if a conflict again breaks out in the Persian Gulf, some form of the weapons is likely to be used, particularly since several nations there have used them in the past.

The new report includes a section on Syria for the first time. It notes Syria's growing SCUD supplies, many received from Iran and North Korea, its ability to produce chemical weapons and its infrastructure

Turn to WEAPON, page 2

Mandela accused of stabbing youth

By Pat Reber
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — One of Winnie Madikizela-Mandela's former bodyguards insisted yesterday he saw her stab a young activist who was later found dead. But in one of many contradictions at the Truth Commission hearing on President Nelson Mandela's ex-wife, Katiza Cebekhulu conceded he couldn't see the body very well and only surmised later it must have been the slain youth.

These hearings could affect the political future of the woman once known as "the mother of the nation."

The commission is holding the week-long hearing on Madikizela-Mandela and her notorious bodyguards as part of its investigation of apartheid-era human rights abuses. While it lacks power to press criminal charges, the commission can hand over evidence to police for investigation.

Madikizela-Mandela, 63, has survived a turbulent public and personal life to retain her status as a leading figure in the governing African National Congress. She is running for deputy president of the party at next month's national conference, and could make a bid for deputy president if the ANC wins the next national election in 1999.

Cebekhulu's testimony yesterday differed from his previous accounts of 14-year-old Stompie Seipei's death, and also varied from descriptions given by others who were in Madikizela-Mandela's house on the day of the 1988 slaying.

In the most dramatic moment so far at the hearing, Cebekhulu repeated an allegation published in a book that he saw Mandela's ex-wife plunge a shiny object into a body.

"I saw her killing Stompie," he said, pointing at Madikizela-Mandela, who gazed back sternly. "I witnessed Stompie's death. It took place in Winnie's house."

In the book "Katiza's Journey," by journalist Fred Bridgland, Cebekhulu said he saw Seipei's body carried out and watched Madikizela-Mandela stab it.

But yesterday, he said he was unable to clearly see the body or tell if it was Seipei, who had been accused of being a police informant. Cebekhulu said he figured out later the body must have been Seipei's.

Mandela was imprisoned at the time of the December 1988 slaying; the couple separated in 1992 and divorced last year. The 1988 incident led to Madikizela-Mandela's 1991 conviction on charges of kidnapping and being an accessory to assault.

Madikizela-Mandela's confident, smiling demeanor at the start of the hearings Monday shifted to a pensive, subdued manner yesterday. Cebekhulu's account yesterday differed from earlier testimony by Xoliswa Falati, a former ally of Madikizela-Mandela, and Pelo Mekgwe, one of three other young men who were brought to Madikizela-Mandela's house with Seipei and beaten.

Cebekhulu said he handed Madikizela-Mandela a whip that she used to beat the four, while both Falati and Mekgwe said Madikizela-Mandela only used her hands or fists before leaving the room. Her bodyguards then continued the assault, they said. Nevertheless, the testimony added to the litany of accusations that Madikizela-Mandela and her bodyguards, known as the Mandela United Football Club, carried out a reign of terror in the name of political solidarity in the Soweto black township a decade ago. Madikizela-Mandela and Falati were both convicted at the 1991 trial and received six-year prison sentences. Madikizela-Mandela eventually paid a $3,200 fine on appeal, while Falati had her sentence reduced to two years in prison, which she served. Falati said yesterday she sought help from Madikizela-Mandela in 1988 because she was told that young men staying at a Methodist church home in Soweto were being sexually abused.

■ weapon

continued from page 1

capable of supporting a biological warfare program. Asked why more information about Israel's purported nuclear program was not included in the report, Cohen said the study was geared toward those nations who threaten America, and Israel does not pose such a threat.

The report does, however, state that Syria has vigorously pursued development of chemical and biological weapons, as well as ballistic missiles, "as a means to counter what it perceives as Israel's superior conventional forces and presumed possession of nuclear weapons."

The Pentagon has had to beef up its detection, decontamination and emergency response equipment to respond to a potential attack by chemical and biological weapons. Cohen has requested $1 billion to pay for the improvements.

■ campaign

continued from page 1

being planted and stockpiled.

The United Nations has estimated that two million landmines are currently planted each year, while only 100,000 are removed.

Ginny Schneider, founder of the Alliance for Conventional Weapons Disarmament in Northampton, coordinated with the Campaign to bring the tour to the Pioneer Valley.

Schneider arranged to have anti–mine postcards, designed by Hadley resident Glenn Ruga, available for students to sign and mail to Clinton.

Over 300 people signed the cards, which were available in the Student Union, Schneider said.

"It went very well," Schneider said. "We got a lot of cards signed and had an opportunity to educate people, some of whom didn't even know what landmines are."

Several UMass students from the Cambodian Students' Association also worked with the Campaign to encourage people to sign the cards.

Heap Sin, a senior mathematics major, said he volunteered to work with the Campaign because of the impact of landmines on his home country.

"I asked people to sign the petition because of the victims of these landmines in my country, Cambodia," Sin said. "The U.N. estimates that seven million landmines still exist in Cambodia. Many people, including children, women and elderly, are the victims of these mines. They get blown up for just going to a river for a drink or to the woods for some vegetables for dinner."

Sin was hopeful that the postcards would have an impact on U.S. policy.

"I think that if many of us do it, it will have a big impact on Congress and in the White House," Sin said.

The Campaign traveled to Northampton later in the afternoon. Several speakers, including Ariel Brugger, a landmines activist from New Hampshire, and Representative James P. McGovern, were scheduled to talk about the treaty.

Schneider also invited anyone interested to attend a briefing on the treaty by Mark Sternman, aide to Senator John Kerry. Sternman will be at the American Friend Service Commission office, 140 Pine Street, Northampton on Mon., Dec. 1 at 11 a.m.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
Nov. 22
A minor two–vehicle accident was reported on Massachusetts Ave.
Nov. 23
A vehicle was forced off the roadway on Massachusetts Ave. The offending vehicle fled.
Nov. 24
Dominic D. Roberson, 21, 14 Thompson Dr., Randolph, was arrested on Commonwealth Ave. for operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol, second offense, and failure to use care in stopping.

Annoying Behavior
Nov. 21
An individual reported that a vehicle almost hit her on Orchard Hill Drive. The operator was spoken to.
Nov. 22
Fireworks were reported in Mary Lyon Residence Hall.
Nov. 23
Residential staff was assisted with an unruly group in Cashin Residence Hall.
Nov. 25
An intoxicated individual was reported to be bothering residents in John Adams Hall.

Assault and Battery
Nov. 25
An individual reported being punched in the head in Hamlin Hall. A showcase hearing will be sought through the court.

Disturbance
Nov. 22
A fight was reported in progress on the third floor of Brooks Residence Hall.
An earlier fight resumed outside of Brooks Residence Hall.
A large fight was reported in progress on Butterfield Terrace. Amherst police were notified.
Nov. 25
A fight in progress was resolved in Hamlin Residence Hall by staff and police.
A large fight in the lobby of Patterson Residence Hall was dispersed.
A verbal altercation took place on Infirmary Way.
A verbal altercation was resolved on the Southwest Mall.
Nov. 25
Staff requested Police assistance in Baker Hall.

Drug Law Offenses
Nov. 21
Richard L. Fater, 19, 129 Ferry St., Marshfield, was arrested in Cance Hall for possession of a Class D substance.
Michael F. Riehle, 18, 11 Jaime Ct., Mt. Tabor, New Jersey, was arrested in Cance Hall for possession of a Class D subsfance.

Family Offenses, Domestics
Nov. 22
Two individuals were reported fighting near Robsham Visitors Center on Massachusetts Ave.
Nov. 23
Martin F. Jones, 28, 30 Hermitage Dr., Springfield, was arrested at the DuBois Library for violation of an abuse prevention order.

Larceny
Nov. 22
A lounge chair was stolen from Cashin Residence Hall.
Initials were spraypainted on Worcester Dining Common.
Nov. 24
Investigation of a possible larceny took place in Coolidge Residence Hall
An individual reported a purse stolen from the Mullins Center.

Traffic Stop
Nov. 22
Samuel J. O'Connor, 17, 23 Reservation Rd., Easthampton, was arrested on Massachusetts Ave. for operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.
Casey K. Laushway, 19, 41 Birchland Ave., East Longmeadow, was arrested for underage possession of alcohol, operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license, and trespassing.

Vandalism
Nov. 21
Damage was done to a vehicle in Lot 32 on Massachusetts Ave.
Nov. 23
A window was smashed in Patterson Residence Hall.
A windshield was smashed on a vehicle in Lot 50 on John Adams Rd.
Lights were smashed in a hallway and bathroom of Pierpont Hall.
A window was smashed in a vehicle in Lot 32 on Massachusetts Ave.
A window was broken in Morrill Greenhouse.
Graffiti was reported to be directed towards staff in an elevator and on a wall in Kennedy Hall.
Damage was done to a vehicle in Lot 49 on Van Meter Rd.
Damage was done to a vehicle in Lot 71 on Massachusetts Ave.
Nov. 24
A windshield was smashed on a vehicle in Lot 32 on Massachusetts Ave.
Nov. 25
Damage was done to a vehicle in Lot 49 on Windmill Ln.
A window was broken in Thoreau Hall.

■ Carey

continued from page 1

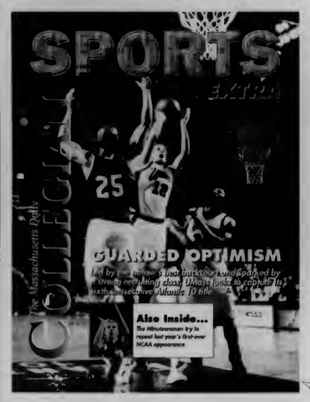
International Brotherhood of Teamsters. Under the union's constitution,

Secretary-Treasurer Tom Sever will run the union during what Carey said would be a temporary, unpaid leave.

"This is obviously a moment of sadness for the Teamsters' image, that another Teamsters president leaves in disgrace," said Hoffa campaign spokesman Richard Leebove. "But for the 1.4-million-members, this is liberation day from the corruption... of Ron Carey."

Carey remains popular with the union's reform wing despite the federal monitor's finding against him because, his backers say, he was successful in opening up a notoriously corrupt union to its members.

Three Teamsters presidents, including Hoffa's father Jimmy, have gone to jail, and a third died under indictment. The federal government stepped in in 1989 because, it alleged, organized crime had become a pervasive influence in the union.



But his decision to pursue an appeal had frustrated the reformers' efforts to put forth a new challenger to Hoffa.

"Today's announcement will not stop the reform train," said Ken Paff, director of Teamsters for a Democratic Union, a 22-year-old reform caucus which convened 600 activists in Cleveland over the weekend. "The TDU convention showed that the reform movement is united, commited and ready to win the upcoming election for the Teamsters president."

Three of Carey's former campaign aides, including Nash, have pleaded guilty to swapping Teamsters donations for contributions to Carey's coffers, and several witnesses have said that Carey was aware of their scheme.

A federal grand jury investigation is continuing, as is an inquiry by investigators for the court-appointed Independent Review Board.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Sponsored by: PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S

UMass basketball

COMING DEC 2ND!

- Delivered FREE to all on-campus mailboxes
- Available at select on-campus locations
- Available at all home games

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
113 Campus Center,
University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003
Phone: (413) 545-3500 • Fax: (413) 545-1592

Earning 10 an hour+ Incentives while in School.
COLLEGE STUDENTS
Now That's Smart...
FULL & PART TIME
FLEXIBLE SCHEDULES AVAILABLE
Immediate Openings
Whether you want a challenge that fits around your hectic schedule or a chance to save for your tuition, C&S is the ideal place for you. You won't need to dress up. And you don't need experience. All you have to do is to be smart enough to realize the importance of reliability and hard work.
Come join one of the Warehouse Selection teams at the nation's fastest growing wholesale food distributor. You'll earn $10 an hour from day one. Plus great benefits (for full time employment), if you're quality. What's more, you might even have a little fun.
Please apply in person Monday-Friday, 8am-4pm or Wednesday till 7pm, at:
Employment Center
C&S WHOLESALE GROCERS, INC.
142 Elm Street
Just off Route 91
Exit 21, Hatfield, MA
(413)247-5769.
APPLY TODAY EARN TOMORROW!
C&S is an Equal Opportunity Employer and does not discriminate on the basis of age, gender or any other protected category in accordance with applicable law.

SPRING BREAK
BEST PARTIES
CANCUN JAMAICA FLORIDA
BEST PRICE
Call today! Space is limited
1 800 648-4849
STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES
On campus call Giancarlo Grieco @413-546-3147

NOW HIRING
ALL SHIFTS
COMPETITIVE WAGES
• Flexible schedule around classes
• Monday, Wednesday, Friday Shifts
• Tuesday, Thursday Shifts
BURGER KING
• Discounted Meals
• Enjoyable Work Atmosphere
• Advancement Opportunities
Join the Burger King® Team Today!
You will be working for people who really care about you as an individual.
Apply Within
353 Russell Street (Route 9) • Hadley, MA

Campus Perspectives

What are you thankful for?

Compiled by Sarah J. Kimmel • Photos by Thang Vo

"I'm thankful that I have a family to go home to this Thanksgiving."
Tom Vezina
junior/resource economics
Amherst

"I'm thankful that the semester ends in three weeks."
Jeanette Sergent
sophomore/communication and psychology
Southwest

"I'm thankful that all my Gen–Eds are done."
Carla Costa
sophomore/journalism
Central

"I'm thankful that I have friends to welcome me into their home this year because I'm not able to go home to my close family."
Sarah Yadeta
sophomore/STPEC
Orchard Hill

"I give thanks for my family."
Mike Smith
senior/exercise science
Southwest

"Pete's Wicked Winter Brew"
Sean Maloney
freshman/pre–communication
Southwest

Accused Unabomber rejects prosecution's mental testing

By Richard Cole
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Theodore Kaczynski has turned aside another effort by prosecutors to get a reading on his mental health, a prosecutor said yesterday.

Last week, U.S. District Judge Garland Burrell Jr. ordered the defense to ask Kaczynski again to undergo at least limited neurological examinations for prosecutors aimed at detecting any brain damage.

On Monday, the prosecution gave the defense a list of tests the government wants to perform on Kaczynski. Prosecutor Robert Cleary told Burrell this morning that Kaczynski had rejected all five proposals.

Some testing may yet be possible, but defense lawyers want more specifics before discussing the subject with Kaczynski again, Cleary said.

Burrell said today that he would consider what steps to take next.

At one point during the discussion, Kaczynski showed a flash of anger, throwing a pen across the defense table, then spoke in a heated whisper to defense lawyer Judy Clarke.

The discussion was a replay of a hearing Friday on the testing issue, which Kaczynski had deliberately skipped.

Kaczynski's lawyers have suggested they want to pursue a mental health defense but say their client refuses to submit to prosecution testing.

Defense lawyers say his refusal is grounded in a belief that there's nothing wrong with him, a position which they say is symptomatic of schizophrenia. Prosecutors say he has simply refused to cooperate.

Kaczynski, the 55-year-old math professor turned hermit, is accused of four bombings that killed two Sacramento men and injured two others. He has pleaded innocent to all charges, including a third fatality in a New Jersey bombing that is the subject of a later trial.

Jury selection resumed this morning with the questioning of a Sacramento-area rice farmer who said he was a strong supporter of the death penalty. The man added, however, that the O.J. Simpson murder trial had soured him on the legal system.

By today, a jury pool of 36 members has been chosen. At least 64 candidates will be selected before the field is narrowed to 12 jurors and six alternates.

One of the most dramatic moments of the trial so far came Monday, when a juror who knew little of the case appeared shocked when told Kaczynski was accused of building and mailing bombs that killed two people.

"Did you do that?" she gasped, looking directly at Kaczynski. The defendant stared back at her but showed no reaction.

The woman had just been asked by Clarke how she would feel about imposing the death penalty on a person who mailed bombs with the intent of killing the recipients.

The woman turned to Clarke and repeated her inquiry, saying: "Is that what he's done?"

The woman, who said she purposely insulates herself from the news, stayed in the jury pool. Another was dismissed because she taught at a school where the widow of victim Gilbert Murray did her student teaching.

In a poignant moment, the teacher said a colleague who lived across the street from Murrays had been close to Murray's wife — until the bombing.

"Then they put bars up on the windows of her home," the woman said. "She doesn't see her much anymore."

Meanwhile, Kaczynski's brother headed to California in hopes of saving his brother's life.

~ SPORTS ~

■ women's hoop

continued from page 8

Dijulia.

Over the next eight minutes the Minutewomen scored 19 points to Hartford's two, in a run keyed by forwards Yolanda Rayside and Alison MacFarland. The Hawks could not hit anything, ending the first half with a score of 32–15.

UMass kept things up in the second half, opening with a 10–3 run. The energized Minutewomen kept it together throughout the remainder of the game, holding the Hawks to just four field goals in the second half.

With 10:08 left in the game, UMass had its biggest point spread at 31, with a score of 49–18. UMass matched that advantage with the final score.

Kraft had a scare with 8:21 to go in the game, when she collided with Humbert, knocking her left knee. Kraft had surgery on the knee a year ago to remove torn cartilage, but she only suffered some swelling from the accident.

"It gave me more of a scare than it hurt," Kraft said. "It's going to be a little stiff for a few days, but I think I'll bounce back."

Kelly Van Huisen, UMass' usual top–scorer, was quiet, but Rayside and Kraft stepped up in her place. Rayside had a career–high 14 points, on 7–of–11 shooting. She added five rebounds and a steal.

"I've been working on [my offense]," Rayside said. "I think I worked at it to the point where it came without me thinking about it."

"She's been working hard," O'Brien said. "And every day she gets a little better."

Kraft also added power to the post with 13 points and a team–high 10 rebounds, matching her career high.

■ hockey

continued from page 8

freshman Jean Francois Caudron stood there unguarded, waiting to poke it in.

However UMass controlled the first–period play, creating a number of scoring chances. Just over a minute into the second period, Blanchard — moving in on Phillips — was rear ended into the net by a Catamount defenseman. Blanchard took out Phillips and the puck was carried into the net to even the game.

Ten minutes later, Blanchard notched his second goal of the night when senior co–captain Brad Norton hit him in stride with a picture–perfect two–line pass. Blanchard moved in and beat Phillips with a wrist shot, glove side.

UMass had waited all season long for the real Jeff Blanchard to show up. After showing a world of potential with five goals in his freshman campaign, Blanchard — the nephew of Hall–of–Famer Bobby Orr — has been slow to regain the momentum that proved he was one of UMass' pure goal scorers. Blanchard had only one goal heading into Tuesday's game.

However, his two–goal resurgence wasn't enough to erase the Minutemen's two–game skid.

"He was an old nemesis of mine in the junior ranks, and he scored 12 or so goals against me," Phillips said. "But hey, as long as we scored more goals than him, then I feel real good about this game."

Vermont (2–6–2) — in the midst of its worst season in years — posted just its second win to erase a six–game winless streak. However, the Catamounts have had nothing but success against the Minutemen over the years: In fact, UMass hasn't topped Vermont since taking a 4–3 decision in 1971. This streak includes the heartbreaking 4–3 loss at the hands of Vermont in 1995. But according to Mallen, this defeat was more painful.

"Two years ago they were a top four team, and losing that game was a tough one to take," Mallen said. "But this was a winnable game for us, and at the moment, this is a hell of a lot more distressing."

■ hockey side

continued from page 8

his team needs to find the way to victory, not defeat.

"After killing Tim [Lovell]'s penalty, I really thought we put ourselves in a good position to win," Mallen said. "But all three groups, defense, offense and goaltending, have to come together at the same time. We have to find a way to win, not to lose.

"In 20 years of coaching, I know that we have a good team here. But these guys have to show up, night in and night out. We got to put the finishing touches on how to win."

Those finishing touches on how to win will have to be learned without Lovell. Due to collegiate rules and regulations, his slashing major and game misconduct will force him out of UMass' next game against Northeastern.

"The fact of the matter is that teams are going after him," Mallen said. "He needs to defend himself even more than before, but that's not the way to do it, and now he's out for the next game."

UVM has had to find a way to win without the services of three All–Americans this season — forwards Eric Perrin and Martin St. Louis, and goaltender Tim Thomas. Up to this point of the season, the Catamounts have felt the same pain that UMass now feels.

For Catamounts coach Mike Gilligan, his team has had the edge in play in a lot of games this season, and was not able to get that elusive win. Now, he believes the Minutemen can find a way to win, even after this loss.

"UMass had the edge in play most of the way through the game, and after killing that five–minute major, they seemed to feed off of that," Gilligan said. "UMass has been bitten by the same snake we've been bitten by this season. They just need to get past this loss and move on."

The only solace UMass can get out of this game is the fact that this is a non–conference loss. The more important games for the Minutemen lie on the immediate horizon, taking on Northeastern in the next three games, with the first of their two home games this Saturday night (7 p.m.).

■ college hoop

continued from page 8

playing level and the pro paycheck (see also: Jerry Stackhouse, Rasheed Wallace, Stephon Marbury, Marcus Camby, Kevin Garnett and Kobe Bryant, among others).

When players stay for the duration of their careers (LaFrentz) or at least the majority (Jamison, a junior who will likely leave after this year) thereof, it helps promote the game in the eyes of younger players and in the eyes of fans. The college game is vastly different from the NBA, and fans of the lower level can easily be turned off by the supersonic turnover. By maintaining top talent, both by having established players stay in school and blue chippers go to school, the college game thrives.

• Thankful for small guards. Those guys who stand under 6–feet provide some of the most amazing highlight reel footage. The most prominent diminutive player, Eastern Michigan's Earl Boykins, may be small in stature at 5–foot– 5, but he makes up for what he lacks in height with his skills. The kid can flat out play.

Sports Illustrated was dead–on when it did its college basketball preview issue and put some of the spotlight on the vertically challenged point men. And fans in this area are fortunate, because the Atlantic 10 is rich in small guards.

• Thankful that the northern half of the Pac 10 is getting some recognition. Washington coach Bob Bender played for two of the toughest programs in the country when he was in school — Indiana and Duke. Now he's spearheading a revitalization effort in Seattle that has seen a marked upswing in the past few seasons. Todd McCullough, a potential All–American, and a huge one at that, should help UW's rise.

Oregon State has benefitted from increased exposure generated by Corey Benjamin. The sophomore may not garner much more attention in Corvallis, he could be gone at the end of the year (see also: Stackhouse, et al.)

• Thankful that Chris Herren will sit out for a few weeks in order to get his life back in order. It seems young Mr. Herren has a small substance abuse problem.

Can't say it's surprising though. After all, Herren does play at Fresno State.

• Thankful that another year of college basketball has begun.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

LOSE WEIGHT NOW!
You will:
Our products are:
• Doctor Recommended
• 100% Natural
• Guaranteed
• Feel more energy
• Lose up to 30 LBS In 30 days
• Have more willpower
FREE SAMPLES
CALL: (413) 259-1922

PHISH TICKETS
GREAT SEATS AT UNBELIEVABLY LOW PRICES!!
• HARTFORD, NOV 26
• WORCESTER, NOV 28-30
CITY TICKET 1-800-865-8070

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
922 Campus Center
545-1995 Call Today!

• Free Estimates
• Lifetime Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center (On bus route - one mile from UMass)
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880

Asthma Sufferers
You may qualify for FREE Study Related CARE and FREE Study MEDICATIONS for your asthma as part of a research study.
If You Are:
• At least 15 years old
• Have had asthma for at least one year
• Are a non-smoker
You may be eligible to participate
Earn more about your asthma and get receive treatment!
Compensation up to $300.00 will be provided to study participants
Call NOW 413-584-4010

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Thank you for calling, please hold

Seema Gangatirkar

As I write this, I've been on hold on the telephone for about 20 minutes now. Love that. Especially since there is an automated voice which comes on every five or so minutes to tell me that yes, they know I'm still there and that my call is important to them.

I'm glad for the assurance, otherwise I'd feel sorely neglected.

Being placed on hold is one of those trials of the modern-age. While I love and embrace all sorts of gadgets and gizmos which will make my life easier, I'm starting to miss the sound and inefficiency of the human.

With computers, fax machines and modems, it should be easier than ever to get in touch with someone. Or so you'd think.

I've found that technology makes it easier to avoid that human interaction.

For example, take a simple phone call to a government agency. But keep in mind, if you don't have a touch tone phone, you haven't a snowball's chance in hell of ever talking to anyone at all.

So, back to our hypothetical phone call.

The phone hardly rings on the other end before a computer voice squeaks, "Hello, you have reached the Department of Useless Functions."

Following a brief introduction, you will then be presented with a menu of options. You can press one to talk to someone about the situation of excess methane in the air. By pressing two, you can get in touch with someone to discuss the politics of Indonesia. If you choose to go with number three, you will be able to find out more information than you need to know about the mating habits of a hamster. Option four provides a method of complaining. Keep in mind that you may want to complain, but under the new computer-generated menu, it doesn't mean that anyone will necessarily ever hear your complaint.

But anyway, depending on who you are calling, the menu of options can be either very long or very short. If you're very lucky and know the proper extension, you can just skip the gibberish and proceed to the next set of menus.

However, for the most part, you've got to listen to the whole rigmarole. Confusion arises when you can't define your problem exactly. Say you want to know more about hamsters in general, but you don't necessarily want to know about a hamster's sex life. Well, you could go with number three, or you could just press zero for the operator.

A lot of times, this operator is off to lunch. But on the off chance you actually get to speak to the operator, he or she probably will treat you like an idiot, since you obviously couldn't navigate the "user friendly" menu.

At this point, you're probably so aggravated that you'd hang up if you didn't need the information about hamsters too badly. Eventually, you'd get to the right extension, but only after being on hold for a while.

Really, telephones are marvelous inventions. There is so much you can do over the telephone these days — provided you can actually get in touch with anyone at the other end. Disregard for a moment this era of computerized voices and menus. Think for a moment about that person you simply must get in touch with before a certain deadline.

There's a new game going around these days called "telephone tag." Anyone with an answering machine or voice mail can play.

It's very easy: first you call and leave a message. Then the person you called is "it." The game can go on for a couple hours or a couple weeks — that's the beauty of telephone tag. The fun never ends. In fact, I've had entire conversations with people over voice mail. I've developed a personal relationship with an answering machine to the extent that when I actually do get someone on the line, I'm completely baffled.

"Uh, gee, it's great to talk to you, but could I please talk to your voice mail? I'd feel so much more comfortable with that," is my typical reaction if I ever get any of my friends on the phone.

Fun on the telephone doesn't end here.

Remember the days when a salesperson would call you at dinnertime and try to sell you a complete set of Encyclopedia Britannica?

These days, thanks to CD-ROM and the Internet, you don't need encyclopedias anymore. But you also don't have to talk to the salespeople. Because now computers can call you. Yes, now you don't even have to call a computer yourself — it will actually call you. While you're enjoying your traditional Thanksgiving dinner, a computer could call up and try to sell you something you really don't need. There's one advantage to this system: it's much easier to say "no" to a computer than to say it to a real person.

In sum, technology is pretty cool. Given the wonders of the telephone, we actually gather a lot of information in a short time — all from the comfort of our homes. But with advancements in technology, we also lose the human touch. There is comfort inherent in the voice of another human who can, potentially, answer all your questions.

As for me, I'll be spending this Thanksgiving on hold.

Have a happy and safe holiday.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass Amherst MA 01003, or by email to: letters@altvms.oit.umass.edu Letters may be edited for length, clarity, and style.

The Dating Game

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.

I hate dating.

First of all, I don't do it nearly enough to have a freakin' clue. Secondly, I have a crap car (Buick Skyhawk, vintage '84 complete with rust spots and loose belts). And, finally, my luck just doesn't allow for a successful night.

I've had two dates this semester. Some guys out there might be jealous. Some guys out there have two dates tonight.

Before this September it had been three years since I went on my last date, which was really one of my first dates — and it wasn't even really a date. It was the first time I went out in public with my now ex-girlfriend.

We went to McDonald's. I told you I don't have a freakin' clue.

It was after this stupid bonfire pep rally at my high school that we first held hands — on the way home from the Golden Arches. From then on, there was no dating.

We were together. No pressure to pick the right restaurant or say the right things to make conversation. And no worries about a stray belch here and there. That was the life — she even paid every now and then. How 'bout that fellas?

But that life is all behind me now. I'm 20-years-old and I have to learn how to date all over again. Where are we going? What are we doing? Is she going to have fun? Are we going to hook up afterwards?

Ahhhhhhhhhh!

This isn't supposed to be frustrating. I'm supposed to be happy that I tricked some girl into going out with me in the first place, right!? Yeah, well...

I guess I can take solace in the fact that there are thousands of guys on campus who haven't even had the fortune of brushing up against a good–looking girl this semester, let alone had the chance to date two of them. But, they don't feel my pain. They aren't familiar with the pressures, the anxiety of all this.

I'm hoping my utter cluelessness will fade with time, though it seems the older I get, the less I know. I'm hoping that I can make some money and upgrade my "car" status. But I know my luck won't soon be changing.

Alright, my first date this semester was with a girl who I've been friends with for quite a while. She's cute and funny and we get along great. She apparently had been interested in me before and, now that I was single, I figured what the heck.

After hooking up a couple times, she was reluctant to actually go out on a date because we were such good friends.

Whatever.

We went out to Bertucci's one Friday night. Half–way through dinner she tells me she thinks dating's a bad idea. Guess I should have let her pick the restaurant.

Okay, so my next date — a good two months later — looked a little more promising.

This girl is flat–out gorgeous. She's smart and basically too good for me. We were both pretty excited to find that the other was interested in dating, so we went out last Sunday.

So, on the list of "Things To Not Have Happen On A First Date," how high do you think running out of gas ranks?

Yup, my crapbox (the gas gauge doesn't work) sputtered out right on University Drive. She had AAA so we were good, but still... not the best impression to make. Oh yeah, by the way, she was in the middle of telling me how she had just had one of the worst weekends of her life.

Uh, way to go!

All was not lost, we got towed to a gas station and finally made it to dinner. The food was good and the conversation was pleasant and fairly constant. I had a good time. But, while picking up the tab with my credit card (for the first time), I think I forgot to tip the waitress.

But still, stress shouldn't be so prevalent on a damn first date. You need to have fun, enjoy the company and get to know the other person — or at least enough so that you can go out again.

I dropped her off at the dorm, and she said we would go out again.

I guess that's a good thing. I'd like that.

So, dating might not be so bad.

But we're not going to Bertucci's and I'm not driving.

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

American Newspeak

Wayne Grytting

The doublethink of the '90s

History Rewriting 101

One of the common myths of the '90s has been put to rest. Cynics complain that when book publishers are bought out by large corporations, their work is inevitably compromised. Just the opposite was demonstrated by attorney Gary Reback at a conference on Microsoft sponsored by Ralph Nader.

Recently the Gates monolith bought out Funk & Wagnell's Encyclopedia to use for their online Encarta version. Funk & Wagnell's originally had an entry on none other than Bill Gates himself, describing him as a "tough competitor who seems to value winning in a competitive environment over money." A terrible sentence. After the takeover, this same phrase was improved to "known for his corporate contributions and educational initiatives." Obviously a much better version of history. (Seattle P-I, 11/14)

Life in the Fast Lane

The defeat of fast track authority for the President set off warning bells in our leading newspapers. The Wall Street Journal warns that the Democrats have become "a wholly owned subsidiary of the trade unions," bought outright with "cash, pure and simple." Even worse, they warn "what is going on at the AFL-CIO is a takeover by the American Left."

This last remark came as a surprise to the American Left, last seen at a 1991 Anti-Gulf War rally. Meanwhile, the New York Times produced a lasting rebuttal to the "flagrantly false rhetoric" spurred on by "labor's campaign money." Reverting to a killer syllogism, they said, and listen carefully: "But American wages closely mirror American productivity. Trade can not threaten productivity, so it does not threaten the wages of most American workers." Good to see the old carnival shell game still has practitioners. (New York Times 11/13, Wall Street Journal 11/11)

Selling Culture

Want to see dinosaur fossils? A major touring dinosaur exhibit now affords you the opportunity to view not only real fossils but anatomically incorrect replicas made for the movie The Lost World.

All of this is thanks to a growing partnership between public museums and corporate sponsors. Faced with declining public funding, museums are earning praise for the fine job they are doing marketing themselves to major sponsors.

For example, the Smithsonian's 150th anniversary exhibit has displays by Intel, Discover Card, MCI and Trans World Airlines. Business Week reports that "Corporate America has become bolder in turning galleries into an extension of their marketing plans." (Business Week 11/10)

Who's on First?

The transit system in Washington, D.C. has finally solved the problem of high rush-hour fares. Responding to complaints that Washington's high rush-hour fares did not bring better service, assistant general manager Peter Benjamin is reported as responding that the bus service no longer had special "rush-hour" fares. These were now their "regular" fares. And the fares during off peak times were no longer "regular" fares, but the "discount" fares.

The upshot is that bus service customers could not expect better service during rush hours because they were now only paying regular fares. A brilliant solution. (Washington Post 11/13)

Reasons to Buy American

In Oakland, nine bison escaped from the city's zoo. I know you are probably thinking "So what," but you obviously haven't heard the rest of the story.

Before the bison could wreak havoc in the streets of Oakland, clever employees found a way to lure them back. First they tried putting some mouth watering hay in front of them. When that failed they went to a tried and true American product.

Yes, they put slices of Wonderbread in front of the dumbfounded bison and stopped them in their tracks. The bread that builds strong bodies 12 ways proved to be 100 percent more effective than hay in attracting the half ton mammals. What an endorsement. Can't wait to see Langendorf's next ad campaign. (Reuters 11/13)

Special thanks this week to Marie Birnbaum and Tom Langdon. Send in your own examples of cutting edge advances in Newspeak and we'll enter you in the 1999 drawing for an American Newspeak T-shirt!

Wayne Grytting is a syndicated columnist. More American Newspeak can be found on the Internet at http://www.scn.org/newspeak

Letters to the Editor

Advocating caution, change

To the Editor:

A recent letter by A. Bossi railed against "pointless and rude" comments by a Revolutionary Anti–Imperialist League (RAIL) member that conviction and imprisonment for crimes in America falls most heavily upon "oppressed nations" such as the black and Latino subcultures. Mr. Bossi saw no big deal that blacks comprise 13 percent of monthly drug users, yet make up 74 percent of prison inmates convicted of drug charges. (And he wondered if RAIL sources were graffiti from the stalls of a men's room.)

The same day that Mr. Rossi appeared in the Collegian, I noticed other newspaper coverage of a report by the Massachusetts attorney general that "white–collar crime is fueled by the lack of a jail threat." A.G. Scott Harshbarger's report indicated that of every 100 individuals and corporations convicted of white–collar crimes, two–thirds never get jailed. To these people (who often prey upon the elderly), theft and embezzlement seem no more than interest–free loans if they get caught and complete windfalls if they don't. Harshbarger urged jail–time for white–collar criminals to try to reduce the "fraud tax" that costs Massachusetts residents billions of dollars every year.

(White collar criminals are not blacks or Latinos, but are overwhelmingly upper– and middle–class white males, particularly those who steal the most, as I learned in history and sociology classes at UMass.)

Fraud is rampant this time of year. An "Extra" TV exposé reported that charitable–donation fraud will bilk U.S. citizens out of two billion dollars in the November/December holiday season. So check the charities before you give to them, or only go with the bell–ringers and others that have a proven track record.

Life may not be perfect (or "it sucks" to quote Mr. Bossi), but by realistic caution, constructive criticism, and (r)evolutionary change things can get improved. As I wrote these words, a radio newscast said that next year's automobile insurance rates will drop an average of $25, because the A.G.'s office has aggressively been prosecuting insurance fraud.

John Furbish
Amherst

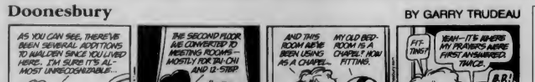
Understanding can stop racism

To the Editor:

I read in interest, and for the most part agreement, the piece about racism written by Terrell M. Hill on the Multiculture page. I agree that America still grows racism like a cancer in its vital organs, perhaps more covert than in years past, but deadly just the same. It is with my sincerest hope that with mutual understanding of cultures and backgrounds that America can stop the spread of this pernicious disease.

I disagree with Hill's view that those of us who were raised by racist parents grow up to be racists ourselves. Before my teens I came to realize that people are people, no matter what their color or ethnic background. I looked into their hearts not at their skin to base my opinions of them.

I feel a little uncomfortable with those who would blame me, because I am white, for their social issues. I do not deserve to be stereotyped any more than anyone of color.



I feel I have broken the chain, broken the perpetuation of unfortunate prejudices. If I leave nothing else to my daughter, it will be a love of mankind. With God's blessing she and I will leave this world a better place than we found it to be.

Yes, Terrell M. Hill, we do need to keep singing, blending our rich voices multicultural history.

Marilyn Cardano Monson

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Write for Ed/Op!

The Collegian Editorial page needs new writers. We want you to write humor, politics, satire, lifestyle, or any of a thousand other styles — let us be as broad as the student body is.

We especially encourage material that relates to current issues at UMass.

Anyone who is interested should submit material by email (letters@altvms.oit.umass.edu), fax (545–1592), or by dropping it off at the Collegian offices for Dan Bodah.

Editorials should be 500–700 words long and should include a phone number so we can call you back.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor

Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Sugar Ray and 311 played a decent show at Mullins Center

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

Sugar Ray tried to "Fly" Monday night at the Mullins Center, riding the success of their debut album.

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

First of all it might be that the William D. Mullins Center has the worst sound system in the Northeast, and although that should be beside the point, it sounded like lead vocalist Nick Hexum was singing into a tin cup. The acoustics were so terrible that by the time most of the guitar reached the audience it sounded like indistinguishable noise.

Now for the bands. Sugar Ray did an admirable job opening up, and although Supercat wasn't present for "Fly" it didn't stop the crowd from getting into it. Lead singer Mark McGrath mugged and danced accordingly and prompted the crowd to shake its "thang." Despite being plagued by the terrible sound system beast Sugar Ray set the tone for the night.

311 opened up with "Transistor," the title track of their new LP. After that they proceeded to plow through a set comprised of an equal balance of songs from all four of their albums. It was nice to see that 311 didn't forgo the songs that helped them rise to the top in favor of their hits. Not that they ignored their hits by any means. Songs like "Feel So Good" off of Music and "Lucky" off of Grassroots were two highlights of the set.

The biggest problem with 311's set was that they seem to be struggling with stardom. 311's rise to the top was meteoric and it doesn't seem that they are really prepared for stadium size shows. For one, the light show going on in the background was needless grandeur. The giant disco balls and the psychedelic backdrops, as well as two screens that descended upon the stage during certain songs, seemed better fit for Spinal Tap or Kiss.

While bassist P–Nut danced around the stage like a demented mannequin, it seemed that he was the only one who knew how to properly utilize all the space provided. While lead singer Hexum tried to reach out to the fans, the banter was mostly reduced to chastising the crowd for throwing shoes on stage (then again can you blame him?) and asking whether or not the crowd was having a good time. Esse Martinez, the other lead vocalist, looked a lot more comfortable when he was behind the turntables: he slinked around the drum kit as if he didn't know how to properly interact with the throngs of fans screaming for them.

Finally, the drum solo and Hexum throwing his discarded t–shirt into the crowd were as necessary as air conditioning in the North Pole.

Then again, perhaps 311 was just responding to the needs of the crowd. The crowd loved it every time Martinez dipped his knees in dance or Hexum stripped off another layer of clothing. The crowd also danced with abandon, never letting up, even for the slower songs. It did, however, feel like Hexum was less then enamored with the crowd as he glared at them menacingly a couple of times and seemed truly distressed that they did not know who HR from the Bad Brains was. Either way, 311 needs to come to terms with their stardom.

Despite the above, the songs were good. Playing a decent mix of all of their albums, they managed to serve up a nice representation of all of their sound styles. Hits like "Jack O' Lantern Weather," "All Mixed Up," "Beautiful Disaster" had the fans dancing like it was the end of the world. The band was crisp and tight and seemed to benefit from the years of non–stop touring. 311 covered the pro–marijuana song "Where's the Herb" by HR of the Bad Brains, which was met with a welcome response by the crowd. "Unity" off of the Music album was a great representation of 311's ability to bring together people from all musical scenes, and was one of the highlights of the show. The encore of classics "Do You Right" and "F—K the Bulls—t, It's Time To Throw Down" revitalized the crowd for one last opportunity to dance.

There is no doubt that 311 are trying to cope with their fame, but they have fun on stage and try to promote an active, enjoyable show. Then again, their forays into arena– rock have them biting off Spinal Tap and Kiss and not looking very good in the process.

Finally, when one takes into consideration that 311 played nearly an identical set the last time they played the Mullins Center you wonder if they're simply doing what

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

Reluctant superstars 311 returned once again to the Mullins Center to dazzle their audience with their funk.

Verve, Blue Note issue holiday releases

In this expanded Holiday edition of Jazz/Blues Weekly, I'll be looking at a number of new releases and re–issues by two of jazz's hugest labels: Verve and Blue Note.

Saxman Booker Ervin, trumpeter Freddie Hubbard, and trombonist Bennie Green are three of Blue Note's recent artists with '60s and '50s releases re–issued under B.N.'s "Connoisseur Series," which specializes in mostly rare hard– bop recordings.

Ervin's The In Between, from 1968, shows in the most straight–ahead, traditionally upbeat jazz the power of this tenor man's tone. However, Ervin isn't really the "star" of the album, despite being the session leader and composer of all the songs.

Trumpeter Richard Williams melodically hits some notes high above the staff on "The Muse" (one of the best tracks on the disc, it has a beautiful Mid–Eastern flavored intro and great soloing in the main body), Lenny McBrowne (drums) and Cevera Jefries (bass) follow the harmonies and rhythms of the music smoothly, adding some of their own personal variations. Pianist Bobby Few's solo on the title track is simply tremendous.

I know that 1960 wasn't during the most creative period for jazz, despite the outbreak of Ornette Coleman's "harmolodics" theories, but still, one would expect more from a young Freddie Hubbard on his Going Up session from that year. Especially in the company of McCoy Tyner (piano), Paul Chambers (bass), Philly Joe Jones (drums), and Hank Mobley (tenor sax).

Often times on this album, even in concentration, I couldn't see where one song ended and another began. They all seem to run together. Hubbard's approach to this, his second album as a leader (at age 22) tends more towards proving his technical prowess, which he does have and has illustrated in his more than 30 years in jazz to present. Sacrificed is creativity. By 1960, the style of hard–bop had been mined on thousands of albums by hundreds of artists and it would seem the well had gone dry.

Hence the repetition on Going Up. The themes on the album's songs, like Kenny Dorham's "Asiatic Raes," and Mobley's "The Changing Scene" are nicely put. It is too bad those couldn't have been mined for solo output instead of just bland chord changes. Also, Jones is just a monster all over the disc, giving it all some much–needed power.

Two years earlier, trombonist Bennie Green took a sextet, with tenor saxman Gene Ammons and drummer Elvin Jones in company, into the famous Van Gelder studio in Hackensack, N.J. The music from that session turned up on Soul Stirrin'. Green's own solo style is very much like a trumpet in its clear brass timbre — quite unlike Hubbard's then–boss J.J. Johnson's warmer tones on trombone. That's not a bad thing because it separates Green as an individual.

The staccato rhythms of Green, Ammons and second tenorman Billy Root in the theme to "We Wanna Cook" presage true jazz–funk by almost 10 years. In "That's All," "R.P.D.D." opens the disc with a melody that dances around some tonic, teasing the listener.

Finally, we leave you with the product of a 1980 teaming of two jazz guitar masters playing almost alone (they have a bassist behind them). The Guitarchives label released Tal Farlow & Lenny Breau's Chance Meeting and we should be thankful this holiday they unearthed this gem. Farlow's clean, old–style Charlie Christian ethics paired with the more modern (yet respective of the past) style of the younger Breau, on his seven–string guitar, is a terrific combination of fast runs, counterpointed melodies and a cross–generational exchange of ideas. The standards "Cherokee," and "Satin Doll" are especially indicative of the greatness paired together 17 years ago.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian Columnist

Coppola directs new Grisham adaptation

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

JOHN GRISHAM'S THE RAINMAKER
Directed by Francis Ford Coppola with Matt Damon, Danny DeVito, Claire Danes
Playing at Mt. Farms Four Theater

There are certain prominent aspects to any John Grisham story that by now we should all take for granted. First of all, there's always that disadvantaged underdog, the struggling young lawyer who miraculously beats the clients' oppressor in the closing arguments. Also and perhaps more importantly, Grisham never misses an opportunity to comment on the bureaucracy of cut–throat corporate law.

By now, each of Grisham's screen adapations, it would seem, contain that one major predictable premise: a gigantic criticism of modern day legal justice. However, this always appears in the guise of our pop culture facsinations with courtroom dramas, good looking young lawyers fighting against the monstrous powers that be. Grisham has found the perfect formula for hokey morality tales that somehow demand our attention despite the fact we know every word spewing out of each character's mouth long before they even say it.

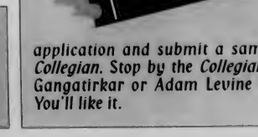
No one can fault Grisham for having his heart in the right place, he most definitely gives us something to ponder, but c'mon already. We have seen this same story too many times before and even a top grade director like Francis Ford Coppola doesn't contain the magic to give The Rainmaker a new spark. Coppola should, however, deserve a certain amount of credit for making one of the better Grisham adaptations; yet the fact that such an accomplished director would take on this challenge in the first place sets the mind in motion. Through his long career, Coppola has risen the ranks to become one of America's most well respected filmmakers, and the unfortunate duds he has helmed along the way therefore call for a degree of forgiveness.

The Rainmaker really can not be described as a bad film as a result of its technical superiority, but its inherent weaknesses also can not live up to expectations that we would assume from the director of The Godfather Trilogy, The Conversation and Apocalypse Now. The '90s have not been kind to Coppola as he has failed to reproduce his magnificence. Thanks can be given to the corporate world of Hollywood, which frowns on the kind of personal expression which can't be measured in dollars and box office revenues. As a result, Coppola has been saving his pennies hoping that his major studio work will help him continue his dream which he started with when he founded his own production company American Zoetrope.

From this point of view, we can see Coppola's attraction to Grisham's novel, the story of a young, vulnerable protagonist who decides to attempt an overthrow of a greedy insurance company. With idealism as his only weapon, not to mention the street smart comic antics of a self–proclaimed sidekick, played by Danny DeVito, Rudy Baylor (Matt Damon) overcomes the usual obstacles in the most formulaic Grisham style. Coppola could have made this film as an outcry to the injustices forced upon him by Hollywood, yet personal symbolism isn't the first thing that will come to one's mind when thinking back on The Rainmaker. Rather, this cut and dry tale of good and evil can fulfill a harmless two hours of decent entertainment.

The Rainmaker follows every linear convention that Coppola and fellow movie brat disciples, like Brian DePalma and Martin Scorsese, fought to reinvent in the '70s. In essence, The Rainmaker is an example of the trap that was set for Coppola and other filmmakers like him, a trap they just can't seem to escape from.

First–time front man Matt Damon (Courage Under Fire) plays an exceptionally endearing role, which at times loses touch with its sensitivity. He is supported by a who's who assortment of secondary character actors including John Voight, who is still maintaining his respectable comeback. As the head weasel in the insurance companies defense, he is excellent at using every ounce of pretentious charisma to intimidate the young Baylor. Supporting a slick suit and perfectly trimmed hair, Voight is recognizable as every stereotype associated with a big shot defense attorney.



DeVito is equally as charming from the other side of the spectrum. His comic relief is not only welcomed but entirely a necessity to the otherwise overly melodramatic script. The fact that he hasn't passed the bar exam after six attempts doesn't stop him from arguing in court. When asked by Baylor how he gets away with it, DeVito's character replies matter–of–factly, "There's so many lawyers in this town, the judges don't have time to figure out who's got a license." Nonetheless, he takes the naive Baylor under his wing preaching to him the lack of ethics amongst those who practice the law and even manages to give a believable justification about ambulance chasing.

Claire Danes leads the uninteresting subplot which struggles to find its niche within the film's main focus. She plays a battered wife whose jock husband threatens to kill her if she ever leaves him. The only compelling, and rather disturbing, aspect is when he throws her against walls slapping her face, all while pleading "Why can't you see that I love you." Baylor witnesses one of these outrages and decides to rescue her, almost immediately falling in love and helping her to plot against her husband. Danes' performance is by far her most mature yet. Unfortunately, this entire subplot seems improperly intertwined within the rest of the narrative, where both parts almost compete with one another for attention and the opportunity to outdo the other.

The remainder of the cast includes a satirical performance by Mickey Rourke (Angel-Heart, Diner) as the sleazy head of the law firm which hires Baylor after law school. Rourke looks more like a cross between a pimp and hit man than even the schmaltziest of attorneys. Rourke does do quite well making his performance far over the top, but when his screen time meets an untimely finish, you can't help but wonder the point.

Mary Kay Place, Dean Stockwell, Roy Scheider, Danny Glover and even Randy Travis complete the circle of guest stars. The real stars of the film however are Coppola and Grisham and despite the author's knack for repetitive cliche, Coppola's technical work still contains his unique personal flair. For those who enjoy these not so suspenseful legal dramas, The Rainmaker will definitely be a treat, yet for Coppola fans who still haven't given up on him yet, maybe you should just wait to see how his next project turns out. At the risk of seeming cruel, keep in mind this is still one of the better Grisham adaptations. C+

The Arts & Living section is always looking for new writers. Stop by the Collegian or call 545–1491 for more information. Just do it.

The Arts & Living desk is looking for a responsible person to cover film. Applicants should have knowledge of film, strong writing skills and be committed to reviewing up to two films a week. Those interested in writing about film should fill out an application and submit a sample review of a movie down to the Collegian. Stop by the Collegian or call 545–1361 and talk to Seema Gangatirkar or Adam Levine for more information. Get involved. You'll like it.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom Apt. Easthampton. $485 per month. Take over lease ASAP. 527-9410

AUTO FOR SALE

1986 Dodge Charger 60k miles. $1200 or B/O. Call Lorraine 253-4826

Nissan 240SX 89 Excellent condition, all extras. New tires, brakes, clutch, muffler. $4400 or B/O. Marcos 549-6926

1988 Buick Century Wagon Tip top shape. Great winter car. $3000 or B/O. (413)253-2232

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

EMPLOYMENT

CAT LOVERS
Looking for someone interested in having two loveable cats live-in. We will retain ownership of the cats and we will pay for food, litter, and vet care. You provide the home and the love! Call for details. 546-4550

Attention Slackars!! Use e-mail? Know others who do? Little effort = Big money! Call (800)546-0744

EMPLOYMENT

Part-Time Job Available Collegian Classifieds, on-campus, earn great experience, flexible hours. Apply now for next semester. Applications are available at the Collegian Office, Rm 113, Campus Center.

FOR SALE

Phish Tickets Great seats at great prices. City Tickets (800)865-8070

Willpower In A Bottle
Lose Weight
Doctor Recommended
100% Natural
Moneyback Guarantee
(413)259-1922

Nutrition Supplements Creatine 400G. $29
Designer Whey Protein $26
Met RX $38
Fat Burners & More...
Call: 253-1850

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

COMPUTERS!
New P166MMX from $995. Laptops, peripherals. ZarVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

FOR SALE

Unfinished
LA Wood, Inc.
401 Main St.
Amherst, MA
Formerly Loc. Video To Go
Cubes — Bookcases — Pottery
Wooden clothes dryers — Desk & Dressers

Furniture

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

Free Motorola Pagers Limited supply. Great x-mas gifts 1-800-784-6452

FOUND

Blue spiral bound notebook found in Campus Center near TV. Pick up at Info in Campus Center. Found Friday, 11/21.

Found: Red Neatbook with Theater and Japanese notes in parking lot between FAC and Franklin. 6-5148

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy 21st Birthday Crissy!
From your friends on 5th floor Field

ROOM FOR RENT

Room in house in South Amherst. $375/month ALL INCLUDED. Next to bus line. Start 1/1/98 Call 253-9482

Bedroom Available Jan 1 $342.50/month includes heat and hot water. Contact Kelly 253-1899

One room available on Main St. On bus route and short walk to town. Call 259-9282. Available immediately.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Very quiet roommate wanted in Amherst on bus line. $260/month plus 1/3 utilities. 256-5402, 253-9457

Looking for female to share two bedroom apartment in Puffton. $320/month. On bus line. Call Candy 549-9293

Housemate Needed for spring semester share with 2 grads. $ 283/ Mo. available Jan 1. 549-4492

SERVICES

GET NOTICED! Number One secret to resume writing for college students and gen-x. Send $6.00 check/money order + business size SASE to: Nina Smith, 507 Central Avenue, No. 2, New Haven, CT 06515

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free tasting and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

"SPRING BREAK CRUISE"
Soak up the sun
Play in the sand
Dance in the moonlight
And, oh yeah,...Party!
Don't be left at the dock
Book your cabin now
The price is right
Call 1-888-411-7447
Get your free gift

SPRING BREAK 98
Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399. Organize a small group and travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577.

Killington: Ski & Party Wask Jan 4-9. 5 nights condo/5 days skiing. $285 Call 545-3437

WANTED TO RENT

Jan-May 97 One bedroom apartment/room. Will take over your lease. Call Franky 665-7831

To Place a Classified, visit us on the concourse or call us at 545-3500.

THE CLASSIFIEDS ARE MAKING THE HEADLINES

They're coming !
Starting next week
The Classifieds will have new headlines available.

Auto Parts
Childcare
Computers
Pets for Sale
Rides Wanted
Tutor Wanted

And Many More...

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false information or misrepresentation is subject to action under the Law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, NOV. 27

Thanksgiving Dinner — If you cannot get home for the holiday, The Stonewall Center is offering a Thanksgiving Potluck Dinner, including movies, music, food and conversation. Members of the GLBT community and allies are welcome to attend. RSVP by 5 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 25 at 545-4824.

NOTICES

Applications — The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team is accepting applications for its training this January 12–16. Applications are available for any UMass student at 222 Hampshire House, Legal Studies. For more information, contact Leah at 545-5882.

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545–0792.

Art Exhibition — An exhibition of more than 30 one–of–a– kind artist books and scrolls by William Schade will be on view from Nov. 11 through Jan. 25 at the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum. Museum hours are Tuesday through Friday, 11 a.m.–5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday, 1–5 p.m. and is closed on academic holidays from Wednesday, Nov. 26 through Monday, Dec. 1 and from Tuesday, Dec. 16 through Monday, Jan. 6. For more information, call 538–2245 or fax 538–2144.

Club — The UMass Amateur Radio Club Station W1PUO is returning and looking for people to join in Ham radio. Anyone interested in radio/electronics and a desire to learn and communicate are welcome. The club will sponsor FCC approved volunteer examination sessions for all license levels. For more information, contact Richard Strycharz N1MFT at 549–6000 ext. 6000 or leave a message at facility services.

Fill–A–Bus — Help fill a PVTA bus with clothing, toys, and non–perishable food to benefit needy individuals and families in the Amherst area on Nov. 24 and 25 and Dec. 1– 5 from 11 a.m.–3 p.m. daily in front of the Student Union. Volunteers to staff the bus and collect donations needed. Contact the UMass Community Service Program at 545– 3368 for more information.

Food Drive — The UMass NSSLHA chapter along with Amherst Survival Center are sponsoring a food drive in honor of hunger awareness month. Bring non–perishable food to Arnold House, School of Public Health throughout November.

Internships — Environmental and Hunger Internships available for credit. Opportunities include helping to organize a Five College Earthday, protecting Endangered Species and organizing the Spring Hunger Clean–up. For more information, call Robyn at 545–0199.

Notice — The Student Employment Office will be closed on Friday, Nov. 28. Work study students who work at one of our off–campus agencies can pick up their paychecks on Wednesday, Nov. 26 after 10 a.m. On Friday, Nov. 28, paychecks can be picked up after 10 a.m. at financial aid services, 255 Whitmore.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN SI
25	Headline News
28	UCTV
27	TBS
28	BET
29	TV Land
30	Univision
31	Comedy Central
32	Cartoon
33	Much Music

545-3500

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — NOVEMBER 26, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Championship Skating		Yeudeville: "An American Masters Special" (In Stereo)				Vanishing Act	John Ringling
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Nanny	Murphy Brown	Public Eye (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope "Cabin Fever"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Nanny	Murphy Brown	Public Eye (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope "Cabin Fever"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Full House	Boy-World	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Smart Guy	Smart Guy	Weyans Bros.	Weyans Bros.	News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	World's a Greatest Magic IV (In Stereo)				Law & Order "Shadow"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Cheers	Med Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Sentinel "Dead Certain"		News		Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	World's a Greatest Magic IV (In Stereo)				Law & Order "Shadow"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	"Rookie of the Year" (1993, Comedy) Thomas Ian Nicholas.				News		Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	World's a Greatest Magic IV (In Stereo)				Law & Order "Shadow"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Yeudeville: "An American Masters Special" (In Stereo)				Jack Lemmon (R) (In Stereo)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Spin City	Dharma-Greg	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Med Abo. You	Med Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Sentinel "Dead Certain"		News		M*A*S*H	Seinfeld
WTBS	49	Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach		Coach		NBA Basketball: Miami Heat at Orlando Magic. (Live)				NBA Basketball: Kings at Clippers
A&E	95	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Old Friends"		Biography "John Gotti" (R)		American Justice		20th Century (R)		Law & Order "Snatched"
CNN	29	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	26	Tompkins Sq.	Meko-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money	★★½ "Cadillac Man" (1990, Comedy) Robin Williams.				South Park (R)	Meko-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	69	Modern Combat Aircraft (R)		Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery: Moose		Discover Magazine "Weather"		CIA-Secret Warriors		Justice Files	"Agains Our Kids"
ESPN	63	College Basketball: Preseason NIT Semifinal – Teams TBA				College Basketball: Preseason NIT Semifinal – Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				College Basketball: Maui Inv. Championship
LIFE	97	Supermarket	Debt		Intimate Portrait "Claire Dion"	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"A Friend's Betrayal" (1996, Drama) Sharon Lawrence.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	53	Best of Sports & Music		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Sex in the '90s (In Stereo)		Real World	Austin Stories	Loveline (R) (In Stereo)
NICK	52	Rugrats	Rugrats	Rugrats	Rugrats	Rugrats	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Bewitched	I Love Lucy	Odd Couple	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI	55	Twilight Zone	Resurrection	Time Trax "Showdown" (R)		Seaquest DSV (In Stereo)		Forever Knight (In Stereo)		Sightings (R) (In Stereo)		Time Trax "Showdown" (R)
TLC	59	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Home Again	Home Again	Wondr-Wealthr	See Yek It	Deep Oceans "Ocean Voyagers"		Deep Oceans	"Ocean Frontiers	Wondr-Wealthr	See Yek It (R)
TNT	54	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clerk-Superman		★★★ "Jaws" (1975, Horror) Roy Schieder, Robert Shaw.				★★½ "Jaws 2" (1978, Horror) Roy Schieder.
USA	62	Baywatch "Heal the Bay" (R)		★★★ "Back to the Future Part II" (1989, Fantasy) Michael J. Fox.				★★★ "Back to the Future Part III" (1990, Adventure) Michael J. Fox. (In Stereo)				Silk Stalkings
HBO	65	(5:00) "A Walk in the Clouds"		Real Sports (R) (In Stereo)		★★½ "Maximum Risk" (1996) Jean-Claude Van Damme. "R"				"Mean Guns" (1997, Drama) Christopher Lambert, Ice-T. "R"
MAX	66	★★★ "Romeo & Juliet" (1996, Drama) Leonardo DiCaprio. "PG-13"				★★½ "Fernie the Spy" (1996) Michelle Trachtenberg. "PG"				★½ "Thinner" (1996) Robert John Burke. "R"		★★ "AboveLaw"
SHOW	55	(5:30) ★★ "Bingo" (1991) "PG"		"The Princess Stallion" (1997) Ariana Richards.				"The Ruby Ring" (1997, Fantasy) Emily Hamilton.		Dead Man a		Fast Track (R) (In Stereo)	★ "Flint Ling"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Loser Crew Comics By Alan DeMonde

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — There is no need to advertise your feeling or opinions at this time; others will know what you are thinking soon enough.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You have a great opportunity today to extend yourself and explore possibilities you haven't considered yet; don't miss it!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — This is a good day to check in with a friend or colleague and get the most up–to– date news on events that influence you from afar.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may have the feeling of déjà vu throughout the day. You may have some psychic connection with an Aries native. Get in touch.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Keep business straightforward and honest at all times today. The moment you try to take advantage of another, you risk a major defeat.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You may be fighting against the onset of frustration or depression today. Focus on those things that give you a sense of accomplishment.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You are ahead of the game, though you may feel that there are certain issues you haven't addressed well. Have an honest talk with a boss.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Your spirits are sure to be lifted by contact with those who were so much a part of your life in the past. Call or write them today!

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You may be tempted to challenge the rules in some way today. You can do so successfully, provided that you do your homework and investigate fully.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — A co–worker may be slow to pick up on your particular mood today. What you accomplish at this time can have far–reaching effects.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You need a little more firsthand information at this time. Do not neglect sources that have only a limited amount to offer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Today, make your demands in writing. Keep things official and above–board every step of the way. Do not stoop to underhanded means.

Quote of the Day

"Thanksgiving is a special time... Jimmy Walker used to say dy-no-mite."

–Adam Sandler

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Spicy Black Bean Burger
Grilled, Sandwiched Cheese
Massachusetts Daily Collegian on Bread
DINNER
CLOSED
go home and ask yo' mama

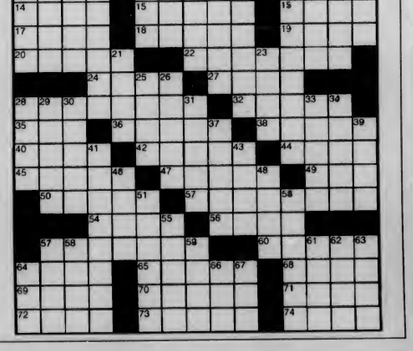
Worcester
LUNCH
Mac n' Cheese
Meatball Grinder
Rotini/Tomato Sauce
Red Beans
DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Breaded Chicken Fingers
Vegan Ravioli w/ Tomato Sauce
Pastabilities: pasta

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Grilled Cheese
Grilled Cheese on Bread
DINNER
CLOSED
No soup for you!

Berkshire
LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Charbrolled Chicken Sandwich
Tri Bean Casserole with 3 Beans
Tri Bean Casserole with 2 Beans
DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Quarter Pound Burger
Vegan Ravioli w/ Tomato Sauce
Pastabilities: pasta

Turkey Day Staff

Night Pilgrim	Casey "I'm a pilgrim" Kane
Photo Turkey	Ken "gobble gobble" McDonald
Copy Cornucopia	Lorraine Kennedy
Production Pumpkin Pie Maker	Joylyn Lombard
Production Stuffing Coordinator	Leon Latino



ACROSS
1 Earthenware pot
5 Prepared apples
10 Finish-line marker
14 "The Clan of the Cave Bear" author
15 Slow down
16 Injured
17 Bad-smelling
18 Comic —
19 Writer Ambler
20 Egypt's neighbor
22 Toenail for elation, e.g.
24 Lounge
27 Small weight
28 Autumn flower
32 Pamphlet
35 UN member
36 Slug's cousin
38 Loud blast of music
40 Stick
42 Boredom
44 Grill adjunct
45 Loosens
47 Comedian Kaye
49 Nutritious grain
50 Robins' homes
52 Mexican ranch
54 Nip and —
56 Knocks
57 Quarrel
60 Setting
64 Fly high
65 Tropical vine
68 Norse god
69 Pierre's girl
70 Nudge
71 Peel
72 Social misfit
73 List of candidates
74 Orange pekoe and Earl Grey

DOWN
1 Flowers' needs
2 Hawaiian feast
3 — a hand
4 Acid's opposite
5 Network of "The Nanny"
6 Mimic
7 — avis
8 — out: scraping by with
9 Take off
10 Rising bodies of warm air
11 Ambiance
12 — and proper
13 And so on: abbr.
21 Habitual complainers
23 Clothing
25 Area
26 Large antelope
28 VCR button
29 Nile dam
30 Lift
31 Ms. Shore
33 Poultry buy
34 Group of three
37 Of the moon
39 Soul-singer James
41 Made hand motions
43 Ancient Peruvian
46 Paycheck part
48 Puppy noises
51 Butchers' needs
53 Accompany
55 Whales' food
57 Where Caesar lived
58 Ringlets
59 All — and the Forty Thieves
61 Singer Adams
62 Actress Foch
63 Concludes
64 — Diego
66 Last but — least
67 Reverence

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

O	W	I	N	G	U	F	O	S	V	A	M	P
S	E	N	O	R	N	O	V	A	A	B	E	L
H	I	N	D	U	I	R	A	N	P	O	R	E
A	R	S	B	O	Y	T	L	E	G	O	U	R	D
		O	B	E	Y		A	R	T	Y
E	C	L	A	I	R	G	N	A	T	S
D	O	U	S	E	P	R	E	Y		Y	E	A
A	U	S	T	R	A	L	I	A	N	C	R	A	W	L
M	P	H		B	O	L	T		C	O	I	L	E	D
		S	P	A	W	L		C	A	M	E	R	A
G	A	P	E		W	O	R	E
D	E	C	O	R	A	T	I	O	N	S		T	I	K
A	N	T	I		P	O	L	O		E	L	G	I	N
F	O	O	L		E	L	I	E		N	O	O	S	E
T	A	R	T		S	L	E	D		S	T	R	A	W

11-26-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

UMass looks to heat up in Alaska

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

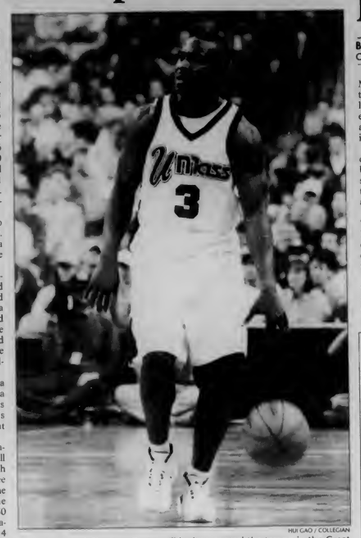
In the past two years, the Massachusetts men's basketball team's motto "Have Game, Will Travel" may have been rough — playing several Top 25 teams away from home early in the season — but at least it wasn't this cold.

After spending their last two regular season tournaments in Hawaii, UMass travels to Alaska, land of Eskimos, oil spills and pop stars named Jewel, for the Great Alaska Shootout, a three–game tournament that starts tonight and runs through Saturday.

The Shootout, to be held in 8,000–seat Sullivan Arena, includes seven past champions — North Carolina (1980, 1985), Alabama–Birmingham (1984), Seton Hall (1988), UCLA (1990), Purdue (1993), UMass (1991) and the Minutemen's first round opponent, Southwestern Louisiana (1981). USL beat a Georgetown team that eventually lost the national championship on a Michael Jordan jumper that April, a Washington State squad featuring Craig Ehlo, and Marquette to win the Shootout.

The tournament tips off tonight with a doubleheader. Purdue and UAB get things started at 10 p.m. EST, followed by UMass' second–ever meeting with the Ragin' Cajuns at midnight. USL's claim to fame is the fact that it was UMass' opponent in the "Final Rage in the Cage," the last home game (Jan. 29, 1993) in the Curry Hicks Cage. The Minutemen beat the Cajuns, 84–74, before opening the William D. Mullins Center Feb. 4, 1993 against West Virginia.

The Minutemen, who have been on the road since last Friday and won't come back to Amherst until Dec. 1, enter the tournament at 0–1, after a season–opening 82–64 loss to No. 13 Fresno St. UMass was led by senior forward Tyrone Weeks, who had 20 points and 15 rebounds in the loss. Junior center Lari Ketner had 16 points and 10 rebounds, and helped key a 52–31 rebounding edge. Prop 16 sophomore Monty Mack had 15 points.



Great Alaska Shootout
Massachusetts vs. Southwestern Louisiana
Tonight, Midnight

USL comes in 1–1, after losing to Mississippi St., 78–65, on Saturday. The Ragin' Cajuns beat Virginia Commonwealth, 77–71, to open the season.

USL won't have their two top scorers from last season, senior guard Chris Manuel and senior forward Reginald Poole, for the Alaska Shootout. Poole has been bothered by a leg injury, but did not make the trip to Alaska because he violated team rules. Manuel won't be eligible to play until Dec. 17 because of academic difficulties.

The Cajuns are led by Oklahoma transfer Tyrone Foster. Foster, a senior guard, is averaging 13.5 points a game for USL. Forward Chris Snowden is second on the team at 11.5 ppg.

Unlike most regular season tournaments, the Great Alaska Shootout will be played for seedings 1–8, which means everyone is guaranteed three games, win or lose. The winner of the UMass–USL game will face the Purdue–UAB winner on ESPN at 9:30 p.m. EST. Thanksgiving night will feature the marquee match–up, No. 4 North Carolina vs. No. 8 UCLA at 9 p.m. EST on ESPN.

HUI GAO / COLLEGIAN

Junior guard Charlton Clarke will look to control the tempo in the Great Alaska Shootout.

Minutewomen thrash Hawks with tough D

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

HARTFORD — The Massachusetts women's basketball team continued its winning ways last night. The Minutewomen traveled to the University of Hartford, and gave the Hawks a sound beating, 64–33.

The win is the second in a row for UMass, opening its season at 2–0, and the Minutewomen are exuberant.

"It's nice," forward Tez Kraft said. "Because I can honestly say that since I've been here we haven't won our opener, so it's nice to start off 2–0, especially with a long trip to Ohio in front of us."

The Minutewomen have been working on their defense, and it paid off for them last night. The Hawks (0–2) couldn't buy a basket, and were held to a 17 percent field goal percentage. Hartford shot a horrendous 8–for–47 from the field. In contrast, UMass was 28–for–56 (50 percent).

Massachusetts	64
Hartford	33

"We forced some shots, and they missed a lot of open ones," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "We played hard, we did a lot of good things, and we were very active with our hands."

Hartford jumped out to an early lead in the first half, with guard Tracy Stolle attempting to take command. She hit a 3– pointer to open the game and followed it shortly after with a layup. Forward Desiree Humbert added two free throws to put Hartford up, 7–2, but that was the end of the lead.

From there UMass went on an 8–0 run to put the Minutewomen ahead, 10–7. Hartford tied things up, 10–10, on a 3–pointer from guard Maureen

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOP, page 3

A world of thanks in college basketball

I already have that warm holiday feeling, knowing I will see my family when I get home (of course, I'm a commuter, so that happens every night), the anticipation of carving the Thanksgiving swordfish (things are different in our family) and some solid college basketball.

I have a lot to be thankful for, but does the college hoop world:

• Thankful that Steve Alford is still in the game. The former Indiana star, the one who propelled the Hoosiers to the 1987 title, is the coach at Southwest Missouri State. Though his first two seasons with the Bears have been less than NCAA tournament–caliber, he has put together a conference contender already. Of course, State was overshadowed last season by the stellar rise of Kevin Stalling's Illinois State program through the ranks of the Missouri Valley Conference.

Still, Alford is what college hoop is all about. After his freshman year at IU, during tryouts for the Olympic squad, Michael Jordan bet Alford $100 he wouldn't last all four years with Bob Knight. Alford cashed in, and the experience he gained at Indiana has been invaluable.

• Thankful that Neil McCarthy isn't. New Mexico State's former coach, McCarthy is still involved with collegiate athletics — which in itself is a scary thought. When the NCAA was debating legislation that would have junior college players sit out a year after transferring to a Division I team, many said the rule was aimed at stopping the abuses within McCarthy's system.

When he was coaching, McCarthy routinely recruited suspect students who had the ability to put the ball in the basket. And suspect is quite generous.

Casey Kane
On Collegiate Sports

Hopefully, with Lou Henson in as the Aggies' new coach (on a $1 a month pay scale), both the on– and off–court affairs will be more successful.

• Thankful that the experimental new rules will only be used in a few games. Now, the 40–second shot clock isn't that bad, after all, there used to be a 45–second edition. But, having the game played in 10–minute quarters simply feels ridiculous. It's like the designated hitter, it undermines the purity of the game.

• Thankful that Antawn Jamison and Raef LaFrentz both returned for another year. Although I will admit that I hate North Carolina, the fact that Jamison and LaFrentz returned is a boost for collegiate basketball. All too often top talent leaves the amateur ranks for a chance at the pro

Turn to COLLEGE HOOP, page 3

Great Alaska Shootout

Catamounts scratch out Minutemen in overtime

UM falls to UVM on weak goal in OT

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

Despite controlling 58 minutes of the action, the Massachusetts hockey team skated away from last night's tilt against Vermont feeling like they had finally hit rock bottom.

"In 20 years of coaching, I know that we have a good team here," UMass coach Joe Mallen said. "But these guys have to show up, night in and night out. We've got to put the finishing touches on how to win."

Leading 2–1 with under two minutes to play in the game, UMass (2–8, 0–6 Hockey East) failed to clear the puck from in front of goaltender Brian Regan and Vermont defenseman Jason Reid flipped it in off his backhand, evening the score and sending the game into overtime.

Vermont	3
Massachusetts	2
overtime

Minutes later while UMass was clearly dejected, forward Eric Lundin beat Regan with an unscreened slapshot from beyond the blue line to account for the 3–2 final.

Despite compiling only 24 shots to the Catamounts 36, UMass clearly enjoyed more quality opportunities as it kept Catamount goaltender Marty Phillips sprawling all evening. However, the Minutemen's inability to capitalize on several opportunities up close proved to be the death of them.

"We need to generate offense, and the coaches have been telling us to work it to the goal," sophomore forward Jeff Blanchard said. "We need to work for our breaks, and concentrate on it a lot more. We can't look too far ahead, and they capitalized on their opportunities. But I'm optimistic we can turn this thing around."

Vermont struck first when junior Simon Tremblay angled in from Regan's right side, jarring the puck loose in front of the net where

Turn to HOCKEY, page 3

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Freshman Kris Wallis just misses on a scoring opportunity in the second period of last night's 3-2 OT loss to Vermont.

Lovell loses his head, will sit out NU game

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

If losing were a sickness, the Massachusetts hockey team would be preliminarily diagnosed with a real bad head cold.

Why? Because it is happening at the worst time possible, and it is something they can not seem to get rid of — no matter how hard UMass does not want it to happen.

Last night at the William D. Mullins Center, the Minutemen (2–8) had their game against Vermont (2–0–2) tightly gripped in their CCM's, and revenge was in hand for a 4–3 overtime loss they suffered to UVM two years ago.

But midway through the second period, the team lost the services of star forward Tim Lovell for the game on a five– minute slashing major, and consequently, the game misconduct. After killing the penalty, UMass found a way to overcome that setback, and took control of the game with a goal by sophomore Jeff Blanchard at the 11:39 mark, his second of the game.

However, whatever control the Minutemen had established in the game burnt out and faded away in the final minutes.

The Catamounts seemed to bury themselves on junior Simon Tremblay's penalty with 3:17 left in the game. However, the Minutemen could not put the game away as senior Dean Campanale — who scored the goal that sent the game played two years ago at the Mullins Center into overtime — committed a boarding penalty 1:08 later.

On the ensuing four–on–four, UMass found the way to lose the game as UVM got the game–tying goal by junior Jason Reid at the 18:19 mark, and fellow classmate Eric Lundin scored the game–winner only 1:29 into overtime.

Losing is a disease that the team is stricken with now, and for Minutemen coach Joe Mallen,

Turn to HOCKEY SIDE, page 3

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 60 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Monday, December 1, 1997

A landmark recording

The Beach Boys' Pet Sounds album gets the box set treatment from the groundbreaking sessions. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 6).

UMass goes 2 - 1 in Alaska

Tyrone Weeks and the Massachusetts men's basketball team took third place in the Great Alaska Shootout (see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

Father seeks waiver of murder sentence

BATTLEFORD, Saskatchewan (AP) — A father is seeking a rarely granted waiver of punishment in a hearing today into what he insisted was the mercy killing of his disabled daughter.

A Saskatchewan jury convicted Robert Latimer on Nov. 5 of second-degree murder, which carries a minimum sentence of life without a chance of parole for 10 years.

Jurors, clearly torn by the case, strayed from sentencing mandates to recommend that Latimer be paroled in one year. Latimer's lawyer, citing jurors' statements that even the minimum sentence was unjust in the killing, has asked Judge Ted Noble to strike down the sentence as constitutionally prohibited cruel and unusual punishment.

An appeal is expected if Noble rejects the request in today's hearing.

Latimer admits carrying his sleeping 12-year-old daughter, Tracy, out to the cab of his pickup truck in October 1993, then piping in carbon monoxide until she died.

He said he acted to end the suffering of his daughter, who had cerebral palsy and had repeated operations on her back, hips and legs.

Unable to walk, talk or feed herself, the girl weighed less than 40 pounds at death.

NATION

Christmas shopping in full swing

NEW YORK (AP) — Shoppers packed the nation's stores and malls in the first days of the holiday buying season, but many went straight for sale racks and bought only when the price was right.

Stores that offered deep discounts and low prices fared best over the Thanksgiving weekend, retailers said yesterday.

"Christmas time is no different than the rest of the year," said Kurt Barnard, a retail consultant and president of Barnard's Retail Trend Report. "Shoppers want to get more for their money so they favor stores that offer the best prices."

Despite mediocre sales for much of this year, retailers are optimistic about this Christmas season. But many are finding they must go to great lengths to lure in shoppers.

Many stores unlocked their doors before dawn Friday, while others stayed open 24 hours a day. Some offered extra discounts to early morning arrivals — as much as 50 percent.

Discounters and moderately priced department stores like Wal-Mart, Target and Sears drew in flocks of consumers with special promotions, good prices and wide selections of merchandise.

"The big deals offered early Friday drove in shoppers," said Ken Volk, marketing director for mall developer Simon DeBartolo Group In the New York City area. "We had hundreds of people on line at many of our malls before 7 a.m."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 39 LOW: 26	HIGH: 41 LOW: 23	HIGH: 47 LOW: 26

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics .....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

YVONNE YANG / COLLEGIAN

Garden of stone
The Student Union garden is showered in a glory of light and rain.

Iraq blames U.N. for deaths

Government holds funeral procession yesterday for Iraqi children

By Waiel Faleh
Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Perched atop cars and taxis, nearly 100 small wooden caskets were paraded through the Iraqi capital yesterday in a government-sponsored funeral procession for children whose deaths Iraq blames on U.N. sanctions.

As rain sprinkled down, thousands of Iraqis walked next to the caskets, shouting "Down with America!"

"There is no God but God, and America is God's enemy," the crowd chanted as the coffins — many decorated with photos — moved along Al-Rashid Street, the city's main thoroughfare.

Iraqi officials said the youngsters, some just babies, died for lack of food or medicine in the past two days. They blamed the deaths on U.N. sanctions imposed on Iraq after its 1990 invasion of neighboring Kuwait. The sanctions prevent Iraq from exporting its oil, its main foreign currency earner, and have devastated the country's economy.

It was not possible to confirm independently the number of children dying or the cause of their deaths.

Also braving the rain were the U.N. arms inspectors who must certify that Iraq has eliminated its weapons of mass destruction before the sanctions can be lifted.

Iraq maintains it has fulfilled the U.N. Security Council resolutions, but the arms inspectors have accused President Saddam Hussein's government of hiding weapons or the means to make them. Ten U.N. inspection teams visited 21 sites yesterday and also flew over in a helicopter for an aerial inspection, the official Iraqi News Agency said.

INA quoted Maj. Gen. Hussam Mohammed Amind, chief of Iraq's National Monitoring Commission, as saying no one interfered with the inspectors during their visits.

Iraq issued a statement late Saturday urging the world to accept its invitation for U.N. experts and diplomats to visit dozens of Saddam's presidential palaces, which arms inspectors believe may be used to hide weapons.

The statement defended Iraq's refusal to allow the U.N. arms inspectors now in the country to take part, saying their presence in the palaces would threaten Iraq's sovereignty.

The inspections were called off for three weeks after Iraq refused to allow American inspectors to take part, claiming they were spies. When Iraq threw out the Americans on Nov. 13, U.N. officials withdrew other inspectors in protest the next day. The government agreed to the Americans' return Nov. 22 under a Russian-mediated plan.

Sharif fights Pakistani conspiracy

By Kathy Gannon
Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif made a defiant television address to the nation yesterday, accusing both the chief justice and president of conspiring to bring down his embattled 10-month-old government.

"I have uncovered a greater, deeper conspiracy. But I will fight," Sharif pledged.

It was the latest angry charge in an escalating political feud that has pitted the prime minister against the chief justice, divided the legislature and supreme court, drawn in the president and put the army chief in the unlikely and unsuccessful role of peacemaker.

The feud has all but paralyzed the government for two weeks, heightening fears that Pakistan's powerful military will step in to end the dispute by once again seizing control — something it has done repeatedly in the past.

While the feud raged on in the capital, Islamabad, army Chief of Staff Gen. Jehangir Karamat met with senior generals in neighboring Rawalpindi, where the army is headquartered.

There was no word on the outcome of the emergency meeting. Last week, an army statement said Karamat had intervened as mediator "in the national interest to gain respite from the headlong rush into an irretrievable constitutional crisis." As the weekend drew to a close, that headlong rush appeared to be gaining speed.

Sharif accused both President Farooq Ahmed Leghari and Chief Justice Sajjad Ali Shah of obstructing Parliament and plotting to unseat him.

"They have done a great crime against the people. I will not allow the people to become a victim to this conspiracy," the prime minister said.

Earlier in the day of charges and counterchargs, the chief justice accused Sharif of engineering a Supreme Court mutiny against him. He issued an order warning any mutiny-minded Supreme Court justices to fall in line behind him.

Shah also canceled a Supreme Court hearing that rebellious Supreme Court justice Saeeduzaman Siddiqi had set for today to decide whether Shah should keep his job.

Opponents contend that Shah was improperly promoted to chief justice ahead of more senior judges.

Siddiqi had asked 15 of the 17 Supreme Court judges to meet on the issue. In canceling the hearing, Shah said that Sharif had engineered the

YVONNE YANG / COLLEGIAN

Remember those less fortunate
Dan Perrone, a freshman environmental science major, listens to Hwei-Ling of Amherst speak about the wonders happening at Not Bread Alone, an Amherst soup kitchen, during the Oxfam Banquet Dinner, which ended MassPIRG's Hunger and Homelessness Week, last Monday evening in Earthfoods.

Fill–A–Bus donations to aid families in need

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

For the fifth year, University of Massachusetts students, staff and faculty will participate in Fill–A–Bus, a University–wide effort to fill a PVTA bus with donated clothing, toys and non–perishable food items.

The bus, which was donated by UMass transit, was stationed at the front steps of the Student Union on Nov. 24 and 25 and will continue to be available from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Dec. 1 through 5.

"Our main goal is to fill the whole bus," said Eleanor Jerome, a Massachusetts Campus Compact (MACC) leader. "We've had a lot of participation, the people here are very responsive."

"It's important to give back to people in need," said UMass women's ice hockey team member Kathleen Lahey. "[Fill–A–Bus] helps raise awareness in a community where it is very hard to make people aware."

"This is the time of year when we need to reach out to people," said senior sociology major Melissa Hernandez. "Many people don't have the luxuries of coats and toys — this is my chance to give something back."

The women's ice hockey team will be working on Tuesday, staffing the bus, collecting donations and handing out flyers.

"I decided it would be a good thing for the team to participate in," said Lahey, who is a School of Management sophomore. "It's very easy for us to get a whole bunch of people together all at once."

"A lot of people don't know about more than what goes on around campus," said Jerome, a junior legal studies major. "There needs to be more leadership programs at UMass. People can learn a lot from each other."

"We need to take time out for outreach. If students left UMass and went to less privileged areas, it would open a lot of eyes," said Hernandez, who was a Boltwood Project supervisor.

All collected donations will be delivered to the Amherst Survival Center on Dec. 5. The Amherst Survival Center provides clothing, food and hot meals to needy families and individuals free of charge.

Besides the bus, students have been organizing to collect donations in dorms, fraternities and sororities and various other sites around campus.

"Not many students take initiative," Hernandez said. "Instead they take a back seat."

"More students need to take part in community service projects. There is a very small amount of UMass students

Turn to BUS, page 2

YVONNE YANG / COLLEGIAN

Smashed
This Campus Center entrance door was the victim of an attack over the holiday weekend.

U.S., U.N. seek resolution, diplomacy in Iraqi dispute

By John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Top U.S. and U.N. officials toned down their angry rhetoric against Baghdad yesterday, speaking not of air strikes or Iraqi "human shields" but of using diplomacy to resolve a dispute with Saddam Hussein over weapons inspections and of easing hunger in Iraq.

As Iraqi demonstrators accused the West of starving Iraq's children, Ambassador Bill Richardson, the U.S. envoy to the United Nations, and U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan both voiced a willingness to improve the flow of food and medicine to Baghdad as soon as this week.

The powerful U.S. force on patrol in the Gulf will remain as long as President Clinton considers it necessary, Richardson said. But he also made it clear that the U.S. priority is keeping the dispute on a diplomatic level, even if it means putting up with temporary Iraqi obstructionism.

"We're not going to put any artificial deadlines," Richardson said on NBC's "Meet the Press," when asked how long the United States would tolerate Saddam's refusal to fully comply with U.N. resolutions. "Our policy has been steady, it's been measured... we want diplomacy to work."

In a later appearance on CNN's "Late Edition" Richardson said that with the return of U.N. weapons inspectors to Iraq, "The situation has eased a little."

Richardson said the Clinton administration is willing to consider boosting the food and medicine flowing to Iraq through a program that allows the Baghdad government to sell oil for humanitarian supplies. And he said that decision would have nothing to do with Saddam's opposition to allowing a U.N. weapons team to inspect scores of presidential palaces for evidence of Iraqi chemical, biological and nuclear weapons programs.

"We see that as a separate, not linked issue," Richardson said.

In a separate television talk show appearance, Annan struck a patient tone on access to Saddam's palaces, saying that negotiations later this week between Iraqi officials and chief U.N. inspector Richard Butler may settle the impasse.

"We have had difficulties, but at the same time, we have to recognize

Turn to U.N., page 2

YVONNE YANG / COLLEGIAN

View from a Mary Lyon window
A rainy day greeted everybody returning from the Thanksgiving weekend on Sunday.

Come On In Out Of The Plain!

3 floors • stores galore • food & more dictionary / six bucks • cup o'joe / a buck • "For Dummies" guides / nineteen bucks

beaded curtain / nine bucks • book bags / from eighteen bucks
Genko (for mental sharpness) / fifteen bucks • magic stone / twelve bucks
Armani hosiery / nine bucks • Lucky jeans / sixty eight bucks
shower caddy / eleven bucks • CK boxer shorts / eighteen bucks
Hard Candy lipsticks / sixteen bucks

THORNES MARKETPLACE 150

"under the big green awning"

On the bus route • Open Mon -Tue - Wed 10-6; Thur - Fri - Sat 10-9; Sun 12-5 •
150 Main Street, Northampton

■ bus

continued from page 1

helping out; we have 17,000 students, and only 1,000 of them take part," Hernandez said.

After the bus is delivered to the Amherst survival center, discussions will take place about what needs to exist in the area, what students can do to help, and the importance of student involvement and interaction within the greater Amherst community.

Other groups sponsoring Fill-A-Bus are Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG), Alpha Sigma Phi, Interested Women of Latina Promoviendo Comunidad and SHARE.

■ U.N.

continued from page 1

that the teams have been able to accomplish a lot," Annan said on ABC's "This Week" program. "It's their palaces and their decision whom they invite, but that's not what we are interested in. We are interested in the government giving access to the inspectors to go wherever they suspect illegal material may be hidden."

Annan said three U.N. Security Council members — France, Russia and China — remain opposed to the use of force against Iraq. Even for the United States to strike Iraq unilaterally, Annan said, would require a sudden turn of events.

"If there were to be a provocation, for example, if the Iraqis were to shoot at the U-2s threatening U.S. pilots, one never knows what would happen," Annan said of the American surveillance planes making flights over Iraq.

Earlier yesterday, thousands of Iraqis gathered in downtown Baghdad shouting "Down with America!" and taking part in a mass funeral for dozens of children whose deaths Iraq blamed on U.N. sanctions. Annan is studying a report by UNICEF that thousands of Iraqi children are dying each week in part as a result of the internationally imposed sanctions on the Iraqi regime. The U.N. chief said both the amount and quality of food going to Iraq must increase and that new equipment may be needed to purify drinking water to prevent the onset of dysentery.

"It will be necessary for us to increase the amount of [Iraqi] oil sold so that we can bring a better basket of food to the Iraqi people," Annan said.

Richardson said he expects Annan will ask to increase the amount of oil Iraq can sell from $2 billion to $3 billion for the next six months. The program of oil for food is to come up for renewal in the United Nations next Friday.

Briefs

Funds

UMass astronomer Judith Young recently secured start-up funds for a sunwheel, including $6,000 from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, $2,500 from the University's Healey Endowment and $2,500 privately raised funds.

By creating a large circle of upright stones, each standing two to three feet tall, the stones of a sunwheel align perfectly with the rising and setting sun at the times of solstices and equinoxes.

The UMass sunwheel, which is located in the Southwest corner of the campus near McGuirk stadium, is the only one in the country located at a university.

Young had the site surveyed to accurately locate north, south, east and west and spent a year observing sunrise and sunset. Stakes were then hammered into specific points in the field. Large rocks, weighing about 500 pounds each, replaced the wooden stakes earlier this year, creating a preliminary stone circle.

By the year 2000 Young hopes to have sufficient funds to add more than a dozen 10-foot-tall, rough-cut, granite pillars outside of the preliminary circle, so that the sunwheel will be visible in all seasons regardless of snow or tall grass.

The public is welcome to visit the sunwheel at any time.

Projects

In a joint project of the University of Massachusetts and Mexico, MAN Technologie AG, Munich, Germany, has won a competitive bid to do the critical design work for a large millimeter wave telescope (LMT) to be built on Cerro LaNegra Mountain in Central Mexico.

A radio telescope like the LMT brings into sharp focus faint radio signals which began their journey earthward when the first stars in the universe were created, allowing researchers to better study the origin of galaxies, stars, planets and life itself.

The $50-60 million project is the largest scientific undertaking ever by the University or the government of Mexico. Half of the funding will come from Mexico, while the other half will come from the U.S.

When the project is finished, astronomers will be able to use the telescope from campus through remote observing via computer links.

It is hopeful that the project will be done by the year 2000, but post-construction testing may take two to three years beyond that.

Lecture

Alex Pentland, the Academic head of the Media Laboratory at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will deliver the fourth Distinguished Lecture Series, titled "Smart Rooms, Smart Clothes," sponsored by UMass and the computer science department.

The event, which is free and open to the public, will be on Wed., Dec. 3 in Morrill North, room 329 at 4 p.m.

Pentland's expertise is in computer systems that can follow people's actions, recognizing their faces, hand gestures and facial expressions, and learning their preferences as well as how they express themselves.

Pentland was recently listed in Newsweek as one of the 100 Americans most likely to shape the next century.

Conferences

Lee Edwards, dean of the College of Humanities and Fine Arts, Hanlyn Davies, head of the art department, Ann Ferguson, head of the women's studies program, and Bruce Laurie, head of the history department, recently took part in a national conference on the future of the humanities in higher education.

The annual conference, which was sponsored by the Council of Colleges of Arts and Sciences, took place in New Orleans, La.

Participants discussed creative responses to such issues as shrinking budgets, advances in technology, and trends in interdisciplinary studies nationwide.

— compiled by Jonathan Liberty

write for news

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Still going...
Ernie can teach you a thing or two from his 40 years as a barber in Northampton. A customer gets a trim from Ernie before the holiday weekend.

Israeli troops may pull out of West Bank

By Hilary Appelman
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel's Cabinet voted yesterday to go forward with a promised troop withdrawal from the West Bank — but set no date and made the pullout conditional on Palestinians doing more to fight terrorism.

Sixteen Cabinet ministers approved the move, and two abstained. The ministers made no decision about the extent of the withdrawal. Critics have said adding conditions gives Islamic militants a chance to scuttle the pullout by staging attacks in Israel — as they have done in the past, prompting Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to halt peace talks temporarily.

Still, Marwan Kanafani, a spokesman for Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, was cautiously optimistic.

"It's encouraging to finally see the Israeli government decide to abide by the agreements that we spent a long time with them to reach," he told The Associated Press.

Kanafani said the Palestinians would have to "wait and see" what kind of conditions Israel attached to the withdrawal. But Hanan Ashrawi, a minister in Arafat's Cabinet, rejected Israel setting any conditions for a withdrawal promised in agreements already signed by Netanyahu's government. "We are not willing to accept unilateral Israeli measures," she told CNN. A statement issued by the Israeli Cabinet indicated it would carry out just one redeployment — rather than the three promised in the existing Israel-Palestinian agreements.

The statement also said Israel would continue "strengthening" its settlements in the West Bank, despite condemnations by both the Palestinians and the United States.

Cabinet Secretary Danny Naveh said Netanyahu, Foreign Minister David Levy, Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai and Infrastructure Minister Ariel Sharon would meet soon to come up with an exact plan for the withdrawal and for beginning talks with the Palestinians on a final peace settlement.

Up until now, Palestinians have refused to enter final status talks with the Netanyahu government — mostly for fear that it would not agree to their demand for statehood.

Naveh did not give a timetable for the withdrawal, refusing even to say that it would be carried out by mid-1998 — the deadline set in the Israel-Palestinian agreements for all three redeployments to be completed.

Attention all Collegian staff members:

Applications for spring 1998 editorial positions are currently being accepted. The deadline for applications is tomorrow at 5 p.m.

A mandatory, all-staff meeting and Candidate's Night will be held Wednesday, Dec. 3 at 7 p.m. The location will be posted in the newsroom.

Voting for editorial positions will take place Dec. 4-5 in the Collegian offices.

Pizza
Calzones
Subs
Buffalo Wings

CANTONE'S PIZZA

Fast Free Delivery
Sunday - Thursday:
3:30 PM - 1:30 AM
Friday & Saturday:
3:30 PM - 2 AM

Medium Two Topping Pizza & Two 12 oz. Sodas only $9.95

May not be combined w/other coupon or offer. Expires 2/28/98

JANUARY CLASSES

Title	Cr.	Days	Time	Course Dates
Keyboarding For Information Processing	1	MTW F	9-12:15	1/2 - 1/7
Introduction To Dance	3	MTWThF	9-12	1/2 - 1/21
Computer Literacy	1	MT ThF	9-12:15	1/8 - 1/13
Introduction To The Internet	1	TWThF	9-12:15	1/14 - 1/20
English Composition I	3	MTWThF	9-12	1/2 - 1/21
English Composition II	3	MTWThF	9-12	1/2 - 1/21
Intermediate Grammar Review	2	MTWThF	10-12	1/2 - 1/21
French Skills Practice I	2	MTWThF	9-12	1/6 - 1/16
History Of The American People Since 1865	3	MTWThF	9-12	1/2 - 1/21
Counseling Skills	3	MTWThF	9-12	1/2 - 1/21
Winter Outdoor Recreation	2	MT ThF	12:30-4:30	1/2 - 1/16
Practical Nursing Practicum	2	TWThF	8-3:30	1/2 - 1/22
Introduction To Prof. Nursing And The Nursing Process	1	days and times to be arranged
Principles Of Psychology	3	MTWThF	9-12	1/2 - 1/21
Responding To Emergencies And Community CPR	3	MTWThF	9-12	1/2 - 1/21
Spanish Skills Practice I	2	MTWThF	9-12	1/6 - 1/16
Spanish Skills Practice II	2	MTWThF	9-12	1/6 - 1/16
Oral Communication: Public Speaking	3	MTWThF	6-9 p.m.	1/2 - 1/21

Take a course during January Intersession!

You can complete a one, two, or three credit course during January.

Register through Tuesday, December 23, 1997

Classes begin Friday, January 2 and run through Wednesday, January 21, 1998 - unless otherwise noted.

(No class on Monday, January 19, Martin Luther King Day)

To register, call 413-774-3131, ext. 272

GREENFIELD COMMUNITY COLLEGE
One College Drive
Greenfield, Massachusetts 01301

OCMP

THE OFF-CAMPUS MEAL PLAN

The Union Grill
Terri Yaki's
Block & Barrel
Bowl & Bread
T-Mex

BLOCK & BARREL
T-MEX Totally Mexican
Bowl & Bread
UCard
Terri Yaki's

NOW AVAILABLE

The Hatch FOOD COURT
located in the basement of the Student Union Building

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

The pirates beat the FCC

Freedom of speech in the United States may be catching up with radio broadcast technology — finally.

Governments can't grant the right to speak freely; that we have automatically. It's a "basic human right." As far as free speech is concerned, governments have no jurisdiction.

That is, unless a government attempts to impose laws restricting open speech. Which is exactly what the U.S. Federal Communications Commission (FCC) does as part of its mission.

The FCC is not, on the surface, an official state censor. But in its attempts to organize and parcel out the available frequencies for radio broadcast, the FCC has mandated that "the minimum power for an FM broadcast station which a construction permit applicant may request is 100 watts... new FM stations will not be authorized to operate with less than these minimums."

Daniel Bodah

The effect of this rule is to limit free speech. Readily– available technology allows radio stations to broadcast in the range of 10 to 20 watts with an investment of perhaps $250 — not much more than the cost of a decent stereo system or some good winter clothes.

Ten to 20 watts is enough to cover a few miles. In other words, a community. This is why the people starting small– scale, unlicensed stations most often calls themselves the "community radio" or "micropower radio" movement. "Pirate radio" is another term they'll go by, because if the government won't free the airwaves, the movement will.

In contrast to the affordability of micropower stations, major investments are required to build a 100 watt, licensable station. Investments in the range of $100,000.

This keeps ordinary folks from having access to programming on radio, instead making sure that the airwaves remain in the hands of large businesses and institutions. The arguments in favor of micropower broadcasting share much in common with the well–established necessity of community access channels on cable television systems.

Happily, recent news from a court case between community station Free Radio Berkeley and the FCC indicates a big legal step has been taken toward Berkeley, but the possibility shouldn't be dismissed. declaring the FCC's attempt to silence such broadcasters unconstitutional.

According to Free Radio Berkeley manager Stephen Dunifer, Federal District Court Judge Claudia Wilken announced on Nov. 12 "in favor of Stephen Dunifer and Free Radio Berkeley. Her ruling denies the FCC's motion for summary judgment for a permanent injunction, states that she has jurisdiction in this case and that the FCC's regulatory structure is unconstitutional."

The "permanent injunction" that the FCC sought meant that Free Radio Berkeley would've been put off the air for good. The "summary judgment" part means that the FCC was asking the judge to refuse consideration of the First Amendment issues involved. Well, two strikes for the FCC!

The Free Radio Berkeley case isn't over, but at least now there is hope that an outdated and repressive FCC will be forced to honor our rights.

It is true that without some organization, radio stations could potentially interfere with each other and crowd the dial so that none come in clearly. However, there are usually a large number of open frequencies in any given locale. Besides, with the weak output and small range of a micropower or community radio station, interference problems can be easily worked out.

The FCC, if it exists at all, should be spending tax money working out problems exactly like these, rather than operating to transfer public airwaves to private corporations. I don't even have space to get into the stupidity and hollowness of most commercial radio programming here. It is sufficient to note that the airwaves belong to the public and should be available to all.

Let's hope that Judge Wilken's decision opens the way for many and varied community stations to operate openly and without fear of paying tens of thousands of dollars in fines for exercising free speech.

Incidentally, the FCC may be striking back — outside the courts. An FCC team is allegedly on an East Coast Tour in a blue pickup with a white cap and a big antenna, sweeping for micropower stations. Two stations in Florida and one in Philadelphia were shut down recently. It's not clear whether these actions are connected to the court loss against Free Radio Berkeley, but the possibility shouldn't be dismissed.

Daniel Bodah is a Collegian columnist.

"No thanks!" giving

Pushed and bumped, with two sticky pints of Sam Adams dripping along my arm, I return to the table. It's a familiar scene: a small, smoke–filled room, token pool table and jute box tucked away in the back — the classic suburban bar. You know, the ones that are empty 90 percent of the time, except for that traditional rite of passage.

Chris Stamm

Like so many salmon swimming up stream, hordes of college students return to town, packed shoulder to shoulder in the once forbidden downtown watering hole tossing back one–dollar bottles of Bud. Waiting at the table are two high school friends home for Thanksgiving. With months of catching up to do and the prospect of graduation looming on the horizon, the setting has all the ingredients for a relaxing evening of holiday cheer.

Except for "that guy" — or girl, as the case may be.

As one eye expertly monitors the overflow of beer, which has by now burnt a stain into my shoes, the other scans the crowd for a free path to the table. After ducking under the cloud of cigar smoke spewed forth by the resident Norm Peterson impersonator, I find my spot. Then tragedy strikes.

With an innocent tap on the shoulder, the next 30 minutes of my life is sucked into a social black hole.

"Hey! What's going on, man? Home for Thanksgiving, huh? What have you been up to?" he asks innocently enough.

After racking my brain for the next five seconds, I realize that there is no chance I will remember his name so I decide to take the defensive. With a simple, "Not much," I try to step by him, but to no avail.

"Well, my last four years have been crazy! I started out at UMass–Lowell, and... ah, that didn't work out."

Whoever this guy was, he was kicked out of two schools and his own home, dated an alcoholic and was now trying to earn enough cash to go back to school. A sad story, no doubt, but I wonder if the fact that we had both graduated from the same high school four years ago warranted this outpouring.

After recounting my own tale in kind, my eyes dart back to my friends. No help. As I take a step forward, in hope of trying to get back to my pals, "that guy" introduces me to "that girl."

"Oh, my God! How are you? It's been so long," she informs the entire bar and the rest of eastern Massachusetts.

Apparently, she was also a long–forgotten high school peer, and from the way she was speaking, I guess we were good friends. In fact, I was waiting for her to mention "love child" and "child support," but thankfully she didn't.

As my eyes glaze over and the thick foam of my beer begins to evaporate, my brain takes control. "Really, you work in a salon? How interesting. You mean your hair really isn't that blond? Get out!"

No luck.

Sitting across the bar were two of my closest friends in the world. For the past four years, we've made an effort to keep in touch, but you can never really know what someone is up to when they are gone for so long. There was a time when I really would have been interested in catching up with the forgotten peer, or at least pretended that I was. But this time, I neither cared nor had any desire to rekindle a superficial flame that never burned.

Besides, I missed a great story from my friend Rob, the end of which involved a road trip to Notre Dame, a Winnebago, and the loss of a large security deposit for undisclosed reasons.

At least I know that for the friends that really matter, conversation doesn't flow only on account of a holiday and pitchers of cheap beer.

Chris Stamm is a Collegian columnist.

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass Amherst MA 01003, or by email to: letters oitvms.oit.umass.edu

Letters may be edited for length, clarity, and style.

Doonesbury — BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor

Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co–Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co–Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quint Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley–Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Front–page porn

Editors at the University of Massachusetts–Boston newspaper came across a gold mine of a story last week, but tarnished it as soon as they got their hands on it.

Discovering that their student government's computers were being used to access Internet pornography was an alarming issue, worthy of a front–page exposé — the actual pornographic photos, however, were not.

Because of the Mass Media's irresponsible editorial decision, the attention of the university community and the taxpayers of the Commonwealth has largely been focused on the paper, and not the source of the problem — the student government officers and their advisors. This, I presume, was not the goal of the newspaper.

"All you need is a 48–point bold, banner headline across the top of the page with the word "pornography" in it somewhere, and you've grasped your readers' attention."

Laura Stock

Or was it? After all, the Mass Media saw fit to print an extra thousand copies in addition to their regular weekly run of 3,000. For what purpose? To ensure that even more copies of the raunchy front page would be lying around to offend the student body? Or maybe with the hopes that some copies would circulate off campus, where young children could see the titillating cover and learn that pornography is wrong?

Mass Media Editor–in–Chief Sam Farrington told the Associated Press "we wanted to make sure that it was taken seriously" in an explanation for printing the sexually explicit pictures on the cover. So, essentially, the only way he thought readers would pay "serious" attention would be to further exploit the naked women depicted in the pornographic scene by making sure everyone saw it.

It almost makes the paper's actions worse than those of the student government officers.

And as far as garnering appropriate levels of attention, the Mass Media editors were overzealous to the point of being stupid. All you need is a 48–point bold, banner headline across the top of the page with the word "pornography" in it somewhere, and you've grasped your readers' attention.

Issues like this face editors of newspapers everywhere — it's what you do about it that can make or break you, and the story. If you do it right, you're a hero. Do it wrong, and you're a muckraking tabloid whose credibility just went down the toilet.

The repercussions of the Mass Media's poor editorial judgment extended beyond the walls of their own newsroom. As soon as rumors about front–page porn leaked to other media, the Collegian was deluged with phone calls from reporters who thought we primed it.

As Managing Editor here, I fielded all of the inquiries, promptly re–directing callers to the Boston campus. I felt a strange mix of pride that it wasn't the Collegian which acted so irresponsibly, and anger that once people heard "UMass newspaper" and "porn," they called us.

Even family members who heard tidbits on the news approached me and other staffers over Thanksgiving break, asking if it was the Collegian which printed the pictures.

In fairness to the Mass Media, I didn't have all of the background information they did in making the call on the photos. What I do know is there are certain responsibilities unique to running an independent college newspaper (Mass Media just became independent last spring).

There is no financial or educational support from the university, yet you are considered the paper of, and for, the university. It is the constant endeavor of the college newspaper staff to prove that while they strive for the same professionalism of other, revenue–based papers, they are still students learning as they go.

What the Mass Media did for all independent student newspapers was bring us backwards a little in our efforts to prove we are a responsible medium.

Every newspaper sets its own standards, however, and while other papers refuse to print the f–word, the Mass Media may be content to depict it right on the cover.

They should realize, though it is their job to be the watchdog of their student government — and in this case, everyone just wound up being dogs.

Laura Stock is a Collegian columnist.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Black Affairs

Monday, December 1, 1997

Don't stop the singing, yet!

By what sends the white kids I ain't sent: I know I can't be President.

What don't bug them white kids sure bugs me: We know everybody ain't free.

Lies written down for white folks ain't for us a–tall: Liberty and Justice — Huh! — for all?

— Langston Hughes, "Children's Rhymes"

Terrell M. Hill

During the Civil Rights Movement of the 1950s and 1960s, one song that was very popular was "We Shall Overcome." Any time we see a video or news clip in reference it will have us believe the message of the song no longer has validity or purpose in America. I suggest otherwise.

A recent poll of 300 black teens published in the Nov. 24, 1997 issue of Time magazine showed that 77 percent of the black teen respondents believed they had never been a victim of discrimination. I attribute their opinion to the lack of experience in life, since most have not tried to enter the workforce or get a loan for a major purchase such as a home. In fact, the article puts forth the notion that kids today no longer see race in the same light as their parents. So, are we to infer that America has done away with her race problem? I believe that many in our society and more particularly on our campuses would like to think so.

The majority of white Americans just cannot believe that there is still racial discrimination in the United States. Hence, the big uproar over the continued use of affirmative action programs. They see the limited number of (reported) racial incidents as being caused by a very small pocket of radical whites, such as the Ku Klux Klan, Skinheads, white separatists or similar groups.

They believe racism is no longer the norm on predominantly white college campuses, and go as far as to consider these institutions multicultural bastions. They deny the reality of discrimination and racism in education and society as a whole. They feel the problems expressed by blacks are created in their own minds. Even some blacks have begun to support such ignorant dogma. Shelby Steele, a black man, contends that most black students have "an unconscious need to exaggerate the level of racism on campus... to make it a matter of the system, not just a handful of students."

I know that whenever black people bring up issues of injustice, they are thought of as whining or complaining by white people. Many whites would argue that blacks are just looking for a scapegoat for their own lack of ability. In the view of Martin Seligman: "The reflex of thinking 'racism' when thwarted or when justice is not done produces more hopelessness, giving up and depression than do these alternatives. 'Racism,' the 'system,' and 'white people' are just as destructive explanations as 'I'm stupid' or 'I'm lazy' ever were."

Seligman is not alone in his mode of thinking. Richard Bernstein, states "there is a predominating antiracist ethos on campuses" and that "college and university administrations are eager to assuage the anger of minority students."

Allan Bloom, sees college campuses as places populated by white students who "just do not have prejudices anymore."

I find the poll and the varied opinions rather annoying. While it may be true that people are not hung in public anymore (as far as we know), have the attitudes of the lynch mob's children really changed? We are all socialized and for that matter we are all socialized on a personal level by those closest to us. So, if this is true how can we grow up with views opposing those of our most trusted educators, our parents? We can have our views changed or challenged, that is only after we have been presented with new information. This typically occurs when we enter college.

Many predominantly white colleges and universities have taken serious measures toward educating their student bodies around issues of diversity and race. Although these programs are not making gigantic strides, they are making some headway nonetheless. However, I would like to caution those who see these efforts as proof that all of our troubles are behind us.

Just as there are proponents of such measures, there are still many more who see these same efforts as negative. In their opinion, "the values of excellence and tolerance are frequently viewed as under attack from misguided administrators, radical professors, multiculturalists and students and professors of color." Many of the same people who argue that blacks are always complaining and "crying wolf" about their lives are the same people who argue against multicultural or diversity courses being mandatory or even present at colleges and universities. They see this new awareness and inclusion as a sort of academic revolution headed up by black students and faculty. Some even argue that these students and faculty have gained control of the discussions and curriculum planning at many schools. I would like to know where black people are in control. Public perception and media hype is amazing.

Bloom argues that there is "a large black presence in major universities, frequently equivalent to the black proportion in the general population." Actually, there are only two traditionally white schools in the country that have black enrollments exceeding the national census figure of about 12 percent. They are Wayne State in Michigan (24 percent) and Brooklyn College in New York City (21 percent). I would be remiss if I did not add that these schools are in urban areas with heavy black populations.

Arthur Schlesinger sees the addition of multicultural courses into school curriculum as an "invasion of American schools by the Afrocentric curriculum." Ironically enough, Schlesinger has titled his book, "The Disuniting of America." I contend that unless something was united from the start it cannot be disunited.

Everyone speaks of opportunities all too often, but the reality is blacks have to fight for everything they get from the "womb to the tomb." Society is quick to point out blacks who have "made it" in America, such as Michael Jordan, Clarence Thomas and Oprah Winfrey. We know that these people and those in the same genre are truly exceptions and definitely not the norm for black people. There are whites always looking for those "exceptions that prove their rule."

At colleges all over the country, black students are finding that they are really not as welcome as the scholars and media would have them to believe. In my opinion, black people have made some progress in this nations, but we still have a long way to go. Y'all keep singing!

Terrell M. Hill is a UMass Graduate student.

Seize the moment

"There are years that ask questions and years that answer."
— Zora Neale Hurston

Millicent Jackson

This is the time of year when celebrations begin and the year slowly winds down to a finish. Out with the old and in with the new. At the dawning of each year we usually take time to reflect, reassess and set new goals, and it's good that we do. But, in reality, each moment is a potential turning point and each breath offers a chance for a new beginning. One of God's greatest gifts to us is that any time or place along our journey we can make a fresh start.

Living in balance is the goal. Maintaining balance is our challenge as obligations and responsibilities press in around us. Our commitments to ourselves are the first we let go of causing living to hurt. Our body weakens, our mind becomes muddled and our spirit grows weary.

So often we lose sight of how capable and courageous we are and the distance we have traveled. Despite our personal challenges and the many forces arrayed against us, the great majority of black folks are getting on with their lives. Despite the straits we are in, we must celebrate the distance we have come.

The chaos in the world doesn't have to be our reality. We can choose sanity, order or wholeness. We often forget that we don't belong to our responsibilities, boyfriend, girlfriend, parents and schoolwork. Rather, we have responsibilities and relationships. They are our gifts and challenges; God's way of engaging us and focusing our attention on the spiritual lessons that are often difficult to live.

In the inspirational guide Lessons in Living, Susan L. Taylor (editor–in–chief of Essence magazine) describes humans as spiritual beings of light and love, sent forth to learn how to live in balance in the material world. The daily dramas that seem so overwhelming are meant to challenge, season and inspire us to keep correcting our course and putting our faith in the laws of love and reciprocity.

The greatest challenge is staying mindful that each of us is a world of authority.

We must remember that we are miraculous beings and have special contributions to make. Listening inwardly, quietly and faithfully each day must become our highest priority.

Susan Ban Breathnach, author of the bestselling Simple Abundance, A Daybook of Comfort and Joy, suggests for the new year (instead of making resolutions) write down your most private aspirations, those longings which you have tucked away until the time seems right. Trust that now is the time. Ask the questions.

Take a leap of faith and begin your new year by believing in yourself. You don't need anyone's permission or encouragement to take the reigns of your life into your own hands. Living a balanced life demands that we take into account all our needs and assume responsibility for making time to make them come true.

Millicent Jackson is a Collegian columnist.

Open letter to my brother: Expressions

"I trust that you will so live today as to realize that you are masters of your own fate. If there is anything you want in this world it is for you to strike out with confidence and faith in self and reach for it, because God has created it for your happiness wheresoever you may find it in nature. Nature is bountiful; nature is resourceful, and nature is willing to obey the command of man — Man the sovereign lord; man is supposed to hold dominion and take possession of this great world of ours."
— Marcus Garvey

Sandler [my younger brother] —

For as far as I can remember, we have not been close mates in our family structure. Only in the past couple of years have I seen any kind of bond developing into a positive relationship where we have actually benefited from each other's guidance; me to you, and you to me.

I am reminded of a conversation we had after I attended the Million Man March on Oct. 26, 1995. You had asked me about the overall effect of the March on me, as a young black man. That was something to ponder.

I took in the words and advice on how to maintain myself at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. From dealing with the UMass women, to the pressures of drinking and smoking (it was too late for all that) and balancing my social and scholastic lives. I look at you, and the manner in which you gaze at me when I talk to you, and how you don't help but listen. Though we vary in age by six years, we have never had the chance to sit down and have the discussions of how to be a man, to ask the questions you might pose to me about adulthood.

Seeing that our father deserted, departed and abandoned us about eight years ago. I can't help but feel the urge to stress to you that no one in life is going to have the prolonged effect on you that I have (and will) until I leave this earth. I am the only person that can help you become the man you need to be.

I was there the morning after Ma gave birth to you at Mount Auburn Hospital in Cambridge. I saw as you were held in our father's arms and we posed for a picture; Lily [our sister] and I on either side of him. I watched you evolve into Ma's little man, becoming the epitome of what she wanted out of a son. Something I failed miserably at doing in my youth.

Maybe God was watching me, my first five years on the planet, and decided I would become what I ultimately did. I was a pain in the ass. I was temperamental. I constantly brought trouble in the house. I even cursed at Ma and Daddy (I can't believe that he left!).

I wasn't the greatest son in the world, but God knows I tried. You have seen the punishment I put her and Lily in, always bailing me out of some predicament. Calling the police on me. Even sometimes kicking me out of the house with tears rolling down her cheek, and you watching; almost influenced by these decisions. She tried her hardest and damnest to keep me off the streets of Boston, so I wasn't involved in shooting, dealing and destroying my life, knowing I had the potential to succeed.

Look at the news. California has already legally denounced affirmative action, a large reason why I am in college, and why I attended Buckingham, Browne and Nichols.

Kenny Lacoste

You know how it is to live in a strict household, and it didn't help my rebelling almost every other day. Sandler, it is hard being a young black man in America, with all these risks and factors that we are so easily susceptible to. Trust me, I have witnessed all of these.

AIDS, drugs, prison, sex and lack of male role models are some of the principle attributes to why we are a dying breed and looking in the mirror at socioeconomic extinction.

Look at the news. California has already legally denounced affirmative action, a large reason why I am in college, and why I attended Buckingham, Browne and Nichols. Imagine living in a society ruled by Jim Crow and segregation. That's what our future brings forth if we do not act now, and propel the rest of our community, our family, our friends. We need more generals in the fight, for we have too many privates.

Sandler, I was a lost cause after our father left. I was entering my manhood with the supervision of Ma and Grandma. I did not know which direction to turn to. I had lost my only outlet into how to become an adult.

I assumed he knew everything. Ma didn't know, she was just a woman, I thought. Grandma was too old. I didn't get along with Ma in those days. I was caught in the mainstream trying to find the positive male in so many other clusters, individuals and black men. I tried to overlook the fact that these weren't family members. The reality was that they were only doing a 9–5 occupation, of making sure that I graduated. And, once that was achieved, they would loosen their hold and haul me off into the real world.

We have a history of being humiliated, beaten, chastised, molested. Thus, we watched helplessly as our women, mothers, sisters, aunts, grandmothers and daughters were raped maliciously and repeatedly whipped and forced to bear their slave master's children, who would become subjected to life as bastard children, as you and I. Do you hear me? These were our great–great–great–great grandfathers, mothers, aunts and uncles that suffered and died, and we just take advantage of this and live.

Ma gets mad when I feed your brain with "Pro–black ideology." There is a reason. We take so much advantage of our history that it is ridiculous. We learn about the white interpretation of history (that's right, HIS–story). We don't learn from our perspective, which is the true interpretation.

It is essential that you do not adopt any images from this society on what it is to become successful. The same nation that kidnapped our ancestors from their native homelands, killed millions of our diaspora in a genocide and exploited their physical superiority in the building of this country is the same nation that will poison you with false information on how Abe Lincoln was the "Great Emancipator" and that George Washington chopped down the cherry tree; that white folks ended segregation and freed the slaves because they wanted to. Bull.

On July 7th, you turned 14, and I couldn't be there for your birthday. In June, you graduated eighth grade with honors and I couldn't be present at that momentous occasion. I saw the pictures and witnessed the joyous glee and admiration that was shown on your face, and how it looked like you did not miss your brother like I missed our father at my graduations. I saw how you clutched your black friends and Ma. I was ashamed of myself for not being there when you really needed me. I was thinking of myself and going through my transformation as teen approaching adulthood. It is far too common that our black men are not reaching back. Essentially all we do is cross the river and anchor the boat to shore.

Now, you are approaching sex and women. Please treat them with respect and dignity, and you will always be blessed. I know you've kept in mind how I had three, four and five girls calling the house, and how I gave them the same lines. How I constantly talked about sex, with my boys, in front of you. There are epidemics out there called teen pregnancy and STDs. I don't know what I would do if you fell victim to these factors. I have had sex in the crib. Ma doesn't know about it, but I am mature in telling you, because I don't feel good about my past actions and neither should you.

With your older siblings in college, you stand alone in the house that has produced many a good time, and many a bad one. You are now the man of the house and you have to do your job in supporting, aiding and comforting Ma in any way you possibly can. For this is her time. It has always been her time. You know that Boyz II Men song, "Mama, Mama" (I think, from the Soul Food soundtrack), it has really helped in realizing that I put her through 20 years of misery. Please, don't do the same.

God is watching you, Sandler. He has his eyes fixed on us. So what can we do? Become as successful as you can. Get into college and graduate with honors. I am telling you this because that is all people told me. That is what the world measures the black man by, if he didn't go through prison, shoot anybody or drop out of high school.

You're a good ball player as well. Use that to pimp the system that keeps pimping our brothers in the NBA and in college. I feel strong that you will make me proud and Ma joyous. This is your rite of passage. The same rite of passage that we were accustomed to in Africa. Our manhood was tested, and we were put into the jungles and woods to see how we would survive outside of our villages and clans. When we were successful, we were honored and given the title of men, so that we may be with the women.

I am nearly complete with my rite of passage, as you are now entering it. You know your strengths and weaknesses. Sandler, know your opponents and the rules they abide by. And remember, I will always be the black man, model, mentor and brother that you need.

Don't hesitate to contact me anytime you need my guidance and support.

Tell Ma and Lily I love them. Peace.

Kenny Lacoste is a UMass student.

Scrappin' for crumbs

Whatever happened to helping a brother or a sister when they were down? Why do we walk right on them, instead?

Here we are, at an institution that already weeds out those individuals that are not serious or dedicated, but still we chose to bicker over things that make little or no sense. Let's get past that pettiness and concentrate on the things that are a little more positive.

Albertina Fernandes

While I was having a conversation with a peer of mine, the idea of networking among each other came up. We asked each other: Why is it that the minority communities are divided? What do we hope to gain by further dividing our opportunities which we will present to each other later in life? I have the answer to those questions.

Instead of looking at the bigger picture we chose to zoom in on the corner of the picture. Take a good look at yourself and where you will be in a few years. How are you going to get there? Is it by the content of your character, is it by the work that you have put forth or the influential people that you have kept in touch with? If you guessed the influential people, you guessed right.

We, as minorities, need to realize that stepping on each other is not the way to go about building a network of opportunities. When I say stepping on, I mean letting our cultural or monetary differences get in the way of the upliftment of our people.

We are here to further understand our importance in the chain link networking. Each of us possesses the capability to be somewhere in five or 10 years to benefit the next generation of our peers. See the college experience as somewhere to begin. All the cultural RSOs that deal with trying to further the understanding of their culture is a start. But even there we can't seem to be one community and recognize the significance of everyone in the ALANA community.

I know that many of you have heard the saying "united we stand, divided we fall," but here at UMass and everywhere else in the United States, I'm pretty sure that saying is actually "divided we stand, united we fall."

Realize how important we are to one another.

Acknowledge the countless opportunities we present to one another. Have we forgotten why we came here in the first place? Lend me a helping hand and I will more than gladly lend you one. We are not here to scour for crumbs but rather chunks; chunks that make a difference, not cause more division.

Albertina Fernandes is a Collegian columnist.

My Loud Silence

My quiet death occurs when the loudest stay asleep
In my future mind, grim will reap
Outside misery glides depriving lives, screaming
"Death to Birth of young minds!"
Increasing all my losses, crying two fold
Dividing my only life's hold on grips of reality
Conquering me quickly so I see sadly
A last stand fallen by many that leave
Microscope slides to view the few left
Lost, caught, trapped in the greed
Process of elimination, rest in peace
Slow to see, snow in the Summer round the nucleus of me
Change the environment, no species diversity
Now its succumbing to be a true UNI–versity
Catalog perfect don't you see!
One me to every three, less are here as we speak
How many do we lose before we pull back what we deserve?
I scream completely unheard
My loud silence

— Eric L. Estremera

Trials & tribulations of a soap fan

Hello my fellow soap fanatics. I hope you had a lovely Thanksgiving despite the countless and slightly annoying pre-emptions that plagued our beloved soaps. Must we suffer through another oh so boring Macy's parade (an event that wasn't entirely without its theatrics... who knew Barney could be so dangerous).

I hate to admit it, but I actually missed a great deal of the soaps this week, due to pre-emptions and some other details (Thanksgiving is always one crisis after another). I feel awful, withdrawal pains and all, but hey, stuff happens! Usually I move heaven and earth to watch them.

Jacob Fanning's Soap Chat

I've only missed a total of four or five episodes of "General Hospital" during the last five years. I can't lie, "GH" has always been my baby (we all have one). I've been watching for 11 long years now (God, I feel so old), so if I seem a little partial, feel free to give me a nudge.

Speaking of missing my faves, I have a minor dilemma. I'm convinced the University is out to get me. Generally, my policy regarding pre-reg is to schedule my classes around my fave soaps (I'm all too aware of how ridiculous I am, so save your breath. The scary thing is, I'm not alone). Thanks to the pain in the butt scheduling this year, that won't be happening. I have a conflicting class that I can't get out of and on a Monday and Friday no less (crucial days). For some reason or another all of my classes are between the hours of one and four o'clock or even better, all at the exact same time. What's up with that? I'll be a second semester junior next semester so my choices were limited, I bit the bullet and let the University rake me over the coals once again.

I know, tough life (the drama queen in me has to complain). You're probably thinking, "Hello, that's what they invented VCRs for."

I have one but it's so prehistoric, I'm not even sure if programming is an option not to mention the fact that I often flip between the various soaps. Try programming that into your VCR. I hope Santa's extra generous this year (hint, hint Mom... I know you read this) and buys me the grandaddy of all VCRs.

Still, I feel like fighting back. I think we should fight for a Soap Opera Appreciation Day(s), making it illegal for the University to deprive us of more than two soaps on a Monday and Friday. We could storm Whitmore shouting, "Hell no, we won't miss 'Days'!" until they buckle. Ah... I amuse myself.

Well, I mentioned that I'd be announcing daytime's 10 most memorable moments this week but I've decided to push it back a week. It's turning out to be quite the race. I'd like to thank those of you who e-mailed me with your suggestions as well as the "All My Children" ladies at the Blue Wall. They were great! So far, there are a few that seem to be leading the pack including B.J.'s death on "GH" (a crowd fave), Marty's rape on "One Life To Live" (never before has the crime of rape been portrayed in such a brutal and honest way), Marlena's possession and Susan's "wedding" on "Days of Our Lives."

I've decided to can the "Sink or Swim" section this week for lack of either of the two. I do want to give a quick "swim" to Peter's return on "Days," which has been a breath of fresh air. The next few weeks should be fun. My fellow "Days" friends would also like to give a special "swim" to Peter in the buff.

"Why put the darling in clothes when he looks so yummy in next to nothing?" You ladies are bad!

In response to the constant beratting of soap opera actors, I thought I'd remind the skeptics that some of Hollywood's finest got their start or appeared in daytime.

Let's see if you can choose which ones and the soaps that they appeared in. I'll announce the results next week.

a) Leonard Nimoy
b) Tom Cruise
c) Robin Wright
d) Dustin Hoffman
e) Vivica Fox
f) Demi Moore
g) Al Pacino
h) Elizabeth Taylor

Jacob Fanning is a Collegian columnist. Any questions or comments about this column can be e-mailed to jfanning@student.umass.edu. Soap Chat appears on Mondays.

A major moment in pop history

COURTESY EMI-CAPITOL

The Beach Boys' Pet Sounds album stands as one of pop music's landmark recordings.

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

THE PET SOUNDS SESSIONS BOX SET
The Beach Boys
Capitol

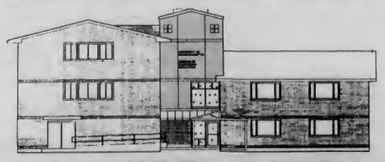
It's really a shame that The Beach Boys couldn't have joyously ridden into the sunset like their '60s counterpart The Beatles.

As easy as it may be to simply dismiss them as those interminable purveyors of schmaltz who brought us to a place ("Kokomo") where I never want to go in the late '80s, it would be a grave injustice to preclude the earlier achievements of these true innovators.

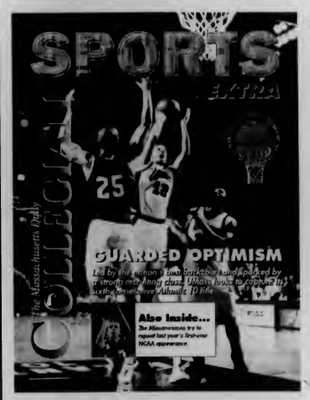
Guided by the incontrovertible genius of Brian Wilson, The Beach Boys did more to shape and define pop music's now-passé trademark melodicism, harmony and song structure in contemporary terms than anyone, save maybe for those four lads from Liverpool of course.

Nowhere was their pervasive and wide-reaching importance more prominently on display than on the Boys' legendary Pet Sounds, unquestionably one of the finest handful of albums made. Ever. When no less an authority than Paul McCartney freely admits to it being the key inspiration for The Beatles' Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band masterwork, one has to stop and take pause.

Spread over four discs, The Pet Sounds Sessions Box Set (Capitol) releases for the first time several alternate mixes, session highlights in stereo, vocal and instrumental–only versions of the original album, as well as what technology robbed our ears from hearing for so many years — a first-ever stereo mix of all 13 songs, supervised by Brian Wilson. Included are extensive notations and commentary from the sessions key players: lyricist Tony Asher and the other Beach Boys among them. An encyclopedic introduction and historical essay with interviews and production notes eloquently penned by Beach Boys historian David Leaf also helps add a much-needed historical perspective.



Although one of music's more reclusive and generally unusual figures, Wilson did have an uncanny knack for picking out the perfect pop hook and fusing it with soaring and intricate harmonies, deep-rooted with an erstwhile sense of melody and composition.



One only needs to hear the first few bars of the opening "Wouldn't It Be Nice" to fully appreciate his formidable talents as a composer, songwriter and producer. The rest is pure gravy. From an a capella tagged version of "God Only Knows" to the original piano demo for "Don't Talk (Put Your Head On My Shoulder)," Pet Sounds Sessions allows

Turn to BEACH, page 7

Pizza
Calzones
Subs
Buffalo Wings
CANTONE'S PIZZA
Fast Free Delivery
Sunday - Thursday: 3:30 PM - 1:30 AM
Friday & Saturday: 3:30 PM - 2 AM
Any Large Four Topping Pizza only $9.99
May not be combined w/other coupon or offer. Expires 2/28/98

SPRING BREAK
BEST PARTIES CANCUN JAMAICA FLORIDA BEST PRICE
Call today! Space is limited
1 800 648-4849
On campus all Cheapest Prices @413-546-3147

IT AIN'T EASY, BUT IT'S SMART
Winter Session '98
Why Winter Session?
• Catch up so you can graduate on time
• Focus on just one class, one set of homework assignments
• Make up lost credits
• Take a usually overenrolled prerequisite for your major
• Earn three credits in three weeks
Smaller classes mean more individual attention.
Winter Session '98
January 5-26
Pick up a blue course catalog at Continuing Education in Goodell Bldg. or anywhere on campus; in town at stores, restaurants, banks.
Or call 545-0107 and we'll send you one.
Check out the updated course list at www.umass.edu/contined/
Winter Session
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
The Division of Continuing Education is

moving to 358 N. Pleasant St. in January.

30 YEARS OF DAILY PUBLICATION
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Sponsored by:
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
UMass basketball
COMING TOMORROW!
• Delivered FREE to all on-campus mailboxes
• Available at select on-campus locations
• Available at all home games
The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
113 Campus Center,
University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003
Phone: (413) 545-3500 • Fax: (413) 545-1592

Goodman's recordings reissued

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

THE COMPLETE RCA VICTOR SMALL GROUP RECORDINGS
Benny Goodman
RCA/Victor

During the '30s, one of the biggest names in music, clarinetist and big-band leader Benny Goodman, would often record in trio and quartet formats between periods of immense big-band productivity. Three discs of these types of recordings for the oldest jazz label in history, RCA/Victor, were released this fall. Comprised of recordings between 1935–39, the whole set would certainly make a great gift idea for Golden Age jazz fans this season (even if that fan is yourself).

From Goodman's crooning vocalizations on clarinet to the romantic, innovative piano stylings of Teddy Wilson, from the famous drumming of Gene Krupa to Lionel Hampton's haunting performances on vibraphones, the listener gets a full plate of sounds to just sink right into like a hot spring. Speaking of sound, the RCA/Victor engineers who made the transfers from original metal parts (which were the prime medium used for studio recording in those days), in cooperation with re-issue producer Orrin Keepnews, have done wonders with these mostly-unissued songs.

Taking these performances in chronological order (as they are programmed to appear over the three discs), one can truly hear how the group emerged, even when you get to the third disc and the original lineup is gone with only Goodman and Hamp remaining with other sidemen. In 1935, the group's first session included only Goodman, Wilson and Krupa, recording tunes like "After You've Gone," which is presented here in two takes, the second of which is quite upbeat and verges on be–bop, which would be invented about a decade later. "Who?" from this session, is a track that is ruled by Wilson's interesting voicings.

The next two sessions took place about nine months later in April of 1936, with a gentle alto vocal track by Helen Ward on "All My Life." Krupa puts in a dark tom-tom interlude, dueting with Goodman on the Gershwins' "Oh Lady, Be Good." The year of 1936 was quite productive indeed, with four more sessions, all with the addition of Hampton's vibes (and on occasion, his vocals as well). "Hamp" is often almost sinfully funky, for the '30s, on the tracks "Vibraphone Blues" and "Dinah."

Disc Two features mostly sessions from 1937, the quartet's prime, if you will. "Tea For Two" showcases classic harmonies between Goodman and Hamp, as well as a conclusion in which everyone was "playin' hot," as the expression went back then. The spontaneous improvisation of these groups especially come to bear over two takes of the song "Avalon." In the first, things seem a little loose, however, Wilson lends some great melodic piano runs in a rockin' solo; in the second take, things are much more cohesive, and Krupa adds some more comments to the solos.

The third disc in the set finds the classic Goodman quartet split up, with Dave Tough replacing Krupa. Tough is a lot less present than Krupa, and seems to just keep a low profile (probably why Krupa is much more remembered today than Tough is). This quartet whips through "Dizzy Spells" in a refraining melody and fast tempo giving justification to the title.

Eventually, Wilson also left the band to pursue solo projects, leaving the listener with a band comprised of Goodman, "Hamp," Jess Stacy on piano and Buddy Schutz on drums on "Opus 3/4," the last tracks on disc 3. Despite the lineup changes, this 1939 track (again, offered in two takes) presents some of the smoothest, swinging playing by all, as well as a great mastery of the complex rhythm by Schutz on both takes. The re-issue of the songs on these three discs presage the era of be–bop, and for that, it is an important collection. A

The search for the perfect guitar

By Paul Megahey
Associated Press

NEWTOWNARDS, Northern Ireland — Amid an aroma of glue, varnish and wood dust, craftsmen in leather aprons whittle and polish each piece of a hand-built Lowden — the favorite guitars of Eric Clapton, Boz Skaggs and Mary Chapin Carpenter. The Lowden Guitar Co. Ltd. ships more than 1,200 a year to enthusiasts worldwide from its workshop in Newtownards, east of Belfast. Some buy the guitars as investments, others because they like to play nothing else.

"It's just not possible to make the perfect guitar," said George Lowden, 46, who's been trying to do so ever since he founded the company 24 years ago in a room above a post office.

"It's a constant learning process. You have to learn from that one guitar in 10 that isn't quite right," he said, leaning against a bench in his private workshop, the air heavy with the smell of timbers stacked for drying in the roof space. He picked up a piece of Alaskan spruce from a table cluttered with carving tools, hammers and the carcasses of half-built instruments. The wood already bore the round hole associated with any acoustic guitar, but Lowden focused on the grain.

"I love to take a piece of wood and try and imagine the sound it will produce and how to get the best out of it," he said, noting that the tighter the grain is, the deeper the tone tends to be.

"There are so many ingredients to consider: the age, the dryness and the grain of the wood, the design of the guitar and, of course, the work you put into it."

Lowden's attention to detail has made his guitars among the most valuable in the world. They retail from $2,300 for the most basic model up to $15,000 for a one-of-a-kind commission.

"I'm left-handed. And I wanted a slightly wider fret board to allow my fingers to fit," said Billy McCoy, who's played the pubs and clubs of Ireland and Britain for the past three decades — and last year bought his first Lowden from the factory for $3,000.

"It's got such a pure sound. Every note resonates and reverberates around the guitar body, and it plays so smoothly. It's so loud my wife won't let me play it when the TV's on," said McCoy, 50, who plays in a Belfast blues and soul band, Otis and the Elevators.

Since he performs in an electronically amplified world, his Lowden sits permanently on the sofa in his home.

"Every time I come in, I pick it up and play it."

Most Lowdens are ordered direct from the plant, and second-hand models are rare in Irish shops.

"There are plenty of other good, cheaper guitars," said Chris Campbell of Marcus Instruments, one of the top three guitar stores in Belfast, where more than 100 hang from the walls, polished and freshly strung to play — none of them Lowdens.

COURTESY EMI-CAPITOL

Brian Wilson (left) was the singular mastermind behind The Beach Boys' keen sense of harmony and melodicism.

■ beach

continued from page 6

insight into the bridging of the gap between singles-driven pop and a more album-based way of communicating thoughts. This transformation would pave the way for the concept-driven ideas of Pink Floyd and other '70s acts.

While the 13 tracks that comprise the album properly portray a glorious canvas on which pop music is painted in vibrant colors, the newly uncovered bits from the cutting room floor further complete the painting, including early incarnations of their eventual signature song "Good Vibrations," a wondrous ode to the simple joys of sun, fun and surf.

For anyone who professes to have even a fleeting interest in pop music (that includes all you R.E.M., Pearl Jam, Oasis and even Sonic Youth fans), The Pet Sounds Sessions Box Set is a historical, musical document of monumental proportions. A+

The Arts & Living section is always looking for new writers. Stop by the Collegian or call 545–1491 for more information. Just do it.

WORLD AIDS DAY EVENTS
DECEMBER 1 - 5, 1997

Mon. December 1 - Fri. December 5
THE FIVE COLLEGE AIDS QUILT
Children's Art Display: Knowing Someone with AIDS
Umass Campus Center

Mon. December 1 - 7PM - Movie Night
And the Band Played On - Stonewall Center
Sponsored by the Stonewall Center and Pride Alliance.

Wed. December 3 - 8 PM
The Not Ready for Bedtime Players
Greenough Basement.

Thurs. December 4 - 10:30 PM
Brown Bag Lunch - Amy Hoffman discusses her recent book, Hospital Time: Taking Care of Friends with AIDS
Campus Center, Rm. 803. Sponsored by the Stonewall Center and Food for Thought Books.

Thurs. December 4 - 8 PM
The Not Ready for Bedtime Players
Graduate Student Lounge.

Friday December 5 - 6 PM (Begins at Student Union steps)
CANDLELIGHT VIGIL - Join us for a candlelight walk in remembrance of those who died of AIDS and in support of those living with HIV. Following the walk we will have a speak out and refreshments.
Speak out - 7 PM - Cape Cod Lounge
Sponsored by Health Education, UHS, Pride Alliance, Queer Peer Education, the Stonewall Center, and the World AIDS Day Committee.

LOOK FOR CAMPUS CENTER TABLES ALL WEEK
A remembrance tree, AIDS ribbons, a remembrance book, quilt squares and other thoughtful activities will take place at the tables.
Sponsored by the University Health Services Health Education Division and Pride Alliance.

January
Winter Session at UMass Boston
Please send me information about UMass Boston's January Winter Session.
Name
Address
City, State, Zip
Return to:
Division of Continuing Education
UMass Boston
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125
Fax: 617 287-7922
Make the most of your January break by taking a course or two at UMass Boston. You can choose day or evening classes in a variety of disciplines. Courses meet January 5 through January 23. The undergraduate course fee is $135 per credit, and you can charge your fees to a MasterCard, VISA, or Discover account. To receive a copy of your Winter Session schedule, send in the coupon, email us at dce@umbsky.cc.umb.edu, or call 617 287-7904
UMASS Boston
Appears at no cost to the Commonwealth

Holly Days
Holiday Book Sale
Starts Today
ON THE CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE, IN FRONT OF THE UNIVERSITY STORE.
GREAT DEALS ON BOOKS FOR YOURSELF AND YOUR FAVORITE BOOKWORM!
MOST PRICED UNDER $20!
HUNDREDS OF TITLES. MANY ARE FULL-COLOR COLLECTORS' OR "COFFEE TABLE" BOOKS!
SHOP NOW TO AVOID LAST-MINUTE SHOPPING AND LONG HOLIDAY LINES!
Ustore
UNIVERSITY STORE
IN THE UMASS CAMPUS CENTER
HOURS
M-F 9:15 AM - 11:10 PM
SAT 11:10 AM
(413) 545-2619
We accept AMEX, Discover, MC, Visa, and the UCard!

EARN $2,000 - $3,000
$7.50 per hour
Work Local to Your Home
Mornings, Evenings, and Weekends
Taking Inventory
Paid Training
Advancement Potential
Call our Jobline 24 hours a day
1-888-242-RGIS
Equal Opportunity Employer
Interview with RGIS Inventory Specialists on the Campus Center Concourse
December 2nd, 3rd, 10th, & 11th
9:00am to 3:30pm

Don't end up graduating like a bunch of VEGETABLES

Start the New Year Off Right!
• The Collegian Graphics Department is Hiring Advertising Designers for Spring '98. Anyone interested is welcome to stop by our office in the Campus Center basement and fill out an application.
• General computer know-how and experience with Quark/Pagemaker, Illustrator and Photoshop encouraged.

JORMA KANSANEN \ COLLEGIAN

Filling in
Sophomore Nathan Sell took Tim Lovell's spot on the No. 1 line against Northeastern, and scored his second shorthanded goal of the season.

Festivals for the film lover

By John Horn
Associated Press

TORONTO — You can go to the movies. Or you can travel to the movies.

Film festivals, once the province of Hollywood moguls and movie nuts, have become legitimate tourist destinations. For vacationers who want a dose of culture in their getaways, festivals provide far more enrichment — and entertainment — than the Old Faithful slide show. And when's the last time you bumped into a movie star at Yellowstone National Park?

Four of the world's best film festivals are in North America: the Sundance in Utah, the Telluride in Colorado, the Palm Springs International in California and the Toronto International. They don't rival the glitz of the famous French festival at Cannes, but that's part of the draw. Unlike at Cannes, you can actually watch the movies rather than just watching the movie stars.

Advantages of festivals are threefold. You can see a lot of really good movies in a short period of time, you can discover some of the year's best movies long before they reach your neighborhood, and you can indulge personal interests such as documentaries.

The Palm Springs Festival focuses on foreign films submitted for Oscar consideration. It was among the first showcases for Holland's Antonia's Line (1995), Macedonia's Before the Rain (1994) and France's Wild Reeds (1994). Among the supplemental programs at the 1997 Toronto expo of some 300 films were groups of Balkan works and African films.

Telluride, emerging as one of the most creatively programmed festivals, recently offered world premieres of director Oliver Stone's U-Turn, John Sayles' Men With Guns and Paul Shrader's Affliction.

The Sundance Festival, founded by Robert Redford in the ski resort town of Park City, is the world's top showcase of American Independent movies. Among Sundance discoveries are sex, lies, & videotape, Shine, The Brothers McMullen and Quentin Tarantino's breakthrough feature, Reservoir Dogs.

At any given festival, it's easy to mix film-going with more typical vacation activities. Since the Sundance Festival is in January, many Park City visitors spend the morning skiing and the late afternoon and evening at the movies. A week before, in Palm Springs, you can play golf on one of the desert's dozens of championship layouts before settling in for the films.

Toronto's festival is just after Labor Day. Even without the movies, Canada's largest and most metropolitan city is a great destination: World-class theater and art museums, great restaurants, an underground city of shops and, best of all, a favorable exchange rate. Currently, the U.S. dollar goes about 30 percent farther in Canada than it does at home.

Telluride's festival, usually just before Labor Day, is set in a small, picturesque Rocky Mountains town that is probably the most restful of the four stops.

Interested in writing for Arts?

Stop by the Collegian or or call 545-1491 for more information.

Interested in a Challenging and Exciting Career that will put your Social Concerns into Action?

Consider a career in Clinical Social Work . . .

To find out more, attend the
Smith College School for Social Work

INFORMATION DAY

Saturday, December 6, 1997
2:00 p.m.
Wright Hall Auditorium
Smith College

For more information, call (413) 585-7960.

Pizza
Calzones
Subs
Buffalo Wings

CANTONE'S ITALIAN PIZZA

Fast Free Delivery
Sunday - Thursday:
3:30 PM - 1:30 AM
Friday & Saturday:
3:30 PM - 2 AM

Any Large Four Topping Pizza only $9.99

May not be combined w/other coupon or offer. Expires 2/28/98

Great Gifts
Bags Stocking Stuffers Hats
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses

Earrings Rings Bracelets Chains Sweaters Toys India Print Bedspreads Candles Gloves Socks Leather Sole Mugs Merry X'mas Cards Dresses Chinese Shoes

Sale
20 to 50% off selected Clothing

The Mercantile
Vreknights 3PM Dec. 4-22
Sun 12-5
Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St.
Amherst-Carriage Shops

LOSE WEIGHT NOW!
Our products are:
• Doctor Recommended
• 100% Natural
• Guaranteed
You will:
• Feel more energy
• Lose up to 30 LBS in 30 days
• Have more willpower
FREE SAMPLES
CALL: (413) 259-1922

Regency Hairstylists
189 N. Pleasant St.
253-9526

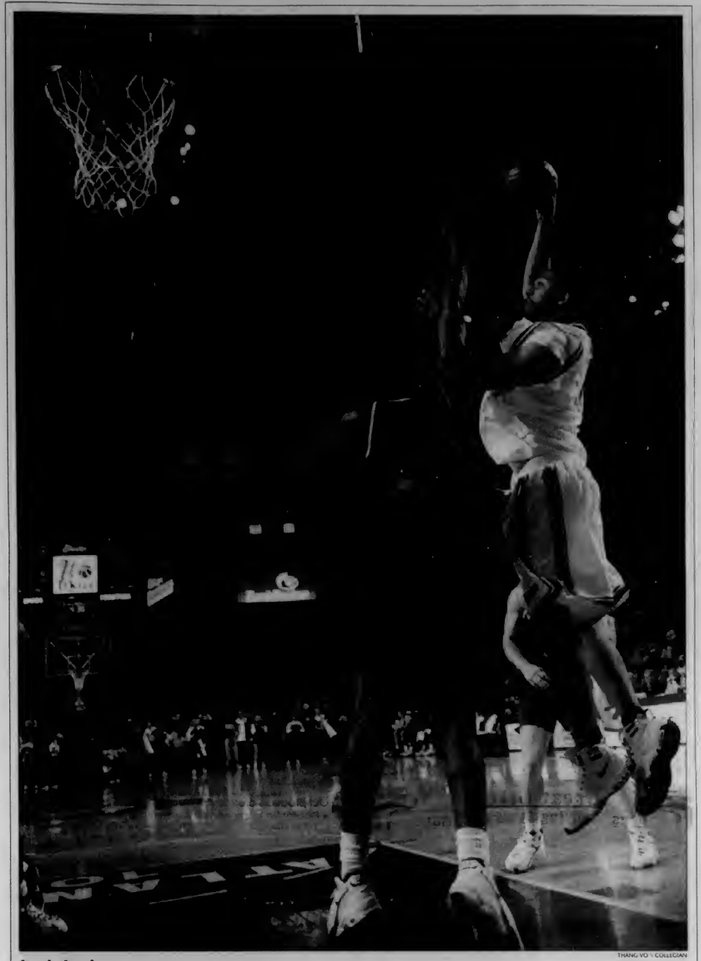
Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Potato Skins Supreme 7.50 3.75
Nachos 5.95 2.98
Gorgonzola Buffalo Potatoes 7.25 3.63
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
DOWNTOWN AMHERST
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

For Fast Easy Delivery Call 256-4110

La Cucina di PINOCCHIO of Amherst 30 Boltwood

#1 Delivery in Town

Monday Night Football Special!!
Back by popular demand: Specials running Monday - Thursday!
1 Large Cheese Pizza $6.95
PLUS 10 Free Buffalo Wings
Must Mention Ad When Ordering!
Any Large 1 Topping $7.50
Any Calzone $4.00
Delivery Only. Not Valid in Restaraunt
Offer Expires 5/31/98



Eating Disorder Programs
Fall 1997
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Tuesdays or Fridays Confidentiality Assured.
Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2

Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Wednesday 4:30 -6 pm, at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator. Confidentiality Assured. Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders, yourself or someone you know. Call 577-5168.

THANG VO \ COLLEGIAN

Lari, Lari...
Lari Ketner and the Massachusetts men's basketball team open up the 1997-98 home season tomorrow night against 1997 Sweet Sixteen squad College of Charleston.

■ hoop

continued from page 12

led by Antawn Jamison (23 points, 9 rebounds) who was named the tournament's Most Outstanding Player.

UMass took on Seton Hall in the third-place game and came away with a 73-60 win over the Pirates.

Ketner had his most effective game of the season against an undersized Seton Hall squad. The 6-foot-10 junior poured in a season-high 21 points and pulled down 10 rebounds. Ketner had two blocked shots, and was 7-for-7 at the free throw line.

Ketner averaged 17.3 points, 8 rebounds and 4 blocks in the three games. For his efforts, he was named to the all- tournament team.

Weeks was also placed on the all-tournament squad. He averaged 12.3 points and 10.3 rebounds throughout the tournament and was 11-for-11 at the charity stripe.

In the first round, UMass defeated Southwestern Louisiana, 80-64, despite going into halftime tied, 37-37.

Clarke led the way with 20 points and six assists and Mack dropped 18 (7-of-12, 2-of-4 3-pt.) on the Ragin' Cajuns. Ketner and Weeks had 17 apiece. Casey Green, USL's all-tourney team representative, had 25 points off the Cajuns' bench on the strength of five 3-pointers.

Minuteman Notes: Mike Babul, thus far, has started all four games at the contested small forward spot for UMass. He scored 13 points in Alaska and played solid defense in the three games holding the three opposing starting small forwards to 17 total points... Ketner's 12 blocked shots were tops in the tournament. Only one other team had double- digit blocks (Alaska-Anchorage, 14)... Winston Smith sat out the Seton Hall game due to multiple minor injuries... Mack put up 40 shots in the tournament... All-Tournament Team: Ketner and Weeks; Austin and Miller (Purdue); Toby Bailey and Baron Davis (UCLA); Vince Carter and Ed Cota (UNC); Green (USL); and Shaheen Holloway (Seton Hall).

■ hockey

continued from page 12

three unanswered goals just 1:12 into the second off another tally by Gates. Wallis and sophomore Jeff Blanchard circled the puck in the Northeastern zone, with Wallis getting off a shot and Gates firing home the rebound for the 2-1 score.

The game appeared to be on the Minutemen's side with sophomore Nathan Sell's shorthanded goal at the 8:15 mark, giving the team a 3-1 lead, but that was not to be.

At the 9:26 mark, freshman Sean MacDonald beat a flopping Dileo for the 3-2 game, and just 1:14 later, freshman Brian Cummings made the short comeback bid complete with the gametying goal. The Huskies were able to tie up UMass in the third period, allowing only six shots on Robitaille. Newson beat Dileo on a wrap-around shot at the 10:40 mark, and the game was all theirs with a 4-3 final.

Mallen liked the continuing hard work from freshmen like Wallis and Gates, and hopes the return of Lovell and Regan to the lineup for this weekend's home-and-home series with the Huskies will bring about better results.

"I saw our younger guys really play a good, hard brand of hockey that I'm looking for," Mallen said. "If they continue to play that way, and perhaps we get our No. 1 goalie and Tim Lovell back in the lineup, and we will see some pretty good things."

■ football

continued from page 12

touchdown to Keyshawn Johnson that tied the game at 10 with 7:19 remaining in the third quarter.

Johnson found a hole in the Bills' secondary and beat safety Kurt Schulz in the end zone for his fifth TD this season. John Hall added a 22-yard field goal for the Jets.

Defensive end Phil Hansen helped give Buffalo a 10-3 lead when he sacked O'Donnell from behind, forcing a fumble that was recovered by safety Henry Jones with 1:22 remaining in the first half. Christie then kicked a 49-yard field goal with 56 seconds left.

Both teams had problems hanging onto the ball in a steady drizzle. The Jets, who lost starting offensive tackles Jumbo Elliott and David Williams to injuries, gained just 30 yards rushing. New York also lost cornerback Aaron Glenn, who hurt his knee in the first quarter.

The Bills made their first drive look easy. Thomas picked up 15 yards on a pass from Collins to start the drive, and rookie Antowain Smith ran for 20 yards to set up Reed's score. Reed made a quick moved before beating linebacker Mo Lewis, caught Collins' short pass at the 3 and skidded into the end zone.

We here at the Collegian, want to wish you

HAPPY HOLIDAYS!

amc
There is a Difference!
Silence is Golden. No child under 8 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm.
Mt. Farms 4 •584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Jackal (R)
Today - Thurs. at (5:40) , 8:30
Starship Troopers (R)
Today -Thurs at (5:40), 8:30
Rainmaker (PG13)
Today -Thurs at (5:40), 8:20
Alien: Resurrection (R)
Today - Thurs at (5:50), 8:40
Hampshire 6 •584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Bean (PG 13)
Today -Thurs at (5:50)
Anastasia (G)
Today -Thurs at (5:40), 8:40
Flubber (PG)
Today - Thurs at (5:30), 8:30
Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil (R)
Today - Thurs at (5:10), 8:20
Mortal Combat: Annihilation (R)
Today -Thurs at (5:30), 8:30
Boogie Nights (R)
Today -Thurs at (5:20), 8:20
The Man Who Knew Too Little (PG)
Today -Thurs at 8:40
$2.50 First-Limit Show Daily. Special Engagement, no Passes or Coupons.

AMERICORPS
AmeriCorps Info Session:
Anyone searching for information on the 450 different programs, and in search of the answer to 'What is AmeriCorps?' are encouraged to attend.
MEET VISTA/NCCC/TEACH FOR AMERICA/CITY YEAR/CITY WORKS/YOUTH BUILD - reps
Campus Center Rm 911
Tuesday, December 2nd 7:30-8:30
FREE. 545-2337 or hreastudent.umass.edu

Express Lunch guaranteed to be served within 10 minutes of ordering or we'll buy dessert! 11:30a.m. 'till 2:00p.m.
• Reasonably priced selection of soups, salads, & sandwiches
• Please your appetite with your choice of a 5" personal pizza
• A healthy, hearty selection of something veggie
• Great British Fare
• Open 11:30 am - 1 am
• Serving Lunch, Dinner, and Late Night Menu
• 12 Taps of Fresh Ales & Lagers, Cider & Home-made Draft Root Beer
• Live Entertainment Thurs, Fri, and Sat: The Valley's Best Blues, R&B, and More... 10 pm to closing. No Cover
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
36 North Pleasant St, Downtown Amherst 253-4400
We Accept All Major Credit Cards

Come to Barnes & Noble at Boston University & Northeastern's JOB FAIR!
and get off to a great start this winter...
If you want a fast-paced job that will get your winter off to a great start, it's here at Barnes & Noble at Boston University, Boston's best source for books... and the best choice for retail jobs. Find out more at our JOB FAIR on December 11th.
You could be a sales associate - just long enought to get us through the winter rush and get your bank account in shape. Get here early enough and you could be hired on the spot!
• Part-time jobs
• Immediate hires
• Flexible scheduling
• Store discount up to 35%
• Friendly work environment
WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 4TH
10AM - 3PM
CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE
If you want to get a closer look at us, but can't come to our JOB FAIR, call (617) 236-7402 for more information.
We are an equal opportunity employer.
Barnes & Noble AT BOSTON UNIVERSITY

Peter Pan & PVTA
Your Community Link To The Entire Northeast!
Williamstown Greenfield Pittsfield Amherst Northampton Lenox Lee Holyoke Springfield Hartford Boston Newton New Haven Providence New Rochelle New York Philadelphia Wilmington Baltimore Washington
BOSTON NEW YORK
DAILY EXPRESS SERVICE
Peter Pan
800-343-9999
Amherst, Peter Pan Terminal, 79 S Pleasant St
Umass Campus Cntr, or SW Hampden Dinning Common
Northampton, Peter Pan Terminal 1 Roundhouse Plaza

Asthma Sufferers
You may qualify for FREE Study Related CARE and FREE Study MEDICATIONS for your asthma as part of a research study.
If You Are:
• At least 15 years old
• Have had asthma for at least one year
• Are a non-smoker
You may be eligible to participate
Learn more about your condition at your research appointment
Compensation up to $350.00 will be provided to study participants
Call NOW 413-584-4010

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

1989 Subaru Station Wagon 4x4, standard, excellent condition. $2200. (978)544-3783

1988 Buick Century Wagon Tip top shape. Great winter car. $3000 or B/O. (413)253-2232

1986 Dodge Charger 2dr Hatch. 60k miles. Good gas mileage. $1200 or B/O. call lorraine (413)253-4826

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Management Opportunities Open across Mass. for the Summer of 1998. Earn $600-$800 per week. For more info please call College Pro Painters at (888)277-7962

EMPLOYMENT

CAT LOVERS Looking for someone interested in having two loveable cats live-in. We will retain ownership of the cats and we will pay for food, litter, and vet care. You provide the home and the love! Call for details. 546-4550

Attention Slackers!! Use e-mail? Know others who do? Little effort = Big money! Call (800)546-0744

FOR SALE

Brother 3600D Word Processor Like new. Only 6 months old. $100. Baby Bearded Dragons, "The Best Pet Lizard," $45 each. Call Stan at (413)256-0185

Willpower In A Bottle Lose Weight Doctor Recommended 100% Natural Moneyback Guarantee (413)259-1922

FOR SALE

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

COMPUTERS! New P166MMX from $995. Laptops, peripherals. ZarVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

Free Motorola Pagers Limited supply. Great X-mas gifts. 1-800-784-6452

FOUND

Blue spiral bound notebook found in Campus Center near TV. Pick up at Info in Campus Center. Found Friday, 11/21.

ROOM FOR RENT

Walk To UMass Large, quiet, comfortable for male graduate/professional. $75/week. (413)549-1578

Live Uptown $275/month. 253-2979

Looking for one male to share four bedroom apartment in Alpine Commons with three males. Two full baths. $300/month. Everything included. Starting ASAP. Call Josh 253-6481

Room in house in South Amherst. $375/month ALL INCLUDED. Next to bus line. Start 1/1/98. Call 253-9482

One room available on Main St. On bus route and short walk to town. Call 259-9282. Available immediately.

ROOMATE WANTED

Very quiet roommate wanted in Amherst on bus line. $260/month plus 1/3 utilities. 256-5402, 253-9457

ROOMATE WANTED

Looking for female to share two bedroom apartment in Puffton. $320/month. On bus line. Call Candy 549-9293

Housemate Needed for spring semester Share with 2 grads. $283 / Mo. Available Jan. 1. 549-4492

SERVICES

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

GET NOTICED! Number One secret to resume writing for college students and gen-x. Send $6.00 check/money order + business size SASE to: Nina Smith, 507 Central Avenue, No. 2, New Haven, CT 06515

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Book Early And Save! Great Spring Break destinations. Best prices. Free parties, drinks and food. Call Eve 546-2111

RELIABLE SPRING BREAK TOURS Bahamas, Cancun & Ski Trips! FREE FOOD & FREE DRINKS! Sign up before Nov 30. Organize a group- travel free. Call for details and free brochure. Call (888)SPRING BREAK Today!

SPRING BREAK 98 Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399. Organize a small group and travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577. WTRI need a two bedroom apt for Spring. Will take over lease. Amherst pref. Dan 546-2035

Jan-May 97 One bedroom apartment/room. Will take over your lease. Call Franky 665-7831

SPRING BREAK
Cancun
Jamaica
Bahamas
Florida
1-800-234-7007

COLLEGIAN CLASSFIEDS

available on the concourse or visit our friendly office in the campus center basement

WANTED

The most popular question on Campus:

"WHAT ARE YOU DOING IN THAT BOX?"

The Answer:

SELLING COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Come and see us today!

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not accepted in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals (this means dorm room numbers as well).
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not accepted. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to criminal prosecution.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE!)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, DEC. 1

Film — "And The Band Played On" at 7 p.m. at The Stonewall Center to celebrate World AIDS Day. For more information, contact The Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

Meeting — UVC-TV 19 is holding its final general meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in the UVC Studio located in the Student Union, next to the Hatch. New members are always welcome. For more information, call 545-1336.

Movie — UJA and Israel Affairs present movie night at 7:30 p.m. at the Hillel House.

TUESDAY, DEC 2

Informational Session — AmeriCorps info session featuring Cista, NCCC, Teach For America, City Year, City Works, Youth Build and more. Find out about the many different AmeriCorps programs that allow young people to earn money for college while helping the environment, education, republic health, unmet human needs and public safety. Any AmeriCorps alumni from five college campuses who would like to know what's new are also encouraged to attend. From 7:30-8:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 911. For more information call 546-3337, or fmeskoob@student.umass.edu.

WEDNESDAY, DEC 3

Dancing — Israeli folk dancing from 8:30-10 p.m. in Grayson dorm, Orchard Hill. Learn a new dance, review an old one. No experience necessary. Sponsored by Hillel.

Discussion — "A Palestinian/Jewish Dialogue for Peace in the Middle East," Najat Arafat Khelil and Reena Bernards, co-founders of the Palestinian and Jewish American Women's Dialogue Project in Washington, D.C. will discuss Israeli-Palestinian relations at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Hall. For more information, call 545-9642.

Entertainment — "Not Ready For Bedtime Players" performing at 8 p.m. in Greenough Basement in Central.

Informational Session — The Peace Corps representative for UMass and the Five College area will present general information on the Peace Corps and how to become a volunteer from 7–8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 905– 909. All students from any major are encouraged to attend, with a special emphasis on graduating seniors. For more information, call the Campus Peace Corps office at 545–2105 or come by the office in Stockbridge, room 112 during office hours, Mon. 9 a.m. –3 p.m., Tues. and Thurs. 1–5 p.m.

Meeting — Inter–religious dialogues follow up discussion and future planning from 7–9 p.m. in the Campus Center, see info desk for room.

Workshop — A free workshop "Introduction to Psychodrama" from 7–9 p.m. in the Curtain Theater. Come experience how theater can be used for self–exploration. Registration is limited. For more information or to sign up, call Marlena Applebaum at 549–8556 or e–mail at marlena@student.umass.edu.

NOTICES

N Applications — The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team is accepting applications for its training this January 12-19. Applications are available for any UMass student at 222 Hampshire House, Legal Studies. For more information, contact Leah at 545–5882.

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545-0792.

Art Exhibition — An exhibition of more than 30 one–of–a– kind artist books and scrolls by William Schade will be on view from Nov. 11 through Jan. 25 at the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum. Museum hours are Tuesday – Friday, 11 a.m.–5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday, 1–5 p.m. and is closed on academic holidays from Wednesday, Nov. 26 through Monday, Dec. 1 and from Tuesday, Dec. 16 through Monday, Jan. 6. For more information, call 538–2245 or fax 538–2141.

Club — The UMass Amateur Radio Club Station W1PUO is returning and looking for people to join in Ham radio. Anyone interested in radio/electronics and a desire to learn and communicate are welcome. The club will sponsor FCC approved volunteer examination sessions for all license levels. For more information, contac Richard Strychacz N1MFT at 549–6000 ext. 6000 or leave a message at facility services.

Craft Fair — Annual Holiday Craft Fair from 9 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Dec. 3, 4 and 5 in the Lincoln Campus Center Concourse. The craft fair will feature artists from around New England exhibiting hand crafted pottery, jewelry, clothing, cards, candles and other items. In addition to the 18 professional exhibitors there will be 8–10 students showing their work.

Fill–A–Bus — Help fill a PVTA bus with clothing, toys and non–perishable food to benefit needy individuals and families in the Amherst area on December 1–5 from 11 a.m.– 3 p.m. daily in front of the Student Union. Volunteers to staff the bus and collect donations are needed. Contact the UMass Community Service Program at 545–3368 for more information.

Internships — Environmental and Hunger Internships available for credit. Opportunities include helping to organize a Five College Earthday, protecting endangered species and organizing the Spring Hunger Clean–up. For more information call Robyn at 545–0199.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send 4 press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN	Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN SI
25	Headline News
28	UCTV
27	TBS
28	BET
29	TV Land
30	Univision
31	Comedy Central
32	Cartoon
33	Much Music

545-3500

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 1, 1997

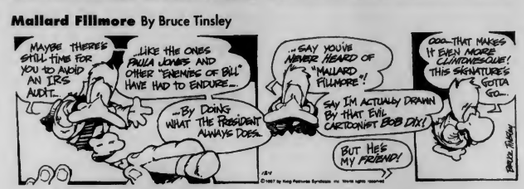
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone Ⓒ	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer Ⓒ		Ipi Mombi "An African Dance Celebration" (In Stereo)					Baltimore – Cirque du Soleil (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News Ⓒ	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV Ⓒ	Red-Nosed Reindeer		Cybill Ⓒ		George & Leo	Brooklyn South (In Stereo) Ⓒ	News Ⓒ	Late Show Ⓒ
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra Ⓒ	Ent. Tonight	Red-Nosed Reindeer		Cybill Ⓒ		George & Leo	Brooklyn South (In Stereo) Ⓒ	News	Late Show Ⓒ
WCVB	5	News Ⓒ	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle Ⓒ	Touched by a Dolphin Ⓒ		NFL Football: Green Bay Packers at Minnesota Vikings. (In Stereo Live) Ⓒ
WLVI	56	Full House Ⓒ	Boy-World	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	7th Heaven "I Love You" (R) Ⓒ		Buffy the Vampire Slayer Ⓒ		News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! Ⓒ	Sudden-Susan	Jenny Ⓒ	Caroline	Fired Up Ⓒ	Dateline (In Stereo) Ⓒ		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	4	Cheers Ⓒ	Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy Ⓒ	Judge Judy Ⓒ	In the House	In the House	Good News Ⓒ	Sparks (R) Ⓒ	News	Grace Under	Vibe (R)
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy Ⓒ	Sudden-Susan	Jenny Ⓒ	Caroline	Fired Up Ⓒ	Dateline (In Stereo) Ⓒ		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons Ⓒ	Seinfeld Ⓒ	Frasier Ⓒ	Melrose Place (In Stereo) Ⓒ		Ally McBeal "Boy in the World"		News		Simpsons Ⓒ	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! Ⓒ	Sudden-Susan	Jenny Ⓒ	Caroline	Fired Up Ⓒ	Dateline (In Stereo) Ⓒ		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer Ⓒ		Andra Rlezc The Christmas I Love		Rumor Your Stress (In Stereo) Ⓒ				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	39	News Ⓒ	ABC News	Open Fanny Telethon		Touched by a Dolphin Ⓒ		NFL Football: Green Bay Packers at Minnesota Vikings. (In Stereo Live) Ⓒ
WSBK	38	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld Ⓒ	NHL Hockey	Boston Bruins at Carolina Hurricanes. (Live)					News	Mad Abo. You	Real TV Ⓒ
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach Ⓒ	Coach Ⓒ	★★★ "A Christmas Story" (1983, Comedy) Peter Billingsley				★★ "White Fang" (1991, Adventure) Klaus Maria Brandauer
A&E	69	Northern Exposure Ⓒ		Law & Order "Wedded Bliss" Ⓒ		Biography: J.C. Penney		Poirot "Yellow Iris"		Mike Marple (Part 2 of 2)		Law & Order "Rage" Ⓒ
CNN	20	WorldView Ⓒ		Moneyline Ⓒ	Crossfire Ⓒ	Prime News Ⓒ	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live Ⓒ		World Today Ⓒ		Sports Illus.	Moneyline Ⓒ
COM	38	Lounge Liz.	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★★ "Harrypray" (1988, Comedy)		Rich Little, Divine.		Lounge Liz.	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	62	Wings "The Falkland Surprise"		Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery: Grizzly		Raging Planet: "Lightning" (R)		Raging Planet: "Avalanche" (R)		Justice Files "Bad Medicine"
ESPN	63	Up Close	Sportscenter		NFL Prime Monday			Figure Skating: Champagne on Ice.				Cheerleading	Sportscenter
LIFE	60	Supermarket		Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Will Texas Wins" (1991, Drama) Dolly Parton, Gary Busey.				Homicide: Life on the Street Ⓒ
MTV	53	MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life "Halloween"		Daria (R)	Beavis-Butt.	Smart Sex (R) (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Daria (R)	Loveline (R) (In Stereo)
NICK	52	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug Ⓒ	Rugrats Ⓒ	Hey Arnold! Ⓒ	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Bewitched	Love Lucy Ⓒ	Odd Couple Ⓒ	Taxi Ⓒ	Newhart Ⓒ
SCIFI	66	Twilight Zone	Resurrection	Time Trax (R) (In Stereo) Ⓒ		Sequest DSV (In Stereo) Ⓒ		Forever Knight "Hunted" Ⓒ		Misa. Genesis	Meeters	Time Trax (R) (In Stereo) Ⓒ
TLC	28	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Extreme Machines (R)		Landslides (R)			Cyber Warriors (R)	Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	65	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark: Superman		WCW Nitro (In Stereo Live) Ⓒ					WCW Nitro (R) (In Stereo) Ⓒ
USA	59	Baywatch (In Stereo) Ⓒ		Highlander: The Series Ⓒ		Weber, Texas Ranger Ⓒ		WWF Raw (In Stereo) Ⓒ			WWF War Zone (In Stereo) Ⓒ	Silk Stalkings "Glory Days" Ⓒ
HBO	33	(5:00) ★★½ "Into the Homeland"		Lifestories	Storyteller Ⓒ	★★ "Bogus" (1996, Fantasy) Whoopi Goldberg. (In Stereo) PG Ⓒ				Classic Whitney: In Concert From Washington, D.C. (In Stereo)
MAX	35	★★½ "Multiplicity" (1996, Comedy) Michael Keaton. PG-13 Ⓒ				★★½ "Heat" (1995, Drama) Al Pacino, Robert De Niro. (In Stereo) R Ⓒ					★★ "Charlie's Ghost" (1996) R Ⓒ
SHOW	37	★ "The Invisible Kid" (1988, Comedy) Jay Underwood. PG				Stargate SG-1 (R) (In Stereo) Ⓒ		★★½ "It Is Pretty" (1996, Comedy-Drama) Eric Roberts. R Ⓒ			★★½ "Nixon" (1995) R Ⓒ

Bruno By C. Baldwin

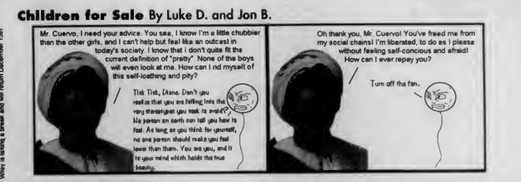
Robotman By Jim Meddick



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley



Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Children for Sale By Luke D. and Jon B.

Monkey Socials By Mookie Jackson

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You must try very hard to get in touch with someone who is waiting to hear from you, but who may not be where you expect him or her to be.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — There is little danger that you will not fulfill the expectations of others today, but your own are a bit harder to satisfy. Keep trying!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You may feel as though you are under the gun today as you strive to finish an important project. Indeed, the deadline is approaching quickly.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You can do better at work today if you approach your chores with the same enthusiasm as you do your recreational activities. Lighten up!

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You may receive a promise today from someone who is in no position to give it. You must discern the difference between fact and fiction.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — It is not too likely that you will be tripped up in some way today, but you still must take great care when crossing unfamiliar ground.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Yes, it's time once again to play a guessing game with someone who doesn't want you to know what he or she is doing. Trust your instincts.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You may hear from someone today who has information to offer which is either good or bad, depending on your unique perspective.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Do you have what it takes to come through for someone who is depending on you at this time? Today, you'll know for sure one way or the other.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Those who gravitate toward you today will benefit from your positive energy and your willingness to give them the attention they need and deserve.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You can give someone the second chance that he or she has been waiting for today. Take care, however, that you aren't making matters worse.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You are going to have to work harder than expected to collect associates with special abilities to help you with an upcoming project.

Quote of the Day

"We want something that feels good."

-Overheard

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Turkey Tetrazzini
Hamburger on a Roll
Lentil Chili

DINNER
Chicken Breast with Rice Stuffing
Spaghetti/Italian Sweet Sausage
Italian Tofu Balls & Sauce
Qtr. Pound Burger

Worcester

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
American Chop Suey
Spaghetti/Tomato Sauce
Macaroni, Lentil & Tomatoes

DINNER
Chicken Breast with Rice Stuffing
Black-Eyed Peas
Pastabilities
Ravioli Alfredo

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Turkey Tetrazzini

DINNER
Chicken Breast with Rice Stuffing
Spaghetti/Italian Sweet Sausage,

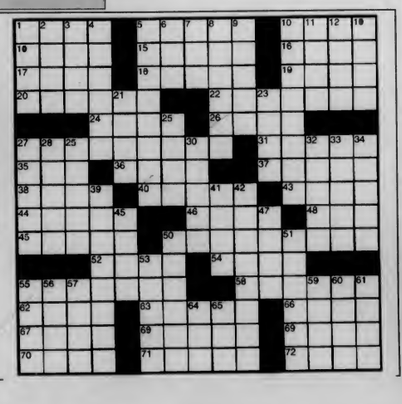
Berkshire

LUNCH
Turkey Tetrazzini
Hamburger on a Roll
Lentil Chili

DINNER
Chicken Breast with Rice Stuffing
Shrimp & Sausage Jambalaya
Penne with Tomatoes & Spinach
Pastabilities

STAFF

Night Editor — Casey Kane
Photo Technician — Yvonne Yang
Copy Editor — Erin Murphy
Production Supervisor — Jocelyn Burrows
Production Staff — Matt Wolaver



ACROSS
1 District
5 Mare or stallion
10 Barge
14 Strong metal
15 Dialect
16 Desire
17 Twinge
18 Roof structure
19 Cleopatra's river
20 Lazybones
22 Less colorful
24 Tennis shots
26 Bronte's governess
27 Bed covering
31 Relieves
35 "— to Billie Joe"
36 Fly high
37 Tiny
38 Took the bus
40 Twist
43 Kill
44 Smiles
46 College gal
48 Had a snack
49 Musician Hayes
50 Saloon keeper
52 Wise Men
54 Lion's ruff
55 Wing part
58 Song words
62 Follow closely
63 Stallone role
66 Short-tailed rodent
67 Curved molding
68 Response to a pun
69 Jug
70 Body of water
71 Glancing at 72 Out of danger

DOWN
1 Fastens (a dress)
2 Verbal
3 Taboo
4 Swallow
5 Cultured person
6 Harem room
7 Umbrella part
8 Use a certain iron
9 Manicurist's board
10 Rays
11 Baby bed
12 Act like a wolf?
13 Tinier
21 Pigeons' cries
23 Greek war god
25 Headliner
27 Welsh dog
28 Smells
29 Newspapers and radio
30 Noveist Jong
32 Greens
33 Delight
34 Crafter
39 Used glossy paint
41 Standard
42 Manage
45 Blemish
47 Contradict
50 Type of fission
51 An attack of —: fear
53 Canyon
55 On the summit
56 Shakespeare-an villain
57 Legal claim
59 Corn Belt state
60 Musical symbol
61 Bone-dry
64 Me, to Miss Piggy
65 Forbid

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

O	V	E	N		C	H	A	F	E		F	R	O	G
A	C	R	E		R	O	B	I	N		L	I	M	A
F	R	E	E	L	A	N	C	E	D		A	D	A	M
		D	U	D	E	S		E	A	T	E	A	T
	S	T	I	L	L	S		L	A	M	B
A	V	E	N	U	E		P	O	T	E	N	D
B	E	R	G		S	O	U	A	S		D	I	E	T
E	L	M		U	R	N		A	C	E
S	T	E	M		K	N	E	E	S		S	C	A	N
		E	D	I	F	I	C	E		U	N	W	I	N
		C	I	N	E		A	M	O	I	N	T
A	L	E	R	T	S		E	S	S	E	S
N	E	M	O		H	O	R	S	E	S	H	O	E	S
D	A	U	B		T	I	N	L	E	T		E	D	G	E
A	P	I	S	E		P	O	E	T	S		S	A	G	A

12-1-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

UMass third in Alaska Shootout

Minutemen return to three-guard set

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts basketball coach Bruiser Flint wasn't going to wait for another 6–9 start.

With his frontcourt in foul trouble — and No. 5 Purdue controlling the game despite a late first–half surge by UMass — in the third quarter of the Minutemen's 82–69 Great Alaska Shootout semifinal loss to the Boilermakers, Flint went to the three–guard offense

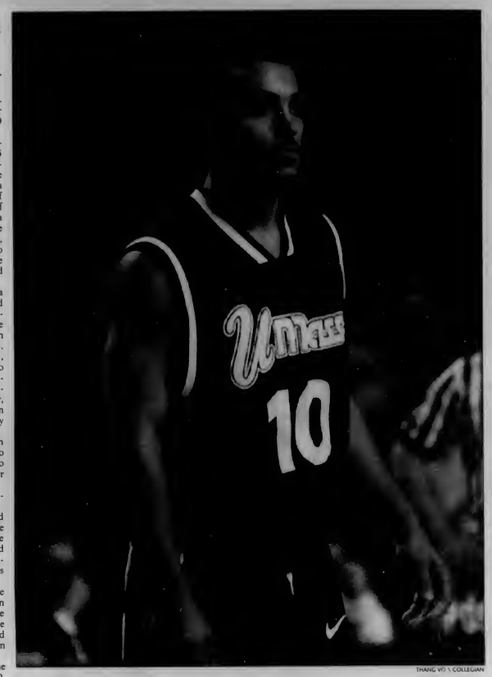
UMass	80
SW Louisiana	64

Purdue	82
UMass	69

Freshman point guard Jonathan DePina was the quickest player on the floor, and had provided a spark in UMass' 13– 3 second–quarter rally that pulled the Minutemen within 31– 26. Lari Ketner, who got into early foul trouble, picked up his third personal two minutes into the second half. Soon thereafter, Flint made the switch, putting DePina on the floor with Charlton Clarke and Monty Mack.

UMass	73
Seton Hall	60

DePina stabilized the backcourt while in the game, moving Clarke from the point to shooting guard. Mack (13 points) also appeared more comfortable with his former high school point man running the show.



The initial experiment, however, backfired.

With Ketner (14 points, 10 rebounds and 5 blocks) on the bench for much of the time and Tyrone Weeks playing with three fouls, Purdue's big men — Brad Miller and Brian Cardinal — instigated a quarter–ending 16–6 run to give the Boilermakers (5–1) a 56–42 lead at the end of three.

The Minutemen (2–2) trailed by double digits the rest of the way. They drew within 10 late in the game on three Mack free throws to make the score 71–61, but were held at bay by Chad Austin (20 points) and clutch Purdue foul shooting (22–of–23 in second half).

Purdue met No. 3 North Carolina in the Shootout final. The Tar Heels won, 73–69,

Turn to HOOP, page 9

THANG VO \ COLLEGIAN

Freshman Jonathan DePina played well in Alaska, leading UMass to a third place finish in the Great Alaska Shootout.

Women's hoop earns holiday split in Ohio

Tez Kraft scores a career-high to lead Minutewomen past Kent

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Only two members of the Massachusetts women's basketball team got to go to their home state for Thanksgiving. Tez Kraft, one of the two, took advantage of that opportunity and helped lead the Minutewomen to a road trip split in Ohio.

UMass defeated Kent Friday night, 67–65, and fell 59–56 to Ohio State yesterday afternoon. The Minutewomen move to 3–1 on the season.

UMass	67
Kent	65

Kraft made the most of her homecoming Friday night, as she scored a career–high 23 points on 11–of–15 shooting. She also contributed seven rebounds off the bench.

Junior Yolanda Rayside also bolstered the UMass cause with a double–double. Rayside collected 14 points on 7–of–9 shooting and a game–high 13 rebounds.

The Minutewomen used an 18–5 first half run to distance themselves from Kent. Sabriya Mitchell sparked the run with a pair of uncontested 3–pointers, as UMass went ahead 27– 11.

Rayside scored 12 of her 14 in the second half, but Kent used a 9–0 run late in the second half to pull within one with 2:28 remaining. Alison MacFarland sealed the win for UMass with a pair of free throws.

Kelly Van Huisen scored 11 points, while Mitchell finished with eight points and a career–high 12 assists.

Though the result was positive, the game was sloppy, with a season–high 35 turnovers on the UMass side.

Yesterday, it was Van Huisen who led the charge for the Minutewomen, as she scored 21 points in the losing cause at Ohio State's St. John Arena.

But UMass had no answer for the Buckeyes' Larecha Jones, who posted a game–high 29 points. Jones keyed Ohio State's successful comeback bid with 21 points in the second frame.

The Minutewomen utilized an 11–2 run late in the opening half, during which Van Huisen and Kraft provided all of the offensive power, to take a 34–25 lead into the locker room. After intermission, UMass was able to build to a lead as large as 14 points, including a lead by the same margin with just under eight minutes remaining in the game.

Ohio State	59
UMass	56

However, Jones went to work for Ohio State, scoring 11 unanswered points to pull the Buckeyes within three with five minutes left in regulation.

After UMass' Rayside, who finished with a team–high eight rebounds, brought the lead back to six, Jones nailed a pair of 3–pointers to even the score. Jamie Lewis closed the door on UMass with a trey with eight seconds left.

Kraft was the only other Minutewoman to finish in double figures in points at Ohio State, as she scored 14. Kara Tudman and MacFarland each contributed eight. Mitchell did not score for UMass, but added seven defensive rebounds and a team–high 10 assists in the effort.

UMass was able to better control its turnover problems, though the Minutewomen still committed 22.

Jones was the only Buckeye player in double figures, as Lewis provided the second–hardest scoring punch with nine points.

The loss is the first of the season for the Minutewomen, who will travel to Orono, Maine to face the Black Bears on Thursday. Game time is 7 p.m. That will conclude UMass' four–game road swing, and the Minutewomen will return home for a Sunday matinee against Holy Cross and a Thursday night meeting with Connecticut.

Patriots win, Jets lose; teams share AFC lead

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Drew Bledsoe is finding his touchdown touch in time to lead another New England Patriots stretch run toward the playoffs.

He threw two scoring passes yesterday after going two games without one, and the Patriots held on for a 20-17 victory over the Indianapolis Colts.

Jim Harbaugh's second scoring pass, an 11-yarder to Sean Dawkins with 1:08 left, cut the lead to three, but the Patriots recovered the onside kick and ran out the clock.

The Patriots (8-5), who have six wins against teams with losing records, moved into a tie for the AFC East lead with the New York Jets, who lost to Buffalo. But New England has no soft spots in its remaining games at Jacksonville, at home against Pittsburgh and at Miami.

In Bledsoe's four other NFL seasons, New England made the playoffs twice and was 5-0 and 4-1 in its last five games those years. The Patriots, who beat Miami 27-24 last Sunday, have a chance for another 5-0 finish.

Indianapolis (1-12), whose only win was against NFL champion Green Bay two weeks ago, missed a chance to best both Super Bowl teams from last season. The Colts trailed the Patriots just 13-10 after three quarters, but Bledsoe made sure there would be no upset this time.

Bledsoe, who had eight scoring passes in his first two games but only 13 in his next 10, threw a 3-yarder to Sam Gash and an 18-yarder to Troy Brown. Adam Vinatieri added field goals of 32 and 48 yards for New England.

Harbaugh's 18-yard scoring pass to Aaron Bailey on third-and-goal and Cary Blanchard's extra point made it 13-10 with 4:54 left in the third quarter. The Colts trailed 13-3 at halftime, managing only a 24-yard field goal by Blanchard.

Tailback Dave Meggett, who threw a scoring pass against Miami, made another big play when he returned a punt 47 yards to the Indianapolis 28-yard line with 32 seconds left in the third quarter.

Curtis Martin then ran 10 yards and, on the first play of the fourth quarter, Bledsoe connected with Brown in the end zone for a 20-10 lead.

Bledsoe completed 20-of-33 passes for 204 yards, while Harbaugh was 22-for-41 for 310.

Bledsoe was sharp early, throwing for first downs on the Patriots' first five third-down plays as they took a 10-3 lead on Vinatieri's 32-yarder.

The Patriots capitalized on a turnover for their first touchdown.

Marshall Faulk fumbled on Indianapolis' fourth offensive play, and Willie Clay recovered at the Colts 44-yard line. Bledsoe completed 5-of-6 passes on the drive, ending it with his pass to Gash.

On their last possession of the half, the Colts moved from their 20 to the Patriots 24, but Blanchard's 42-yard field goal attempt went wide left. New England took over 59 seconds before intermission and Bledsoe completed 4-of-5 passes for 32 yards and rushed for 4 yards, setting up Vinatieri's 48-yard field goal.

* * *

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Despite their vast improvement this season, the New York Jets still couldn't beat the Buffalo Bills. The Bills scored a first-quarter touchdown for the first time in 17 games, and Todd Collins hit Lonnie Johnson with a 62-yard scoring pass in the fourth quarter in a 20-10 victory over the Jets yesterday.

Johnson, who had dropped three passes earlier in the game, caught the ball at the 40, ran over safety Victor Green and beat linebacker Dwayne Gordon to the end zone with 12:47 remaining. Thurman Thomas gained 104 yards on 18 carries and moved into ninth place on the career rushing list with 11,325 yards. It was Thomas' first 100-yard game since Oct. 27, 1996, when he had 119 against New England.

The Bills (6-7) broke a three-game losing streak and beat the Jets (8-5) for the sixth straight time. A New York victory would have guaranteed the Jets their first winning season since 1988. The Jets, who started the day in sole possession of first place in the AFC East, are now tied at the top with New England, which beat Indianapolis 20-17 Sunday.

Buffalo scored a first-quarter touchdown for the first time since Nov. 24, 1996, on Collins' 28-yard pass to Andre Reed 3:49 into the game. Steve Christie kicked field goals of 49 and 34 yards for the Bills.

Neil O'Donnell completed 25-of-47 for 292 yards, including a 29-yard

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 9

Hockey woes continue in 4–3 loss to NU

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Sometimes a coach will make a roster move to spark a team out of a slump. Usually, that roster move will either result in the team solving the dilemma at hand, or will not solve anything at all.

In the Massachusetts hockey team's 4–3 loss to Northeastern last Saturday night at the William D. Mullins Center, neither result was evident. In two pregame roster moves, UMass coach Joe Mallen decided to start sophomore goaltender Dan Dileo over senior incumbent Brian Regan, and had to mix up his lines due to the one–game suspension of senior forward Tim Lovell.

Northeastern	4
UMass	3

After another end of the game defensive collapse in last Tuesday night's 3–2 overtime loss to Vermont, where UVM scored the gametying goal with 1:41 left and Regan was beat for the game–winner on a slapshot from outside the blueline, the team needed some kind of defensive spark.

The Minutemen played with a definite sense of defensive purpose against the Huskies (6–5–1, 5–3–1 in Hockey East), allowing a season–low 19 shots on Dileo, while getting 33 shots off on sophomore goalie Marc Robitaille. But Dileo's first start ever for UMass was an unenigmatic one, and as sophomore Bill Newson scored the eventual gamewinner at the 10:50 mark of the third period, Dileo had let in four goals — three of the marginal variety — on only 16 shots.

With a 2–9 record now, and a paltry 0–7 in Hockey East conference action, that kind of spark did not light the fire of victory. The roster move did spark the team to raise their game to the next level, but their problem of losing has not been solved yet.

But for Mallen, the problem was on the scoring side of things, not on the defensive side of things.

"I still thought we outplayed them, and outworked them," Mallen said. "The difference is that we couldn't bury the puck, and they did. We had great chances, and Robitaille made some great saves.

"I had never seen Dileo play in a full game, and I wanted to see how he could do. I thought the time was right, and from there on, it's a one–goal game. If we bury our chances, it's a win."

The game started off with a quality scoring opportunity for Minuteman sophomore Dean Stork, but his slap shot from the right point was nabbed by Robitaille at the 16:14 mark of the first period. Just 24 seconds later, though, freshman Matt Keating scored on Northeastern's first shot of the game, giving the Huskies the early 1–0 lead.

At the 12:35 mark of the period, freshman Kris Wallis continued his strong play of late with a one–man show. Breaking though the middle of the offensive zone, Wallis got a shot off on Robitaille, collected the rebound behind the net and fed fellow frosh R.J. Gates in front of the net for his second goal of the season — all in one motion.

UMass received the second of

Turn to HOCKEY, page 9

JORMA KANSANEN \ COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Jeff Blanchard tallied two goals and two assists this past weekend in a loss to Northeastern.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 61 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Tuesday, December 2, 1997

How high can you go?

Barbra Streisand and Celine Dion team up on a duet and release individual albums (see Arts & Living, page 6).

UMass hosts home opener

Bruiser Flint and the Massachusetts men's basketball team hosts College of Charleston in the home opener tonight at 7:00 (see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

Jackson calls for free elections in Kenya

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Jesse Jackson, a new U.S. envoy to Africa, called yesterday for free elections in Kenya, where the opposition accuses President Daniel arap Moi of trying to rig the vote."If these elections are as they ought to be — world-class elections, open, free, fair, nonviolent — it is going to help Kenya," Jackson said during a meeting with Moi at his State House office.

The 73-year-old president, who is seeking a fifth five-year term, said: "Of course, democracy is what we are all after. ... (It) would give the people the right to choose the leaders they want."

Kenya's political opposition contends that Moi and his Kenya African National Union party are working to sway the Dec. 29 vote in their favor.

Jackson arrived in Nairobi late Sunday for a two-day visit ahead of Kenya's second general election since the east African nation returned to multiparty politics in 1991.

NATION

Airline security beefed up with wire severing

CHICAGO (AP) — A commuter airline tightened security yesterday after wires connected to a plane's backup braking system were severed.

FBI agents and investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration were trying to determine if the five wires on the 64-passenger plane had been deliberately cut, said FBI spokesman Bob Long.

Over the weekend, an FAA official who spoke on condition of anonymity told The Associated Press that the wires were not frayed and that it appeared wire cutters had been used.

The severed wires were discovered Saturday during normal maintenance on the British Aerospace ATP twin-engine turboprop flown by Chicago-based United Feeder Service. The plane had arrived at O'Hare Airport the day before from South Bend, Ind.

No one would speculate on when the damage occurred. Airline officials said the plane had arrived without incident and sat on the ground about seven hours before the problem was discovered. Airline spokesman Bill Mink said the company had told its employees to be vigilant and enforce security measures strictly.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 38 LOW: 22	HIGH: 48 LOW: 30	HIGH: 46 LOW: 26

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics.....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Stoneyard built for Old Chapel's spring clock tower renovations

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

Many students may have wondered why the grassy common in front of the Old Chapel has been made to resemble a parking lot.

The area was paved as part of a project to renovate the chapel clock tower.

The cleared area will be fenced off to serve as a stoneyard, once renovations begin on the clock tower early next spring, said Richard Nathorst, project manager for the University Facilities planning department.

The purpose of a stoneyard is to hold the chapel's stone pieces while the process of renovation takes place. The tower will be taken down brick by brick, and the bricks will be put in the stoneyard, Nathorst said.

Stones will be numbered so that they will all be placed in the exact same positions when the tower is rebuilt, Nathorst said.

Nathorst is aware that students may be upset by the removal of the grassy common, and said that the common will be returned to it's original condition later next year.

"It's important for people to understand that everything will appear exactly the same as it did before [the renovation] started,"

BRIAN MCDERMOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Caution tape circles the Goodell commons before its paving last week.

Nathorst said. "we will restore it in every aspect to the way it was before we started, except that the [tower] will be secure."

The tower renovation project is expected to cost over $1 million in university funds. The renovations of the tower's clock faces and chime are being funded separately by a donation from the Class of 1944, Nathorst said.

The project will begin in either late February or early March, and is expected to last nine months, Nathorst said.

Built in 1884, the Old Chapel is the second oldest building on campus after South College.

The Old Chapel functioned as the school chapel until 1915, when Bowker Auditorium was opened, and it then served as the school library until the Gooddell Building was completed.

A nineteenth century tower clock was installed in 1890, and up until

Turn to CHAPEL, page 2

BRIAN MCDERMOTT \ COLLEGIAN

That holiday spirit...

Bill Littlefield hangs holiday lights in his hometown of Amherst yesterday afternoon.

Freshman Jennifer Nagle dead after long illness

University of Massachusetts freshman Jennifer A. Nagle, 19, of Brockton died Monday Nov. 24 at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston after a long illness.

Born in Stoughton, Nagle attended Northfield Elementary School in Northfield and graduated from Cardinal Spellman High School in 1996. Nagle was enrolled as a member of the Class of 2000 at UMass as a biochemistry major.

She lived in Van Meter Residence Hall while attending the University and took a leave of absence due to her illness.

While in high school, she was a member of the National Honor Society, Peer Ministry and the Volleyball team. Nagle attended classes at the Art Institute of Boston, and specialized in oils and photography.

She was a volunteer at the St. Joseph's Manor Nursing Home in Brockton and a former Sunday School teacher for of the Brockton Prince of Peace Lutheran Church.

In addition, she also participated in benefit walks and drives for AIDS research, hunger and homelessness.

She also enjoyed attending concerts and visiting Harvard Square.

She is survived by her father Peter C. Doody of Keene, N.H., her mother Charlene M. (Murphy) Doody, her step– father Peter C. Nagle of Brockton, a sister Judith A. Doody of Abington and two brothers Scott C. and Gregory M. Doody both of Brockton; her maternal grandparents Ralph and Rita Murphy of Norwell and several uncles, aunts and cousins.

Funeral services were held last Saturday at the Prince of Peace Lutheran Church by Rev. Beatrice Michael Brown. Following cremation, interment took place at the Calvary Cemetery, Brockton. Arrangements were made by Russell Funeral Home of Brockton.

—Leigh Faulkner

Protesters are represented in lawsuit against police

PLYMOUTH (AP) — Lawyers representing 25 American Indians who were arrested on Thanksgiving during an annual protest threatened Friday to take legal action against the police.

But the police chief said he had reviewed the incident and concluded that his officers had acted properly, while one of the first 12 protesters arraigned admitted to disorderly conduct and paid a fine.

"A civil rights case is prominent in everyone's mind," said Michael Almon, an American Civil Liberties Union attorney representing the group said after the arraignment Friday in Plymouth District Court. "There will be an offensive."

Meanwhile, extensive publicity about the incident resulted in additional complaints.

"It's a national disgrace that law enforcement still wants to treat Native Americans as they did in the 1800s," said Michael Graham of Roland, Okla., head of a group called United Native Americans, which is calling for November to be set aside as First American History Month in honor of American Indians.

The Plymouth incident began when police confronted hundreds of American Indians and others, many of them members of the United American Indians of New England, staging their annual "National Day of Mourning" protest in the town where Pilgrims celebrated their first Thanksgiving.

Prosecutor Ruth Kechejian said police tried to block the protesters, who she said were loud and unruly and were blocking traffic. When they wouldn't move, Kechejian said, police were met with profanity and pushing and shoving.

Capt. William O'Meara, who commanded the police, said the Indians were given repeated warnings and time to disperse. He said they did not have a parade permit required for them to march.

The protesters had interfered last year with the annual Pilgrim's Progress march of costumed re-enactors to a worship service on top of Burial Hill, police said Friday. But not enough officers were working at the time to stop them and the service had to be canceled.

"They would have been arrested last year if we had sufficient officers," Police Chief Robert Pomeroy said. This year, Pomeroy said, he had 20 extra local police officers, 15 state police and some Plymouth County Sheriff's Department officers on hand.

Twenty-five protesters were arrested. One admitted Friday to disorderly conduct and unlawful assembly and was fined $50; a student from Maryland, she said she did not have time to return for further hearings. Eleven pleaded innocent and were ordered back to court on Jan. 29. The

Turn to PROTEST, page 2

Inmates try to undermine the testimony of Michael Yandle

CONCORD, N.H. (AP)— Three New Hampshire prison inmates testified yesterday that another inmate who fingered his former associates in a deadly armored car robbery betrayed them to get out of prison. Michael Yandle told other inmates he could face the death penalty if he refused to cooperate with federal prosecutors, the prisoners said. However, Yandle never was charged with a capital crime.

"He told me to tell (defendant) Mikey (O'Halloran), 'I was fighting for my life. ... I'm going to do what I have to do to get out,'" prisoner Leonard Kenney testified yesterday. Instead, Kenney offered to help Michael O'Halloran's defense.

"I know he was a rat," said Kenney, who is serving time for burglary. Yandle "was desperate to get out."

Five men from the Charlestown section of Boston are on trial for a series of bank and armored car robberies in New England and Florida from 1990 to 1995. Two armored car guards were shot and killed on Aug. 25, 1994, during a robbery outside the NFS Savings Bank in Hudson.

Yandle, 33, was the first person arrested after that robbery, on charges he stole a car connected with it.

For some time, Yandle refused to break the "code of silence" that prevailed in Charlestown, where residents know that helping police can get them killed. Yandle was convicted in 1995 of lying to the grand jury about the Hudson robbery and obstructing justice, and sent to prison.

Finally, however, Yandle agreed to testify and became the first in a series of witnesses who broke the "code of silence" and took the stand against the defendants. As a result, he was released from prison in October.

Yandle testified in October that he was a good friend of O'Halloran and also knew defendant Anthony Shea.

According to another inmate, Ronald Wilson, who is in jail for assault, Yandle often bragged about his involvement in the Hudson robbery.

"He (Yandle) said he and his brother were more or less involved in Hudson," Wilson said. "He said he had stopped up there at T-Bones restaurant a couple of times while he was scoping out the scene of the bank at Hudson."

Yandle also told Wilson that he had set on fire a white Mazda 929 that was connected with the deadly Hudson robbery. Hours after the robbery, police found the Mazda burning in a parking lot. Inside, they found money and bank bags from the robbery, along with a bulletproof vest and a jumpsuit.

Yandle "said he disposed of the white Mazda," Wilson said. "He said he torched it, abandoned it."

Yandle testified in October that he left the Mazda and keys with O'Halloran. However, Kenney said that Yandle had told him.

O'Halloran had nothing to do with getting rid of the car.

Assistant U.S. Attorney David Vicinanzo said that Yandle — who was in jail for the first time — may have exaggerated his role in the Hudson robbery because he wanted other prisoners to think he was tough and "connected."

Providers to make net kid–safe

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The online industry, hoping to keep government intervention at bay, promised yesterday to do more to help parents keep Internet smut away from their kids.

Building on pledges made to President Clinton in July, industry groups at a three-day meeting discussed how to educate parents about anti-smut screening and how to highlight Internet sites that are clean enough for kids.

Still, "Technology is not a replacement for good parenting," said America Online Chairman Steve Case. "I think technology is a supplement that gives parents the tools to make the choices that they think are appropriate."

The Center for Democracy and Technology, a group that works to protect computer users' civil liberties, says all major providers of Internet access to consumers offer screening technology free or at a nominal cost. Those providers, serving 14 million households, include AOL, AT&T WorldNet, CompuServe, Prodigy and Erol's. But a survey of 750 families by the monthly Family PC magazine found that only 26 percent use screening software, most of them because it is built in to their web browsers or offered by their online service providers.

Just 4 percent of parents use screening software when they buy and install it on their computers, the magazine survey said. America Online, the Walt Disney Co.'s online service, Time Warner, MCI and the Children's Partnership, a child advocacy group, are among the organizations announcing new initiatives that include educating parents on the use of software that blocks access to adult-oriented sites.

The Center for Democracy and Technology, meanwhile, has commitments from online and software companies to help parents choose screening software that best suits their needs and values, deputy director Danny Weitzner said, though he wasn't sure how that would be accomplished.

A group that includes including Yahoo! Inc. and WebTV is promoting a new Web site, smartparent.com, that seeks to help parents educate themselves and their children about the dangerous side of the Net. Time Warner also said it will take steps to teach kids about online safety.

"People will be more familiar with what's available to them," said Kathryn Montgomery, president of the Center for Media Education, an advocacy group that wants to make the Internet safer and more educational for children. "This is the beginning of the discussion, not the end of one."

The efforts grow out of a White House meeting this summer that Clinton said yielded a consensus on "how to pave the way to a family-friendly Internet without paving over the constitutional guarantees to free speech and free expression."

The Supreme Court in June struck down a law designed to keep cyberspace's seedy side away from children. It said the 1996 Communications Decency Act, in attempting to protect children from indecent material on the Internet, improperly restricted the free-speech rights of adults.

Hoping to avoid a v-chip for the Internet, representatives from the computer-related industries have been working on voluntary efforts to make the Internet a safer place for youngsters. The White House has said it wants a solution "as powerful for the computer as the v-chip will be for the television that protects children in ways that are consistent with America's free-speech values." Next year

Turn to INTERNET, page 3

Gov. Pataki signs bill allowing hemophiliacs to sue

By Donna Liquori
Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. George Pataki signed legislation yesterday allowing hemophiliacs who contracted the AIDS virus or their survivors to sue drug companies that allegedly provided tainted blood-clotting substances.

"I approve this extraordinary legislation to ensure that hemophiliacs infected with HIV/AIDS in this manner have their day in court," Pataki wrote in his approval message. "Only in the most exceptional and compelling cases should the state expand limitations period to revive time-barred claims."

Under the new law, which opens a two-year legal window, suits may be filed immediately. The companies in question are: Bayer Corp.'s Cutter Laboratories, Alpha Therapeutic 0Corp., Baxter International Inc. and Rhone-Poulenc Rorer.

Turn to PATAKI, page 2

Campus Police Log

Accident— Leaving the Scene
Nov. 26
A vehicle in parking lot 71 on Massachusetts Avenue was struck by an unknown vehicle.

Accident — Property Damage
Nov. 30
A minor two vehicle accident occurred on Thatcher Way. No injuries were reported.
A minor accident occurred on John Adams Road when an individual was backing up their vehicle.

Animal Complaint
Nov. 30
Environmental Health and Safety was called to pick up a sick squirrel outside of Butterfield Residence Hall.

Annoying Behavior
Nov. 27
A loud party was reported in the Campus Center Hotel.
Nov. 29
Skateboarders were reported in the Campus Center Garage.

B&E/Burglary
Nov. 26
A vehicle in parking lot 33 on University Drive was broken into.

Disturbance
Nov. 29
A verbal argument occurred between individuals on Presidents Drive.

Family Offenses, Domestics
Nov. 29
UMPD investigated 911 phone calls from North Village Apartments. The matter was resolved.

Health and Safety Hazard
Nov. 29
Environmental Health and Safety was called to check on a gas stove in Farley Lodge.

Motor Vehicle Theft
Nov. 30
A vehicle was reported stolen from parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.
A reported stolen vehicle was located in a parking lot on Hicks Way.

Vandalism
Nov. 26
Sexual graffiti was written on the fourth floor of Grayson Residence Hall.

Attention all Collegian staff members:

The deadline for applications for spring 1998 editorial positions is today. Completed applications must be submitted to the Managing Editor by 5 p.m.

A mandatory, all-staff meeting and Candidate's Night will be held tomorrow at 7 p.m. The location will be posted in the newsroom. If you are running for a position but cannot attend Candidate's Night, you must speak to Laura Stock or Chris Stamm today.

Voting for editorial positions will take place Dec. 4-5 in the Collegian offices.

More information and applications are available in the newsroom.

■ chapel

continued from page 1

1935 students received 29 cents an hour to wind the clock once a week, Jim MacKenzie said.

Eventually the clock was set up to be wound electrically, but every time the university's clock system was updated the Chapel clock could not keep up, MacKenzie said.

Then in the Fall of 1994 the clock was put on it's own electrical system, MacKenzie said.

Members of the Clock and Chimes Club, also known as the Quasimodo Club, still ring the chime of the tower clock a couple of times a week and on special occasions, Sanhueni said.

According to Sanhueni, a member of the Quasimodo Club, the chime was rung every morning and evening during the 1950's and 60's.

■ pataki

continued from page 2

There was no immediate comment from a spokeswoman representing the companies.

In New York state, 600 people could have joined a federal class-action settlement providing $100,000 to each person infected from the substances used to treat hemophilia. There are about 60 hemophiliacs or survivors in New York who chose not to join the settlement and could take advantage of the new law, proponents of the measure said.

Proponents had argued that victims and their survivors should have the right to seek settlements similar to the $2 million an Indianapolis couple won earlier this year when they sued on behalf of their dead hemophiliac son.

Hemophiliacs contend the companies failed to take proper precautionary steps, including heating plasma to kill the virus, when they produced the blood-clotting substances.

"This is tough litigation," said Eric Weinberg, the lawyer handling the bulk of the cases, said Monday. "But for the people who opted out (of the settlement), I don't think it was a matter of money. I think they chose to continue on because they want to have a sense of fighting for justice for what happened to them. "We were very angry," Denise Maloney, whose husband, James LeRoux died of AIDS in 1993 at the age of 42, said Monday. "We were told it was an act of God, no one was at fault; it couldn't have been foreseen."

Maloney, whose husband was a Wall Street broker and a hemophiliac, lived with him in Yorktown Heights in Westchester, and has since moved to New Jersey.

Brian McDermott/ Collegian

How's the weather down there?

On the 24th floor of the library, graduate comparative literature student Nina Gilleman gets some studying done.

■ protest

continued from page 1

other 13 were to be arraigned on Tuesday.

Pomeroy said he had reviewed videotapes of the incident and read his officers' reports, "and I am completely satisfied with how the officers conducted themselves."

Altman asked the judge to order the videotapes preserved as evidence. Protest leaders said the police seemed to have been lying in wait for them.

"The cops refused to negotiate," said one, Mahtowin Munro. "They were hell-bent on arresting us."

John G. Sapiel, 66, of Falmouth, another protester who was arrested, said that most had moved off the street as asked after the first few arrests, but they also were arrested anyway and Maced.

Police denied they used Mace, although they did say they used small amounts of pepper spray, but only on people who were unruly during their arrests.

Protesters said they would not hesitate to return next year. "We don't need a permit to march and we will not stop coming to Plymouth," said one, Moonanum James.

"Clearly the town of Plymouth and the Plymouth police department have declared war on Native Americans."

WINTER SESSION 1998 AT FITCHBURG STATE COLLEGE

NICARAGUAN BIOLOGICAL RESEARCH

STUDY ABROAD PROGRAM

Offered in collaboration with the University of Mobile (Central American Campus at San Marcos) this two-week program runs January 3-18, 1998. Enroll in six credits (undergraduate or graduate), exploring the topography of volcanos, cloud forests and tropical islands of Central America.

COURSE TOPIC: Tropical Biology (6 credits)

- Accommodations in university dorms
- Meal Plan
- Shuttle service from airport to San Marcos
- Access to university facilities and services

For more information, call the International Education Office at (978)665-3089 or the DGCE Office at (978)665-3182.

THIS IS THE BREAK YOU'VE BEEN WAITING FOR

College Students: While you're home for semester break, why not take a course or two at Fitchburg State College? In just a few weeks, you can earn credits in English, art education, philosophy, psychology, sociology or computer science. Both graduate and undergraduate, our credits are transferable to virtually any college in the country.

WINTER INTERSESSION - Dec. 17 - Jan. 16
Register Today with the Division of Graduate and Continuing Education. Phone-In, Fax-In, Mail-In, Walk-In or E-Mail!

P.S. - For those of you who would like to plan ahead, ask about our summer course schedule, which this year includes amazingly affordable credit studies abroad in Rome, Italy and Dublin, Ireland.

VISIT OUR WEB SITE AT WWW.FSC.EDU

Division of Graduate and Continuing Education
978.665.3181
Fax: 978.665.3658
E-mail: dgce@fsc.edu

Admissions
978.665.3144
Fax: 978.665.4540
E-mail: admissions@fsc.edu

Professional Development Center
978.665.3182
E-mail: pdc@fsc.edu

Brian McDermott/ Collegian

Scientific inquiry

Paul Stephenson, a graduate student in plant biology, works on an experiment in Morrill Science center yesterday morning.

■ internet

continued from page 1

new TV sets are expected to have a computer chip that would allow parents to block unwanted programs.

Instead of seeking new legislation to force the computer industry to shield children from Internet smut — as some in Congress are doing and some anti-pornography groups want — the Clinton administration is pushing a system of voluntary restraints. That's welcome news for the industry and electronic civil liberties groups, which fought to overturn anti-smut provisions in the 1996 telecommunications law.

But some civil liberties and free-speech groups worry that screening software may inadvertently block out useful material for kids.

"Parents must be truthfully informed about what these so-called blocking technologies would censor from their children including a wide range of artistic, educational, political material," said David Mendoza, executive director of the National Campaign for Freedom of Expression, an advocacy group against censorship. Jerry Berman, chief of the Center for Democracy and Technology, acknowledges some problems, but says: "We think filtering is the right road. Are there problems? Absolutely. The ACLU is right to point out that there may be pressures toward one v-chip for the Internet, or certain kinds of censorship."

The American Library Association has a list of family-friendly Web sites parents can access separately or

Were on line, get the Collegian anytime you want @ http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Reno works for decision rejecting appeals

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Janet Reno worked yesterday on documents laying out her expected decision to reject Republican appeals for an independent counsel to investigate telephone fund raising by President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore.

"No, not yet," Reno replied when asked yesterday whether she had reached her final decisions on independent counsels for Clinton, Gore and former Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary. She predicted she'd decide on Tuesday.

That's the deadline for her to relay her rulings to a special court that is in charge of selecting independent counsels. Aides to Reno said no word would be sent to the court yesterday.

But these aides said Reno's detailed review of recommendations by the Justice Department's campaign finance task force suggested she would follow their advice against seeking appointments of independent counsels for any of the three figures. Republicans on Capitol Hill have been predicting that outcome for days.

That decision would mean Reno had rejected the view in a memo FBI Director Louis J. Freeh sent her: That the broad range of allegations supported a request for an independent counsel. Reno has said the law requires her to find evidence that specific felonies may have been committed rather than to refer "some big blob" of allegations to a counsel.

Republicans have complained that Reno has focused too narrowly on the telephone calls. But Justice Department officials said the task force is investigating a host of campaign fund-raising allegations and figures, that indictments of two Democratic fund-raisers are likely later this month and that if any of these avenues of investigation lead to Clinton or top administration figures, Reno would ask for an independent counsel.

They say the independent counsel statute, combined with written requests from Republicans on Capitol Hill, have momentarily pushed the telephone fund raising to a decision point, but a decision against seeking a counsel in this instance would not exonerate top administration officials in other elements of the probe.

The Justice Department task force has concluded that the 114-year-old statute that bars solicitation of campaign contributions in federal offices was aimed at protecting federal workers from shakedowns by their bosses and has never been used to prosecute officials for telephoning citizens at home or work in pursuit of donations. The counsel statute requires Reno to follow Justice Department prosecution precedents.

Clinton has said he may have made such calls but can't recall them. Aides have testified he did, but most apparently were from the White House living quarters which are not covered by the law.

US will support S. Korea IMF bail–out package

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States stands ready to support a financial bailout plan for South Korea if that country accepts the tough conditions of the International Monetary Fund, President Clinton said Monday. Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin cautioned the adjustment period for the Koreans would be difficult.

Neither Clinton nor Rubin would speculate on how much money the United States might contribute, but the administration stressed that the funds would be provided only as a second line of defense should an initial package assembled by the IMF prove inadequate. "I favor a strong agreement with the IMF that would actually restore financial stability and confidence in South Korea," the president said. "And if such an agreement could be made then I would favor the United States participating along with Japan, much the same way we did in the recent matter involving Indonesia." Indonesia, Thailand and the Philippines all sought IMF help this year amid a wave of Asian currency devaluations, bankruptcies and bank failures. South Korea, the world's 11th largest economy, originally asked the IMF for $20 billion but said last week it would need far more.

In a statement yesterday, the World Bank said it was prepared to make a "substantial and rapid" contribution to the South Korean rescue package.

The South Korea rescue package was being modeled after a $40 billion effort launched in October for Indonesia. In that case, $23 billion was put up by the IMF and other international lending agencies, including the World Bank, with the United States pledging an additional $3 billion as part of a $17 billion package of back-up resources should the initial amount not prove sufficient to stabilize the Indonesian economy.

Clinton said the United States, in helping Indonesia and Mexico earlier, had insisted that they accept "a rigorous plan that had a high likelihood of success in restoring long-term health and stability."

The president said the Mexicans "took a lot of hits to their economy, but it rebounded much more quickly than anyone thought it would, and they paid the money back to us ahead of time and at a profit."

In the case of the Mexican currency crisis, the United States was forced to take the lead in pledging $20 billion in what eventually grew to a $50 billion international rescue package. South Korea and the other Asian countries that have been forced to turn to the IMF help this year are facing hurdles similar to those that Mexico successfully overcame, Rubin said. It will be essential for the Asian countries to stick with their IMF-approved reform programs even if in the early stages "the adjustment period is difficult," Rubin said.

Brian McDermott/ Collegian

Getting ready for Thursday...

As the Dec. 4 opening night nears for the cast and crew of Tommy, freshmen Shira Helt, Tamara Garabedian, and Tara Keading assist in the preparations.

Only 2 weeks of class left

IT AIN'T EASY, BUT IT'S SMART

Winter Session '98

Why Winter Session?
- Catch up so you can graduate on time
- Focus on just one class, one set of homework assignments
- Make up credits
- Take usually overenrolled prerequisite for your major
- Earn three credits in three weeks

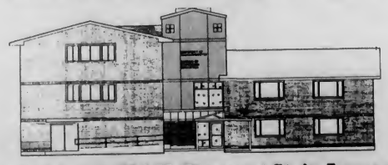
Smaller classes mean more individual attention.

Winter Session '98
January 5-26



Pick up a blue course catalog at Continuing Education in Goodell Bldg. or anywhere on campus; in town at stores, restaurants, banks.

Or call 545-0107 and we'll send you one.

Check out the updated course list at www.umass.edu/contined/

Winter Session
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst

The Division of Continuing Education is

moving to 358 N. Pleasant St. in January.

The End is near...

Of classes, that is!

THE LAST DAY OF CLASSES IS DECEMBER 12. THE NEXT TWO WEEKS ARE YOUR LAST CHANCE TO GET GIFTS FOR YOUR FRIENDS BEFORE EXAMS. DON'T LET YOU FRIENDS GO HOME FOR A MONTH WITHOUT SOMETHING TO REMIND THEM OF YOU.

STOP IN TODAY, AND LET US HELP YOU PICK THE PERFECT PRESENTS.

Ustore
University of Massachusetts Amherst
University Store
In the Lederle Campus Center
Hours
M-F 9:30 a.m.-5 p.m.
(413) 545-2619

Holly Days

We accept AMEX, Discover, MC, Visa, and the UCard!

Think this AD SUCKS?

Come show us what ya got!!

Now hiring

Graphics Department is Hiring Day Advertising for Spring 1998. Anyone interested is welcome to stop by the Campus Center basement and fill out an application.

Computer know-how and experience with Quark/Photoshop encouraged.

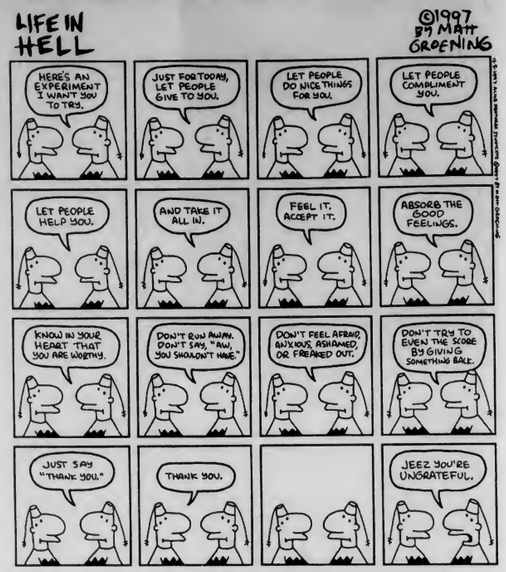
I'm sorry, but...

K. Lawrence McDonald

Back when times were simpler, (or at least I am assuming so) cave-people (to avoid offense, I'll say Neanderthals) communicated with grunts and obvious hand signals. Babies (young humans), in the same way, use only their available faculties to get the message across to others that they need to be fed. What makes no sense to me, however, is when we, as a collective society, went absolutely berserk and decided that every little thing must be analyzed and given a "politically correct" name.

Here is a case in point: I went to high school in a fairly moderate city in Rhode Island (and yes, there are other cities in Rhodey besides good 'ol Providence, you just have to look hard to find them), where the mayor decided to make a change that would "benefit everyone in the city," no doubt. Well, we all know how offensive the phrase "man-hole cover" is, so it was deemed necessary to change it to "person hole cover." Honestly, I am all for finding non-offensive ways to represent touchy subjects such as the names of ethnic groups or the differences in the sexes. (I hear that there is a movement going on now to say that both men and women are equal in all respects, but that is just a rumor.)

Listen up, as much as we want to have equal rights for all, which is a great pursuit, there are differences in the sexes. Men and women should be able to hold the same jobs at the same rate of pay, but we have gotten to such a point that you are chastised for actually trying to express the fact that men have physical aspects that women do not. I think that John Cleese hit it right on the head when he said, in The Life of Brian, "You can't have babies Stan, you haven't got a womb! Where is the fetus going to gestate, are you going to keep it in a box?" (For an in-context referral, go rent the movie, it's worth the $2.50.)



That brings me to the point that the American population has lost its sense of humor. I'm sure that some readers were offended at the last comment. IT WAS A PUN, A JOKE. For the love of God, lighten up. Can I even say that without getting into trouble? Everyone who thinks that they are so "bad" because they are watching "South Park," I have an update for you. Compared to the humor that can be seen on BBC (British TV for all you Yanks), the humor of our beloved Eric Cartman is weak and ignorant. Don't get me wrong, I put everything down on Wednesdays to watch the show; it is a refreshing break from the monotony of Martha Stuart and Kathy Lee Gifford peppering the channels. Even "Saturday Night Live," which made its reputation upon being "cutting edge," has become decidedly lame. It has become a little racier in the past season or two, but I think that the days of "Mr. Robinson's Neighborhood" are gone. Maybe we can hope for the "Church Lady" or something. Of course it would now have to be called the "Non- denominational Person with Possible Agnostic Beliefs."

Another thing, teaching (hmm, how about non-influential informational presentation to minors?) schools, particularly on the high school level, have gone absolutely hog-wild (sorry if I offended any farmers reading the paper). Again, I consider myself a liberal, but how the hell can you teach a history lesson about the Crusades without mentioning the fact that they were wars (violent differences) based on the different beliefs in God? (Oops, I guess I slipped.) There were other reasons as well — money and territory come to mind — but it is ludicrous not to mention God. I know that not everyone follows the same faith, that is the beauty of America, and we are very lucky compared to other countries where independent thought is suppressed. However, I feel that it is a terrible lie to tell to the "future of America" that history is not black or white, but gray. I was lucky enough to go to a private school where we did not have to follow the state curriculum of politically correctness/cowardliness.

But, I am worried that schools are breeding over sensitized robots that will not be able to form their own thoughts. Future voters who will overload if a wrong "equation" is entered into their "computer." Times are changing and the "sheep" mentality is growing in numbers (sorry to all the shepherds out there), and it is becoming harder to have an individual view in today's society.

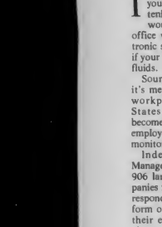
Personally, I feel that color is just a color, and I will try to find the least offensive way to refer to people that are different than me. That is a personal choice. Equal rights between race and sex are the right way to go, and everyone should look in that direction. Just make sure that you are doing it to be true to yourself, primarily as well as others. Baaa... baaa...

K. Lawrence McDonald is a Collegian staff member.

Big business is watching you

Imagine how you would feel if you discovered your employer was reading your e-mail and listening in on your phone calls. Imagine how you would feel if your comings and goings in the office were watched by video cameras and electronic sensors. And think of how you would react if your boss reserved the right to inspect your body fluids.

Sound like an Orwellian nightmare? Actually, it's merely a description of many workplaces across the United States. Because as technology becomes more sophisticated, many employers are finding new ways to monitor employee behavior.



Indeed, a recent American Management Association survey of 906 large and medium-sized companies found that 35 percent of the respondents occasionally use some form of electronic surveillance on their employees. Drug testing is also on the rise, with American companies helping to make the manufacture of equipment and chemicals for drug tests a $300 million industry.

And the changes keep coming. Already many businesspeople have traded in their trusty office keys for pin numbers — which enable employers to track employee whereabouts. At CBS News headquarters in New York, employees actually wear coded badges that a scanner reads as they come to work each morning. And a company called Hygiene Guard is currently test-marketing a system that tells employers if workers have washed up after taking a powder.

Indeed, there appears to be no limit to what our employers will one day be able to know about us. The Chicago Tribune reports that engineers at Microsoft are currently hard at work on a two-way video system. That's right — it's a computer that watches you as you watch it.

Already, Microsoft has successfully created a computer that "knows" when an employee leaves her desk. It can also decipher some distinguishing characteristics — for example, it can tell the difference between a large man with a beard and a petite woman with long hair. This, says Microsoft brass, is only the beginning.

FOCUS ON WOMEN

SARA ECKEL

I don't want to sound paranoid here but wasn't this, um, EXACTLY what George Orwell was talking about in 1984? Sure, he said it would happen a decade ago, and, sure, he said that this behavior would come from the government and not big business. But you have to admit — the guy was pretty close to the mark. Because it's not just employees who are being watched. It's consumers too.

Every time we make a long-distance phone call, use a credit card, subscribe to a magazine, place a catalog order, use a frequent-shopper card or surf the Internet, corporate America takes note. Our data is continually being swapped and sold, with magazines selling subscription lists to direct-mail companies and credit agencies selling lists of Visa holders to department stores. The average consumer, reports USA Today, is currently on at least 25 different marketing databases, and there are more than 15,000 specialized lists.

Even more insidious is the way our information is trafficked on the Internet. Think those trips to the Hanson Lovers site are your little secret? Think again. Because chances are your computer has squealed on you. If you've done a fair amount of net surfing, then you probably have a "cookie" file stored on your hard drive that keeps track of many of the Web sites you visit. Online advertising agencies are able to access your cookie file, see the places you've surfed to, and custom-tailor ads for you. Which is why that ad for Hanson's CD popped up while you were innocently downloading today's stock reports.

Once again, I don't want to be an alarmist. Just how corporate America could misuse their knowledge of our preferences on blue jeans and breakfast cereals, I cannot say. But I do think that we should keep a close eye on big business. Because of this we can be sure: Big Business is definitely watching us.

Sara Eckel is a syndicated columnist. Send comments to the author in care of this newspaper or send her e-mail at saraeum@aol.com.

I'm with the band

Casey Kane

In case you don't know, there will be a great show at the Mullins Center tonight. At say, around 7 p.m. People will be cheering and screaming, arms will be waving, feet will be stomping.

And if you are one of the thousands present to see the Massachusetts men's basketball team take on the College of Charleston, make it a point to check it out.

You see, I'm not talking about the hoop team, though, I know from experience the Minutemen can host a dandy affair. No, I'm talking about the UMass Hoop Band.

That's right, the band. If you doubt that I'm serious about the frenzied ambiance and the terrific show, simply pay attention during any time-out.

The Hoop Band provides musical accompaniment to the Minutemen's fan support. With a barrage of songs ready at a moment's notice, the band can electrify the crowd.

The band's director, Thom Hannum, is just as loud and spirited as any of the Mullins faithful. Check that: he's louder, given the fact that he helps lead cheers with his megaphone.

The band even has its own CD out; a compilation of everything from "Sanford and Son" to the theme from ESPN's "Sportscenter."

It's easy for me to grasp and comprehend the dedication and intensity the band has developed. Last year, Hannum and several members of the group graciously invited me to sit in with them. I accepted and did so during last year's Fordham game.

I was nervous when I got to the game, especially considering I was about half a decade removed from the last time I picked up an alto saxophone. I hoped that I would be able to sort of fade into the background, since I new I would most likely not be able to keep up with the experienced players. Of course, I got to play the second alto part, but it figured I was right in front of a microphone.

Still, the members of the band wasted no time in making me feel comfortable. I was given one of the maroon and white rugby shirts that are their uniforms. And just about everyone in the entire saxophone section assured me things wouldn't be as bad as I thought.

All things considered, it wasn't that bad. And if you take away my jitters and the several (read: many) off-key notes I proceeded to hit during the evening, everything actually went well.

More than anything, though, being in the band for an evening gave me a different perspective on hoop games. I have been to games as a fan, I have been to games as a member of the media, but being in the band was different.

As a fan of the sport, I have, over the years, grown to appreciate both the game itself and the atmosphere that surrounds the unique world that is college hoop.

Most people associate cheerleaders with the game: mascots and fans. Most people think of the band, too, but it's not always the first thing mentioned. The people in the UMass Hoop Band are giving Minuteman fans reason to put the band at the top of that list.

So, if you want to see a couple of college kids put on a great show, head on over to the Mullins Center at about 7 p.m. tonight. The players will be in the school colors, fans will be cheering, and, if you're interested, the men's basketball team will be playing as well.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Radio Free awareness

To the Editor:

I am writing to thank Collegian columnist Daniel Bodah for his editorial concerning the legal victory for Free Radio Berkeley. Although I don't echo Mr. Bodah's empassioned move for the outright abolition of the Federal Communications Commission, I do agree that the FCC must be held to much tighter scrutiny. There are serious First Amendment issues at hand here and I urge anyone who subscribes to the 'slippery slope' theory to research low wattage radio to see that the FCC is not looking out for your interests, as it is obliged to do.

Recently, one such violation of civil rights has occurred much closer to home than California. Radio Free Allston of Boston was shut down over the Halloween holiday. Radio Free Allston is a station broadcasting without an FCC license because of a 19-year-old ban on community radio. The First Amendment guarantees that the government shall make no provisions abridging Americans' freedom of speech, and the Communications Act of 1934 declares that the FCC is to act in the on behalf of the public interest, necessity, and convenience. The FCC does not uphold the Constitution and has forgotten about the public interest.

Last year, Congress passed a bill which allows one radio company to control up to 50 percent of a radio market. The FCC claims that this move is in the public interest. Still, they deny the public access to the airwaves in favor of big business.

For information about how the FCC and the U.S. government is defecating on your First Amendment rights, consult the following web sites:

www.fcc.gov (site for the Federal Communications Commission)

www.freeradio.org (site for Free Radio Berkeley)

www.tiac.net/users/error/radiofreeallston/index.html (site for Radio Free Allston)

Thanks for bringing this issue to your readers,

Kevin Donoghue
Westfield State College
kdonoghue1@foma.wsc.mass.edu

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Write for Ed/Op!

If you have interesting ideas and opinions and you have a desire to vent them, then you should have an editorial column.

Call 5-1361 for more information.

(Conspiracy Theorists and Pseudo-Intellectuals need not apply)

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

112 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor-in-Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1995. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

More loathing in the tents of Zion

Part One: Israel and the Arabs

Hussein Ibish

In recent months, the schisms in Israeli society and the Zionist movement exposed by the Rabin assassination have blossomed beautifully. They constitute, without question, the most serious divisions since the founding of the Israeli state 50 years ago, a period of unprecedented loathing.

One of the most divisive issues involves Israel's relationships with its Arab neighbors and the Palestinians.

Loathe thy neighbor

The dispute can be described as being essentially between two camps — consolidationists and expansionists. In political terms consolidationists are largely to be found in the parties associated with the Labor coalition, whereas expansionists tend to be clustered around the Likud block.

Loathing emereges, in this case, from incompatable evaluations of the state of the Zionist project and the future of the Israeli state. The consolidationists, are more or less content with the present condition of the Israeli state.

They point out that, through a combination of expulsions and immigration, Israel has created a solid jewish majority within its de jure borders. Through a series of wars, it extended its de facto control to all of Palestine. Its military security is unwritten by the most potent military in the region, courtesy of the U.S. taxpayer, and topped off with one of the world's largest nuclear arsenals. It enjoys the diplomatic protection of the United States, which thanks to unrivaled lobbying and campaign contributions by American Zionists, gives unconditional support to Israel. The Palestinians, Zionism's main rival and victim, are throughly dispossesed, disenfranchised and defeated.

Thus it is argued by the consolidationists that the Zionist movement has acheived its main aims — the creation of a militarily secure Jewish-dominated state in Palestine.

Consolidationist thought has moved on to the next challenge — how to ensure the long-term viability of this colonial European-ruled enclave in the Arab World. Those with a sense of history recall, after all, that for over two hundred years there was a European-ruled, Christian dominated state in Palestine. The goal is to ensure that, when contemporary asymmetries in technological capacity and international relations return to a more normal equalibrium, the State of Israel does not go the way of the Crussder State (which most readers have probably never even heard of).

This concern began to emerge in ruling cricles in Israel by the early 1980's, with former hawks like retired chief of military intelligence Yehoshafat Harkabi and General Matti Peled warning of the long-term danger to Israel of permanent isolation in the Middle East.

Rabin and the consolidationists saw the post-Gulf War environment as the perfect opportunity to address this issue while keeping maxium Israeli control of the West Bank and without allowing for the creation of a Palestinian state.

The Rabin (and Clinton) plan was that Israel could lay the foundations for normalizing its role in the Middle East and develop an aura of legitimacy by making limited consessions to the Palestinians through the Oslo process.

This would formalize and legitimize Israeli de facto sovereignty over the West Bank by creating a set of Palestinian bantustans: small, isolated pockets of "autonomy" where the Arab rabble would be policed by their own quislings rather than Israeli troops. Meanwhile, and quietly, land expropriation and settlement activity would continue apace, leading to eventual formal annexation at some probably distant future date.

In this way, Rabin sought to pacify the Palestinian cities, please the United States, give the Arab nations and others the excuse to open trade and diplomatic relations with Israel, and defuse international condemnation of ongoing Israeli colonial activity.

To the expansionists, however, this plan constitutes a complete betrayal of Zionist principles, which dictate for both religious and/or historical reasons total Jewish rule in all of Palestine. Expanison thought holds that since Israel has won such a total victory over the Palestinians, with the Arabs in divided disarray and the United States ruling the global roost, now is not the time for any concessions at all, however slight. The idea is rather to expand settlements as quickly as possible, and move rapidly to full formal annexation of most of the West Bank.

Palestinian autonomy Is bad Zionism, they argue. Worse, they suspect that this process cannot be controlled as Rabin promised. Expansionists fear that granting autonomy to Palestinians leads to dangerous international expectations and ultimately makes a Palestian state of some kind inevitable.

Yigal Amir, who murdered Yitzhak Rabin, represented the extreme form of expansionist rejection of Rabin's Oslo plans. But Bibi Netanyahu's brand of politics has always participated in similar rhetoric and embraces most of the same attitudes as Amir, which is why Rabin's widow, Leah, continues to point the finger of blame at Bibi. "I want to stress and I stress again that I do not release Benjamin Netanyahu from responsibility for this because he participated in the incitment," she said recently, adding "I will not forget and I will not forgive."

I loathe you to death

Loathing in Israeli society on this issue has become violent to the point of murder and continues to increase in intensity.

This is because, in the eyes of both camps, the other is threatening the very foundations of the Zionist project. The expansionists fear that the autonomy consessions will lead to the creation of a Palestinian state on the West Bank and the permanent loss for the Zionist movement of lands held central to the Zionist dream. What is the Negev desert, or even the twenieth century "green-field" city of Tel Aviv, to the Zionist cause compared with Hebron, Jerico, Bethlehem, Nablus, Ramallah, and so many other sites assocaited in the Bible with the ancient Hebrews in whose name Zionism stakes its claim to Palestine?

These places, not to mention East Jerusalem, are held by many expansionists to be of greater significance to Zionism than most of the territory in the Israeli state. The sight of an Israeli government policy that might one day put Israeli rule over such places at risk is anathema to expansionists and produces profound and occasionally murderous loathing.

Consolidationists, on the other hand, fear that by failing to take advantage of this unprecedented opportunity to gain regional legitimacy and acceptance, expansionists are condemning Israel to a future of constant warfare. Rather than secure the gains made by Zionism in establishing the present Israeli state, expansionists are placing the entire project in long-term jeopardy by refusing to come to terms with the rest of the Middle East. Expansionism looks suicidal and fanatical to consolidationists, in other words, bitter loathing ensues.

This loathing has come to the point where Ya'acov Perry, head of Israeli Internal security (GSS) told the Kneset on Nov. 12 "The political argument is cutting us up and dividing us and, in my opinion, we are almost heading for civil war. It's definitely possible to conclude that, in light of the atmosphere of intolerance and because political argument is getting worse and exceeding reasonable proportions, that people aren't willing to hear the other side. This is an atmosphere which could definitely result in violence, incitement, and calls for death and, as a result, in another political assassination." He added that it could easily come from the political left.

Loathing Mussobbi

The specter of assassination is so great in Israeli politics now that one of the principle accusations hurled between rivals is almost always that of "incitement" to murder.

Prime Minister Netanyahu has aquired the unflattering nickname of "Mussobibi," the use of which is often associated with chants of "death to Netanhayu," "there is a Yigal Amir of the Left," and "you said safe peace, you turned out to be a manaic."

Labor Party MKs at an August meeting declared "We have to bop off Netanyahu's head" and "Hit Netanyahu — shoot in all directions."

The Israeli right hit back with the Hatzofeh daily accusing Rabin's close colleague, Shimon Peres, of being the mastermind behind the Rabin murder. Accusations that Peres used a Shin Bet agent to get Amir to shoot Rabin continue to circulate.

An index of the degree to which the Israeli left and the consolidationists loathe Netanyahu is the manner in which Nurit Peled blamed him personally for the death of her 13-year-old-daughter who was killed in a suicide bomb attack in Jerusalem in September. Peled, a childhood friend of Netanyahu, said "I hold the government of Israel responsible for the death of my daughter. I really believe it is the fault of the Israeli government more than the terrorists. Israel is breeding terrorists by heaping these humiliations on the Palestinians. By behaving like conquerors, we've brought it on ourselves."

For his part, Bibi can loathe with the best of them. Recently he touched off a firestorm of outrage when he was overheard explaing to an elderly Rabbi that because of their attitude towards the Palestinians, "the left have forgotten what It means to be Jewish." By "the left," Netanyahu was generally understood to have been referring to at least half of Israeli society.

To loathe, honor and obey

Because most of the senior figures in the Israeli national security establishment are strongly consolidationists, like former Chiefs of Staff Rabin and Barak, there is a complete breakdown of communication and coordination between Bibi and his generals. As soon as Bibi came to power, his associate Uzi Landau accused the generals of being "lackeys" of the Labor Party, and they were frozen out of the highest-level strategic discussions. As Netanyahu moved to dismantle the Oslo process, senior officers began to publicly criticize Bibi's provocative actions such as opening a tunnel under the al-Aksa mosque.

In Oct. 1996, Prof. Zeev Maoz warned that relations between Bibi and the generals were so bad that there was the possibility of an army coup to oust Netanyahu. Maoz wrote that "There is a crisis of confidence between the government and the army on political grounds."

A group of 33 prominent officers, mostly reservists, wrote a public letter to Netanyahu accusing him of "making every possible effort to drag us into an unjustifiable war and destroy any hopes of peace."

"Our motivation to fight has been reduced and without It we do not see how we would be able to take part in the next war," they pointedly added.

The crisis of confidence between the government and the military continues to deteriorate. In late September, Netanyhau's cabinet rejected the unanimous assessment of the entire Military and national security services that Yassir Arafat's continued cooperation with Israel depends on progress in the Oslo process talks. The Likud government, due to its expansionist ideology, refuses to accept the Israeli military's perfectly obvious opinion that without progress, Arafat has no incentive to cooperate with Israel. Therefore, at present, there is no basis for discussion between the government and the military in Israel on one of the most basic issues of national security — the relationship with the Palestine National Authority.

This dispute has also emerged in regard to Israel's occupation of southern Lebanon. Last week, Major General Amiram Levin, head of the Israeli army's Nothern Command, called for a unilateral Israeli withdrawl from Lebanon, only to be rebuked by government officials. This has been a terrible year for Israeli occupation forces in Lebanon, with over 200 Israeli troops killed since January.

The most stunning incident involved an ambush by Hizballah, Amal, Lebanese Army and local farmers on a squad from the elite Shayetet 13 naval commando unit. These Israeli troops were apparently on a terrorist mission designed to murder or kidnap Lebanese cleric Abdel Amir Qabalan. It was obvious that the Israelis had been set up.

Capt. David Schick, retired deputy commander of Shayetet 13, said that "In my opinion, a double agent informed Hizballah that an operation would take place."

It is widely recognized that although an official inquiry naturally found that there was no double agent involved, someone leaked the information to the Lebanese who knew when, where and how Israel's elite troops would be found.

What is less discussed is that the "double-agent" senario, in which the Israeli military is penetrated at a senior level by agents of Hizballah, is actually a best-case scenario.

Far more troubling is the possibility that there is no such double-agent, but that a combination of wanting to withdraw from south Lebanon, disapproval of reckless terrorist attacks on clerics, and, above all, loathing for Bibi could have led officers to forward this information to the enemy gratis. Certainly, such an action would fall well short any potential coup. And recall that in giving up Shayetet 13, one is hardly sacrificing fresh-faced conscripts straight from mother's bosom but rather elite commandos who have been decribed as "in normal terms, psychotic."

Unthinkable? In previous times, perhaps.

But at present Israel lives in the era of Netanyahu, days of bile and loathing.

Hussein Ibish is a Umass graduate student.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Loathing in action — Israeli police remove Peace Now protesters from buildings occupied by Israeli settlers in Arab East Jerusalem.

Israeli soldiers take aim at Palestinian civilians.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Finding a place in America

Lilian Chan

Asian? American? Asian-American?

I was born in good-ole Boston. It's the city where you can feel the most American. Heck, it's where Paul Revere rode his horse to warn that the British were coming, the site of the Boston Tea Party, and where the U.S. Constitution resides. Who wouldn't feel patriotic living there?

I'd consider myself to be an American because I was born in the U.S. and grew up with "Sesame Street," "Mr. Rodger's Neighborhood," the Babysitter's Club book series, and a lot of Coca-Cola (too much if you ask me). For a little while, I truly felt as if I belonged in this country — that nothing was different about me. But then, someone would make a comment about my ethnicity which would immediately shatter my false sense of identity.

Just last weekend, I was in New York when this old white guy came up to me and said, "Konichiwa" — what is it with people saying that to me?

Some people probably look at me and don't even consider me to be an American. A foreigner is more like it. Because I don't have blonde hair and blue eyes, how could I possibly be an American? I would have to be some tourist from either Japan or China. But, I'm not.

I don't consider myself to be an Asian because, for one, I wasn't born in Asia. Also, my relatives from Asia have told me that I am an American through and through.

Three years ago, I went to Hong Kong with my mother to visit my aunts and uncles. Even though I looked like everybody else, I was considered different. I asked my aunts and uncles how they could tell I was an American. They said It was the way I walked, the way I talked, and the way I carried myself.

It's funny how I have to travel thousands of miles to be considered an American.

So, aside from the remarks I get about the color of my skin, why do I feel as if I don't quite belong? I never before understood why until a friend of mine talked to me a little more about Asian-American studies. Basically, I have no clue as to what my forefathers achieved in this country I call my home. For example, I never knew that the first Asians to arrive in this country were the Filipinos. I always assumed that it was the Chinese. And, there's so much more I don't know.

It would be an ideal situation if there were an Asian- American studies department here on campus. But, one may ask, don't we already have an Asian studies department? Yes, but there's a big difference between that and Asian-American studies.

Asian studies deals specifically with the customs and cultures of Asian countries such as Japan and China.

Asian-American studies, on the other hand, deals with the experiences of Asian Immigrants. For example how it felt to travel to another country not knowing the custom and the culture. It also speaks of the experiences of those in this generation and the next. I would be able to better relate to these people because they would help to strengthen the ties that I have to this country. Their history would make me to better understand the present.

I would like to have someone to look up to. People of European descent have Ben Franklin, John F. Kennedy, and countless others to be proud of. Where's my Ben Franklin and John F. Kennedy? Bruce Lee can only take you so far as someone to be proud of.

Isn't it time that another history — another facet of America — be recognized?

Lillian Chan is a Collegian staff member.

Plymouth rocked by police violence

Note: The following is a press release released on Nov. 28, 1997 by United American Indians of New England (UAINE), the organizers of the 28th Annual National Day of Mourning. The Plymouth event last Thursday was stopped by police violence as 150-200 participants marched to protest the treatment of Native Americans.

According to UAINE co-leader Moonanum James (Wampanoag), "Native people have no reason to celebrate the arrival of the Pilgrims. We want people to know the truth about Thanksgiving. The Pilgrim Progress parade is nothing more than a glorification of genocide and a monument to racism."

Some of those who were arrested were arraigned on Thursday. The remaining will be arraigned this morning.

This year, we chose to let the Pilgrim Progress parade march without interference from us. We were not even in town when they marched. Our leaving them alone makes no difference to the cops and to the town fathers of Plymouth.

Clearly, the only one with a right to march in Plymouth are the descendants of the Pilgrims. Clearly the only ones with a right to speak in Plymouth are the descendants of the Pilgrims.

Every inch of this land is Indian land. We do not need a permit to march on this land. We do not need a permit to assemble on this land. We do not need a permit to march on this land. We do not need a permit to assemble on this land. We do not need a permit to raise our voices in protest.

Plymouth was turned into an armed camp of cops yesterday. The racism and cruelty of "America's home town" were on display for the world to see.

Yesterday, the cops conducted a carefully orchestrated campaign of harassment and brutality. As supporters began to arrive for National Day of Mourning, cops were videotaping them. They had police informers planted in the crowd. Our negotiators made every effort to speak to the cops about our marauding peacefully. The cops refused to talk with them. They gave no warning before they charged into the crowd and began making arrests. We had women and children grouped at the front of the march to make it clear that we did not wasn't a confrontation. The cops did not care. The cop assault was completely unprovoked.

They arrested 25 of us. They knocked people to the ground and forced pepper spray into their mouths and eyes. They even put pepper spray into the eyes of an 8-year-old boy and an 11-year-old boy. They arrested people who had stepped to the sidewalk and tried to get away. They knocked people to the gound and then charged them with assault and battery.

Clearly the town of Plymouth, the Plymouth police, Massachusetts state troopers and other police forces have declared war on Native Americans and those who support our struggle. We will not be intimidated by these police terror tactics.

We have all of this on videotape. There is no doubt but that we are telling the truth about what happened

Every single person arrested yesterday was guilty of only one thing: daring to stand up and support the Native struggle.

We want to thank all of the people — from the four directions — who were arrested yesterday for staying strong. We want the press to know that the cops were particularly brutal to our black sisters and brothers who stood with us. We would also like to thank those who stood by us by raising bail money and rallying outside of the Plymouth Police station until each of us was released.

Word has spread quickly about the police riot in Plymouth yesterday[Thursday]. We have phone calls and e-mails pouring in from Native people and non-Native supporters everywhere, asking what they can do to help us.

If the powers that be think that we are going to be intimidated by their police terror tactics, they are wrong. It will only strengthen the resolve of United American Indians of New England and many others to fight back against racism and police brutality.

We have come to Plymouth every year since 1970 for National Day of Mourning. We will not stop coming to Plymouth. We will continue to raise our voices in protest.

We are not vanishing. We are not conquered. We are as strong as ever.

COURTESY MICHAEL THOMPSON

Coming up on the tracks of last year's Falling Into You, Canadian chanteuse, Celine Dion's latest features some of the biggest names in music.

The diva meets Dion in comparison of style

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

HIGHER GROUND
Barbra Streisand
Columbia Records

LET'S TALK ABOUT LOVE
Celine Dion
Epic Records

In "Tell Him," the duet featuring Celine Dion and Barbra Streisand, there's more to the song than a tender ballad. Rather, the song pairs two of the greatest pop female vocalist, providing a tantalizing comparison of the diva and the quiet Canadian.

The differences between the two women are instantly clear. While Streisand excels technically, picking vocally difficult songs, Dion focuses her attention more on emotion.

Both women have impressive credentials to fall back on. Dion's 1996 release, Falling Into You, garnered a Grammy in both the Album of the Year and Best Pop Album categories, along with a Grammy for Best Pop Performance for "Beauty and the Beast."

Streisand, a successful director and actress, has 36 gold albums. Only the Beatles and Elvis Presley have more. In addition, her 24 platinum records (including 11 multi- platinum) have secured Streisand's status as the highest- selling female recording artist ever.

Streisand first made her mark in Broadway in I Can Get It For You Wholesale — a performance which earned her the New York Drama Critics Award and also received a Tony nomination. Since that early performance, Streisand has moved into all aspects of the arts, including directing and acting. Her last two directorial projects were The Prince of Tides and The Mirror Has Two Faces.

The Mirror Has Two Faces turned out to be the catalyst for Streisand and Dion's initial meeting. The love theme from the movie, "I Finally Found Someone," was to have been performed at the Oscars by Natalie Cole, but at the last minute, Dion stepped in to perform the piece.

The next day, Streisand sent Dion a note that read, "Next time, let's do one together."

Songwriter David Foster ("St. Elmo's Fire") teamed up with Linda Thompson and Walter Afanasieff to come up with "Tell Him," a song which is featured on both albums.

On "Tell Him," Streisand manages to leave her ego behind for the almost five minutes the song runs. Her calm and confident vocals, giving advice to the more shaky and emotional Dion, show that Streisand is able to step back from her many laurels for a moment and share the spotlight.

On Higher Ground, Streisand takes a more inspirational tone than she has effected in the past. Streisand pairs a Rodgers & Hammerstein tune, "You'll Never Walk Alone" from Carousel with Frankie Laine's 1953 "I Believe," for an unconventional take on two classic songs.

Vanessa Williams' fans might recognize the second track, "Higher Ground." Streisand manages to inject some feeling into the song, just enough to make "Higher Ground" the spiritual ballad it is intended to be.

Both "At The Same Time" and "On Holy Ground" are slow songs, neither of them remarkable in terms of lyrics or emotional meaning. Streisand turns the album around though with her next two offerings, "If I Could" and "Circle."

"If I Could," dedicated to her son, Jason, is about a parent eventually letting go of their child. Cheesy lyrics aside, Streisand makes this one work simply because she believes in what she is singing.

The same philosophy underlines "Circle," a song about the circular nature of life. Streisand really puts her heart into this song, making it one of the highlights of the album.

Streisand continues the spiritual journey with "The Water Is Wide/Deep River." The song is slow and unremarkable. It's on songs like this one that Streisand strives only technical perfection, rather than grabbing the listener's ear.

Both "Leading With Your Heart" and "Lessons To Be Learned."

Streisand closes out the 12-track album with the hauntingly beautiful, "Avinu Malkeinu" — probably the best track on the album and the one where Streisand mixes both her pow-

Turn to CELINE page 7

Kline weathers the Ice Storm flawlessly

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

THE ICE STORM
Directed by Ang Lee
with Kevin Kline, Joan Allen, Sigourney Weaver
Playing at Academy of Music

The Ice Storm is a time capsule of sorts, spanning less than three days within the intimate and bittersweet lives of two suburban Connecticut families on the verge of destruction.

It is Thanksgiving in the mid–1970s. The Vietnam War is over, Watergate has erupted and now the aftermath of the '60s cultural and political revolution must be faced. Director Ang Lee (Eat, Drink, Man, Women, Sense and Sensibility) uses this powerful story to demonstrate America's once and for all loss of innocence and the disintegration of how society formerly conceptualized the family system.

There are no heroes in this film, no commentary on right and wrong. In fact, we are not allowed to be swallowed up by nostalgia, rather we are forced to witness the true history of the final quarter of the 20th century. It's a time when teenagers' own quest for understanding sexuality was paralleled by their parents' attempts of coping with the concerns of the sexual liberations brought on by the radical changes of the '60s. It was also a time when America was forced to deal with one of its most difficult periods of transition in modern day history, a breaking away from puritan values and rigid standards when people could finally admit they were unhappy and seek the means of bettering their existence. Yet, these freedoms were still new and as Lee's film demonstrates, America needed time to understand what effect the '60s would have on the '70s and perhaps much of America's future to come.

The conclusions Lee's characters face are breathtaking and heartbreaking in how both extraordinary and average they really are. On the surface, they would appear as your everyday family: a husband, a wife and two children. What is so haunting is that none of them desired to hurt one another. They only wanted to live in the happiness that every family deserves, but time is often a very dangerous weapon. Kevin Kline delivers a flawless performance as the father of the Hood family. He is having an affair with his neighbor's wife, played by Sigourney Weaver. She has grown bored with her own husband, but Kline serves nothing more than a temporary distraction. Kline's wife, played by Joan Allen, has lost affection for him and not knowing of his affair, she begins to separate herself from him, and perhaps a bit from her children as well.

Kline still manages to seek hope with his unsatisfactory surroundings. He is tired of the people in his life turning their backs to him but nonetheless he naively struggles to maintain a glimpse of wonder about the world around him. His character is both so innocent and broken at the same time that the complexity it offers is one of the most rewarding performances in recent time. As he prays to make sense of his own world he thus witnesses his children's bitterness as well. He is a good father but with a tormented soul. His daughter, played by Christina Ricci, is the quintessential angst–ridden young teen who sits in awe of the evening news in bitter disgust of Nixon's Watergate Scandal. She taunts Sigourney Weaver's son, played by Elijah Wood, with adolescent sexuality all the while seducing his younger brother.

Each of the character's motions are filled with hesitancy and awkwardness. This allows the audience to genuinely believe that these are the character's own words and not a polished performance taking place in front of a camera and surrounded by a film crew. How intimately involved one could find themselves becoming in the story's

Turn to ICE page 7

The Arts & Living desk is looking for someone to cover film. Call 5-1361 for more info.

COURTESY RANDEE ST. NICHOLAS

Barbra Streisand aims for Higher Ground on her new album, featuring songs of inspiration.

■ celine

continued from page6

erful vocals with emotion, lifting the song to more the technical perfection.

Dion, whose past success with Falling Into You, blossoms with self–confidence on Let's Talk About Love. The album is aptly named, because most of the songs are indeed about love. But it's the love songs where Dion has had the most success, with hits like "Because You Loved Me" and "The Power of Love."

However, since her debut English album, Unison, in September of 1990, all of Dion's albums, including Unison, Celine Dion, Colour of My Love and Falling Into You, have reached platinum status.

But those albums, especially Unison and Colour of My Love, featured only a few solid offerings from the Canadian chanteuse, whose knowledge of English in 1990 was shaky. Celine Dion spawned four Top 40 hits, including the Grammy–award winning "Beauty and the Beast." Falling Into You, for the most part was an experimental album for Dion, featuring some songs originally recorded for her Francophone release, D'Eux. But with the help of "Because You Loved Me" and "It's All Coming Back To Me Now," Dion captured top honors at the Grammys — giving her the confidence which is so apparent in Let's Talk About Love, her best English album to date.

Dion's status as one of the best–selling recording artists gives her the clout to assemble some of music's legends.

Let's Talk About Love opens with Carol King's "The Reason," followed by the Bee Gee's "Immortality." Both songs provide a strong lead–in to the 15–track disc for Dion, setting the tone for the rest of the album.

On "Immortality," the Bee Gees provide the background vocal, while Dion manages to echo the Gibb brothers' trademark whispery sound.

"Treat Her Like A Lady" gives Dion songwriting credit — her first on an English album. The funky song is more fun than some of the other up–tempo pieces Dion has attempted in the past.

Other album highlights include a cover of "When I Need You" and "Us," both heart–felt love songs, that Dion absolutely shines on.

No Dion album would be complete without a love song from a major motion picture and this album is no exception. This time around, it's "My Heart Will Go On," from Titanic. "My Heart Will Go On" is a lush, beautifully orchestrated song, giving Dion the opportunity to do what she does best — projecting depth and emotion.

A duet with Streisand is one thing, but a duet with Luciano Pavarotti is another and Dion was able to do both. "I Hate You Then I Love You" gives Dion the chance to sing with the great tenor. Unfortunately, the attempt is less than spectacular, giving the album one of its biggest disappointments. While it's hard to imagine Pavarotti singing a pop song, it's even more difficult to discern why this particular classic would have been picked. And on another sour note, neither Pavarotti and Dion manage to make the connection with each other — leaving two stellar artists singing for no one.

The album closes strongly with David Foster's "To Love You More" and the sweet ballad, co–written by fellow Canadian, Bryan Adams, "Let's Talk About Love."

The two women have varying styles, but they both still know how to get the message across, whether it be through emotional or technical ability. Higher Ground, B, Let's Talk About Love, A

Heavy metal's preeminent force re–loads on latest

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

RE–LOAD
Metallica
Elektra

Let's clarify one point here before I continue. Metallica is the best heavy metal group of all time. This is not merely this humble writer's opinion but rather an indisputable fact, one that was firmly etched in stone sometime late in Ronald Reagan's second term.

There is really no need to re–hash all the details of how they brought metal up from the "underground" and almost singlehandedly legitimized its existence or how they brought new complexity and depth to thrash.

With all the changes in metal, throughout the phenomenon of "mousse abuse" bands to the rise and subsequent tumble in coolness and mainstream appeal the genre has taken, Metallica has always remained the unquestioned leader of the metal movement — firmly entrenched in the public's consciousness as the "real deal."

So then, what's the "real deal" with Re–Load (Elektra)? Is it really a new album, is it a clever "re–mix" job like Bush's new release? Is it a bunch of leftover b–side's from last year's Load? According to the album's press notes, it's "neither a repeat, a re–hash or a re–claiming of old material."

While it took Metallica eons to follow–up 1991's ultra–mega–huge self–titled effort, known to nearly everyone now as the "Black Album," the gap between albums has been significantly shortened this time around as the bulk of Re– Load was originally laid down during Load's 1994–95 writing and recording sessions.

It's no wonder then that Re–Load has an eerily similar sound to its predecessor, both sonically and dynamically — which isn't necessarily an altogether good thing considering that Load was a decidedly mixed affair, a work that saw Metallica settling into a period of uneasy maturity.

Under the guidance of producer Bob Rock, Metallica has streamlined its sound even more on Re–Load, cutting away most of the twisting, unpredictably complex time signatures and the mind–numbingly fast riffs of lead guitarist Kirk Hammett that transcended their earlier releases.

What's left is overly polished — and disappointingly straightforward — heavy metal. Interestingly, Rock's attempts at expanding their sonic palette have made them seem even more conventional than ever before, especially on songs like "Bad Seed" and "Devil's Dance."

What saves the album from total mediocrity is the continued development of front–man James Hetfield's lyrics. Their strong lyrical content has always been one of the key characteristics that has allowed Metallica to rise to the top of their game, and Re–Load tunes like "Carpe Diem Baby" illustrate this strength brilliantly.

Still, if you're a Metallica fan, Re–Load is well worth the money. It doesn't really disappoint, even if it fails to reprise the ground breaking stature of the almost flawless Master of Puppets, Kill 'Em All or Metallica. And besides, an "average" Metallica album is still light years better in quality than anything else in the heavy metal game these days. B–

■ ice

continued from page6

narrative could be, at times, almost painful. You feel as if you are an unwanted observer, a voyeur peeking through the cracks in the walls as you watch this family's foundation slip away.

At the same time, you can not remove your eyes from what you are witnessing and it appears all to true at times even recognizable to situations about things we have all heard about or even experienced for ourselves. We sit and prepare for the climax, which is also being anticipated by the characters on screen in the form of an actual ice storm. Simultaneously, with their own lives becoming frigid and broken, their environment also is plagued as every tree branch, every inch of road, every natural and unnatural aspect of nature becomes crystallized in ice.

Kline's son properly serves as the story's narrator. He is returning home from boarding school for the Thanksgiving break along the way breaking his own family struggles to comic book characters. He too is forced to make sense of the concept of coming of age, but being away from home he is in essence the ouisider. From his point of view, Lee can tell a tragic tale, which at times is nearly hysterical and others passionately disturbing. Kline's son watches the people around him move in circles hoping to realize a solution to problems they don't understand. At the time of the film's powerful conclusion we are still left wondering whether tragedy is really enough save other people's lives, is their new understanding which can be found in the existence of pain? Or does the ice just melt away with the knowledge that winter isn't over yet? A+

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON
Beginning Nov. 1
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON
$162 $295
PARIS
$218 $399
ROME
$274 $473
MADRID
$226 $415
Scheduled flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations.
Eurail passes available.
Weekend surcharges may apply.
Customs–immigration taxes apply.
Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave., NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

amc
There is a Difference!
Silence is Golden. No child under 8 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm.
Mt. Farms 4 •584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Jackal (R)
Today - Thurs. at (5:40) , 8:30
Starship Troopers (R)
Today -Thurs at (5:40), 8:30
Rainmaker (PG13)
Today -Thurs at (5:40), 8:20
Alien: Resurrection (R)
Today - Thurs at (5:50), 8:40
Hampshire 6 •584-7550
Bean (PG 13)
Today -Thurs at (5:50)
Anastasia (G)
Today -Thurs at (5:40), 8:40
Flubber (PG)
Today - Thurs at (5:30), 8:30
Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil (R)
Today - Thurs at (5:10), 8:20
Mortal Combat: Annihilation (R)
Today -Thurs at (5:30), 8:30
Boogie Nights (R)
Today -Thurs at (5:20), 8:20
The Man Who Knew Too Little (PG)
Today -Thurs at 8:40
$2.50 (Two Like) Show Daily
Special Engagement, no Passes or Coupons

Pizza
Calzones
Subs
Buffalo Wings
CANTONE'S PIZZA
Fast Free Delivery
Sunday - Thursday:
3:30 PM - 1:30 AM
Friday & Saturday:
3:30 PM - 2 AM
Medium Two Topping Pizza & Two 12 oz. Sodas only $9.95
May not be combined w/other coupon or offer. Expires 2/28/98

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
YOU Play Hard
Amherst 256-6446

OOPS!
Free Loaner Car
North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center (On bus route - one mile from UMass)
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880
• Free Estimates
• Lifetime Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental

Collegian Graphics says:
"The Campus Center basement is the place to be for peace, love, and harmony"

NOW HIRING
ALL SHIFTS
COMPETITIVE WAGES
• Flexible schedule around classes
• Monday, Wednesday, Friday Shifts
• Tuesday, Thursday Shifts
BURGER KING
• Discounted Meals
• Enjoyable Work Atmosphere
• Advancement Opportunities
Join the Burger King® Team Today!
You will be working for people who really care about you as an individual.
Apply Within
353 Russell Street (Route 9) • Hadley, MA

EARN $2,000 - $3,000
$7.50 per hour
Work Local
to Your Home
Mornings, Evenings, and Weekends
Taking Inventory
Paid Training
Advancement Potential
Call our Jobline 24 hours a day
1-888-242-RGIS
Equal Opportunity Employer
Interview with RGIS Inventory Specialists on the Campus Center Concourse
December 2nd, 3rd, 10th, & 11th
9:00am to 3:30pm

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS
NOW HIRING!

Lowest Prices of the Year
ARTCARVED COLLEGE JEWELRY
Gold Rings Starting at $199
Wed. to Fri.
Dec 3rd to 5th
10am to 3:30pm
at the Ustore

LIVE MUSIC TONIGHT!
Come See Mill River Band
at 10:00 p.m.
21 & over positive I.D. required
And get FREE Wings from 9:30 to 11:00
This Week's DRINK Specials
$1 Rum Punch
$2.50 16oz. Jack & Coke
$2 Cover
WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
Dining • Take-Out • Live Music • Catering
Take-Out: 253-4040 • Delivery: 549-0077 • Fax: 413-253-3016
Member O.C.M.P. • All Major Credit Cards Accepted

Kansas City blows by Niners

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Denver clinched a playoff spot by winning in San Diego. The Kansas City Chiefs, who trail the Broncos by a game, could end up with a bigger prize — the AFC West title and home field in the playoffs.

With its 44-9 win that emphatically ended San Francisco's 11-game winning streak Sunday, the Chiefs (10-3) got past the biggest hurdle left on their schedule. Their three remaining games are against teams with a combined record of 13-26 — Oakland at home, at San Diego and New Orleans at home, making them a good bet to finish 13-3.

Denver has just two losses. But the Broncos must go to Pittsburgh (9-4) on Sunday, then play at San Francisco (11-2) on a Monday night before finishing at home to the Chargers.

One loss and the Chiefs would tie them, but Kansas City has the tiebreaker because it would have one division loss (in Denver opening day) to two for the Broncos, who lost in Oakland and Kansas City.

Are the Chiefs really that good or are they like the 1995 team? That one finished 13-3 to lead the AFC then promptly lost its first playoff game — at home to the Colts.

The '95 team won three games in overtime, all of them improbably. This year's Chiefs beat both the Broncos and 49ers with Rich Gannon, their backup quarterback, and got through a tough five-game stretch with a 4-1 record — also beating Pittsburgh at home, Seattle on the road and losing in Jacksonville, where the Jaguars have now won 13 straight.

Yes, the win over Denver was by a hair — Pete Stoyanovich's 54-yard field goal — but 44-9 is hardly a squeaker.

The defense, always solid under Marty Schottenheimer, is younger and quicker with four second-year men — safeties Jerome Woods and Reggie Tongue, linebacker Donnie Edwards and tackle John Browning. And Derrick Thomas, injured the first half of the season, is just rounding into All-Pro form.

On offense, the running back by committee, led by Marcus Allen, picked up 153 yards against the NFL's best rushing defense, and Andre Rison gives the Chiefs the deep threat they've always lacked. Gannon's success allows them to take their time nursing starter Elvis Grbac and his broken collarbone.

"In the last two weeks, we've beaten the two best teams in football," Rison said. "What does that make us?"

Actually, the Seattle game was sandwiched between Denver and San Francisco.

But the point is made.

NFC LEAST: From 1990 through 1993, three NFC East teams won four straight Super Bowls (Giants, Redskins, Cowboys, Cowboys). It won't happen this year.

Four of the five teams in the division lost to outsiders this week and Philadelphia, the only winner, barely survived a 44-42 shootout at home against Cincinnati and Boomer Esiason, who once a year becomes Superman for a few weeks.

That means it's likely that only the division winner will make the playoffs. If the season ended now, Minnesota, Tampa Bay and Detroit, all from the Central, would be the wild cards.

But it also means the Cowboys, who wrote themselves off following their Thanksgiving Day loss to Tennessee, are still very much in the race. In fact, a scenario that gives Dallas its sixth straight title is not so far-fetched.

If the Cowboys win their final three games (Carolina, at Cincinnati and the Giants), they would finish 9-7. That means the Giants (7-5-1) would have to lose two games and the Eagles and Redskins (6-6-1) one each.

All are perfectly capable of that, and one of the Giants' losses would be to Dallas. The other? They're at the Eagles on Sunday, then play host to Washington.

The Eagles and Redskins meet in Washington the final Sunday and the Eagles, 0-5-1 on the road, also have to go to Atlanta, which has won three straight. Still, Philadelphia could have the best shot because it seems to have found a quarterback in Bobby Hoying. The problem for Dallas? Probably not playing well enough to win three straight.

TAKING THE BUS: Bill Cowher knows how chancy things get with kickers. After all, his Steelers were the second of two straight teams to lose on yesterday night because of last-second botched field goals.

So he's avoided the conventional route in Pittsburgh's two overtime wins. In the first, the Steelers beat the Jaguars 23-17 on a 17-yard shovel pass from Kordell Stewart to Jerome Bettis. On Sunday, the Steelers beat the Cardinals 26-20 on a 10-yard run by Bettis.

"This is not the greatest way to win a game," Bettis said. "We want to win a game in the third quarter, not the fifth." Whatever, it seems safest to ride The Bus.

PARITY OR MEDIOCRITY? Arizona is 3-10, tied with St. Louis for the NFL's third worst record.

Yet the Cards have played eight games that have been decided by three points or less or gone into overtime. They've won two and lost six, the latest Sunday's overtime loss to Pittsburgh. Reverse that and they're 7-6, or right in the middle of the race in the NFC East (or Least).

■ NBA

continued from page 12

Houston is in a first place tie, having bounced back from an awful start to record an 8– 5 record thus far. With Hakeem sidelined due to knee surgery which will keep him out of action for two months, the old Chuck Wagon needs to show some signs of his Sixer days. Barkley put up career numbers, even for his NBA campaign, against the Golden State Warriors on Saturday night. Not that the P.J. Carlesimo and the Oakland Bombers have ever been widely recognized for their stingy defense, or one Joe Smith, for that matter, but the Rockets embarrassed the Warriors on their home floor. Barkley netted 15 of his 43 points in a 27–0 run that quieted the Warrior faithful (if that's possible). To go with that, Chuck corralled 15 rebounds and a season-high four steals.

Whoa, whoa, whoa. . .wait a minute. 27–0 run? Heh heh heh. I guess that's why they're 1–13, huh?

• As for those aforementioned Washington Wizards, when is this team going to put it all together? Last year, we saw glimpses of the talent this team has. Coach Bernie Bickerstaff took over the team mid–season while the then– Bullets were in the thick of a playoff race. The capital thought it had a savior as coach. The last time that happened in D.C. was when Wes Unseld guided the Bullets to the promise land in the late seventies.

The Wizards have their own Big Three. Chris Webber, Juwan Howard, Rod Strickland. How can you go wrong, right? Well, apparently there's some sort of leakage in the engine because the Wizards are just struggling. At 5–11, they are in familiar territory. In or near the basement. Maybe the savior is the Philadelphia 76ers. Without these guys, perhaps the Wiz's fan support would do a disappearing act of their own.

• Can I say one thing?

I hate everything there is to say about Reggie Miller. In fact, the Indiana Pacers as a team just nauseates me ('cept Larry). Any player that has any sort of significance to Larry Bird's pigeons are all just so one–dimensional. Upon a visit to Market Square, coaches worry about Miller, Rik Smits, Dale Davis, and Mark Jackson, among others. Miller shoots, as does Smits, Davis rebounds, and Jackson dishes the dimes, that about sums it up.

But I guess that's okay, considering the Pacers are holding their own in a very tough Central Division. There are like 800 teams in the Central Division, first of all, but I think the Pace can consider it a moral victory to find themselves with a better overall record than Michael Jordan's Bulls.

Miller gets all the press. Not that that's one of the benefits of being a "superstar," but give me a break, the man hasn't earned a single hustles point since he first stepped foot in Indiana some ten years ago.

Reggie Miller shoots free throws well. Reggie Miller shoots the ball well from behind the arc. Reggie Miller is a pure shooter. Quiz time: find the common word.

If you ask me, good ol' Reg is about the last person who should be referring to himself in the third person. Recognize this, friends. If basketball was a shooter's game, then, heck, this UCLA product would be one of my first choices, but you know what? It ain't.

Brett Mauser is a Collegian staff member.

Williams off to Diamondbacks

By Ken Berger
Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Ohio — Matt Williams was traded by the Cleveland Indians to the expansion Arizona Diamondbacks today for Travis Fryman and left-hander Tom Martin, The Associated Press learned. As part of the trade, Williams agreed to a $45 million, five-year contract extension with the Diamondbacks and the Indians will receive cash. The deal was scheduled to be announced at 5:30 p.m. EST.

Williams, 32, batted .263 last season, his first with the Indians, with 32 homers and 105 RBIs.

Fryman, 28, was acquired by Arizona from the Detroit Tigers on Nov. 18 in a trade the night of the expansion draft. He hit .274 last season with 22 homers and 102 RBIs, topping 20 homers and 100 RBIs for the second straight season.

Martin, 27, was 5-3 with a 2.09 ERA for Houston last season. He was selected by the Diamondbacks with their first pick of the second round of the expansion draft.

Williams was entering the final year of a contract that would have made him Cleveland's highest-paid player in 1998. After failing to sign Williams to a contract extension, the Indians tried to trade him to Arizona on the day of the expansion draft but the deal fell through.

Indians general manager John Hart said at the time that he wouldn't trade Williams unless there was an "impact-type deal." Fryman will make $6.5 million in 1998, the final year of his $25 million, five-year contract.

Williams, who won his fourth Gold Glove at third base last season, expressed an interest in playing for Arizona because his children live there. Williams and his wife were divorced this year. The Indians acquired Williams from San Francisco on Nov. 13, 1996, for infielders Jeff Kent, Jose Vizcaino, outfielder Trenidad Hubbard, pitchers Julian Tavarez and Joe Roa and $1 million. Cleveland was looking for power to guard against the departure of free agent Albert Belle, who later signed a $55 million, five-year contract with the Chicago White Sox.

Williams, who played the first eight-plus years of his career in the National League, was slow to adjust to AL pitching. At the end of July, he was hitting .239 with 23 homers. He showed flashes of his tremendous power when he tied a major league record by belting five homers in two days on April 25-26 at Milwaukee.

While not as consistent or productive as Belle, Williams led a complete overhaul of the attitude in the Indians' clubhouse. Williams and Marquis Grissom and David Justice — two more former NL players — replaced the sullen, volatile days of Belle and Kenny Lofton with a quiet confidence that guided an 86-win team to its second World Series in three years.

JOBS IN THE GLOBAL MARKET . . . .

Being Asian Bilingual is Your Ticket to Success.

Interview with the world's top companies at the Pan-Asian Job Fair. Past Participants have included: Adobe Systems, Exxon, Fidelity Investments, Johnson & Johnson, Procter & Gamble, and more!

January 30, 1998
Sheraton Boston Hotel
39 Dalton Street, Boston, MA

To register or get more information, contact:
International Career Information, Inc.
Phone: 1-800-859-8535
http://www.ricl.com/acw • e-mail: jfinfo@ricl.com

China • Hong Kong • India • Indonesia • Japan • Korea
Malaysia • Philippines • Singapore • Taiwan • Thailand • Vietnam

Pizza
Calzones
Subs
Buffalo Wings

CANTONE'S PIZZA

Fast Free Delivery
Sunday - Thursday:
3:30 PM - 1:30 AM
Friday & Saturday:
3:30 PM - 2 AM

Any Large Four Topping Pizza
only $9.95

May not be combined w/other coupon or offer. Expires 2/28/98

OCMP

THE OFF-CAMPUS MEAL PLAN

The Union Grill
Terri Yaki's
Block & Barrel
Bowl & Bread
T-Mex

BLOCK & BARREL
T-MEX Totally Mexican
Bowl & Bread
Terri Yaki's
Card

NOW AVAILABLE

The Hatch FOOD COURT
located in the basement of the Student Union Building

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

DAILY COLLEGIAN
hoop preview
Something To Prove

Sponsored by:
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
UMass basketball

- Delivered FREE to all on-campus mailboxes
- Available at select on-campus locations
- Available at all home games

AVAILABLE TODAY!

The Massachusetts DAILY
New England's Largest College Daily
113 Campus Center,
University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003
Phone: (413) 545-3500 • Fax: (413) 545-1592

Leon Lett returns to Cowboys

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Leon Lett returned yesterday from a yearlong suspension for drug use, with some kidding from his Dallas Cowboys teammates and lot of serious expectations.

Instead of calling the star defensive tackle by his nickname "the Big Cat," teammates referred to him as Michael Jordan because he played so much basketball during his layoff.

But the fact Lett returned in good shape is no laughing matter. The Cowboys desperately need him to tighten their run defense — which slipped to 22nd in the NFL during his absence — to keep their slim playoff hopes alive.

"Teams have been running on us pretty good and now Leon's going to have to have something to say about that," Michael Irvin said. "The pressure is on, Leon. I know you just got back, I understand that. I've been there, done that. But, hoss, do you not feel that world above your shoulders? Please, help."

Lett, 6-foot-6 and 290 pounds, didn't seem to have missed a beat while going through drills Monday alongside fellow defensive tackles.

He was quick out of his stance and he threw around a tackling sled as fiercely as ever. The faded No. 78 on his blue practice jersey added to the feeling that he'd never been gone.

"He didn't look like a guy we just got off the street," coach Barry Switzer said. "He looked like the Big Cat. He made plays, had a big smile on his face and was glad to be back."

Lett looked good enough that Switzer expects to use him for about 40-50 snaps Monday night against Carolina.

"He's very athletic," defensive lineman Tony Casillas said. "It won't take him long to get back in the routine."

In addition to helping stop the run, Lett's ability to draw double-teams should help the pass rushers. And, having another fresh body gives the Cowboys more flexibility in their ever-shuffling rotation of linemen.

"Since I saw him walk through the locker room, my legs have started coming back," joked Casillas, who stands to get the most extra rest after having started in Lett's place.

Lett, a notorious nontalker, did not make himself available to reporters after practice. Casillas said Lett was quiet even during practice.

"I think he gave a couple of meows out there, but Leon didn't say a whole lot," Casillas said.

Lett, 29, forfeited more than $1.5 million in salary during his absence, which was caused by a third strike against the NFL substance abuse program. Should he falter again, he could be banned from the league.

Many teammates felt he let them down. They were without him for four games in 1995 after his second violation and thought he had his addictions under control.

Chicago stymied

By Mike Nadel
Associated Press

DEERFIELD, Ill.— Phil Jackson and Michael Jordan say they feel betrayed by Scottie Pippen, who has said he'll never again play for the Chicago Bulls.

Jackson said yesterday that the Bulls have recovered from the initial shock of Pippen's public trade demand last week. But the coach also said there might be lingering resentment even if the All-Star forward changes his mind and returns to the team he helped win five NBA titles.

"It's all right to hold it against Scottie," Jackson said. "We care about Scottie, but we're going to hold this against Scottie because he's walking out on us, there's no doubt about that.

"Some things are personal and some things are public. Publicly, we like Scottie, but personally there's always going to be a... residual effect of having gone to bat for Scottie."

Jordan didn't talk to reporters yesterday but said after Saturday's game that he was "disappointed, very disappointed, that (Pippen) hasn't been able to put aside his dealings with management." Pippen claims that general manager Jerry Krause and owner Jerry Reinsdorf have disrespected him by dangling him as trade bait, most recently last June, and by paying him only about $2.7 million this season under terms of a contract extension he signed in 1991. Considered one of the NBA's 50 greatest players ever, Pippen is ranked 122nd on this year's salary list.

Pippen, who hasn't played this season after undergoing foot surgery, is expected to be healthy in two to four weeks but has said he won't wear a Bulls uniform again.

Jackson and Jordan said they might not have returned this season had Pippen expressed his unhappiness during the summer.

"There is that kind of feeling: 'Hey, we came back to do this job together and Scottie ducked out the door,'" Jackson said. Said Jordan: "It would have made a big difference in terms of me and Phil and a lot of other players. I'm pretty sure management would have changed the whole" structure of the team.

Jackson said Jordan probably wouldn't have come out of retirement in 1995 had Pippen not urged him to do so.

"I don't think Michael forgets the fact that when Scottie was here alone in '94 and '95, that he was... saying, 'Come on back, come on back, Michael, and help me out with this load.'" Jackson said. "So I'm sure Michael's going to get back at Scottie, hold his feet to the fire."

Jordan already has said that he'll retire for good if Jackson leaves as planned after the season. The Pippen situation merely reinforces that feeling, but Jordan said he won't let it "ruin my last year."

"I'm going to enjoy the game and go out with a smile instead of sadness. I've always dreamed it to be that way, and I'm not going to forget that," Jordan said. "I'm not going to jump off the ship now, in the middle of the season. If the ship's going to go down, I'm certainly going to be on it when it goes down."

The Bulls were 72-10 two years ago and 69-13 last season — the best records in NBA history. They are 9-7 this season without Pippen, their second-leading scorer and rebounder, primary ballhandler and top defender.

"Sometimes these things are really what derail basketball clubs," Jackson said. "The expectations, the exaltation of being a championship team, all those things go out the window without Scottie Pippen."

Pippen didn't talk to reporters yesterday, and Jackson said there was no indication how long it would take to resolve the situation. "It could take a month, six weeks, two months," Jackson said. "The trading deadline is, what, Feb. 19?

JOSHUA KAHANEN / COLLEGIAN

Minister of Defense

Senior Brad Norton leads the Minutemen into action this weekend in a home–and–home set against Northeastern.

UM's Woodson beats Manning

By Jim Suhr
Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich.— As Charles Woodson hoisted the Walter Camp Award on Monday honoring the nation's top college football player, Michigan's two-way standout hoped his campaign for the Heisman Trophy got a lift.

In its 31 years, the Camp award has been a barometer to Heisman voting in a fashion similar to the way New Hampshire's primaries have foreshadowed outcomes of presidential elections.

Only five times has the Camp award gone to a player who did not win the Heisman, the last time in 1990 when Notre Dame's Raghib "Rocket" Ismail won the Camp and Brigham Young quarterback Ty Detmer won the Heisman.

"If the Heisman doesn't come around, it doesn't," Woodson said. "I'll still be happy."

Michigan coach Lloyd Carr also won an award yesterday. For guiding the No. 1 Wolverines (11-0) to Rose Bowl and the brink of their first national title since 1948, Carr won Walter Camp Football Foundation honors as this season's top college coach.

The awards — named after the former coach at Yale and Stanford in the late 1800s — are chosen by the coaches and sports information directors from Div. I-A schools. Woodson and Carr will formally receive the awards at a banquet at Yale in February. "As is the case with any award, it's due to the efforts and dedication of a lot of people," Carr said Monday, crediting his assistants and players.

"No coach could ask for the kind of group of young people who have played here with such spirit and enthusiasm that would have made Walter Camp happy."

Woodson joined former Pittsburgh star Hugh Green as the only defensive players to win the Camp award. Green won it in 1980, the year South Carolina halfback George Rogers won the Heisman. Though no defender has won the Heisman, Woodson is the co-favorite with Tennessee quarterback Peyton Manning.

"In a year when no one has stepped forward, Woodson deserves the Heisman," said Mel Kiper, an NFL draft analyst for ESPN. "He hasn't had any bad games, he's made a difference on both sides of the ball, and he's elevated Michigan's defense to one of the best in college history.

"The Heisman's for the MVP on their team, and Charles has made the difference for Michigan."

Woodson has seven interceptions, 11 receptions and four touchdowns this season.

In the Michigan's season-ending victory over Ohio State, Woodson caught a 37-yard pass to set up Michigan's first touchdown, returned a punt 78 yards for another score and thwarted a Buckeyes rally with an interception in the end zone.

All Woodson can do now about the Heisman is wait until Dec. 13, when the award is announced.

"I think the play on the field is the only thing that's going to move me toward the Heisman," said Woodson, who will decide after the Rose Bowl whether he will forego his senior season to enter the NFL draft.

■ pool

continued from page 12

and that I try not to get frustrated and take things too seriously," Newell said.

Newell will also play water polo for UMass this spring as soon as her swimming season concludes. In addition, Newell is carrying a full course load and has much of her time occupied with swimming, water polo, and class work. Whether it's practice at 5 a.m. or class in the middle of the afternoon, Sarah Newell seems to be in the right place at the right time.

"I'm on scholarship for swimming, but I really love water polo. I wanted to do both here at UMass, and fortunately, I could," said Newell.

Finally, there is one thing that does not separate Newell from the thousands of other freshmen who matriculated at UMass this fall: being away from home for the first time.

"It was hard at first because I was homesick and tired of everything. I know that I wouldn't be happy if I wasn't doing as well as I am, but I'm glad that I decided to come here."

And if Newell continues to rewrite the UMass record books, then Newcomb will be happy, too.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Freshman point guard Jonathan DePina will continue his growth against the Cougars.

■ hoop

continued from page 12

out– rebounded all four opponents so far— including a whopping 52-31 advantage against Fresno. But Flint isn't all smiles, because he knows many of those were offensive rebounds, which means the Minutemen haven't been hitting their shots.

"Rebounding can be good and bad. We're a good rebounding team, but when you have a lot of offensive rebounds it means you've missed a lot of shots," Flint said. But I think we've done a good job offensively and defensively rebounding."

Flint has been pleased with the play of sophomore forward Mike Babul who has started all five games at small forward.

"I thought he kept some balls alive, and hit some shots, and that's the key for him," Flint said. "As long as he can do that, he can help us."

UMass' inexperienced backcourt has performed as expected so far. There have been some mistakes, but Flint says he has seen improvement, even from the Fresno St. game, in handling pressure defense.

According to Flint, "We need to get more consistent guard play. They sort of learned on the job [in Alaska]. The better they play, the better we play."

Collegian Sports– Where it's at!

Pizza
Calzones
Subs
Buffalo Wings

CANTONE'S PIZZA

Fast Free Delivery
Sunday - Thursday:
3:30 PM - 1:30 AM
Friday & Saturday:
3:30 PM - 2 AM

Large Cheese Pizza
only $6.95

May not be combined w/other coupon or offer. Expires 2/28/98

University Dental Associates
Dr. David A. Brown • Dr. Marjan Z. Khodadoust
Convenient Hours • Insurance Accepted
New families Welcome •Dentistry for Children
Cosmetic Dentistry
267 Amherst Rd, Sunderland 665-5005

Barnes & Noble College Bookstores
at Boston University & Northeastern

JOB FAIR

If you want a fast-paced job that will get your winter off to a great start, it's here at Barnes & Noble College Bookstores, Boston's best source for books. . .and the best choice for retail jobs. Find out more at our JOB FAIR on December 4th.

You could be a sales associate - just long enough to get us through the winter rush and get your bank account in shape. Get here early enough and you could be hired on the spot!

- Part-time jobs
- Immediate hires
- Flexible scheduling
- Store discount up to 35%
- Friendly work environment

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 4TH
10AM - 3PM
CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE

If you want to get a closer look at us, but can't come to our JOB FAIR, call (617) 236-7402 for more information.

Barnes & Noble College Bookstores, Inc. is an Equal Opportunity Employer.

Asthma Sufferers

You may qualify for FREE Study Related CARE and FREE Study MEDICATIONS for your asthma as part of a research study.

- At least 15 years old
- Have had asthma for at least one year
- Are a non-smoker

Call NOW 413-584-4010

LOSE WEIGHT NOW!
Our products are:
- Doctor Recommended
- 100% Natural
- Guaranteed

You will:
- Feel more energy
- Lose up to 30 LBS in 30 days
- Have more willpower

FREE SAMPLES
CALL: (413) 259-1922

THE AMHERST DELICATESSEN
MEMBER O.C.M.P.
WE ACCEPT ALL MAJOR CREDIT CARDS.
Can We Build One For You?
Serving Sandwiches, Bagels & Lox,
Fresh Soups & Salads, Take Out.
★ DELIVERIES CALL 549-6314 ★
★ OPEN UNTIL 9p.m. ★

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over Our Lease- 2 bedroom apartment. Located on bus route. Starting Jan 1. 256-8399

AUTO FOR SALE

89 Nissan 240SX Excellent condition. All extras. New: muffler, clutch, tires, brakes. $4400 or B/O. 549-6926

1986 Dodge Charger 2dr, hatch, 60k miles. Good gas mileage. $1200 or B/O. Call Lorraine 253-4826

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Call The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1987 Honde Accord 5 speed, 158k. Great condition. Mike 584-6637

1989 Suberu Station Wagon 4x4, standard, excellent condition. $2200 (978)544-3783

1986 Dodge Cherger 2dr Hatch. 60k miles. Good gas mileage. $1200 or B/O. call lorraine (413)253-4826

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday 1-800-649-4795

COMPUTERS

COMPUTERS! NEW P166MMX from $995. laptops, peripherals. Zarvision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

Laptop Notebook works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413) 295-2027.

COMPUTERS

Color VGA Monitor for computer. works great. Call CPC (413) 548-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Applications are available for Tour Guides, Student Admissions Rep and Summer Orientation Jobs at Admissions Center.

Activists $250-$400/week Holiday Jobs For The Environment

Work with the Sierra Club on an urgent campaign to:
- Protect endangered species
- Prevent habitat loss
- Stop clear cutting in our NATIONAL FORESTS

Work over the holidays and beyond. Career Opportunities.

On-campus interviews today at 11, 1, 3, 7, in Campus Center #178 or call Amy at 256-6434.

January Jobs Use your winter break to make money. 2-4 week fun promotions around country. Great for the resume. Outgoing and independent people call (800)783-4237 Attn: Joe. Collegiate Advantage

Summer Management Opportunities

Open across Mass. for the Summer of 1998. Earn $600-$800 per week. For more info please call College Pro Painters at (888)277-7962

Attention Slackers!! Use e-mail? Know others who do? Little effort = Big money! Call (800)546-0744

FURNITURE FOR SALE

NEW FUTON White mattress with beautiful oak frame. Free delivery $275. 6-0137

LOST & FOUND

LOST Gold bracelet chain style with lobster claw. 527-3454

GREEK ANNOUNCEMENTS

Freshman, Sophomore, and Junior Women invited to Open Rush- Sigma Kappa Sorority. Wed., Dec. 3, 6-8pm. located behind Hillel. Call Beth 549-7035.

JEWELERY

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

MISCELLANEOUS FOR SALE

Brother 3600D Word Processor Like new. Only 6 months old. $100.

Willpower In A Bottle
Lose Weight
Doctor Recommended
100% Natural
Moneyback Guarantee
(413)259-1927

Free Motorola Pagers Limited supply. Great X-mas gifts.
1-800-784-6452

PERSONALS

NICOLE,
You're the coolest kid I know, besides myself of course.
Happy Birthday!
Love,
Heather

PETS FOR SALE

Baby Bearded Dragons, "The Best Pet Lizard," $45 each. Call Stan at (413)256-0185

CAT LOVERS
Looking for someone interested in having 2 loveable cats live-in. We will retain ownership of the cats and we will pay for food, litter, and vet care. You provide the home and the love! Call for details. 546-4550

RESUMES

GET NOTICED! Number One secret to resume writing for college students and gen-x Send $6.00 check/money order + business size SASE to: Nina Smith, 507 Central Avenue, No. 2, New Haven, CT 06515

ROOM FOR RENT

Cheep rooms for Wintersession Live close to campus. Only $150. Includes heat/hot water. Call Jason 549-0958

Live Uptown $275/month. 253-2979

Looking for one male to share four bedroom apartment in Alpine Commons with three males. Two full baths. $300/month. Everything included. Starting ASAP. Call Josh 253-6481

Room in house in South Amherst. $375/month ALL INCLUDED. Next to bus line. Start 1/1/98. Call 253-9482

One room available on Main St. On bus route and short walk to town. Call 259-9282. Available immediately.

ROOMMATE WANTED

One bedroom is available in Cliffside Apartment. Call Franky 665-7831

Very quiet roommate wanted in Amherst on bus line. $260/month plus 1/3 utilities. 256-5402, 253-9457

Looking for female to share two bedroom apartment in Puffton. $320/month. On bus line. Call Candy 549-9293

Housemate Needed for spring semester. Share with 2 grads. $283 / Mo. Available Jan. 1 549-4492

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Spring Break Travel

with SunSplash Tours. Lowest prices, guaranteed! Jamaica, Cancun, Barbados, Bahamas, Panama City, Daytona, Key West, Puerto Rico, South Padre Island Book before December 22! Call Jason 549-0958

SPRING BREAK 98
Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399 Organize a small group and travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577.

TUTORS

TUTORS
Bilingual tutors for part-time paid assistance to students speaking Cape Verdian/ Portuguese, Chinese, Khmer, and Spanish. Contact ESL / Bilingual Office at (413) 549-9857 Amherst Public Schools An Affirmative Action/ Equal Opportunity Employer

WANTED TO RENT

I need a two bedroom apt for Spring. Will take over lease. Amherst pref. Dan 546-2035

Jan-May 97 One bedroom apartment/room. Will take over your lease. Call Franky 665-7831

Cantones Pizza

256-6100

1	2 LARGE CHEESE	$13.99
2	2 CALZONES	$8.99
3	4 CALZONES	$15.99
4	2 LRG 1 TOPPING	$15.99

No Coupons Needed w/ Specials
Free Delivery!

Check it Out!

The Classifieds have NEW Headings

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exception is in birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or haste.

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELERY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND 13 DAYS FREE!
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR RENT
MISCELLANEOUS FOR SALE
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP.
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, DEC. 2

Informational Session — AmeriCorps info session featuring Vista, NCCC, Teach For America, City Year, City Works, Youth Build and more. Find out about the many different AmeriCorps programs that allow young people to earn money for college while helping the environment, education, republic health, unmet human needs and public safety. Any AmeriCorps alumni from Five College campuses who would like to know what's new are also encouraged to attend. From 7:30-8:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 911. For more information call 546-3337, or fmerkcoob@student.umass.edu.

Meeting — The Index (UMass yearbook) will hold it's general meeting at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Union, room 304. All are invited. For more information, call Jill Aordkian at 545-0848.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 3

Dancing — Israeli folk dancing from 8:30-10 p.m. in Grayson Dormitory, Orchard Hill. Learn a new dance, review an old one. No experience necessary. Sponsored by Hillel.

Discussion — "A Palestinian/Jewish Dialogue for Peace in the Middle East." Najat Arafat Khelil and Rema Bernards, co-founders of the Palestinian and Jewish American Women's Dialogue Project in Washington, D.C. will discuss Israeli–Palestinian relations at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Hall. For more information, call 545-9642.

Entertainment — "Not Ready For Bedtime Players" performing at 8 p.m. in Greenough Basement in Central.

Informational Session — The Peace Corps representative for UMass and the Five College area will present general information on the Peace Corps and how to become a volunteer from 7-8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 905- 909. All students from any major are encouraged to attend, with a special emphasis on graduating seniors. For more information, call the Campus Peace Corps office at 545-2105 or come by the office in Stockbridge, room 112 during office hours, Mon. 9 a.m. –5 p.m., Tues. and Thurs. 1–5 p.m.

Meeting — Inter–religious dialogues follow up discussion and future planning from 7–9 p.m. in the Campus Center, see info desk for room.

Workshop — A free workshop "Introduction to Psychodrama" from 7–9 p.m. In the Curtain Theater. Come experience how theater can be used for self–exploration. Registration is limited. For more information or to sign up, call Marlena Applebaum at 549–8556 or e–mail at marlena@student.umass.edu.

THURSDAY, DEC. 4

Discussion — Amy Hoffman will discuss her recent book "Hospital Time– A Memoir of Taking Care of Friends with AIDS" at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 805. Part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series and is co–sponsored by The Stonewall Center, GLB GSO, Women's Studies, and the Chancellor's Task Force on GLBT Masters. For more information, contact the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Entertainment — "Not Ready For Bedtime Players" performing at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, graduate lounge.

Lecture — Anti–Semitism Today from 7–9 p.m. at the Hillel House entitled "Anti–Semitism In the International Arena." Come sit in on this one credit course given by Lauren Levin, Eastern States Civil Rights Director, Anti– Defamation League. All visitors are welcome.

NOTICES

Applications — The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team is accepting applications for its training this January 12–16. Applications are available for any UMass student at 222 Hampshire House, Legal Studies. For more information, contact Leah at 545–5882.

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545–0792.

Art Exhibition — An exhibition of more than 30 one–of–a– kind artist books and scrolls by William Schade will be on view from Nov. 11 through Jan. 25 at the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum. Museum hours are Tues. – Fri., 11 a.m.–5 p.m. and Sat. and Sun., 1–5 p.m. and is closed on academic holidays from Wed., Nov. 26 through Monday, Dec. 1 and from Tues., Dec. 16 through Mon., Jan. 6. For more information, call 538–2245 or fax 538–2144.

Auditions — The Not Ready for Bedtime Players are holding auditions for next semester on Mon., Dec. 8 at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163.

Club — The UMass Amateur Radio Club Station WIPUO is returning and looking for people to join in Ham radio. Anyone interested In radio/electronics and a desire to learn and communicate are welcome. The club will sponsor FCC approved volunteer examination sessions for all license levels. For more information, contact Richard Strycharz N1MFT at 549–6000 ext. 6000 or leave a message at facility services.

Craft Fair — Annual Holiday Craft Fair from 9 p.m. to 4 p.m. on December 3, 4, and 5 in the Lincoln Campus Center Concourse. The craft fair will feature artists from around New England exhibiting hand crafted pottery, jewelry, clothing, cards, candle, and other items. In addition to the 18 professional exhibitors there will be 8–10 students showing their work.

Fill–A–Bus — Help fill a PVTA bus with clothing, toys, and non–perishable food to benefit needy individuals and families in the Amherst area on Dec. 1–5 from 11 a.m.–5 p.m. daily in front of the Student Union. Volunteers to staff the bus and collect donations needed. Contact the UMass Community Service Program at 545–3368 for more information.

Information Session — The Domestic Exchange Program will be holding information sessions from 4:45–5:45 p.m. In the Campus Center, room 805 on Dec. 3 and 4. For more information stop by the office In Machmer E–26.

Internships — Environmental and Hunger Internships available for credli. Opportunities include helping to organize a Five College Earthday, prosecting Endangered Species and organizing the Spring Hunger Clean–up. For more Information, call Robyn at 545–0199.

FYI's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN	Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN SI
25	Headline News
26	UCTV
27	TBS
28	BET
28	TV Land
30	Univision
31	Comedy Central
32	Cartoon
33	Much Music

545-3500

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

TUESDAY EVENING — ⊃ - Campus — DECEMBER 2, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	G. Auriemma	Women's College Basketball: Villanova at Connecticut. (Live)				Atlantis's Olympic Glory
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Billy Graham Crusade		Michael Hayes "Slaves"		Dellaventura (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WGGB	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Smoked" (In Stereo)		Michael Hayes "Slaves"		Dellaventura (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Grace Under	Soul Man	Home Imp.	Spin City	10-Fascinating People	News	Nightline
WCVB	5	ABC News		Inside Edition	Chronicle	Grace Under	Soul Man	Home Imp.	Spin City		News	Star Trek: Next Gener.
WLVI	6	Full House	Boy-World	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Caroline	Newsradio	Mad Abo. You	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Caroline	Newsradio	Mad Abo. You	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)	News	Grace Under
WTXX	8	Cheers	Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Moesha (R)	Clueless (R)	Spice Girls-Never Enough			News		Tonight Show
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Caroline	Newsradio	Mad Abo. You	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)	News	Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	American Comedy Honors (In Stereo)					News		Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Caroline	Newsradio	Mad Abo. You	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)	News
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Yanni: Concert From the Taj Mahal and Forbidden City				10-Fascinating People	News	Nightline
WGGB	40	News	Pro Game	College Basketball: College of Charleston at Massachusetts.				Home Imp.	Spin City	10-Fascinating People	News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	Moesha (R)	Clueless (R)	Spice Girls-Never Enough		News	M*A*S*H	Pearl TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach	Coach	"Harry, I Should the Kids" (1994, Fantasy) Rick Moranis.				"The Rocketeer" (1991, Adventure) Bill Campbell.		Law & Order
A&E	53	Northern Exposure "Heroes"		Law & Order "Prisoner of Love"		Biography: Sam Walton.		Silent Witness "Only the Lonely"				Law & Order
CNN	29	World View		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		Landmines-Assassins	Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	32	(4:00)	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"Something Wild" (1986, Comedy) Jeff Daniels, Melanie Griffith.				Invisible Places "Subtropolis"	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	69	Wings "Spyglenes" (R)		Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery: Hunters.		New Detectives			Beavis-Butt.	Justice Files "Serial Killers" (R)
ESPN	31	Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Great Eight – Providence vs. Utah. (Live)				College Basketball: Great Eight – Arizona vs. Kansas. (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE	45	Supermarket	Debt	Shoot the Clock: Fitting		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"The Disappearance of Vonnie" (1994, Mystery) Ann Wedgeworth.			Beavis-Butt.	Lovelina (R) (In Stereo)
MTV	35	MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		Daria (R)	Beavis-Butt.	MTV Live (R) (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Newhart
NICK	46	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Bewitched	I Love Lucy	Odd Couple	Taxi
SCIFI	66	Twilight Zone	Twilight Zone	Time Trax "The Contender"		Seaquest DSV (In Stereo)		Forever Knight (In Stereo)		Tekwar "Slay of Execution"	Time Trax "The Contender"
TLC	28	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Trauma II: Life in the ER		Volcano – Path of Destruction.		Xyber Warriors "Into War" (R)	Trauma II: Life in the ER (R)
TNT	54	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		NBA Basketball: Seattle SuperSonics at Washington Wizards. (In Stereo Live)				Inside-NBA	Women & Sports: Girls Do...
USA	60	Baywatch "Seize the Day"		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		Boxing: Charles Brewer vs. Joey DeGrendis. (In Stereo Live)			Bills Stanklings (R) (In Stereo)
HBO	59	(5:00) "Family"	★★ "Mr. Write" (1994) Paul Reiser. PG-13			★★½ "One Fine Day" (1996, Comedy) Michelle Pfeiffer. PG				★★ "Vampire in Brooklyn" (1995) Eddie Murphy.	(Comedy Jam
MAX	63	(5:00)	★★ "Big Bully" (1996) Rick Moranis. PG			★★★ "The Ghost and the Darkness" (1996) Michael Douglas. R				★★ "Broken Arrow" (1996, Adventure) John Travolta. R
SHOW	65	★½ "Race the Sun" (1996, Drama) Halle Berry (In Stereo) PG				★★★½ "Fargo" (1996) Frances McDormand. R				★★ "Heavy" (1995, Drama) Pruitt Taylor Vince. (In Stereo) R		Women

Attention Student Cartoonists!

Your comic could be here next semester! Bring your samples to the Collegian office, and tell Laura Stock that your comic is better than these Student Hacks and Main-Stream Sellouts.
Don't make us bring "Leold" back.

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You can make arrangements today which will serve you well in the near future. Be sure to give a superior all necessary information.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Though you've been struggling with a certain dilemma for some time, today you're likely to enjoy a revelation which brings about a solution.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — There is more to life than profit, and yet your sense of worth is so tied up in monetary gain right now that you may not know it — yet.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Take care that you are not being penny–wise and pound–foolish in your attempts to make your money go a long way. Guard against unwise spending.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You should be able to plan well today, even for those things you cannot anticipate. Trust previous experience to see you through.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — The quality of time spent with family and loved ones today is of far more importance than the quantity. Even a short visit can be valuable.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — This is a good day for breaking through personal barriers of all kinds. Concentrate on doing what you said you'd do — and doing it well.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You may come up against someone who is unwilling to let you be creative with the rules at this time. Be patient; don't become defensive.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You may find yourself grappling with one or two difficult concepts today — both pragmatic and philosophical. Discuss things openly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Your memories of a highly creative and profitable time can inspire you to strive for something today that may have been out of reach in the past.

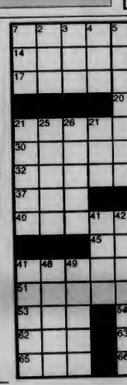
LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Put yourself in another's shoes today and you'll be able to understand why there has been tension between you recently. Make amends!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You may receive a recommendation for a job or project that excites you and has you yearning for more in the way of career opportunity.

Quote of the Day

"I had to buy that guy a new hat last time."

–Lane Meyer



ACROSS
1 Follower of Krishna
6 Pub orders
11 Phonograph abbr.
14 Celestial hunter
15 A Mexican Indian
16 Mine find
17 Martinique volcano
18 Cheer at the Met
19 Flying rodent
20 Zone
22 Emulated Danielle Steel
24 Dresses
26 Connected
30 Shack
31 Brooklyn's — Island
32 Luxurious
33 Reacted to a ghost story
37 Rooster's mate
38 Chili ingredients
39 Command to a mule
40 Ulterior motive
43 Unsophisticated
45 Actor Eastwood
46 Aromatic seed
47 Work period, usually
50 Moat lemony
51 Dairy-cave buys
52 Mogul Griffin
53 Guy's date
54 Giant
57 Smidgens
62 Mischievous one
63 Law
64 Burst forth
65 Dawn goddess
66 Sense organs
67 Tattered

DOWN
1 Dance
2 Anger
3 Zip
4 Bambi's mother
5 Dig up
6 Infants
7 Post Pound
8 Timetable info
9 Race (an engine)
10 Expressed displeasure
11 C3PO of "Star Wars"
12 Chatter
13 Distributed
21 Antique auto
23 Comedienne Martha —
24 Omega's opposite
25 Fax's ancestor
26 Jeer
27 Election winners
28 Like a ball
29 Purposes
31 Gregorian —
33 Fishing device
34 German river
35 Roof overhangs
36 Resided
38 Edge
41 Numerical prefix
42 Sparkle
43 Bolder
44 Crawling insect
46 Remote
47 Stray cat
48 Remember the —!
49 Squeals
50 Backpackers' shelters
52 Kitchen spice
55 Wedding vow
56 — the season"
58 "Are you a man — mouse?"
59 Egyptian boy king
60 Fit
61 Shoat's home

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

ZONE HORSE SCOW
IRON IDIOM URGE PANG GABLE NILE
SLOSH DRABBER
LOBS EYRE
COMFORTER EASES
ODE SOAR SMALL
BODE WARING SLAY
GRINS COED ATE
ISAAC BARTENDER
MAGI MANE
ALLERGIC LYRICS
TAIL RAMBO VOLE
OGEE GROAN EMER
POND EYING SAFE

12-2-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

Bruno By C. Baldwin

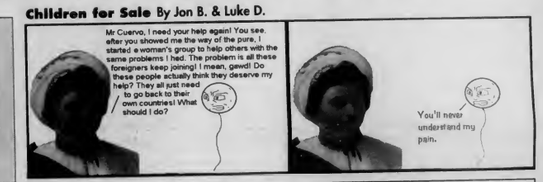
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

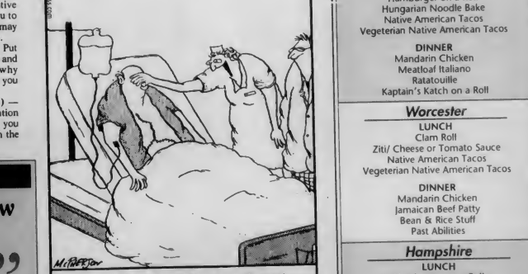
Non Sequitur By Wiley

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere



Monkey Socials By Constant Jones

Children for Sale By Jon B. & Luke D.

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Native American Tacos
Vegeterian Native American Tacos

DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Meatloaf Italiano
Ratatouille
Kaptain's Katch on a Roll

Worcester
LUNCH
Clam Roll
Ziti/ Cheese or Tomato Sauce
Native American Tacos
Vegeterian Native American Tacos

DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Jamaican Beef Patty
Bean & Rice Stuff
Past Abilities

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Tacos
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Mystery Meal

DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Meatloaf
(Come on, you've got 139 meals left.)

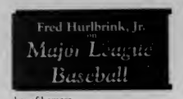
Berkshire
LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Chef's Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Tacos
Vegeterian Taco

DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Meet Loaf
Bean & Rice Stuff
Ravioli Alfredo

Today's Staff

Night Editor... Chris Stamm
Photo Technician Brian McDermott
Copy Editor Petra von Ziegesar
Production Supervisor Rob Snow
Production Staff Mike Krairy, Joe Savitch

Clark up for Hall



Sox still have gaps in the outfield

The immortal Jack Clark is now eligible for the Hall of Fame. It's about time.

At the thought of that, Leo Durocher just rolled over — twice — in his grave.

Clark could hit the long ball, no doubt. But, what else did he do? He came to Boston and hit 28 home runs, or something. Then he filed for bankruptcy, 'cause you know how hard it is to live on $2 million dollers a year. So, he didn't exactly endear himself to local baseball writers.

Clark struggled to hit around .250 for his career. He wasn't exactly the most nimble of first basemen. He didn't even hit a monumental number of homers.

He is a strapping guy with a Hollywood face, but that doesn't make him a Hall of Famer.

What does make a Hall of Famer? It's gotta be more than just numbers. A player has to exude a presence, a passion for winning — the will to be a great player. This guy has to have baseball cards on kids' walls all over the country.

Now, Gary Carter... he's a Hall of Fame player. One of the best all-around catchers in any era, Carter emphasized the importance of a backstop being more than a backstop. His prolific bat and defensive skill propelled the Mets to the '86 World Series Championship... I forget who they played.

Carter probably has the best chance of any of the nine first-time eligible players to be voted in.

Bert Blyleven was no slouch in his day either. He spent 107 years with the Minnesota Twins, winning consistently. He was a strikeout pitcher in his hay-day, but adjusted as he got older and was still an effective hurler when he retired.

If personality were a trait that baseball writers took into account, Rick Dempsey would be a shoo-in.

Dempsey was a serviceable major league catcher for a number of years, but his best asset was his spirit. He is widely known as one of baseball's all-time pranksters and one of the most well-liked men in the game.

Other first-timers on the ballot: Brian Downing (Angels' outfielder); UMass alum Mike Flanagan (Orioles'/Blue Jays' pitcher); Pedro Guerrero (Dodgers'/Cardinals' first baseman); Carney Lansford (Red Sox'/Athletics' third baseman); Willie Randolph (Yankees' second baseman).

This is one of the weakest classes in years to be up for induction. Carter won't get in on the first ballot, and he and Blyleven are the only two with a legitimate shot at being voted in. T:=> Old-Timers committee will be the only hope for Guerrero, Clark and Lansford. The others should just enjoy their retirement.

Sure-fire Inductees won't be so hard to come by with next year's class.

Some guy who pitched in Texas for awhile will be on the ballot soon. Nolan Ryan, I think his name is.

He'll be joined by Robin Yount and George Brett to name a couple of other players that have a good shot at nabbing some votes.

I don't know though, Nolan Ryan vs. Mike Flanagan?

• The Red Sox continued their string of earth-shattering off-season moves this winter by trading for Jimmy Hurst and signing 18-year-old Japanese outfielder Kenichiro Kawabata.

Hurst is a minor league outfielder formerly of the Detroit Tigers organization. He is so valuable that it took a player to be named later to wrestle him from the Tigers. Apparently he is a slugger in the Troy O'Leary mold... if there is such a thing.

Kawabata is the first non-pitcher from Japan to sign an American major league contract. Straight out of high school, Kawabata says he has "a big dream."

The Red Sox are obviously uneasy about their outfield situation. O'Leary isn't an everyday outfielder for a contender, neither is Darren Bragg and Michael Coleman may not be ready to be a full-time big-leaguer. Wilfredo Cordero is long gone.

Trot Nixon's stock hasn't just fallen, it has practically disappeared, and Jose Malave is a career minor leaguer.

Despite having a wealth of depth in the infield, and suddenly an uppercrust pitching staff, the Sox need to address their porous outfield if they're thinking playoffs.

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

UMass opens home slate against Cougars

By Luke Merodith
Collegian Staff

For the Massachusetts men's basketball team, opening the 1997–1998 season with a 10-day road trip in California and Alaska looked like a daunting challenge when the schedule came out in September.

But after four games, the Minutemen are right where they wanted to be— 2–2, with flashes of brilliance against No. 13 Fresno St. and No. 5 Purdue, and a solid 40 minutes of basketball in beating Seton Hall 73–60 Saturday. But UMass coach Bruiser Flint knows there is still work to be done before his team starts to play like he wants them to.

Enter tonight's opponent, College of Charleston. One year removed from being the national media's small college darlings— boasting a 29–3 record, a first round NCAA win over Maryland and a narrow loss to eventual champion Arizona will get you— the Cougars are 3-0, but return only one starter, Jermel President, who is injured and will not play tonight.

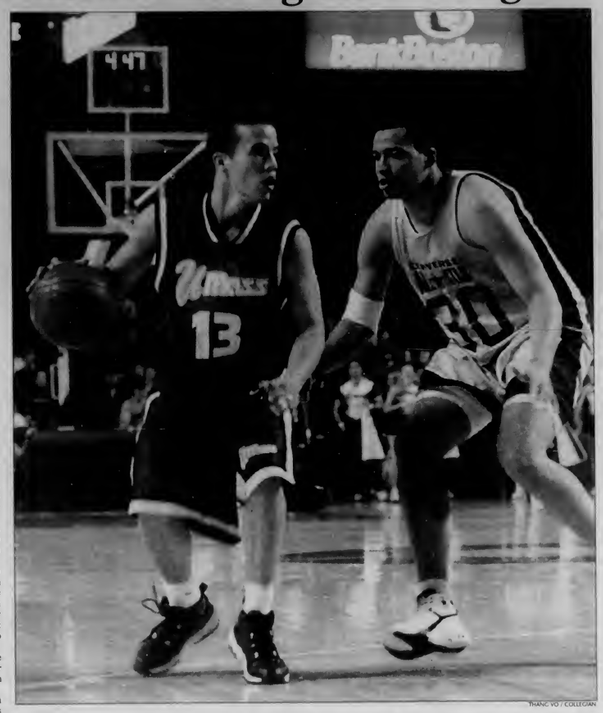
Flint says that, despite a decidedly small lineup, Charleston will present match-up problems for UMass because of their athleticism and because they can penetrate well.



"They're all about 6-foot-5, they all put it on the floor, and they all dribble-drive, they all shoot, so that's a tough match-up for us, especially for our big guys... [and] John Kresse is one of the best coaches in the country," Flint said.

The Minutemen will trot out the same lineup for the fifth straight game, something a banged-up UMass team couldn't do at the beginning of last season. Leading the charge is junior Lari Ketner, who is averaging a team-high 17 points, eight rebounds and 3.5 blocks a game. Ketner scored 21 points, 10 rebounds and two blocks against Seton Hall, and 16 points and 10 rebounds against Fresno State.

"When Lari takes his time he's as good as anybody... The one thing I thought he did during the trip was play better defensively," Flint said. "I thought he did a great job on [Purdue center] Brad Miller."

Ketner and senior forward Tyrone Weeks have keyed a monstrous post presence for the Minutemen. UMass has

Turn to BASKETBALL page 9

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Freshman Rafael Cruz and the Minutemen host College of Charleston for the first home men's hoop game tonight at the William D. Mullins Center.

Newell makes waves for women's swim

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Life in the swimming pool was not always as easy as a first-place finish for Massachusetts freshman sensation Sarah Newell.

Turn back the clock to a little over a year ago. Newell, then a senior at Cumberland Valley High School was debating whether or not to swim during her final campaign after just getting over mononucleosis. She eventually decided to swim, and in the process made a decision which would shape her future.

"I almost didn't want to swim my senior year, but I decided to go through with it and just finish it out," Newell said. "I ended up having a good season, and now I'm glad that I didn't give up. After all, look where it got me now."

Where swimming has landed Newell is here in Amherst. The Dillsburg, Penn. native narrowed her final two choices to UMass and Maryland, but chose to be a Minutewoman in the end.

"I learned about UMass from a girl that swims here, and she spoke highly of the coaching staff," Newell said. "I had more fun on my recruiting trip here than I did in Maryland. and I was pretty sure that I would go here."

But the ironic point which lies behind the recruiting of Newell to the Pioneer Valley by UMass women's swimmlng and diving coach Bob Newcomb was that she was known more for her accomplishments in water polo than in swimming. You see, Newell was on a squad that won four Pennsylvania state championships in water polo during her four years at Cumberland Valley, and was topped off by winning the Eastern Regionals in her senior year.

On an individual note, Newell was a four-year letter winner in both swimming and water polo, but picked up the majority of her accolades in water polo, where she was an All-State selection, a second-team All-Eastern selection in her junior year, and a first-team All-Eastern selection in her senior year. Still, the icing wasn't on the cake just yet, as Newell was named All-American in her senior year.

"Sarah's high school has a great reputation for water polo, and that's how we first learned about her," Newcomb said. "Pennsylvania is a great swimming state too, and we were lucky to get our hooks into her."

Now, getting back to the swimming side of Newell, this "diaper dandy" has already made a huge splash for the swim team this winter. She broke the school record in the 200 breast stroke in only her second collegiate meet against Providence on Nov. 8. She swam the second fastest time in UMass history in the 100 breast stroke against St. John's on Nov. 22. Newell has 10 first place finishes in five meets for the Minutewomen already this year — and the season is only half over.

"I'm very excited with the way that Sarah is swimming. She was just outstanding in her first ever home meet when she broke the school record in the 200 breast," Newcomb said. "She's really improving even more now and she's learning how to really swim races. Sarah is only going to get better."

Newell is equally as pleased with her performance in the pool thus far.

"I was really excited when I broke the record because I was working hard and it was nice to see it pay off," Newell said. "Like I said before, this was a long-term goal that I had in the back of my mind. Now I guess I have to readjust my thinking and set some new goals."

Newcomb also has been impressed with Newell in several other respects.

"Her technique is just beautiful. I'm sure that she is only going to improve and get stronger over the next few years. The only negative thing about her is that she doesn't believe that she can go as fast as we think that she can. She's not fully convinced that she can get to Nationals, but we think that she can, especially because of the positive work ethic that she has."

And just what does Newell have to say about herself?

"I think that I'm hard-working

JOHNA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Women's swimming freshman Sarah Newell has ascended to the top of the ranks for the Minutewomen.

Turn to POOL page 9

Old timers:

Rockets trio look for elusive ring

It seems that ever since Kevin Garnett leapt from the high school ranks to the pro hardwoods, basketball fans have argued that 18-year-old "men" are not mature enough for the NBA. Perhaps that's true, case in point, Jermaine O'Neal.

There's the argument that all the talent the college game offers leaves too early for super-stardom. If that's the case, then all the flair, agility, and emotion that these youngsters offer is going to waste. The reason?

Old means good.

The Houston Rockets are about as old as an NBA team gets. Hakeem Olajuwon, Charles Barkley, and Clyde Drexler define the word "veteran." And let's just say that Kevin Willis and Eddie Johnson aren't in their prime, either.

Brett Mauser on the NBA

Or maybe this quintet of future Hall-of-Famers (Willis Is a long-shot, but go with it) is in their prime. Their talents as individuals have come and gone, but Rudy Tomjanovich has this squad working as one unit. All five are former All-Stars. Barkley and Olajuwon have won their Podoloffs (Most Valuable Player award) already. As players, they've done their job. But Barkley's hand is still feeling devoid of some jewelry.

Rudy realizes this. He realizes that this year Is not only for the city of Houston, but for Barkley, who yearns for that ring that will put a capstone on a glorious career. The Big Three (apologies to Boston fans) want to play out their careers with one more season of smiles and cheers. To do this, teamwork is of the essence. Teamwork, they indeed have. That's the difference between the Rockets and, say, the Wizards (more on them in a moment).

Thirteen games Into the season,

Turn to NBA page 8

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 62 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Wednesday, December 3, 1997

"Hey, Hey, Mamma"

Led Zeppelin returns with a compilation of live recordings from the BBC spanning from the late '60s thru early '70s (see Arts & Living, page 5).

UMass claws Cougars

With 20 points from Lari Ketner, the Minutemen beat the College of Charleston, 52–40, to open Mullins for the 1997– 98 season (see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

Rape victim wins fight to have abortion

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The parents of a 13-year-old pregnant girl who says she was raped have dropped their legal battle to prevent her from traveling to Britain for an abortion.

British newspapers said the girl, who has not been identified, was said to have been accompanied by a foster parent and a health official to an abortion clinic in northwest England yesterday.

The girl, one of 12 children in a family living in two trailer homes parked beside a road on the outskirts of Dublin, has been at the center of a national debate on abortion, a highly emotional issue in this overwhelmingly Roman Catholic country.

Abortion is permitted only when a woman's life is in danger. No other exceptions, including rape or incest, are granted.

Lawyers for the parents told the Supreme Court on Monday they will not appeal against rulings by two lower courts allowing the girl to go to Britain for an abortion.

The girl has been in the care of welfare officers since saying she was raped by one of her father's friends 14 weeks ago. A man in his 20s has been charged with the crime.

NATION

Judge makes ruling in breast implant case

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The judge in the nation's first class-action lawsuit over silicone breast implants ruled yesterday that only the eight original plaintiffs can try to win damages from Dow Chemical Co, not the 1,800 women who were once part of the class.

The ruling comes three months after a jury decided Dow Chemical was negligent in testing silicone for implants, lied about the possible risks and plotted with Dow Corning Corp. to hide potential health dangers.

The 1,800 plaintiffs will have to argue individually that breast implants made them sick, rather than arguing as part of the same group, Judge Yada Magee ruled.

The same jury is scheduled to resume the trial on Jan. 7 to determine damages.

Magee said the claims by the 1,800 women were too dissimilar to group all in one lawsuit because they had received various types of implants, at different times and suffered different diseases. And since the implants were put in over a 30-year period, different legal standards had to be used for each plaintiff, the judge wrote.

Dow Chemical owns half of Dow Corning, one of the biggest implant manufacturers.

Uneeda Latinen, a breast implant recipient now living in Bay St. Louis, Miss., said she will never give up trying to collect the money even if she can no longer participate in the Louisiana case. "I even have it in my will — what I want done in my case if I die before I get to court," Ms. Latinen said.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 48 LOW: 31	HIGH: 41 LOW: 26	HIGH: 39 LOW: 20

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics.....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Tibetan Students Association fears another act of vandalism

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

Although the University of Massachusetts Tibetan Students Association (TSA) has only existed for 13 days, they have already been vandalized twice.

Formally instituted as a Graduate Student Organization (GSO) on Nov. 21, members of the TSA said that they now fear another act.

Two incidents

The TSA's information board, which is located in the Curriculum Studies program corridor of Hills North, was first vandalized at the end of the third week in November. Information posted on the oppression of "Tibetans in Tibet under Chinese Communist Occupation," was torn down.

"When it first happened, we took it lightly," said Thondup Tsering, a founding member of the TSA and a doctorate student in the School of Education. "It was clear that whoever had done was displaying their anger and hostility."

"We knew that the first incident might have been random," said Karma Dolma, another founding member of TSA and School of Education doctorate student. "But then we saw the pattern developing."

After the TSA replaced the information, it was vandalized again over Thanksgiving break. In this incident, the TSA's information was torn down and ripped into shreds.

"We fear that there might be a third incident," Dolma said. "Now that the vandal has taken action, they might get more nasty."

"We don't see any reason why this has to be done. It takes me back to occupied Tibet, where oppression was an everyday occurrence. This vandalism is an extension of the oppression in Tibet."
–Thondup Tsering

TSA responds

According to Tsering and Dolma, they are currently contacting campus authorities about the vandalism.

In order to increase awareness, the TSA, will be flyering the campus and the Five College community.

On their press release, the TSA lists their "Policy on Acts of Vandalism." "No act of vandalism will be condoned or tolerated," is the first statement of the policy.

"We don't see any reason why this has to be done," Tsering said. "It takes me back to occupied Tibet, where oppression was an everyday occurrence. This vandalism is an extension of the oppression in Tibet."

"The two acts of intentional destruction of information on Tibet brings up images of the political and cultural genocide that is going on in occupied Tibet by the Chinese government since 1949," reads the TSA Objectives.

An open invitation

According to Dolma, the TSA invites all interested persons to contact them concerning the accounts of vandalism.

"The vandal must examine his, or her, relationship with the TSA and see if their are any grounds for this," Dolma said.

"As students, as human beings, we need to seek as much information as we can about other dogmas," Dolma said.

In their first meeting of the semester, nearly 40 students signed up to participate. According to Tsering, the ethnicities of the students included African-American, Native American, South American, Spanish, French, white and others.

"We are open to everyone," Tsering said.

"We are really into multiculturalism," Dolma said. "We are trying to establish respect between students, regardless of their race."

The TSA is located in 919 Campus Center and can be reached at 545–2896.

Timber!

KEN MCDONALD/ COLLEGIAN

An employee of J&L's tree service removes a dead tree from in front of the Student Union yesterday morning.

Reno rejects GOP demands for independent counsel in fundraising investigation

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Janet Reno yesterday rejected Republican demands to seek an independent counsel to investigate telephone fund raising by President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore, saying the calls were outside the scope of federal law. She also rejected a special prosecutor to investigate allegations former Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary solicited a charitable contribution in return for meeting Chinese businessmen. In her explanation, Reno said Clinton's fund-raising calls in October 1994 were made from the White House private quarters, not the president's offices.

"This places the calls outside the scope... of (federal election law) which applies only to solicitations for hard-money contributions occurring within the federal workplace," she wrote.

Reno went right to the deadline before making her long-expected decisions. Congressional reaction was immediate.

Senate GOP leader Trent Lott called Reno's decision a tragedy. Sen. John Glenn, (D-Ohio), praised Reno for acting courageously despite "tremendous political pressure" from Republicans. Late yesterday morning, she took the unusual step of crossing Pennsylvania Avenue from the Justice Department to FBI h~ ~quarters to meet Director Louis J. ! h, who was openly at odds with her in pushing for an independent counsel. Their meeting was brief.

"This public spectacle of division between our chief law enforcement officers is a further blow to public confidence," said Sen. Charles Grassley, (R-Iowa).

Even before the decision was announced, Republican Rep. Dan Burton, who chairs a House committee investigating campaign finance, announced he would bring Reno and Freeh to Capitol Hill next Tuesday to explain their differences. Burton himself is being looked into by Reno's campaign finance task force.

Reno's deadline was set under the independent counsel law because she received a Sept. 3 request from a majority of Republicans on the House Judiciary Committee. She also opened parts of the investigation on her own.

Her decisions were transmitted to a special court, which is responsible for selecting independent counsels, according to officials who requested anonymity. That court must approve any formal public release by Reno of her decisions and the explanation for them. Reno scheduled a public statement late yesterday.

Group heads to Philadelphia to seek Mumia Abu-Jamal's release

By Joseph Fountain
Collegian Staff

This Saturday in Philadelphia, "People's International Tribunal for Justice" will take place to expose the alleged injustice committed against Mumia Abu-Jamal in his 1981 arrest and conviction for the killing of a police officer.

The tribunal will be held at the Blue Horizon, 1314 North Broad Street at 9 a.m.

Western Massachusetts supporters of the tribunal hope the Philadelphia event will help expose the cover up of evidence as well as the collaboration of government agencies in obstructing Abu-Jamal's release.

According to Nick Camerota, Western Massachusetts Coordinator of the National People's Campaign the tribunal will expose new evidence that will clear Abu-Jamal of the murder of Philadelphia Police Officer Daniel Faulkner.

The tribunal is being supported by over 100 endorsers including the National People's Campaign founded by former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark. Clark will also be one of the main participants at the Saturday event.

"The tribunal will be composed of an international panel of prominent jurists, labor and community activists, who will hear evidence on the charges," Camerota said. "Witnesses will be heard who were barred from testifying during Abu-Jamal's trial."

Abu-Jamal has been on death row for 16 years. Two years ago, Abu-Jamal's death warrant was rescinded shortly before his scheduled execution. His case has drawn worldwide attention, spawning a number of books, televised documentaries and a series of internationally coordinated protest demonstrations aimed at stopping his execution and/or opening his case.

"New evidence that points to Abu-Jamal's innocence has surfaced during the past two years, yet he continues to be denied a new trial," Camerota said.

Those interested in more information concerning the Saturday tribunal, and fact sheets and videos about the Abu-Jamal case can call the Western Mass. Branch of the National People's Campaign at (413) 538–8537.

Online industry will report child porn

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Almost like cybercops, the online industry will report child pornography to law enforcement officials, Vice President Al Gore announced yesterday at a conference on ways to make the Internet a safer place for America's kids.

Roughly 10 million children now surf the net.

Industry groups covering 95 percent of home Internet users will help enforce existing laws against child pornography, Gore said. Under the policy, Internet providers would remove child pornography from their own bulletin boards and services, said Donna Rice Hughes, a spokeswoman for Enough Is Enough, an advocacy group trying to get child pornography off the World Wide Web.

Gore also talked about the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children's toll-free hot line to report incidents of child sexual exploitation, including child pornography, online. Together these two initiatives will make a big difference in the ability of parents and law enforcers to work together to keep

Turn to ONLINE, page 2

KEN MCDONALD/ COLLEGIAN

En garde!

Lundan Abelson, a freshman pre-psychology major, and Mike Mahoney, a freshman pre-journalism major, fence yesterday afternoon.

Powerful drugs may slow AIDS-related brain disease

By Heather Lalley
Associated Press

CHICAGO — A progressive brain disease that attacks most AIDS patients was halted — and in some cases reversed — when treated with a powerful class of AIDS drugs, a study presented yesterday found.

HIV-encephalopathy, which leads to a loss of mental and motor function, stabilized or improved in a majority of patients treated with protease inhibitors, a family of AIDS drugs proven to have a powerful effect on the virus, according to results presented at the annual meeting of the Radiological Society of North America. Dr. Christopher Filippi, director of neuroradiology at New York's Weiler Hospital, and researchers at Yale-New Haven Medical Center studied 16 patients with AIDS dementia. Magnetic resonance imaging scans showed that dementia stabilized or almost completely disappeared in 89 percent of the patients given protease inhibitors, Filippi said.

Bright white patches are present in the brain scans of patients with dementia. The patches appear darker In patients treated with protease inhibitors.

The disease, which affects more than two-thirds of all AIDS patients, continued to progress in 86 percent of those not given the drugs, Filippi said.

The findings are particularly significant given the success of protease inhibitors in treating many of the physical symptoms associated with AIDS, he said.

"What good is it to prolong the body when the brain goes?" Filippi asked.

It is unclear how or why protease Inhibitors affect the central nervous system, he said.

The drugs, which first appeared on the market in early 1996, have been shown to reduce the number of infections and deaths in AIDS patients when taken In combination with other drugs, such as AZT. Protease inhibitors work by blocking the production of protease, an enzyme crucial to the virus' survival.

One researcher who was not involved in the study said he is not convinced by the new findings. Dr. David Simpson, director of the neuro-AIDS research program at New York's Mount Sinai Medical Center, said magnetic resonance imaging is not the best way to determine the progression of dementia.

KEN MCDONALD/ COLLEGIAN

A room with a view

Northeast residence area stands out in yesterday's sunlight from the 12th floor of the Lederle Graduate Tower.

Bodyguard likely to testify against Mandela

By Tom Cohen
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The man once charged with protecting Winnie Madikizela-Mandela from harm showed up yesterday bearing an embroidered cloth that elegantly indicated he was ready to bring her down.

Jerry Richardson, once Madikizela-Mandela's chief bodyguard, made the cloth during prison time served for the killing of a 14-year-old — a murder he is now expected to testify that Madikizela-Mandela ordered.

"Jerry w/s Winnie," it read.

Richardson is scheduled to testify before the Truth and Reconciliation Commission today, just before Madikizela-Mandela takes the stand to rebut a string of witnesses who have accused her of approving of and ordering assaults, torture and killings a decade ago.

Yesterday, witnesses told of routine beatings handed out by Madikizela-Mandela's gang, called the Mandela United Football Club, as discipline for defying her.

"You wouldn't defy Winnie, and whenever you defy her, you were called an informer," said Gift Ntombeni, who said he was severely beaten after Madikizela-Mandela's daughter Zindzi accused him of being a police spy.

Residents of the black township of Soweto were so angry at these actions that they burned Madikizela-Mandela's house, and the mainstream anti-apartheid movement distanced itself from one of its most revered leaders.

Madikizela-Mandela has long denied the allegations before the Truth Commission, which is investigating apartheid-era human rights abuses for a report aimed at promoting reconciliation in South Africa.

She was convicted in 1991 of kidnapping and being an accessory to the assault of Stompei Seipei and three other young men at her Soweto home. Initially sentenced to six years in prison, she eventually paid a $3,200 fine on appeal.

Nelson Mandela was in prison during this time. Released in 1990, he was then elected president in the country's first all-race elections in 1994. The couple separated in 1992 and divorced last year, with Madikizela-Mandela then adding her maiden name to her married name.

Seipei was found dead a few days after the assault, and Richardson was convicted of his murder. He is serving a life sentence, and his lawyer, Tony Richard, has told the Truth Commission that Richardson will admit to killing Seipei and others. Richardson is seeking amnesty from the Truth Commission and must make a full confession in order to qualify.

Madikizela-Mandela never applied for amnesty, and the hearing that began Nov. 24 and will conclude this week is separate from the commission's consideration of amnesty for Richardson.

■ online

continued from page 1

children safe on the Internet, Gore said.

"It is a warning to criminals and a promise to parents there are Internet police for those activities that are illegal, and they will capture and punish those who abuse the Internet to harm and hurt our children," Gore said.

The Justice Department was unable to say how many crimes against children occur over the Internet because it does not break out those figures from overall statistics, said a spokesman, John Russell. But the number of all child pornography cases filed in federal court increased by 129 percent in 1996, he said.

"The Internet is a faster, cheaper and safer way for child pornographers to move their product so the child pornographers are using it, as are pedophiles in search of their prey," said Raymond Kelly, an undersecretary at the Treasury Department, which also is involved in enforcing anti-child pornography laws.

Even though he welcomed the industry's efforts to keep kids away from smut on the Net, Gore warned the industry that it better come up with ways to protect children's privacy, shield them from exploitative marketing and provide them with more "safe" places to go online.

"If Internet sites for kids continue to feature advertising blurred into entertainment and targeted directly to children, parents may soon shut off the Internet," Gore said. "If there is not an effective industry-led solution, you might as well prepare yourself for a massive, nationwide backlash that will stunt the growth of this exciting resource."

Federal regulators, prompted by rising incidents reported by watchdog groups, are on the lookout for Web sites with exploitative and manipulative marketing to children.

Gore said the Commerce Department will hold conferences on this and other issues next year.

Building on pledges made to President Clinton in July, industry groups discussed on Monday — the first day of a three-day conference — how to educate parents about anti-smut screening and how to highlight Internet sites that are clean enough for kids. The Supreme Court in June struck down a law designed to keep cyberspace's seamy side away from children.

Robert Peters, president of Morality in Media, which wants to get illegal pornography off the Internet, called the conference a "public relations gimmick intended to saddle parents with an impossible burden and to discourage Congress from putting the primary responsibility on those who create harmful content."

"To them I say blocking your own child's access to objectionable Internet content is not censoring — that's called parenting," Gore said. "And, a parent's right to block offensive speech is as fully protected by the First Amendment as the right to issue that speech."

Attention all Collegian staff members:

A mandatory all-staff meeting and Candidate's Night will be held tonight at 7 p.m. The location will be posted in the newsroom. If you cannot attend, see Laura Stock or Chris Stamm.

Voting for editorial positions will

IT AIN'T EASY, BUT IT'S SMART

Winter Session '98

Why Winter Session?
- Catch up so you can graduate on time
- Focus on just one class, one set of homework assignments
- Make up lost credits
- Take a usually overenrolled prerequisite for your major
- Earn three credits in three weeks

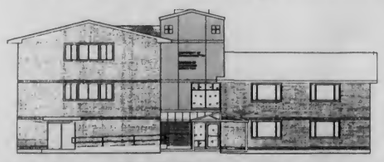
Smaller classes mean more individual attention.

Winter Session '98
January 5-26



Pick up a blue course catalog at Continuing Education in Goodell Bldg. or anywhere on campus; in town at stores, restaurants, banks.

Or call 545-0107 and we'll send you one.

Check out the updated course list at www.umass.edu/contined/

Winter Session
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst

The Division of Continuing Education is

moving to 358 N. Pleasant St. in January.

Campus Activities Presents
Something Every Friday
A Weekly Series Of Special Events
This Week:

Comedian Todd Parker

Todd has been featured on Fox's "Married With Children" and MTV's "Singled Out"

Also Featured On The Show Will Be Singer "Jon O"

Campus Center Auditorium
Friday, December 5, 1997 At 8:00pm

The Movie "Air Force One" Will Be Shown Following The Program At approx. 9:30pm

Visit Us On The Web:
http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calendar.htm
Campus Activities: 545-3600
This Series Is Made Possible By A Grant From The Vice-Chancellor For Student Affairs; The UMass Auxiliary Services Office and:
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Yeltsin says warheads will be cut

By Vladimir Isachenkov
Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — A clearly tired Boris Yeltsin gave often-surprising answers at a news conference yesterday, forcing his spokesman to tone down a declaration he made about cutting nuclear warheads.

He also misidentified Germany and Japan as having nuclear weapons and confused listeners with references to Sweden and Finland. The Russian president, who is 66, underwent open-heart surgery in November of last year but has appeared generally strong since then.

Speaking to reporters after meeting with Prime Minister Goeran Persson, Yeltsin unexpectedly announced the weapons cut.

"I am saying here for the first time that we are unilaterally slashing the number of our nuclear warheads by one-third," Yeltsin said, tagging his declaration onto the answer to a question. An hour later, Yastrzhembsky said at a briefing that a proposal to deepen mutual Russian-U.S. nuclear cuts had been discussed on a preliminary basis at the Helsinki summit with President Clinton in March.

But "this issue is not on the negotiating table," he added. "It has been the initiative Russia has been actively promoting. It existed on the level of heads of state and the president has decided to make it public. It's a unilateral initiative but it does not mean a unilateral step to cut weapons," the spokesman said. Asked by reporters about Yeltsin's condition, Yastrzhembsky said that Yeltsin spoke when he was "a little bit tired" at the end of a long day. The Russian president was on the first day of a three-day state visit to Sweden.

At one point on his comments, the Russian president mistakenly listed Germany and Japan as among the world's nuclear weapons states.

He also confused listeners with a long statement about Russia's 1940s fighting with Finland, a statement that may have been more appropriate for a visit to Finland than one to Sweden.

Yeltsin, who had a quintuple heart bypass operation a year ago, looked stiff and hesitant later yesterday as he arrived for a banquet with King Carl XVI Gustaf and Queen Silvia. He had appeared generally robust when arriving in Sweden yesterday morning. Yeltsin had made similar surprise announcements before. In Paris last May, Yeltsin said Russia would remove nuclear warheads from all its weapons targeting the West. Russian officials later explained Yeltsin only meant taking pre-programmed targets out of the missiles.

Regarding yesterday's statement, Yastrzhembsky said new weapons cuts will only become possible after the Russian parliament's lower house, the State Duma, ratifies the 1993 START II agreement with the United States to cut their nuclear arsenals. Washington has ratified the agreement.

That agreement calls for the United States and Russia each to reduce their nuclear warhead stocks to 3,500, down from an estimated 8,000.

U.S. State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said Tuesday that START II ratification remains Washington's top priority on weapons reductions, but "any reductions by the Russians in their nuclear forces would not be something we'd be against."

Yeltsin announced in September that Russia would remove 500 tons of weapons-grade uranium and 50 tons of plutonium from its military stockpiles.

South Korea to sign bailout package

By Pauline Jelinek
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — South Korea and the International Monetary Fund have agreed on a multibillion-dollar bailout for South Korea's beleaguered economy and will sign an accord today, officials said.

"There will be no more negotiations," said Finance and Economy Minister Lim Chang-yuel, emerging yesterday evening from the hotel where IMF and South Korean negotiators were finalizing a pact reached after several days of marathon bargaining.

IMF director Michel Camdessus is to fly in from Bangkok, Thailand, this morning to sign the deal, Lim said.

He did not disclose the amount of the loan.

Earlier yesterday, Camdessus said there were "several major difficulties" holding up the bailout. "This takes time with the 11th economic power of the world, with a diversified and advanced economy," he told a news conference in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. The negotiations appeared stalled yesterday morning after an all-night bargaining session in which South Korean officials apparently resisted some of the tough medicine prescribed by the IMF delegation.

Neither Camdessus nor Korean officials would identify the sticking points. But South Korean news media, quoting unidentified sources, reported that the two sides succeeded in striking compromises yesterday evening.

A main breakthrough came when the IMF softened its position and accepted South Korea's way of dealing with its debt-ridden merchant banks, the reports said.

Earlier yesterday, Seoul ordered nine of the country's 30 merchant banks, or finance companies, to suspend business until the end of the year. Eight of the banks were told to put their finances in order by March or face liquidation. The ninth was given only until Jan. 1.

An assistant finance minister, Chung Duk-koo, said the two sides compromised and agreed to lower South Korea's economic growth to 3 percent next year. The IMF had reportedly insisted on a 2.5 percent growth rate.

South Korea also accepted budget cuts, higher interest rates, bigger taxes, a wider opening of its financial market, and tightened financial supervision over the nation's chaebol, or conglomerates, the reports said.

Those conglomerates, which have numerous subsidiaries cross-funded by family members, are accused of absorbing the bulk of available bank loans to the detriment of smaller companies. South Korea turned to the IMF on Nov. 21. It said last week that the amount needed would be "far more than the $20 billion" bailout it originally sought.

IMF loans come with strict conditions, which would force a belt-tightening in a country accustomed to decades of rapid economic growth. Despite its financial woes, South Korea predicts its gross national product will grow by about 6 percent this year. Analysts say the IMF solution will raise unemployment from the present 2.5 percent to up to 7 percent in 1998, forcing an estimated 1.5 million people out of their jobs, the highest number since the 1950-53 Korean War.

KEN MCDONALD/ COLLEGIAN

True players

Not Ready for Bedtime Players Patti Lynott, Rob McDonald, Emily Robertson and Bryan Burns have some fun. They will stay up late for 7:30 p.m. auditions on Dec. 8 in the Campus Center.

Unabomber evidence delayed

Cabin is key for defense to claim Kaczynski's mental illness

By Richard Cole
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The dark, cramped cabin where Theodore Kaczynski allegedly built his bombs has been turned over to defense lawyers who call it their key piece of evidence. But its transfer to this city where Kaczynski's trial is being held was delayed yesterday.

The entire cabin was to be trucked more than 1,000 miles from Malmstrom Air Force Base in Montana, where it was stored after the Unabomber suspect's arrest.

A Malmstrom spokesman said early yesterday morning that the cabin had left the base before dawn, but base officials said later that that report was erroneous and the transfer was on hold for the time being. No explanation for the delay was immediately available. Meanwhile, in Sacramento, jury selection resumed yesterday for the math professor turned hermit charged in four bombings that killed two men and injured two more.

Kaczynski, 55, built the cabin outside Lincoln, Mont., in the early 1970s. FBI agents raided the 10-by-12-foot shack in April 1996. They found a treasure trove of evidence allegedly linking him to Unabomber bombings that killed three people and injured 29 between 1978 and 1995.

But it is defense lawyers, not the prosecution, who want jurors to see the cabin as part of their effort to show that Kaczynski suffers from mental illness.

"You really cannot understand this guy's life unless you can get in that cabin," lead defense attorney Quin Denvir has said. Fifty-five juror prospects were in the pool as of this morning. Once 64 prospects have been selected, 12 jurors and six alternates will be chosen from among them.

One jury candidate underlined the heavy burden the defense will face.

"In the media, the Unabomber and Ted Kaczynski are considered one and the same," the young mother of three said. She added: "I think that's unfair" — but acknowledged she, too, suspected the same.

The defense appears less concerned with Kaczynski's conviction, however, than with saving his life in the penalty phase.

The defense offered its most intense probing yet as it cleared through an anti-abortion activist who opposes the death penalty. In a legal contradiction, Kaczynski lawyer Judy Clarke must try to change the positions of those jury prospects who insist they can't decree death for her client. Jurors must be willing to at least consider the death penalty, or they are excluded from the case.

"The great irony is she has to take the people with the strongest conviction against putting this man to death and try to pull them the other way," said Laurie Levenson, associate dean of Loyola University Law School in Los Angeles.

"But she hopes they will later spring back like rubber bands," Levenson said. "What she has to do is a temporary conversion." The challenge Monday was a white-bearded man who said he had searched his soul and didn't believe he could sign a verdict of death.

A Palestinian-Jewish Dialogue for Peace in the Middle East

Nanjat Arafat Khelil & Reena Bernards

Co-founders of the Palestinian and Jewish American Women's Dialogue Project in Washington, DC

Wednesday, December 3
7:30 pm, Memorial Hall
University of Massachusetts

Free and open to the public. Wheelchair accessible.
Sponsored by the Office of Jewish Affairs and Everywoman's Center.
For more information call 545-9642

What is the BEST lunch value on Campus?

Taco Salads

T-MEX
Totally Mexican

The Hatch FOOD COURT

Located in the Student Union Basement
Great Food Where You Least Expect It.
Brought to you by Campus Center Food Services

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

The scarlet letter

So, having banned smoking, restricted drinking and forbidden protesting, are the dark forces of the neo-puritan onslaught satisfied?

On the contrary, the crusade to save us from ourselves shows every sign of gaining momentum. Our modern day Cotton Mathers, with or without black cloaks, starched bands and steeple-crowned hats, scour the New England landscape for new sinners to mortify and new sins to purge.

A particularly nasty little document entitled "Proposed UMass Policy on Consensual Relations" takes aim at that greatest of foul human indulgences — sins of the flesh.

It had to happen. After issuing their pious edicts against smoking, drinking and talking, how long could the neo-puritans resist an all out assault on fucking?

The policy attempts to regulate who may have sex with whom, and goes far beyond restrictions against romances between professors and students enrolled in their classes.

It classifies as "faculty members," for purposes of sex regulation, not just professors and instructors. It includes "any other individual with responsibility for the education of students." Presumably this also includes graduate and undergraduate TAs, tutors, advisors, library staff, etc.

All of these individuals are instructed not to have "consensual amorous relations" (i.e. sex) with all students, specifically those "with whom they do not have a direct professional responsibility."

In other words, according to this policy, University employees of almost any kind are not supposed to sleep with any student, no matter who, when or how. Brilliant.

Proceeding from the plausible assertion that "rape isn't about sex but is always about power," the geniuses on this complete cowpat of a committee have discovered that all sex is fundamentally about power.

Their key assertion is "Because of the fundamentally asymmetric nature of the relationship between faculty member and student, serious questions exist about whether consent on the part of the student can be freely given."

Remember please that in this context, faculty member doesn't mean just professor, but all kinds of other people. Moreover, these situations don't involve students and those who teach their classes but anyone with a job involving some sort of "responsibility for the education of students."

A 28-year-old marketing senior meets a 25-year-old graduate TA in the French department at a bar. What does the policy tell us? Why, that the 25-year-old TA has so much inherent power over the 28-year-old senior that the 28-year-old can be more or less coerced into sex and lacks the ability to say no.

Very few graduate TAs were aware, until this policy enlightened us, that along with our meager pay and benefits, our jobs provide us with the ability to seduce or coerce sex out of any undergraduate on campus. Now we know.

This Idiotic reduction of romance and sexuality to meaningless "power equations," seeing it as a locus of danger and abuse, a realm of humanity that needs to be vigilantly regulated by the authorities, is typical of the pseudo-morality of the neo-puritan movement.

The proposed policy embraces its New England Puritan heritage directly by resurrecting the scarlet letter.

It decrees that "Where a conflict of interest or potential conflict of interest exists, in the context of an amorous relationship between a faculty member and a student, the faculty member involved shall notify the department head." Even more ominously, it threatens that "The reporting of such a relationship shall be subject to disclosure." In the case of two employees, "The reporting of such a relationship shall be public information."

The scarlet letter, public disclosure of prohibited sexual activity, clearly provides the template. Recall that sexual encounters between students and anyone "with responsibility for the education of students" are all not only inherently proto-rapes, but also "potential conflicts of interest."

If you are gay and don't feel comfortable in announcing that fact to a homophobic world, if you have sex with the wrong person, Chancellor Scott will have you outed.

This attempt to divide the campus into camps of people who are authorized or prohibited from enjoying their sexuality with each other is the most odious symptom of the neo-puritan plague yet to emerge.

The culprits responsible for this rabid prudery, including Sue Pearson, Glen "Lazerus" Gordon, and Janet Rifkin, owe us all a humble and contrite apology.

The neo-puritans seem bent resurrecting, in a new politically correct and liberal guise, a modern version of the whole dismal severity of the Puritanic code of law."

This vicious assault on liberty and pleasure is by any reasonable measure a far greater offense than any of the pleasures under neo-puritan attack. Those of us who smoke, drink, speak freely and have unauthorized sex occupy both the intellectually sound position and the moral high ground.

Even Hawthorne's miserable, guilt–ridden Dimmesdale came to realize that in a land of New England Puritans, "We are not, Hester, the worst sinners in the world."

Hussein Ibish is a UMass graduate student.

War on Liberty and Pleasure

Hussein Ibish

A student guide to the all–nighter

With finals coming up, I think it's time to address that all important issue of pulling the all–nighter. Most people here have pulled an all–nighter at one point in their college career; some people have made a science out of all–nighters.

There is a pride inherent in pulling all–nighters; inadvertently fellow students will brag about how they stayed up all night to finish that 15 page paper on the eating habits of a wombat. The euphoria of an all–nighter lasts about 10 minutes into the start of the first morning class. Even toothpicks might not be able to prop open weary eyes.

All–nighters are a necessary evil; there simply aren't enough hours in a semester to get all that partying in, along with the studying. So, about 24 hours before the exam, panic sets in and the all–nighter begins.

"All–nighters are a necessary evil; there simply aren't enough hours in a semester to get all that partying in, along with the studying. So, about 24 hours before the exam, panic sets in and the all–nighter begins."

Seema Gangatirkar

The classic all–nighter begins early in the evening, say around 6:30 p.m., after dinner. Most people don't begin with the intention of staying up all night — rather, they fool themselves into thinking an early start means an early night.

Ah, but don't take the art of procrastination lightly.

At 6:30 p.m., it's time to get started. Sharpen up those pencils, clear off the desk, find an eraser and get plenty of paper. Bathroom breaks are also necessary when getting ready to study. Along the way to the bathroom (especially if you live in the residence halls), it's so easy to be sucked into a conversation.

Most of your conversation will be centered around how much you have to study and how you've just got to get going or you'll never pass.

At 7 p.m., you're back in your room, ready to get started. If you're anything like me, you have to first clean the room before being able to sit down with the books. For me, that means rearranging my closets, picking up stuff from the floor, filing away decades–old mail, etc. Sometimes, in a real burst of motivation, it's also time to take out the trash and the recycling.

At 7:15 p.m., it's time to check out what's on the television. Invariably, you have to choose between "Entertainment Tonight" and "Hard Copy." And despite the fact that the hour between seven and eight in the evening is a television graveyard, it's still an early night and you need to unwind for the day. So, 7:23 p.m. catches you watching the foibles of "ET" regular, Lucy Lawless, (a.k.a "Xena, Warrior Princess").

Around 7:47 p.m., the munchies start to set in, even though dinner was just over an hour ago. It's time to make a trip to the supermarket, where you proceed to load up the cart with traditional all–nighter foods like Cheez–Whiz, Doritos and of course, that old staple, coffee.

By 9:01 p.m., you're back home, well–fed and relaxed. It's time to put the pot of coffee on and start thinking about getting organized for the night.

At 9:07 p.m., you drink your coffee and then make a trip to the bathroom or kitchen to wash the mug out. This is also an ideal time to stop and chat with friends you haven't seen in a couple hours or so.

At some time before 10 p.m., you realize that the exam is approaching at an exponentially faster rate than it was three hours previous. Now the exam is less than 12 hours away. But first, it's time for a snack.

After the snack, it's time to settle down for about 32 minutes with the books. You barely get past the history of the Dark Ages before it's 11 p.m. and you're just dying to catch the local news for the latest from Springfield, Hartford and Boston.

At 11:35 p.m., there is another gasp of realization: the exam is now a mere 10 hours away.

It's at this point that the all–nighter begins in earnest. Armed with plenty of snacks, coffee, several sharpened pencils and your favorite studying music, you head off to the most quiet and least distracting place you know.

Bleary eyed at 6 a.m., you can now brag to everyone in your class how you started studying at 6:30 the night before and stayed up all night to get the work done.

Everyone will be impressed; but you won't care. You'll be too tired. You vow never to do this again. Yeah, right.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.
Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass Amherst MA 01003, or by e–mail to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu
Letters may be edited for length, clarity and style.

Letters to the Editor

Was it bad manners or sexism?

To the editor:

Thank you in advance for taking the time to read my response to "Boys, outta my way please."

Please accept my sympathy for the oppressive rules of social interaction and etiquette that have been forced upon you by men. If the incident you described was indeed a gender issue, I would like to apologize on behalf of courteous men for the enormous injustice you received at the entrance to the graduate tower. However, I would like to propose that gender had nothing to do with it and perhaps you could suggest a better example that supports your point. If the violation of your right to walk where you want was deliberate I'd bet that it was a result of something called bad manners. I know that people have directed their unyielding path at me before and rather than taking the time to note their gender I meekly step aside. Have you heard the prediction for the meek?

I feel that the "Boys, outta my way please" article was counterproductive to your goals. Although you probably have a point about double standards in etiquette, your article did not support it. My sister studies women's issues at another university and when she applies her effort to an issue it seems more legitimate. My sister is surely passionate about her work and beliefs and I gather that you are too. However, I don't think she decides to use "ugly" words when she presents a point. You, on the other hand, knew the word was ugly and you used it anyway. I took this as a case of bad manners and assigned no gender label to it. Another reader (perhaps the same person who got in your way) might be more put–off and develop a generalization about "feminists." Maybe I don't understand how a journalist is supposed to reach a target audience. Maybe there's some sort of shock effect that can add extra emphasis to an argument in the absence of legitimate support. Do you really want to embrace this writing style and have it associated with your name and/or cause? You also made generalizations about guys and you may know that generalizations aren't accepted favorably by everyone. Perhaps one way to improve the situation you described would be to appeal to guys. If you intended progress rather than persecution, you could avoid the use of insulting generalizations. I sincerely hope that the majority of the guys that you have encountered throughout your life haven't actually expected you to "go out of your way for, cower from, or apologize for nothing to" them.

Christopher Knight
Amherst

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Write for Ed/Op!

The Collegian Editorial page needs new writers. We want you to write humor, politics, satire, lifestyle or any of a thousand other styles — let us be as broad as the student body is.

We especially encourage material that relates to current issues at UMass.

Anyone who is interested should submit material by e–mail (letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu), fax (545–1592), or by dropping it off at the Collegian offices for Dan Bodah.

Editorials should be 500–700 words long and should inciude a phone number so we can call you back.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Guy, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor

Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Poitlon Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Qulst Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Holiday musical goodies for all

NEW FORMS
Roni Size / Reprazent
Tolkin' Loud/Mercury

Drum 'n bass — a British hybrid of reggae bass and electronic beats — has yet to break through in this America. Can New Forms (Talkin' Loud/Mercury), honored as England's album of the year last month (beating excellent releases from Radiohead and Primal Scream), do what Goldie's 1995 drum 'n bass landmark, Timeless, couldn't?

It's highly unlikely, but you don't have to be a rave regular to appreciate Roni Size's cut–and–splice composing abilities. His linky textures and bubbling polyrhythms are anchored by fat, upright bass and an array of vocalists; these aren't "songs" with verse–chorus structures, but the title track, "Heroes" and "Share the Fall" (all bunched on the first of two discs), have a sinuousness and sensuality that invites repeated listening, even without the aid of hallucinogenic enhancements.

The second disc is dominated by more abstract mood pieces, in which Size and his burgeoning Reprazent posse demonstrate their mastery of drum 'n bass fundamentals; the mood–altering, mind–bending manipulation of both time and space.

Easily one of the most innovative and original releases of the year, New Forms is a fine example of what can be accomplished with imagination and unhindered artistic vision. A (Marty Keane)

BBC SESSIONS
Led Zeppelin
Atlantic

This archival set documents live recordings (with minimal overdubbing) by one of the giants of British blues–rock. While the sound quality isn't pristine, the thrilling immediacy of Led Zeppelin's performances contained on BBC Sessions (Atlantic) more than compensates.

Widely bootlegged by collectors for decades, the sessions' official release is long overdue. The high–voltage, almost hysterically pitched first disc documents the band flexing its muscle during its inaugural year, 1969. The quartet cuts a broader emotional swath on the second disc, culled from a 1971 Paris concert that includes early versions of "Stairway to Heaven," "Black Dog" and "Going to California."

The raw, ragged guitar work of Jimmy Page is exhilarating as he dances over the top of John Bonham's atom drum bop and the inclusion of two songs that had previously never been released by the band in any form, Eddie Cochran's "Something Else" and "The Girl I Love" — which takes its inspiration from legendary Tennessee bluesman Sleepy John Estes — are most noteworthy.

At times, the handful of longer tracks (including the obligatory 18–minute "Dazed and Confused") evokes the excesses of Zep's only previous live release, The Song Remains the Same, but mostly BBC Sessions is a vivid reminder of why this band's legend has only expanded since its 1980 demise following the unexpected death of Bonham. A (M.K.)

AQUARIUM
Aqua
MCA

As two of at least six identical tracks with perky keyboards and trite lyrics, "Barbie Girl" and "Lollipop" work fine for the dance floor, but calling them "social commentary" is a bit of a stretch. Still though, they are both catchy as hell, even if they are ultimately shallow guilty pleasures.

Fortunately, lead vocalist Lene Grawford Nystrom shows better range on the more complex material, particularly the Latin–flavored ballad "Good Morning Sunshine" and the atmospheric "Turn Back Time."

Aqua will need her vocal abilities even more on the next album if they don't come up with another gimmick. B– (M.K.)

DECONSTRUCTED
Bush
Trauma/Interscope

Bush's Deconstructed (Trauma/Interscope) is the musical equivalent to last night's Chinese food. No matter how hard you try and reheat it, something just isn't quite right.

Not surprisingly, Deconstructed is as limp and unappetizing as a leftover egg roll. In other words, there is no substitute for the genuine article.

Consider the following: a third generation, bottom tier grunge band, remixed by electronic luminaries? I don't think so. And while I'm at it, who the hell thought up such an utterly revolting concept anyway?

Popular music's downward descent into the abyss continues. Gee, maybe for next Christmas Gavin and his cadre of lame Nirvannabe's will go carolling. The presence of Tricky and Goldie and their creative genius are the only saving graces here. Even they can only do so much with a band that released "Everything Zen" as a single. D– (M.K.)

URBAL BEATS
Various Artists
Polygrom

Urbal Beats: The Definitive Guide to Electronic Music (Polygram), is a superb collection of techno music performed by

Turn to TRAX, page 8

COURTESY ATLANTIC RECORDINGS

Bluesrock legend Led Zeppelin returns from the dead on the stellar BBC Sessions.

Five College art galleries

Amherst College — Mead Art Museum. Currently on display: The Fold Art of Twentieth–Century Japan (through July 1998), Branching: The Art of Michael Mazure, AC '57, Illegal Camera: Photography in the Netherlands during the German Occupation, 1940–45, European Art (through Dec. 15), The Cult of Lord Jeff (through Jan. 12). Hours: Mon–Fri 10 a.m.–4:30 p.m.; Sat–Sun 1–5 p.m. Call the Museum at 545–2335.

Hampshire College — Main Gallery, Harold F. Johnson Library. Hours: Mon–Fri 8:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m.; weekends 12–4:30 p.m.

Mount Holyoke College — Art Museum. Currently on display: How to Remember? Designing the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum (through Dec. 14). Hours: Tue–Fri 11 a.m.–5 p.m.; Sat–Sun 1–5 p.m. Call 538–2245 for more information.

Smith College — Print Room, Museum of Art. Hours: Tue, Fri & Sat, 9:30 a.m.– 4 p.m.; Wed–Sun, noon–4 p.m.; Thursday, noon–8 p.m. Call 585–2770 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Augusta Savage Gallery, New Africa House. Hours: Mon–Tues 1–7 p.m.; Wed–Fri 1–5 p.m. Call 545–5177 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Hampden Gallery, Southwest Residential Area. Hours: Mon–Fri 3–7 p.m., Sunday, 2–5 p.m. Call 545–0680 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Herter Art Gallery, Herter Annex. Hours: Mon–Fri 11 a.m.– 4 p.m. Call 545– 0976 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Student Union Visual and Turn to ART, page 8

COURTESY JAMES SMOLKA

Look at those bags under their eyes!

Psychedelic noise popsters Helium hit the Iron Horse tonight for a 10 p.m. show that promises to showcase some inventive guitar work and twisted melodies. Tickets are available by calling 586–8686.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON
Beginning Nov. 1
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON
$162 $295
PARIS
$218 $399
ROME
$274 $473
MADRID
$226 $415
Scheduled flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations.
Eurail passes available.
Weekend surcharges may apply.
Customs–immigration taxes apply.
Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave., NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

WEDNESDAY NITE IS...
MIKES ICEHOUSE NITE
BEER OF THE WEEK: ICEHOUSE $1.50
DRINK OF THE WEEK: RUM & COKE $2.00
Mikes Mad Money and Tee Shirts
DON'T FORGET THURSDAY NITE...
FREE SNACK BASKETS 9-12

amc
There is a Difference!
Silence is Golden. No child under 6 in any PG 13 or R rated film after 6pm.
Mt. Farms 4 •584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Jackal (R)
Today - Thurs. at (5:40) , 8:30
Starship Troopers (R)
Today -Thurs at (5:40), 8:30
Rainmaker (PG13)
Today -Thurs at (5:40), 8:20
Alien: Resurrection (R)
Today - Thurs at (5:50), 8:40
Hampshire 6 •584-7550
Bean (PG 13)
Today -Thurs at (5:50)
Anastasia (G)
Today -Thurs at (5:40), 8:40
Flubber (PG)
Today - Thurs at (5:30), 8:30
Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil (R)
Today - Thurs at (5:10), 8:20
Mortal Combat: Annihilation (R)
Today - Thurs at (5:30), 8:30
Boogie Nights (R)
Today -Thurs at (5:20), 8:20
The Man Who Knew Too Little (PG)
Today -Thurs at 8:40
$2.50 (Plus Limit Below Daily) Special Engagements, no Passes or Coupons

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES
6 SINGERS 5 GRAMMYS 1 GREAT NIGHT
Take 6
TICKETS ONLY $5 FOR LIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS
With their fresh jazz harmonies, soaring vocals and seamless ensemble work, five-time Grammy-award winners Take 6 set the new standard for a cappella singing. Take the time. Take a friend. And don't miss the chance to Take 6.
SATURDAY, DECEMBER 6, 8PM, CONCERT HALL
SPONSORED BY WFNX AND EASTHAMPTON SAVINGS BANK
Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for tickets
Visit our Website at www.umass.edu/fac/fac.html
The Fine Arts Center, University of Massachusetts Amherst
CONNECT WITH YOUR CENTER!

SPOT THE COLLEGE FRESHMAN IN THIS PICTURE.
It's just as difficult to spot the Massachusetts Army National Guard member in this picture as it is in your school. That's because many Guard members are students – just like you.
You can join your friends and receive training just one weekend a month and two weeks a year while attending college full-time!
The Guard can help you afford an education with the 100% Tuition Waiver, good at 28 participating State Colleges and Universities, and a great paycheck. And some colleges even give academic credit for Guard service and training.
If you have the desire to gain valuable skills and experience, you can in the Massachusetts Army National Guard. Find out how you can be in the picture.
Call today!
1-888-NG-PRIDE
(1-888-647-7433)
MASSACHUSETTS YOU CAN

Barnes & Noble College Bookstores
at Boston University & Northeastern
JOB FAIR
If you want a fast-paced job that will get your winter off to a great start, it's here at Barnes & Noble College Bookstores, Boston's best source for books. . .and the best choice for retail jobs. Find out more at our JOB FAIR on December 4th.
You could be a sales associate - just long enough to get us through the winter rush and get your bank account in shape. Get here early enough and you could be hired on the spot!
Part-time jobs
Immediate hires
Flexible scheduling
Store discount up to 35%
Friendly work environment
THURSDAY, DECEMBER 4TH
10AM - 3PM
CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE
If you want to get a closer look at us, but can't come to our JOB FAIR, call (617) 236-7402 for more information.
Barnes & Noble College Bookstores, Inc. is an Equal Opportunity Employer.

COURTESY UMASS THEATER DEPARTMENT

On the stage

Assassins, a musical composed by the legendary Stephen Sondheim, hits the Rand Theater beginning tonight. The play takes the audience into the minds of presidential assassins, John Wilkes Booth and Lee Harvey Oswald, and forces the audience to question the feasibility of the "American dream." Play runs tonight through Dec.6 and Dec.10–13. Tickets are $7 and $9. For tickets, call 1–800– 999–UMASS.

New Bad Brains leads recent Hardcore releases

Adam Dlugacz

I hope you all had a good Thanksgiving. My holiday was spent listening to the new Hallraker, Maximum Penalty, Union 13 and Bad Brains albums. Tomorrow, One King Down, Hallraker and Cause For Alarm will be playing at Pearl Street. Be there or be a stain.

OMEGA SESSIONS
Bad Brains
Victory Records

It's the Bad Brains, so you should buy it. Honestly there's nothing I can say about this band that you haven't heard before; they pretty much started hardcore and no one has really ever exceeded their work. This EP has versions of "I Against I," "I Luv I Jah" and "Attitude" and two unreleased songs "Stay Close To Me" and "At The Movies." The sound quality on this is excellent, one of the best I have ever heard from the Brains and the two unreleased tracks are awesome. Look, just buy this listen to it and share the smile I've had since I got this. A+

BOUNCING SOULS
Bouncing Souls
Epitaph Records

This is the Bouncing Souls' third release, their first on Epitaph, and the first one that doesn't contain a whole bunch of previously released stuff. The Bouncing Souls were always one of the few bands who could manage to straddle the fine line between punk and hardcore. The Souls had the drive and intensity of hardcore, the introspective lyrics more akin to emo, punk melodies, and they were loved by all.

So why did they have to mess with that formula? It seems the Souls are headed in a more oi, melodic punk sound and while it's great to hum to, it's just not the same. They also have seemed to embrace some incredibly stupid lyrics on songs like "East Side Mags," "The Toilet Song" and the lounge song "The Screamer." The song "I Like Your Eyes" would have been funny if SNFU hadn't done the same song on "Cannibal Cafe" over 10 years ago.

Don't get me wrong. This is still a good album. Songs like "Cracked," "Low Life" and "Single Successful Guy" are vintage Bouncing Souls and could have fit nicely on either of their first two albums. One major highlight of the LP are the hardcore attack of "East Coast F—k You" which espouses the virtues of the East Coast, like harsh weather and good pizza, and how it produces better punk music. Another highlight is "Shark Attack" which features two members of the Vandals and is like an extended predatorial version of the Descendants "I Like Food." B

SATISFACTION IS THE DEATH OF DESIRE
Hatebreed
Victory Records

I've never been a fan of tough guy hardcore or metal– influenced hardcore and those are the two categories Hatebreed fit into. Remember that Blackout compilation that came out a long time ago featuring bands like Raw Deal, Sheer Terror, and Outburst? Well, Hatebreed would have fit in perfectly on that album. Hatebreed hammers you with an intense blend of metal–influenced hardcore as lead singer Jamey Jasta spits forth his lyrics of hatred and despair — there's no PMA in

Turn to HATEBREED, page 7

Mariah Carey flutters on Butterfly

By Elsa Allen
Collegian Staff

BUTTERFLY
Mariah Carey
Columbia

Back with her seventh (count them, seven!) album, Mariah Carey seems to be determined to prove that she can croon her way up the pop charts once again with her latest album Butterfly (Columbia). Sure to become a massive commercial success, teeny–boppers everywhere can rest assured that they will get what Carey has provided on her former albums, with little to no change.

Unfortunately, for those of us who no longer fall into the teeny–bopper category, this album does little to offer anything that strays from the standard Mariah Carey ballad formula that most of us are familiar with. Butterfly does not give much in the way of surprises for the listener.

Once again, Carey has collaborated with well–known rappers on two tracks for this album, providing a little bit of funk to an otherwise mellow album. Coming off the overwhelming success of her 1996 collaboration with Wu– Tang Clan's Ol' Dirty Bastard on the hit song "Fantasy," Carey has brought in rappers Mase and The Lox for Butterfly's first single, "Honey."

With the backing of mega–producer, star rapper and all– around cool guy, Sean "Puffy" Combs who produced two tracks on this album for his own company, Bad Boy Entertainment, "Honey" stands out on this album as one of the more memorable tracks due to the contribution of Mase and The Lox, who make this one of the few songs on the album with a noticeable beat.

"Breakdown," the second Puff Daddy produced tune on Butterfly, features guest rappers Krazie Bone and Wish Bone from Bone Thugs–N–Harmony. Once again, it is the rapping and arrangement that makes this song noticeable. Mariah does give it a slight edge, however, providing a smoothed– out singing style, similar to the steady rap flow provided by the members of Bone Thugs.

"The Roof" is the one ballad that strays (slightly) from the standard Mariah Carey format and it shows Mariah herself — without assistance from any rappers — getting a little bit funkier than usual, lowering her voice an octave or so (thank God!) and providing a slow, almost seductive groove.

The remainder of this album is a series of forgettable ballads. Trite lyrics and a style that seems to have been manufactured on an assembly line make the songs on Butterfly seem to blend right into one another, producing a sleep–inducing rhythm.

This latest effort from the soprano diva lacks the freshness and sincerity that has appeared in some of her previous work, proving that she is capable of it, and is not likely to compel repeated listening. Fortunately for Carey, strong efforts and backing from some big names in hip–hop lift this otherwise boring album up to somewhat reputable standards.

The talent is there, for sure. Unfortunately, Butterfly lacks the material necessary for an album to truly take flight. C+

COURTESY NAOMI KALTMAN

Mariah Carey is back with the uneven Butterfly, a work dominated by ballads.

Interested about writing for your college newspaper? You think you know something about film and movie related events? The Collegian is looking for a new film reviewer for next semester and applications are being accepted now. All we ask for is a one to two page writing sample about a recent film you have seen and then come on down to the Collegian office (Campus Center Basement) for a short interview. Ask for Adam Levine or Seema Gangatirkar.

Pizza
Calzones
Subs
Buffalo Wings
CANTONE'S PIZZA
Fast Free Delivery
Sunday - Thursday:
3:30 PM - 1:30 AM
Friday & Saturday:
3:30 PM - 2 AM
Large Cheese Pizza only $6.95
May not be combined w/other coupon or offer. Expires 2/28/98

Weddings Proms
Glazier Limousine Service
77 Beech Street
Greenfield, MA 01301
For All Occasions. Your Chariot Awaits
Greenfield: (413) 774-7171
Northampton: 1-800-974-7171

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Sponsored by:
PIZZA PAPA JOHNS
UMass basketball

- Delivered FREE to all on-campus mailboxes
- Available at select on-campus locations
- Available at all home games

AVAILABLE TODAY!

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
113 Campus Center,
University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003
Phone: (413) 545-3500 • Fax: (413) 545-1592

COURTESY VICTORY RECORDS

The testosterone–infused hardcore purveyors Hatebreed return with a release on Victory Records.

■ Hatebreed

continued from page 6

Jamey's world. The songs go from fast parts to breakdowns to fast parts again and keep up a fairly consistent pace. In fact, they almost never change and that's one of the problems on this album. After the fourth track, I had to keep looking at my stereo to see if it was a different song yet. Finally, Hatebreed's message of hatred, bitterness and the feeling of isolation in this world have all been conveyed before.

Hatebreed's a good band and Victory has done them justice in the studio, though it will just never be my thing. I guess I'm not tough enough. C

EAST LOS PRESENTS...
Union 13
Epitaph Records

Maybe Hatebreed should ask Union 13 how to cut a pissed–off punk album. Union 13 consists of five people from the Mexican section of Eastern Los Angeles. These five men have faced economic strife, racism, classism and a culture that looked down upon their desire to play punk rock and blew up.

This album is 16 tracks of pure punk aggression. Half of the lyrics are in Spanish and half are in English and they all scream out against the injustices of American culture and the hardships endured by the band members while growing up. Union 13 has taken elements of early Suicidal Tendencies with a bit of 7 Seconds thrown into the mix to provide you with a great album. Yes, you have probably heard this all before but Union 13 makes it sound fresh and new again, this is punk rock. B+

Other news...

Snapcase has broken up. Sheer Terror, Burn and Quicksand are back together. Chamberlin has signed to a major label and added a gospel singer. The new 25 Ta Life is out. Converge is now on EVR. Lifetime just played their last official show ever in Philadelphia. Sons of Abraham and Millhouse have new full lengths out on Exit Records. New Yorks Hardest Pt. 2 featuring H2O, Agnostic Front, 25 Ta Life and Murphy's Law amongst others will be out soon. Vision of Disorder is working on a new album. That's all folks.

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist.

■ trax

continued from page 5

some of the most popular artists in the genre.

Featuring tracks from artists such as Prodigy, the Chemical Brothers, Orb and Underworld, Urbal Beats is a great compilation to own for anyone with a budding interest in electronic music. The 16 tracks on the disc blend so well together it is hard to imagine that these songs were not meant to follow one another as they do here.

Prodigy starts off the album with "Poison" from their Music for the Jilted Generaton LP. Although "Poison" is one of the weaker tracks from Prodigy, it gives the album the type of opening that tells the listener that the best is yet to come as Urbal Beats only gets stronger as the album progresses. Solid tracks from Future Sound of London and Orbital drive the album on, while high points such as Rabbit and the Moon's "O.B.E.," Underworld's "Born Slippy," and Portishead's "Sour Times" make listening to the compilation more than worthwhile. Other tracks from Everything But the Girl and Goldie also fare well.

A superior collection of the best electronic music has to offer, Urbal Beats: The Definitive Guide to Electronic Music is certainly one not to miss. A– (Kevin Monahan)

BIG WILLIE STYLE
Will Smith
Columbia

Rapper–turned–actor Will Smith returns to the genre he helped spread to mainstream America in the '80s on Big Willie Style (Columbia), but his delivery is stiff, the lyrics unsure and often muddled.

The few, somewhat edgy selections with one–time partner DJ Jazzy Jeff score, but the boring, seemingly radio–ready tracks sound as flat as Smith's voice and aren't catchy enough to merit air time. His reflections on superstardom grate and his boasts of lyrical superiority are pretentiousness personified. D (M.K.)

LISA LOEB
Firecracker
DGC

While the geekishly attractive Lisa Loeb gained a No. 1 single with the unexpected hit "Stay," everything else she's released has fallen flat, due to paper–thin arrangements and Loeb's voice, which lacks any power.

Firecracker (DGC) is more of the same touchy–feely songs about sweet nothings except it all fails to make any sort of impression, either good or bad. It's like unflavored jello, the very epitome of blandness. F (M.K.)

■ art

continued from page 5

Performing Arts Space, Student Union Building. Over the Edge. Hours: Mon–Thurs 10 a.m.–5 p.m., Friday 10 a.m.– 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-0792

University of Massachusetts — University Gallery, Fine Arts Center. Currently on display: Gigoli's "Dream of Jacob" (through Dec. 14) and Drawing in Late Sixteenth– Century Florence (through Dec. 14), Heroic Painting (through Dec. 14) Hours: Tues–Fri 11 a.m.–4:30 p.m.; Sat– Sun 2–5 p.m. Call 545–3670 for more information.

The University of Massachusetts — Wheeler Gallery, Central Residential Area. Hours: Mon–Thurs 4–8 p.m.; Sun 2–5 p.m. Call 545–0680 for more information.

— Compiled by Seema Gangatirkar

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Pizza
Calzones
Subs
Buffalo Wings
CANTONE'S PIZZA
Fast Free Delivery
Sunday - Thursday:
3:30 PM - 1:30 AM
Friday & Saturday:
3:30 PM - 2 AM
Medium Two Topping Pizza & Two 12 oz. Sodas only $9.95
May not be combined w/other coupon or offer. Expires 2/28/98

WINTER SESSION 1998 AT FITCHBURG STATE COLLEGE

NICARAGUAN BIOLOGICAL RESEARCH

STUDY ABROAD PROGRAM

Offered in collaboration with the University of Mobile (Central American Campus at San Marcos) this two-week program runs January 3-18, 1998. Enroll in six credits (undergraduate or graduate), exploring the topography of volcanos, cloud forests and tropical islands of Central America.

COURSE TOPIC: Tropical Biology (6 credits)

- Accommodations in university dorms
- Meal Plan
- Shuttle service from airport to San Marcos
- Access to university facilities and services

For more information, call the International Education Office at (978)665-3089 or the DGCE Office at (978)665-3182.

THIS IS THE BREAK YOU'VE BEEN WAITING FOR

College Students: While you're home for semester break, why not take a course or two at Fitchburg State College? In just a few weeks, you can earn credits in English, art education, philosophy, psychology, sociology or computer science. Both graduate and undergraduate, our credits are transferable to virtually any college in the country.

WINTER INTERSESSION - Dec. 17 - Jan. 16
Register Today with the Division of Graduate and Continuing Education. Phone-In, Fax-In, Mail-In, Walk-In or E-Mail!

P.S. - For those of you who would like to plan ahead, ask about our summer course schedule, which this year includes amazingly affordable credit studies abroad in Rome, Italy and Dublin, Ireland.

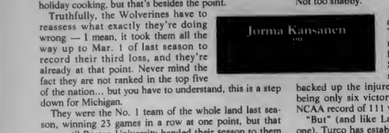
VISIT OUR WEB SITE AT WWW.FSC.EDU

Division of Graduate and Continuing Education
978-665-3181
Fax: 978-665-3658
E-mail: dgce@fsc.edu

Admissions
800-705-9667
978-665-3144
Fax: 978-665-4540
E-mail: admissions@fsc.edu

Professional Development Center
978-665-3636
Fax: 978-665-3639
E-mail: pdc@fsc.edu

All hail to the victors valiant?



'97 Michigan faced with reality of losing more than three games

Oh, how the mighty have fallen...

Even with a 11-3-1 record going into this weekend's game against Lake Superior State in tropical Sault Ste. Marie, Mi. (that's supposed to be sarcasm, people), the Michigan Wolverines have fallen from their success in recent years.

"What the hell?" you blurt out with a certain sense of mockery. "And may we ask what controlled substance you've been sniffing lately?" Well, the wondrous smell of holiday cooking, but that's besides the point.

Truthfully, the Wolverines have to reassess what exactly they're doing wrong — I mean, it took them all the way up to Mar. 1 of last season to record their third loss, and they're already at that point. Never mind the fact they are not ranked in the top five of the nation... but you have to understand, this is a step down for Michigan.

Jorma Kansanen
col.

They were the No. 1 team of the whole land last season, winning 23 games in a row at one point, but that was until Boston University handed their season to them with a 3-2 defeat in the NCAA Tournament semifinal (damn, that sucked, didn't it?). And, don't forget they were the defending national champions as well before that loss to BU, so judging by the teams' recent history, they usually bring some good things to the ice.

Like any collegiate team that has to deal with graduation and the possibility of players leaving early for the professional ranks, the Wolverines have actually began to look human.

Now, breathe with me.

The loss of four of their top five scorers, including NCAA West Regional MVP in Jason Botterill, a First Team All- American in John Madden and — oh yeah — the Hobey Baker Award recipient and Michigan all-time scoring leader in Brendan Morrison, will do that to a team.

Are you okay? Take another breath, and let's continue...

The Wolverines have actually countered these blasted human-like tendencies with one of this season's Hobey finalists in senior right wing-er Bill Muckalt.

Paired up with the likes of Morrison in the past, tallying 64 points last season on 28 goals and 38 assists, Muckalt seems to be doing fine with 23 points so far this season; good for the top spot in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association (CCHA) in points, goals (14), power-play goals (six) and game-winning goals (four). Not too shabby.

But all the Maize and Blue talk is about senior goaltender Marty Turco, and for both good and bad reasons. Turco is about to eclipse a former Wolverine standout in Steve Shields (remember last season's NHL playoffs where he backed up the injured Dominik Hasek for Buffalo?), being only six victories shy of the all-time Division 1 NCAA record of 111 wins.

"But" (and like Lays' potato chips, you can't have one), Turco has established his 11-3-1 mark this season by only having to make 22.86 saves a game. Damn, that's easy.

But really now, if this sounds like I'm throwing stats at you for plain stats sake, then... it's true.

Come on, I live in Amherst! How the hell am I going to make it to a Michigan game? But watch out come March, because you never know. We all might still get a chance to see Michigan take the ice this season — at the NCAA Final Four held this year at the FleetCenter.

Even though they've taken a step down in the rankings, they are Michigan, and they'll be around.

• Um, Hockey East is good. Remember the next time you see UMass play, or think why the team has struggled in the conference this season, that this is the top conference in the nation, with four of the nine HEA teams in the top ten (BU, New Hampshire, Boston College and Maine).

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY MICHIGAN MEDIA RELATIONS

The goal for the Michigan Wolverines this year is to raise the CCHA playoff championship trophy once again.

Warriors act on Sprewell

By Dennis Georgatos
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Ca. — Banned from practice and team facilities yesterday, Latrell Sprewell was in jeopardy of having his four-year, $32 million NBA contract terminated following an attack on coach P.J. Carlesimo.

The three-time All-Star and leading scorer for the Golden State Warriors was suspended without pay for 10 games after two confrontations with Carlesimo at practice Monday.

During the first, Sprewell put his hands around the coach's throat and reportedly threatened to "kill" him; during the second, 20 minutes later, he landed a glancing punch to Carlesimo's neck. In the aftermath, the team tried to sort its options, which include trading Sprewell, patching things up between player and coach, or terminating his contract, signed just two summers ago.

In a letter to Sprewell informing him of the suspension, the team said it reserved the right to terminate his contract under Section 16 of the Uniform Player Contract, which says players must "conform to standards of good citizenship and good moral character" and prohibits "engaging in acts of moral turpitude." The suspension will cost Sprewell about $940,000 in salary.

■ football

continued from page 12

I didn't make this up. I swear.
New Mexico 24, USC 16

Sports Humanitarian Bowl
Utah St. (6-5) vs. Oregon (8-3)
This one either.
Oregon 21, Utah St. 10

Independence Bowl
LSU (8-3) vs. Pittsburgh (6-5)
Proving once and for all that Shreveport, La. is the perfect place to spend the holidays, LSU thumps a very overrated Pitt squad.
LSU 45, Pitt 7

Carquest Bowl
West Virginia (7-3) vs. Georgia Tech (7-4)
A very intriguing match-up, but one the Mountaineers should win. Question. Does the winner get a free oil change for their coach?
West Virginia 26, Georgia Tech 19

Holiday Bowl
Colorado St. (9-2) vs. Iowa (7-4)
I like the Rams to go all the way...
CSU 34, Iowa 24

Alamo Bowl
Purdue (8-3) vs. Oklahoma St. (8-3)
Could very well qualify for the most random bowl in the history of random bowls. Purdue romps, and San Antonio declares 1998 "Year of the Boilermaker."
Purdue 28, OSU 14

Sun Bowl
Arizona St. (7-4) vs. Missouri (7-4)
Sun Bowl, Sun Devils? Oh yes, it's the karma.
ASU 14, Missouri 13

Liberty Bowl
Southern Miss (8-3) vs. Ole Miss (7-4)
Ole Miss gets to play Southern Miss because they beat Mississippi St. But the game's in Memphis. Go figure. Bowl officials watch in horror as Liberty Bowl officials outlaw blitzing and offensive linemen, and put in the old schoolboy standby "1—Miss-iss-ippi, 2—Miss-iss-ippi, 3—Miss-iss- ippi..."
Southern Miss 28, Ole Miss 24

Fiesta Bowl
Syracuse (9-3) vs. Kansas St. (9-3)
Phrase most likely not to be said in Tempe before the Fiesta Bowl. "Gee, sure glad we got the Big East Champ this year."
Syracuse 23, Kansas St. 10

Cotton Bowl
UCLA (9-2) vs. Texas A&M (9-2)
Texas A&M could very well be the worst 9-2 team since the 1987 Milwaukee Brewers. UCLA is hot, and all the Aggies thumping of Texas proved is they can beat a bad team in the rain.
UCLA 38, Texas A&M 7

Outback Bowl
Wisconsin (8-4) vs. Auburn (9-2)
Auburn's pretty good. A toss- up, which you might be doing while watching this one, given the game's 11 a.m., Jan. 1 start. Go easy on the champagne, sir.
Auburn 27, Wisconsin 17

Gator Bowl
North Carolina (10-1) vs. Virginia Tech (7-4)
North Carolina should win this game by at least four touchdowns.
UNC four touchdowns, Virginia Tech no touchdowns.

Citrus Bowl
Penn. St. (9-2) vs. Florida (9-2)
The best non-Alliance (all hail the mighty Alliance) bowl, besides that pesky Rose Bowl. Hey Steve Spurrier. Remember when you said they couldn't spell Citrus Bowl without "UT"? Well, I think UF will do this year.
Penn. St. 20, Florida 15

Sugar Bowl
Florida St. (10-1) vs. Ohio St. (10-2)
Could very well have been a national championship match-up, and if there were a playoff, both squads would be factors.
Florida St. 37, OSU 35

Peach Bowl
Clemson (7-4) vs. Georgia (9-2)
I hate the Peach Bowl. You should too.
Georgia 28, Clemson 6

Orange Bowl
Nebraska (11-0) vs. Tennessee (10-1)
Should be a classic, but given Nebraska's recent success in bowls and wealth of talent, look for the Huskers to wear down those pesky Volunteers.
Nebraska 24, UT 21

Rose Bowl
Michigan (11-0) vs. Washington St. (10-1)
Michigan will complete it's first national championship season with a thumping of the Cougars.
Michigan 19, WSU 3

Booty Schwag of the Year...
Sporting News picked these clowns to win the national championship. But Colorado stumbled to a 5-6 record, and will not go bowling this season.
To the Buffs, I salute you. You've earned the last ever Booty Schwag.

Uncle Bill's Line of the Week...
Uncle Bill is a wise man, and even though he picked Penn. St. to win the national championship, he still gets props from this end.
I mean, hell, I picked Washington, right?

Thanks from Dookie...
Thanks to all the fans, including all housemates, past and present (for keeping my head at its present size), the UMass baseball team — for both Booty Schwag advice (good and bad) and to say things like "Luke, a few problems with the column this week," but still give the love (Puleri, Robbie, Seth, Cookie, Scotty, Jay, Jimmy, Thistle, Goatie and all the rest. There, your names are in the paper. I expect free keg cups from now on. Forever).

Thanks to all editors, past and present, who let words like "dookie" and "pimp daddy" seep into the UMass conscience, before they got cut.

Thanks to Dave for his picks, (you were right about UNC, kid), Sammy for the Jersey perspective (Hey, Rutgers will be there. Just keep waiting) and Slump for being the cruelest, but best editor, I've ever had.

To all the fans I have yet to meet, thanks for the love, and just remember this Booty Schwag is a noun, "Whoa Nellie" is an adjective, and "take the under" is a verb. I think.

And to all the people who think I may have been a little silly in the past two years, I'll only say this.

You missed the point.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

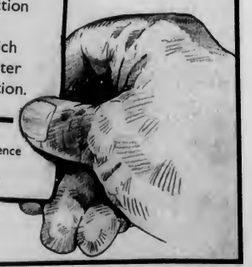
Check out the Collegian's new and improved Webpage. We're at www.umass.edu /rso/collegian

• Free Estimates
• Lifetime Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center (On bus route - one mile from UMass)
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880



SPRING BREAK
BEST PARTIES CANCUN JAMAICA FLORIDA BEST PRICE
Call Today! Space is limited
1 800 648-4849
On campus call Student Travel Services @413-546-3147

LOSE WEIGHT NOW!
Our products are:
• Doctor Recommended
• 100% Natural
• Guaranteed
You will:
• Feel more energy
• Lose up to 30 LBS in 30 days
• Have more willpower
FREE SAMPLES
CALL: (413) 259-1922

Auditions For Not Ready For Bedtime Players
NOT READY FOR BEDTIME PLAYERS
Monday, December 8 - 7:30 PM
Campus Center Rm. 163C
For more information call the Health Education Division of the University Health Services and ask for Sally or Mike 577-5181.

Lowest Prices of the Year
ARTCARVED COLLEGE JEWELRY
Gold Rings Starting at $199

Wed. to Fri.
Dec 3rd to 5th
10am to 3:30pm
at the Ustore

Now Hiring!!
The Collegian Graphics Department is hiring Day Advertising Production Designers for Spring '98.
Please stop by our office which is located in the Campus Center Basement to fill out an application.
General computer know-how and experience with Quark/Pagemaker, Illustrator and Photoshop encouraged!

■ hoops

continued from page 12

perimeter jumpshots by senior power forward Tyrone Weeks. Weeks racked up his fourth double-double, scoring 12 points to go along with 10 rebounds.

"The run was based on defense," Weeks said. "We told ourselves that we needed to make a run to put these guys away. We played good defense, shots started to fall, and everything just worked out."

The run left UMass with a 17-point lead with just 5:30 left in the game. But UMass, according to Flint, has had the problem of not being able to put teams away. Charleston cut the lead to 10, 48-38, with 2:24 left, but Ketner finished the Cougars off with a pair of baskets.

The Minutemen started off the game by completely shutting down the Cougar offense. College of Charleston didn't score until the 13:03 mark, by which time UMass had built an 8-0 lead. Although Ketner had a rough first half from the field (3-of-10), UMass still pushed the lead to 17-5 on an Ajmal Basit jumper with 4:38 left in the half. Charleston didn't find its touch until very late in the half. The Cougars made only three field goals in the first 17 minutes, but rattled off six straight points to close to 19-14 at halftime. Sedric Webber, who led the Cougars with 20 points, pulled down a rebound and finished with a layup with only three seconds left to close the gap.

Ketner got UMass back up by 11, 30-19, with six points in the first three minutes of the second half. Included in Ketner's performance last night were three blocked shots, all of which were resounding. The last one, which came at the end of the Minutemen's second half run to put Charleston away, drew chants of "Lari, Lari" from the Mullins Center crowd.

The roller coaster ride that has been the UMass backcourt dipped a little last night. The guards only scored nine points, and Monty Mack, who had been second on the team in scoring at 14.8 points a game, registered only six points last night. Charlton Clarke accounted for the other three. Jonathan DePina, who had shown flashes in Alaska, did not score and handed out only one assist in 16 minutes.

■ notebook

continued from page 12

The overall play of the freshmen class this season has steadily moved upwards, and on that note, Gates can have fellow frosh Kris Wallis to thank for his HEA honor. Wallis assisted on both of Gates' goals, and the two tallies for the freshman from Plainville, Conn. now ranks him in second place in goals scored on the team with three.

Head of the Class

An early end to this season for the Massachusetts volleyball team — due to not qualifying for the Atlantic 10 postseason tournament — has no consolation involved whatsoever in it, but for two members of the Minutewomen, something tangible can definitely be salvaged.

Sophomore middle blocker Jill Meyers and senior middle blocker Michelle Paciorek were recently honored for their competitive and academic success with conference and district awards, respectively.

Meyers received her second consecutive A-10 Volleyball All-Conference team selection last week, and Paciorek was named to the 1997 University Division GTE/CoSIDA Academic All-District I Volleyball Team.

The sophomore from Huntington Beach, Ca. recorded 441 kills, 100 total blocks and 297 digs per

Star of the Week

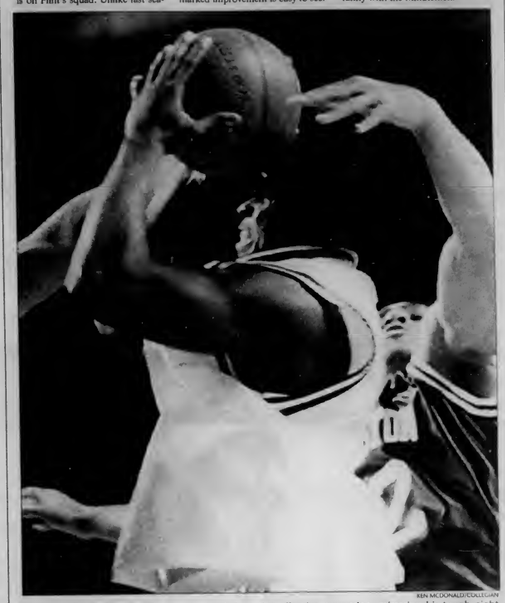
While the campus was getting ready for Thanksgiving last week, senior swimmer Sean Anderson was picked as the WHMP/UMass Athlete of the Week last Wednesday at the sports luncheon.

Anderson took five first-place finishes in the Minutemen's victories over Columbia and St. John's, posting individual victories in the 50-freestyle in both meets (21.33 and 21.34 respectively). The Hebron, Conn. native was also a member of three first-place relay teams: the 400 medley and freestyle against St. John's and the 200 medley against Columbia.

■ Babul

continued from page 12

paint to vie for offensive rebounds and his tremendous leaping ability allows him to out-rebound more physical, bigger opponents.



Babul scored the second basket of the game by slipping into the weak side and tipping in a miss among three Charleston rebounders.

More than anything, Babul finally seems comfortable on the court, more aware of what exactly his role is on Flint's squad. Unlike last season, he is making good decisions while handling the ball. When the 6-foot-6 North Attleboro native does make a mistake, he now has the ability to not let that one error distract him and compound into three or four costly miscues.

On the young season Babul is averaging 5 points, 2.8 rebounds and 22.4 minutes per game. These are not staggering numbers, but when compared to last season, the marked improvement is easy to see.

Babul scored a total of 38 points last season in 25 games. In five games already this season he has notched 25 points. His activity on the boards is seen in an increase of nearly a rebound per game. But more importantly, his athleticism inside has translated into a higher number of team rebounds for the Minutemen.

Whatever the numbers, Babul has taken advantage of his opportunity with the Minutemen.

KEN MCDONALD/COLLEGIAN

Junior Guard Charlton Clarke gets stymied on this offensive possession, mirroring his tough night against the College of Charleston. Clarke was only able to score three points on six rebounds.

■ basketball

continued from page 12

Second, there is the possibility of television exposure. Oftentimes, when a big name comes calling, the televisions execs are not far behind. And when teams get on air it means money, money, money.

And with that TV exposure comes the possibility of catching more prospective students, which means more tuition and more money.

That's all well and good for teams like Georgia Southern, Arkansas State and Gonzaga. But what does it do for the big name schools? Relatively nothing, except give the schools a win or two that they would have had to otherwise fight for.

That's what makes the situation unlike the one that has plagued Divison I football. With no national championship to decide a once-and-for-all winner, football teams have had to rely on impressing the poll voters. That meant that teams had to run up the score in any game possible; easy wins over cupcake schools meant higher point totals which meant more votes which meant a better chance at a championship.

Of course, early season tournaments have done much to destroy the course of creampuff-action so many teams have taken. Tournaments like the Great Alaska Shootout and the Maui Invitational, as well as the Preseason NIT have combined high profile schools with potentially lesser known opponents and the result has been successful.

In fact, this year's field in Alaska featured three nationally ranked teams — North Carolina, UCLA and Purdue. The Maui Invitational boasted the AP's preseason No. 1, Arizona, Duke and Kentucky.

The trend these tourneys have set is a good start, and hopefully it will only grow as it continues.

* * *

In the wake of Chris Herren's departure from the Fresno State hoop team, the university has decided to remove an inflatable beer can which decorates the inside of its arena.

Herren, the Bulldogs' leading scorer last season and the catalyst in FSU's Nov. 22 win over Massachusetts, walked away from coach Jerry Tarkanian's team last week in order to concentrate on cleaning up his substance abuse problem.

Fresno State officials, therefore, decided it wasn't too cool to have the Bulldogs run onto the floor at the start of each game through an silver inflatable tunnel that resembles a Coors beer can. Coors sponsors Fresno's annual tournament.

A Coors spokesman told the Fresno Bee that he doubted an inflatable tunnel would make a person an alcoholic, but that didn't matter to school personnel.

I don't know about you, but simply seeing the thing on TV and imagining having to run under might be enough to drive me to drink.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

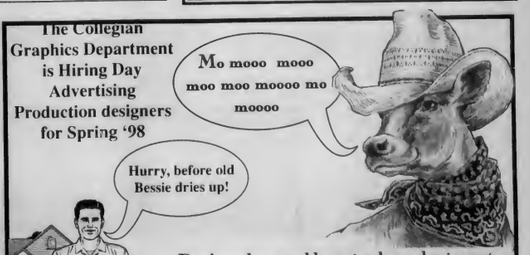
Pizza
Calzones
Subs
Buffalo Wings
CANTONE'S PIZZA
Fast Free Delivery
Sunday - Thursday: 3:30 PM - 1:30 AM
Friday & Saturday: 3:30 PM - 2 AM
Medium Two Topping Pizza & Two 12 oz. Sodas only $9.95
May not be combined w/other coupon or offer Expires 2/28/98

KAI CHI
10¢ WINGS
WEDNESDAY NIGHTS
8:30 - CLOSE

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
922 Campus Center
545-1995 Call Today!



Eating Disorder Programs
Fall 1997
Sponsored by University Health Services
Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Tuesdays or Fridays Confidentiality Assured.
Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2
Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2.
Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Wednesday 4:30 -6 pm, at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator. Confidentiality Assured. Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2.
Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders, yourself or someone you know. Call 577-5168.

ATKINS FARMS Country Market
Rte. 116 & Bay Road, South Amherst, MA
(413) 253-9528 • (800) 594-9537
CAN'T FIND THAT JUST-RIGHT GIFT FOR AUNT BETTY THIS HOLIDAY ?
A Gift Of Good Taste Is Always Welcome!
How about a Gift Basket chock full of healthy and delicious treats from Atkins!? We can deliver your gift locally or mail it for you anywhere in the U.S.

Your're sure to find that something special for the hard-to-buy-for person on your list!
Pick up something at the store or call for a catalog today. Order early to insure your choice and plenty of time for delivery.

A GIFT TO YOU FROM THE UNIVERSITY STORE

JOGGERS' WINDBREAKER Sale Price $35.99 REG $44.99
JOGGERS' WINDBREAKER PANTS Now Only $31.99 REG $39.99
RUSSELL™/THE GAME™ HATS Special $9.99 REG $12.99
CHAMPION™ LOCKER ROOM TEES Everyday Low Prices
LAST DAY OF SALE- SAT. DEC. 6, 1997
WE ACCEPT AMEX, DISCOVER, MC, VISA, AND THE UCARD!
Ustore UNIVERSITY STORE IN THE UMASS CAMPUS CENTER
HOURS: M-F 9 TO 5 SAT. 11 TO 4
(413) 545-2619

The Collegian Graphics Department is Hiring Day Advertising Production designers for Spring '98

Don't make an udder mistake and miss out, come join the herd!
Anyone interested is welcome to stop by our office in the Campus Center basement and fill out an application. General computer know-how and experience with Quark/Pagemaker, Illustrator and Photoshop encouraged.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Community Service Program- Anthropology Deprtment is sponsoring a 2 credit course Spring Semester which meets Thursdays, 4:00-5:30pm. A service learning class project in rural Virginia doing construction work during Spring Break is a requirement. The trips costs $150 maximum but we will do fundraising- possible scholarships available. Call 545-3368 for information.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

1 bedroom at Puffton Village $545. Includes heat. Available 1/1/98. Please call 549-9221

Take Over Lease 1 month free rent. Heat/Water Free! Move in anytime! Call 549-7105

Take Over My Lease One bedroom apartment. $550/month inclusive. Call Tariq Odeh 665-3598

Take Over Our Lease- 2 bedroom apartment. Located on bus route. Starting Jan 1. 256-8399

AUTO FOR SALE

1988 Saab 900S Fully loaded, CD/Tape/Radio, sunroof. $3900 or B/O. Call (413)546-7081

1990 Pontiac Sunbird High mileage, as is $800. B/O. Leah 665-1276

88 Toyota Pick-Up 125k, runs well. $1100 firm. 367-2651

89 Nissan 240SX Excellent condition. All extras. New, muffler, clutch, tires, brakes. $4400 or B/O. 549-6926

1986 Dodge Charger 2dr, hatch, 60k miles. Good gas mileage. $1200 or B/O. Call Lorraine 253-4826

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Hoede Accord 5 speed, 158k. Great condition. Mike 584-6637

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday 1-800-649-4795

COMPUTERS

Brother 3600D Word Processor Like new. Only 6 months old. $100. (413)256-0185

COMPUTERS! New P166MMX from $995. Laptops, peripherals. ZarVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Applications are available for Tour Guides, Student Admissions Rep end Summer Orientation Jobs at Admissions Center.

Activists $250-$400/Week Holiday Jobs For The Environment
Work with the Sierra Club on an urgent campaign to:
- Protect endangered species
- Prevent habitat loss
- Stop clear cutting in our NATIONAL FORESTS

Work over the holidays and beyond. Career Opportunities. On-campus interviews today at 11, 1, 3, 7, in Campus Center #902 or call Amy at 256-6434.

EMPLOYMENT

RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS
Abt Associates is looking for a few reliable people with good communication and computer skills who are available to work a minimum 20 hours per week. And will be available over winter break. Evening and weekend assignments are currently available. We offer flexible scheduling options, access to health and dental plans and paid training. The starting wage is $5.75/hr with regular merit increases. Free transportation from PVTA Bus Line is provided. For more information or to arrange a personal interview call

Summer Jobs!!!
On campus Interviews Dec 11th
CAMP WAHNOJA NORTH
Located in Southern Maine. Currently hiring '98 Summer staff. If you have experience working with children we may have a place for you this Summer in Maine.
At CNN you will develop your communication, problem solving, teaching, and leadership skills. Most importantly we offer the opportunity to work with kids & staff from around the world and across the U.S. in an exciting and rewarding environment.
Call now!
Tele. 800-448-0136 or www.campwahoba.com

January Jobs Use your winter break to make money. 2-4 week fun promotions around country. Great for the resume. Outgoing and independent people call (800)783-4237 Attn: Joe. Collegiate Advantage

Summer Maeagement Opportueities
Open across Mass. for the Summer of 1998. Earn $600-$800 per week. For more info please call College Pro Painters at (888)277-7962.

Attention Slackers!! Use e-mail? Know others who do? Little effort = Big money! Call (800)546-0744

FOR SALE

Take home speakers or a 16mm film camera for the break. Camera perfect for Film/Comm Majors. Call Sid at 549-8857. Free kittens 2

Willpower In A Bottle Lose Weight. Doctor Recommended. 100% Natural. Moneyback Guarentee (413)259-1922

Free Motorola Pagers Limited supply. Great X-mas gifts. 1-800-784-6452

FOUND

Found- Astrophysics Textbook in Campus Center. Call (413)467-3420

FURNITURE

NEW FUTON White mattress with beautiful oak frame. Free delivery. $275. 6-0137

GREEK ANNOUNCEMENTS

Freshmen, Sophomore and Junior Women invited to Open Rush- Sigma Kappa Sorority, Wed., Dec 3, 6-8pm. Located behind Hillel. Call Beth 549-7035 for more info.

JEWELERY

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

LOST & FOUND

Women's Black Wool Coat Southwest area along Fearing St. Reward offered. Call Kara at 6-2495

LOST & FOUND

Gold bracelet chain style with lobster claw. 527-3454

PETS FOR SALE

Beby Bearded Dragoes. "The Best Pet Lizard," $45 each. Call Sten at (413)256-0185

CAT LOVERS Looking for someone interested in having two loveable cats live-in. We will retain ownership of the cats and we will pay for food, litter, and vet care. You provide the home and the love! Call for details. 548-4550

ROOM FOR RENT

I'm graduating! One bedroom available in three bedroom apartment in Puffton Village. Paid thru Feb 1. Move in Jan 1. $230/month. Heat included. Call 549-6729 Brian

Large bedroom availeble for Wintersession- 5 minute walk to campus. $400. Call Omri 549-9972

Quiet room, Downtowe Amherst Available end of December. Lease. 253- 4236. 9am-9pm.

Furnished room availeble in a 4 bedroom Amherst house. $300/month. Near bus route. For more details call Tina 253-6428

Oee bedroom perfect for two in two bedroom apartment in Sunderland. Mindy 665-1276

Cheap rooms for Wintersession Live close to campus. Only $150. Includes heat/hot water. Call Jason 549-0958

ROOMMATE WANTED

To shere two bedroom apartment in Brandywine. Rent starting Jan 1. Call Tara 549-4390

Looking for Oee male to shere four bedroom apartment in Alpine Commons with three males. Two full baths. $300/month. Everything included. Starting ASAP. Call Josh 253-6481

2 roommates waated to share 3 bedroom in Puffton. Available Jan 1. Call 549-8564

Roommate Wanted- 6 bedroom house, Amherst. $210/month. Own room (spacious), wood heated, pool table. Call 549-7177

Oee bedroom aveilable in two bedroom apartment. Walk to Uptown and UMass. On bus line. $270/month plus utilities. Call 253-4613. Available 1/98.

Oee bedroom is aveilable in Cliffside Apartment. Call Franky 665-7831

Very quiet roommate waated in Amherst on bus line. $260/month plus 1/3 utilities. 256-5402, 253-9457

Lookieg for femele to share two bedroom apartment in Puffton $320/month. On bus line. Call Candy 549-9293

SERVICES

Decoretor Service Beautify your home- wallpaper, painting, staining. Expert work- 20 years exp. Free estimates Call (413)533-6213 South Hadley

Place your Classified HERE

SERVICES

GET NOTICED! Number One secret to resume writing for college students and gen-x. Send $6.00 check/money order + business size SASE to: Nina Smith, 507 Central Avenue, No. 2, New Haven, CT 06515

Pregeaat? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

STEREO & CD EQUIP

Marshall Speaker For Sale 4x12 Cab. LOUD! Great condition. Must sell! $500 or best offer. Call Mike at 546-0955

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK 98 Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahames, Jamaica and Florida from $399. Organize a small group and travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577.

TUTORS

TUTORS Bilingual Tutors for part-time paid assistance to students speaking Cape Verdian/Portuguese, Chinese, Khmer, and Spanish. Contact ESL/Bilingual Office at (413)549-9857 Amherst Public Schools An Affirmative Action/ Equal Opportunity Employer

WANTED TO RENT

Jan-May 97 One bedroom apartment/room. Will take over your lease. Call Franky 665-7831

Cantones Pizza
256-6100
1 2 LARGE CHEESE $13.99
2 2 CALZONES $8.99
3 4 CALZONES $15.99
4 2 LRG 1 TOPPING $15.99
No Coupons Needed w Specials
Free Delivery!

Check it out!
The Classifieds have NEW Headings

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students 20¢ per word/day

All others 40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or typo

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES ANNOUNCEMENTS APARTMENT FOR RENT AUTO FOR SALE AUTO PARTS CHILDCARE COMMUNITY EVENTS COMPUTERS EMPLOYMENT ENTERTAINMENT FOR SALE FURNITURE GREEK ANNOUCEMENTS

HAPPY BIRTHDAY HEALTH & BEAUTY HOUSES FOR RENT HOUSES FOR SALE HOUSESITTING JEWELERY INSTRUCTION LOST & FOUND (3 DAYS FREE) MUSICIANS MISCELLANEOUS MISCELLANEOUS FOR RENT MOTORCYCLES

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS MUSIC LESSONS MUSICIANS WANTED PERSONALS PETS FOR SALE RESUMES RIDES WANTED ROOM FOR RENT ROOM WANTED ROOMMATE WANTED SERVICES SPORTS STEREO & CD EQUIP.

SUMMER SUBLET TELEVISIONS FOR SALE TICKETS TO SUBLET TRAVEL TRANSPORTATION TUTORING SERVICES TUTOR WANTED WANTED TO RENT WANTED GENERAL WORLD WIDE WEB YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 3

Dancing — Israeli folk dancing from 8:30-10 p.m. in Grayson dorm, Orchard Hill. Learn a new dance, review an old one. No experience necessary. Sponsored by Hillel.

Discussion — "A Palestinian/Jewish Dialogue for Peace in the Middle East." Najat Arafat Khelil and Reena Bernards, cofounders of the Palestinian and Jewish American Women's Dialogue Project in Washington, D.C. will discuss Israeli-Palestinian relations at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Hall. For more information, call 545-9642.

Entertainment — "Not Ready For Bedtime Players" performing at 8 p.m. in Greenough Basement in Central.

Informational Session — The Peace Corps representative for UMass and the Five College area will present general information on the Peace Corps and how to become a volunteer from 7–8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 905– 909. All students from any major are encouraged to attend, with a special emphasis on graduating seniors. For more information, call the Campus Peace Corps office at 545– 2105 or come by the office in Stockbridge, room 112 during office hours, Monday 9 a.m. –3 p.m., Tuesday and Thursday 1–5 p.m.

Meeting — Inter–religious dialogues follow up discussion and future planning from 7–9 p.m. in the Campus Center, see info desk for room.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 178. Elections will be held and anyone who has attended three or more meetings may vote. For more information, contact Tim at 546–0819 or Chanel at 546–6301.

Workshop — A free workshop "Introduction for Psychodrama" from 7–9 p.m. in the Curtain Theater. Come experience how theater can be used for self–exploration. Registration is limited. For more information or to sign up, call Marlena Applebaum at 549–8556 or e–mail at marlena@student.umass.edu.

THURSDAY, DEC. 4

Discussion — Amy Hoffman will discuss her recent book Hospital Time– A Memoir of Taking Care of Friends with AIDS at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803. Part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series and is co–sponsored by The Stonewall Center, GLB GSO, Women's Studies and the Chancellor's Task Force on GLBT Matters. For more information, contact the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Entertainment — "Not Ready For Bedtime Players" performing at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, graduate lounge.

Lecture — Anti–Semitism lecture today from 7–9 p.m. at the Hillel House entitled "Anti–Semitism: An International Arena." Come sit in on this one credit course given by Lauren Levin, Eastern States Civil Rights Director, Anti– Defamation League. All visitors are welcome.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor's Network will be meeting at 6:30–8 p.m. in the Campus Center, see info desk for exact room. The meetings are for students and community members to support and discuss issues concerning disabilities. All are welcome. For more information, call Peter at 545–4602.

FRIDAY, DEC. 5

Blood Drive — American Red Cross Hampshire County chapter will hold a blood drive from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 168C.

Film/Talk — The classic film Dr. Strangelove or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb will be shown at 7 p.m. at Stirn Auditorium, Amherst College, followed by a talk, entitled "They are still trying to get us to love the bomb," given by Ira Helfand, M.D., a member of the Hampshire chapter of Physicians for Social Responsibility.

Floral Exhibit — The Annual Holiday Floral Exhibit of flower arrangements by UMass and Stockbridge students in the Introductory and Advanced Floral Design courses will be held from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. in French Hall, room 105.

Service — Shabbat service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. Welcome the Sabbath with a bit of song and prayer.

Vigil/Rally — World AIDS candlelight vigil at 6 p.m. at the Student Union entrance. Speak out and rally at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Cape Cod Lounge. Sponsored by the UMass Pride Alliance, Health Education, University Health Services and The Stonewall Center. For more information, call the Stonewall Center at 545–4824

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

NOTICES

Applications — The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team is accepting applications for its training this Jan. 12– 16. Applications are available for any UMass student at 222 Hampshire House, Legal Studies. For more information, contact Leah at 545–5882.

Auditions — The Not Ready for Bedtime Players are holding auditions for next semester on Monday, Dec. 8 at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 165.

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
19	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN SI
25	Headline News
26	UCTV
27	TBS
28	BET
29	TV Land
30	Univision
31	Comedy Central
32	Cartoon
33	Much Music

545-3500

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 3, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Washnone ★	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ★		Yanni: Concert From the Taj Mahal and Forbidden City				Yanni: Concert From the Taj Mahal and Forbidden City
WFSB	3	News ★	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV ★	Charlie Brown	Garfield	Public Eye (In Stereo) ★		Chicago Hope "Positive I.D.'s"		News ★	Late Show ★
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra ★	Ent. Tonight	Charlie Brown	Garfield	Public Eye (In Stereo) ★		Chicago Hope "Positive I.D.'s"		News	Late Show ★
WCVB	5	News ★	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ★	Spin City ★	Dharma-Greg	Drew Carey ★	Ellen ★	Primetime Live ★		News ★	Nightline ★
WLVI	6		Full House ★	Boy-World	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Sister, Sister	Smart Guy ★	Wayans Bros.	Steve Harvey		News	Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ★	3rd Rock-Sun	Tony Danza ★	3rd Rock-Sun	Working ★		Dateline (In Stereo) ★	News	Tonight Show
WTXX			Cheers ★	Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy ★	Judge Judy ★	Star Trek: Voyager "Displaced		Seinfeld "Warriors" (In Stereo)			News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT			Cheers ★	Mad Abo. You	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Herd Copy ★	3rd Rock-Sun	Tony Danza ★	3rd Rock-Sun	Working ★		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8		Home Imp.	Simpsons ★	Seinfeld ★	Frasier ★	Baverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five "Adjustments" ★			News	Simpsons ★	Deep Space 9
WWLP	9		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ★	3rd Rock-Sun	Tony Danza ★	3rd Rock-Sun	Working ★		Dateline (In Stereo) ★	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	10		Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ★		Gael Force – An Irish Musical Event (In Stereo)					Over New England		Charlie Rose
WGGB	40		News ★	ABC News	Seinfeld ★	Frasier ★	Spin City ★	Dharma-Greg	Drew Carey ★	Ellen ★		Primetime Live ★	News ★	Nightline ★
WSBK	38		Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld ★	NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at Philadelphia Flyers. (Live)					News		Seinfeld ★	Real TV ★
WTBS	72		Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach ★	Coach ★	NBA Basketball: Los Angeles Lakers at Denver Nuggets. (Live) ★				Inside-NBA		It's Television U.S.A.! (1985)
A&E	69		Northern Exposure ★		Law & Order "Sisters of Mercy"		Biography: Woolworths		American Justice (R)		20th Century		Law & Order "Big Baby" ★
CNN	18	32	WorldView ★		Moneyline ★	Crossfire ★	Prime News ★	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live ★		World Today ★		Sports Illus.	Moneyline ★
COM	19	26	Lounge Liz.	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★½ "Back to School" (1986, Comedy) Rodney Dangerfield.				South Park (R)	Viva Variety	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	20		Wings (R)		Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery: Rains Came		Discover Magazine "Deception"		Invisible Places "Underworld"		Justice Files (R)
ESPN	21		Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Great Eight – Louisville vs. North Carolina.				College Basketball: Great Eight – Kentucky vs. Purdue. (Live)
LIFE	22		Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★½ "Implosion Conduct" (1994, Suspense) Steven Bauer.				Shoot the Clock: Fitting
MTV	23		MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		Real World ★	Real World ★	Real World ★	Real World ★	Real World ★		Liz Live From Mexico City
NICK	24		Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug ★	Rugrats ★	Hey Arnold! ★	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Bewitched	Love Lucy ★	Odd Couple ★	Tess ★	Newhart ★
SCIFI	25		Twilight Zone	Twilight Zone	Time Trax "Night of the Savage		Seaquest DSV "Whale Song" ★		Forever Knight "Father's Day"		Sightings (R) (In Stereo) ★		Time Trax "Night of the Savage
TLC	27	26	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Wondr Weathr	Sea Tek ★	First (R)		Connections II "Feedback" (R)		Wondr Weathr (See Tek II (R)
TNT	29		Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		★★★ "Support Your Local Sheriff!" (1969, Comedy) James Garner.				★★★ "Support Your Local Gunfighter" (1971) James Garner.
USA	28		Baywatch "Deep Trouble" ★		Highlander: The Series ★		Walker, Texas Ranger ★		"When Danger Follows You Home" (1997) JoBeth Williams. ★				Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo) ★
HBO	30		(5:30) ★★½ "The Hunt for Red October" (1990) Sean Connery				★★★ "Executive Decision" (1996, Suspense) Kurt Russell. ?R ★				Tenacious D ★★★ "Dear God" (1996) Greg Kinnear. ?PG ★
MAX	31		(4:45)		★★★ "Dunston Checks In" (1996, Comedy) PG		★★½ "Top Secret!" (1984, Comedy) Val Kilmer. (In Stereo) PG				The Conspiracy of Fear" (1996, Suspense) Leslie Hope. ?R ★
SHOW	34		(5:30) "Blue"		★★ "Weekend at Bernie's II" (1993) ?PG ★		★★½ "Powder" (1995, Drama) Mary Steenburgen. ?PG-13 ★				Dead Man's Gun (In Stereo) ★		U2 Live From Mexico City

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Sven By Steven Higgins

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Loser Crew Comics By Alan DeMonde

Attention student cartoonists!

Now's the time to think about securing a regular spot on the Comics page for next semester. Bring a sample of your strip to Laura Stock, Managing Editor, by Dec. 12 for consideration. There is a mailbox marked "Cartoon Submissions" in the Collegian newsroom, 113 Campus Center.

Strip cartoons must be drawn to fit in a 2–inch by 6 1/4– inch space, in black ink; paint, felt tip markers and flair pens work best — ballpoint pens are banned because they photocopy horribly. No. 2 pencils and blue ink do not work well; dark artists' pencils work better. We will also accept cartoons on disk for MACs saved in PageMaker or QuarkXPress Type as an EPS or TIFF.

Submissions will be judged on humor, originality, good taste and artwork quality. It is helpful if you have an advance idea of how many strips you would like to run per week.

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You can give others some information today which will prove more than interesting. If they use it, the results will surprise them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You mustn't let yourself feel as though you're following a routine at this time. Much depends upon your own sense of involvement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — Quality control is likely to be a big concern of yours throughout the day. Do not let anyone try to get away with less than par at this time.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may have trouble determining where you stand in a complicated personal relationship today. Take time to consider all sides.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Time alone must not be ill–spent today. Be sure to tend to solitary duties just as you would if you were answering to someone in authority.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Focus on those who need your help today. You have time to spare, and it is best spent assisting others. Be gracious and generous.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You must be sure to remember times and dates today as you make plans for the next few days. Write things down; maximize your margin for error.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — The easy will be hard and the hard easy today. The stars will demand that you keep your eyes and ears open at all times and stay ready.

LEO (July 25–Aug. 22) — You shouldn't have to spend a great deal of time catching up with yourself today. Once you begin, you can move forward at every moment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Solutions are likely to be offered again and again today, but you must be able to overcome a personal problem on your own.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — The more you get to know someone with whom you are expected to work, the more likely you will be to perform up to par. Do not be bashful!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — A sudden realization may have you changing course or backtracking before the day is out. You have room to maneuver today.

Quote of the Day

"Sex is not the answer. Sex is the question. 'Yes' is the answer."

–Anonymous

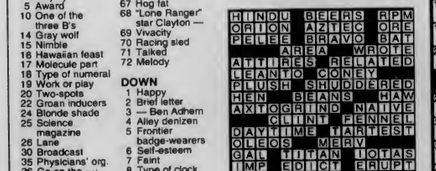
Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

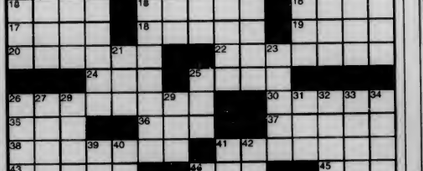
Franklin
LUNCH
Grilled Chicken Sandwich
Hot Pastrami on Rye
Ravioli/Tomato Sauce
Vegan Ravioli
DINNER
Roast Pork
Chili Cheese Puff
Quarter Pound Burger
Quarter Pound Swiss Burger

Worcester
LUNCH
Grilled Chicken Sandwich
Fettuccini/Tomato Sauce or Tomato Meat Sauce
Lentil Chili
DINNER
Roast Pork
Cheese Spinach Strudel
Savory Stuffed Peppers
Tortellini

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Macaroni and Cheese
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
DINNER
Pineapple Ham Steak
Turkey Divan



Berkshire
LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Sweet Potato Quesadilla Wrap
Grilled Portabello Mushrooms
DINNER
Roast Pork
Cheese Spinach Strudel
Hot & Spicy Vegetable Pasta
Pastabilities



Staff
Night Editor — Seema Gangatirkar
Photo Technician — Brian McDermott
Copy Editor — Lorraine Kennedy
Production Supervisor — Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff — Mark McGrath

ACROSS
1 Tiny fly
5 Award
10 One of the three B's
14 Gray wolf
15 Nimble
16 Hawaiian feast
17 Molecule part
18 Type of numeral
19 Work or play
20 Two-spots
22 Groan inducers
24 Blonde shade
25 Science magazine
26 Lane
30 Broadcast
35 Physicians' org.
36 'Go on the —': flee
37 A Judd
38 Largest
41 Wild
43 Hamburger extra
44 Presidential nickname
45 Grand — Opry
46 Gets up
47 Cured (fish)
50 Bear: Lat.
53 Circle part
54 Duck's dogs
58 Go over
62 On the ocean
63 Jargon
66 '77 whale movie
67 Hog fat
68 "Lone Ranger" star Clayton —
69 Vivacity
70 Racing sled
71 Talked
72 Melody

DOWN
1 Happy
2 Brief letter
3 — Ben Adhem
4 Alley denizen
5 Frontier badge-wearers
6 Self-esteem
7 Faint
8 Type of clock
9 Soviet founder
10 Ave.
11 "The Clan of the Cave Bear" author
12 Relief org.
13 Centers
21 Sixth sense
23 Goddess of hunting
25 Electrical unit
26 Kind act
27 Muscat native
28 Caravan stop
29 Make lace
31 Singer Janis
32 Whirlybird blade
33 Writer Zola
34 Cut into cubes
39 Foot part
40 Follow
41 Hoover's org.
42 Snappy answer
44 Alias
48 Beginning of school
49 Repeated sounds
51 Paper units
52 Hone
54 Off the —: weird
55 Isaac's son
56 Broken-off glacier
57 Lose color
59 Singer Guthrie
60 Glance over
61 Dangle
64 Gunk
65 Mork's planet

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

SPORTS

Tired Minutemen suffocate College of Charleston

Ketner scores 20 points; UM holds Cougars down

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

Something funny happens to a basketball team when they travel 4,518 miles to start the season, then come home to open up their home schedule two nights later.

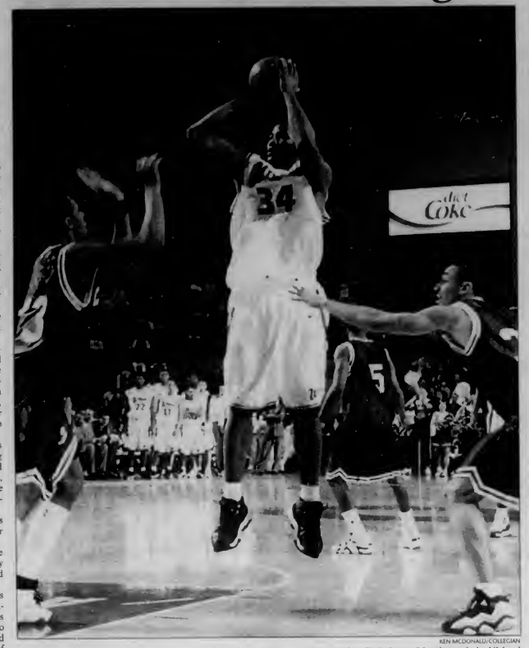
They get tired. Real tired.

The Massachusetts men's basketball team, not so fresh off a 10-day journey through California and Alaska, battled jet lag and a feisty College of Charleston defense to win their 1997-98 home opener 52-40 last night at the William D. Mullins Center. The game set numerous records for offensive futility, for both teams, but in the end Massachusetts coach Bruiser Flint was just happy to get this one over with, and push his team over .500 (3-2).

Massachusetts	52
College of Charleston	40

"Jet lag ain't the word," Flint said. "I'm just happy that we won. I was scared to death of this game... The trip was brutal, we didn't get back until late Sunday night. [College of Charleston] had been off for a week, and I knew how tired I was and I wasn't even playing and I didn't have to go to classes, so I knew the guys would be a little tired. I thought they gave me a great effort."

The 52-40 final score is by far the lowest total in the 54 game history of the Mullins Center, breaking the old record of 104 set in March 1993 against St. Joseph's. The halftime score, 19-14, broke records for offensive ineptitude by both UMass and a Mullins opponent. Charleston tied a record for least field goals made by an opponent, 15, and didn't register a shot from their half-court offense for the first 13:33 of the game. Both teams combined to go 15-55 from the floor in the first half.



But as much as the Minutemen struggled to put points on the board, they made up for it with a suffocating defense. UMass out-rebounded the Cougars 44-29, and blocked 11 shots. According to junior center Lari Ketner, who scored 20 points on 9-of-22 shooting, many of the players, including himself, are still recovering from a brutal Alaska trip. Thus UMass focused on defense.

"We wanted to come out and play good defense, that's what we wanted to come out and establish that," Ketner said.

"As far as offense, guys are a little bit tired from the trip... [because of that] shots are coming up short or they aren't getting the right touch. I think we played good defense considering we were so tired."

The key to UMass' third victory of the young season was a 17-4 run that turned a slim 30-24 lead into a comfortable 47-30 advantage. Charleston pressured the UMass backcourt into some turnovers, which they converted to easy baskets on their end. But the Minutemen re-asserted themselves by spreading out the offense, led by a pair of

Turn to HOOPS, page 9

KEN MCDONALD/COLLEGIAN

Senior forward and team captain Tyrone Weeks scored 12 points and pulled down 10 rebounds in UMass' 52-40 win over College of Charleston last night at the Mullins Center.

Babul's minutes increase and so does production

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

When an opportunity presents itself, especially in sports, it is wise to take advantage of it.

Massachusetts sophomore forward Mike Babul has been presented with such an opportunity. He was granted the starting job at the beginning of the season by UMass coach Bruiser Flint, and with every game he seems more comfortable on the floor.

Now, Babul's chance to prove himself has been enhanced even more.

Fellow sophomore Winston Smith — with whom Babul has been battling for playing time — is sidelined indefinitely with a knee injury. Smith reaggravated a previously torn ACL in his right knee against Purdue and his season may be in jeopardy.

"He'll be evaluated on Thursday and he could miss the rest of the season," Flint said.

The silver lining in this cloud is simply that Babul will see extended minutes in Smith's absence, and will get the chance to continue his improvement over last season's sporadic effort.

"We need [Babul] to step up and start playing," Flint said. "We need him to play [with confidence] since [Smith] is going to be out."

Babul's line last night, at first glance, was nothing to shout about, but his overall performance on the court spoke volumes.

He had just six points. He also had four rebounds (three offensive), a team-high four assists (also a career-high), two blocks and just one turnover in 29 minutes.

"He's getting better; he's playing with a lot more confidence," Flint said of Babul. "He's doing the things we need him to do, which is keep balls alive, get the ball to the post. He's not turning the ball over.

"He's playing great defensively," Flint said.

Babul's greatest contribution to the Minutemen (3-2) early this season has undoubtedly been his defense.

In the four games prior to last night's 52-40 victory over the College of Charleston, Babul (primarily) held the opposing starting small forwards to 17 points.

In his 29 minutes last night, Babul spent time defending three Cougars. One of the lucky contestants was Carl Thomas who came in as Charleston's leading scorer at 19.0 ppg.

Off the bench, Thomas was held scoreless (0-for-4) in 23 minutes. The Cougars' starting small forward, Carlos Brown, had eight points (3-for-7 from the field, 1-for-4 from the line) and Marc Himes hit on two free throws to account for his point output.

Babul also crashed the boards effectively and kept balls in play contributing to the Minutemen's 22 second chance points on the night.

His quickness and hustle allow him to slide into the

Turn to BABUL, page 9

Honors program

UM athletes rewarded for their efforts

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

There have not been too many things the Massachusetts hockey team can take pride in lately — especially with a 2-9 start (0-7 in Hockey East). Yet, the little things can help turn things around, and earlier this week, a Minuteman was given something he can put on his shelf.

Massachusetts Notebook

On Monday, freshman forward R.J. Gates was named Hockey East Rookie of the Week for his two-goal effort against Northeastern last Saturday night at the William D. Mullins Center. This is the first HEA honor of the season for UMass player.

Gates' performance was one of the few highlights in the team's disheartening 4-3 loss to the Huskies, but payback can come quickly for the Minutemen. This weekend, the two teams will play a home-and-home series, starting Friday night at Matthews Arena in Boston (7 p.m.) and resuming Saturday night at the Mullins Center (8 p.m.).

With a winless conference record, a relatively strong performance last Saturday night against Northeastern should be built upon with the return of senior forward Tim Lovell (one-game suspension) and senior goaltender Brian Regan (coach's decision) to the lineup.

Turn to UMASS, page 9

JORMA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN

Freshman R.J. Gates has a right to celebrate being named Hockey East Rookie of the Week with his two goals against Northeastern last Saturday night.

'97 magnum opus according to our CFA guru

Luke Meredith on College Football

After two years, a handful of booty and the eyes of the college football world firmly fixed on me (well, not really, but haven't I always said it's fun to pretend?), it has come time to say goodbye.

This is it.

The last ever "Luke Meredith on College Football" column in the pages of the Collegian.

No more Booty Schwag.

No more Friends of the Program.

No more Uncle Bill (well, actually, Uncle Bill will be alive and well long after I'm gone).

No more Pimp Daddy.

Rumor has it I have to go out and get a real job in May.

And although some might say the "Booty Schwag" may not have a place in some crap-ass local paper, the last two years have bolstered my belief that just because there are supposed "right ways" to write, the ones who keep it real do it their way.

But there's still business to attend to.

The bowls, though tentative, are almost ready to be cued up. My picks are also tentative. Be gentle.

Las Vegas Bowl
Air Force (10–2) vs. Notre Dame (7–5)

Notre Dame is the worst team in college football. The worst. I have no idea who Air Force has, but that doesn't matter. In the ultimate late-'90s ironic twist, the storied Fighting Irish end their season by being crushed in the unholiest of places, Las Vegas. Father Flanagan, you'll want to cover your eyes for this one.

Air Force 38, Notre Dame 14

Aloha Bowl
Washington (7–4) vs, Michigan St. (7–4)

The year's most disappointing team, Washington, meets the year's most inconsistent, Michigan St. Washington will vindicate all those who thought they'd win it all (including me) by blowing out Michigan St.

Washington 30, Michigan St. 10

Motor City Bowl
Marshall (8–2) vs. Virginia (7–4)

After years of Division I–AA obscurity (gee, wonder what that's like), Marshall celebrates its first ever bowl bid by beating the Cavs, in a game that begs us all to ponder. "Why?"

Yes, indeed — why.

Marshall 38, Virginia 7

Insight.com Bowl
New Mexico (9–2) vs USC (6–5)

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 8

Do you really like popcorn? Popcorn State's your place

Casey Kane on College Basketball

Look at any television listings lately? The sports schedules, specifically. If you noticed anything about the early season it was probably that marquee early season match-ups are becoming more frequent.

Unfortunately, they are still a relatively foreign concept, and coaches are still quick to schedule early season cupcakes to boost their own records.

It's a common practice. Former Massachusetts men's basketball coach John Calipari used to have a name for these random, small-blip-on-the-big-radar-screen-th at-is- college-hoop teams — Popcorn State.

And most of the time, the fan loses out when the November and December TV schedules read like this:

Kentucky vs. a team you've never heard of, 7 p.m. ESPN2; UCLA vs. another team you'll never hear from again, 9:30 p.m. ESPN; Indiana vs. a team whose only chance to make the NCAA tournament is through its conference's automatic bid, 4:30 p.m. ABC.

It happens all the time, and the schedules for Final Four favorites reads like a who's who of the Division I bottom tier.

The best (or worst, depending on your personal point of view) is when there are Division I schools, particularly those with a penchant for scoring, against D'vision II schools you've probably never heard of — and will probably never hear from again, at least until the early part of next year's season.

Case in point: Long Island University. Let it be known that LIU has in its starting lineup the nation's most prolific scorer. Guard Charles Jones averaged 31 points per game last season.

And that's not all the firepower the Blackbirds possess. They also have Richie Parker. A New York City high school phenom, Parker was away from the college game for a while as he battled back from trouble with the law.

He's back, and combined with Jones, the Blackbirds are dangerous.

Especially if you happen to be Medgar Evars College of Brooklyn. You see, LIU played a game against the Division II school last week and handed Medgar Evars a loss that was tough to swallow.

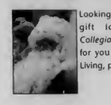
Why? Because the Blackbirds set a new school record for most points in the game. Medgar Evars' 62 points is not a bad score, but it was no where close to touching LIU's 179.

That's right. One hundred seventy-nine points.

Jones had 53 points himself.

Of course, there are benefits for the smaller schools, even if scheduling the collegiate hoop giants usually translates into an inevitable loss. First, there is the increased gate receipts (i.e. money, money, money). Fans storm smaller teams' venues when a headliner comes to town. People pack arenas in the hopes of seeing their hoop idols play live-and– in-person.

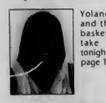
Turn to BASKETBALL, page 9



COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Upside down...

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team will start off their season with the UMass Open this Saturday night at 7 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage.



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVII Issue 64 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, December 4, 1997

'Tis the season

Looking for holiday gift ideas? The Collegian has some for you (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Looking for a ray of sunshine

Yolanda Rayside and the women's basketball team take on Maine tonight (see Sports, page 16).

WORLD

Doctor convicted of euthanasia in Norway

OSLO, Norway (AP) — The first Norwegian doctor ever tried in a mercy killing case was convicted yesterday of premeditated murder in a key test of the country's laws on euthanasia.

Christian Sandsdalen, a retired 79-year-old physician, said he gave a lethal dose of morphine to multiple sclerosis victim Bodil Bjerkmann, 45, at her request in June 1996.

He wrote to the public prosecutor admitting the killing, and demanded that he be tried to test the laws. He pleaded not guilty to first-degree murder when his trial opened in Oslo City Court last month and yesterday said he would appeal his conviction. In its ruling, the court said it was proven that Sandsdalen gave the lethal dose — at his patient's request — in what he considered an act of mercy for someone who was dying and in terrible pain. However, the court said Sandsdalen did not try hard enough to find another solution, such as prescribing stronger pain killers to ease the women's suffering.

After pronouncing the doctor guilty of first-degree murder, the court found so many mitigating circumstances that it indefinitely postponed sentencing. Considering Sandsdalen's age, that means he may never be sentenced.

NATION

Bomb blast kills expecting mother

LOUISA, Va. (AP) — A pregnant woman was killed early yesterday when a bomb exploded outside her apartment, apparently as she picked something up off the sidewalk.

Tammy Lynn Baker, 24, was killed around 4:30 a.m. by a blast that was heard for miles around. It blew off Ms. Baker's hand, blew holes in the front of her apartment and dented a nearby car. "She never knew what hit her," said Louisa Police Chief Ashland Fortune.

Police said they had no suspects.

Ms. Baker was up early to go to her job for a construction company in nearby Charlottesville, Fortune said. A neighbor heard a car start just before the explosion, so Ms. Baker might have been letting her car warm up when the bomb went off, the chief said. Ms. Baker, who was due to give birth on Jan. 15, lived alone in her apartment near the business district in Louisa, a town of 1,088 people about 50 miles northwest of Richmond.

"She was quiet, sweet, always a smile," said Sam Metallo, a director of Starview Management in Charlottesville, which owns the apartment. "We've been thinking all morning about who would do that, and we don't have a clue. She had no known enemies and no arguments."

Bomb and arson experts from the state and the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms weren't sure what kind of bomb exploded, because fragments were widely scattered.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 42 LOW: 31	HIGH: 38 LOW: 20	HIGH: 37 LOW: 20

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 14
Comics .....page 15
Crossword .....page 15
Editorial .....page 4
FYI .....page 14
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 16

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

SGA passes motion calling for emergency lights in all bathrooms

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Six motions were passed by the undergraduate student Senate at last night's Student Government Association (SGA) meeting at the University of Massachusetts.

Senator Brian McManus presented a motion that would request Housing Services to allow students to enter through rear doors in Southwest buildings that are usually locked.

The motion, which passed on the Senate floor, requests that Housing Services reevaluate its "policy of alarming the back doors of the towers during the hours that the front doors are unlocked... and report back to the SGA within 30 days its justification for the continuation of this policy, or unlock the doors."

"This will be a great convenience to residents, especially in [John Adams and John Quincy Adams Residence Halls]... my experience has been that there is no need to lock these doors," McManus said.

Also passed was another motion written by McManus calling for emergency light installation in every residential bathroom on campus.

"This is a very serious motion... it creates a safety hazard... it's state law that there have to be lights in these bathrooms. They have to do it," McManus said.

Presented by Sen. Paul Ferro (Commuter Area) was a motion to construct a 12-foot high chain link fence around the horseshoe basketball court in Southwest Residential Area.

The fence would prevent basketball players from having to "chase loose balls down the grassy hill or into the street," and would not enclose the court on the side facing the Munchy Store.

"It would be in the best interest of students to install a fence," Ferro said.

"It's for students, and that's what we're here for," said Sen. Jodi Bailey (Orchard Hill Area).

A motion also passed last night was presented by Senators Amy Pellegrino (Orchard Hill Area) and Michael Rossettie (Southwest Area) called for Select Committees within the Senate to be allowed to exist for one academic year or until their specified task is carried out. Select Committees are created to deal with specific issues by the Senate.

"This gives the Select Committee an actual time limit to work within," Pellegrino said.

A sum of $2,800 was given by the SGA to the UMass Men's Crew Club from the finance reserves for an upcoming training trip to Florida at last night's meeting as well.

Senate Speaker Peter Kilbourne also informed the Senate body that a pilot program will begin in the spring to lock all doors in

Turn to SGA, page 2

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Cleaning Up!

Rosalie Rocore, the only female employee of UMass Landscape services, removes posters from a lamppost on campus yesterday.

Israelis strike over pension plan

By Jack Katzenell
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel's 700,000 public employees went on strike yesterday, crippling transportation, medical care, utilities and other vital services in a dispute over pension funds. Union leaders were meeting with the finance minister to try to negotiate an end to the walkout.

With workers off the job, the national airport turned away flights, hospitals turned away non-emergency cases, and Israelis postponed wedding and funerals for lack of proper government permits.

Amir Peretz, chairman of public employees' huge Histadrut union, said the strike would continue unless workers received written assurances from Finance Minister Yaakov Neeman regarding their demands for guaranteeing pension funds. The negotiations were at the urging of Israeli President Ezer Weizman.

The strike also affected government offices and many state-owned industries. Private industries were not affected.

By late afternoon, a labor court ordered some of the workers, including bank employees and government workers, back to their jobs. It also issued a temporary back-to-work order for employees at the National Water Carrier — which brings water from the fertile north to central Israel and the Negev desert — ordering them to restaff at minimum levels.

The Histadrut refused to comply

Turn to ISRAEL, page 2

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Cheap Art?

Paul Fata, of Providence, R.I., exhibits his work "Cheap Art" at the Craft Center's Holiday Craft Fair.

Nations sign land mine treaty

United States, China among key countries maintaining holdout

By David Crary
Associated Press

OTTAWA — Goaded into action by a global grassroots alliance, 125 nations began signing a treaty yesterday to ban anti-personnel land mines — a treaty the United States has refused to endorse.

As mine victims in wheelchairs and jubilant activists looked on, Kofi Annan, the secretary-general of the United Nations, praised the treaty as "a historic victory for the weak and vulnerable of the world."

Also attending the ceremonies were observers from major holdout nations — such as the United States — which now face increased pressure to support the treaty.

When activists began campaigning for such a ban seven years ago, some people felt this achievement was out of reach. Those who didn't were filled with elation yesterday.

"Here we have 125 governments recognizing that the tide of history has changed," said Jody Williams, who shared this year's Nobel Peace Prize with her anti-landmine coalition. "It's a new definition of superpower. It is not one, it is everybody. We are the superpower."

Williams shared the podium at the ceremony with Annan and Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chretien. Canada — which was the first nation to sign Wednesday — played a pivotal role in persuading other nations to form an unprecedented alliance with non-governmental agencies in pushing for a ban.

"It is an alliance that has shamed the world and enlightened it," Annan said. "It has, for once, made the international community a living, thriving reality."

With so many countries lined up to sign, the ceremony is scheduled to continue through today while

Turn to MINES, page 2

Study: half of the Amazon ready to go up in smoke

By Todd Lewan
Associated Press

At least half of the Amazon rain forest is a tinderbox ready to go up in smoke, raising the specter of an ecological disaster that may wipe out the world's largest wilderness.

About 12 percent of the 2 million-square-mile jungle is already gone, and burning has been so intense in recent months that a lake caught fire and people in jungle cities are being treated for respiratory ailments.

And now, a new seven-year study suggests the burning may get much worse: The rain forest — even at its pristine core — is dangerously dry and flammable because of logging, deliberate burning around its edges and El Nino. The Associated Press obtained the research this week.

In one test in October, American and Brazilian scientists threw a match on kerosene that had been sprinkled in a small parcel of undisturbed jungle in Paragominas in the eastern Amazon. Normally the moist vegetation wouldn't catch.

But this time, 300 acres went up in flames.

"We're on the edge of a catastrophe," said Daniel Nepstad, a scientist for the Woods Hole Research Center, a Massachusetts-based institute that conducted the research at five test sites across the Brazilian rain forest.

"A lot of the Amazon has lost its capacity to protect itself from fire. When the forest is this dry, small fires can turn into giant ones and take off into primary forests."

Steve Schwartzman, director of the Environmental Defense Fund, said the research shows that the danger to the rain forest "has been taken to another level."

"Suddenly, it's gone from a slow,

Turn to AMAZON, page 2

Liquor advertising to be investigated by FCC panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-five House lawmakers asked the Federal Communications Commission yesterday to open an investigation into liquor advertising on TV and radio.

"We are concerned that left unchecked our nation's airwaves will become flooded with additional messages that drown our children in images of academic and athletic success to be gained by drinking liquor," the lawmakers wrote in a letter to the FCC's new chairman, Bill Kennard.

Last month, Kennard said the issue of what role, if any, the government plays in regulating whiskey and other liquor products deserves serious attention, but he didn't promise to open an inquiry.

To do that, Kennard needs the support of at least three of the FCC's five commissioners. Thus far, only Susan Ness backs opening an inquiry. Ness is a holdover commissioner, and the other four are newly appointed.

The letter spearheaded by Rep. Joe Kennedy (D-Mass.) includes the signatures of three Republicans: Reps. J.C. Watts of Oklahoma, James Hansen of Utah and Michael Castle of Delaware.

The old FCC, under Chairman Reed Hundt, deadlocked on the issue in July, meaning the agency was unable to proceed on an inquiry. Last year the liquor industry abandoned a decades-old policy of not airing liquor ads.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Boxing out

A plethora of boxes placed outside the Munson Hall Annex.

LAUREN KOSKY \ COLLEGIAN

Slip and slide

Students walk on a muddy path by the Campus pond yesterday afternoon.

Blue Cross plans to cut hospital payments

BOSTON (AP) — The Massachusetts Hospital Association yesterday labeled as "unacceptable" a Blue Cross and Blue Shield plan to cut hospital payments as a means of making up for what a new law requires it to pay for uninsured residents, and urged the plan be rescinded.

Blue Cross of Massachusetts pays a portion of the costs hospitals assume for treating patients without insurance. But the company said Tuesday it would divert those payments to a new state pool that has been set up to cover hospital costs for the state's estimated 700,000 uninsured residents. That will effectively cut reimbursements to the hospitals by 5 percent beginning Jan. 1. Massachusetts Hospital Association President Ronald Hollander said the Blue Cross action was "outrageous" and was "intended to undermine the law reforming the uncompensated care pool, flaunt the intent of the Legislature and abandon those who most rely on (reimbursements for uncompensated care): the uninsured."

But Blue Cross said it is simply redirecting the money from the hospitals to the new fund that will be administered by the state Division of Health Care Finance and Policy. The division, in turn, it said, will pay the hospitals.

"In an industry where no one is immune from the aggressive financial targets our market demands, it is difficult to find a solution that balances the interests of providers, payers and the public," said Dale M. Lodge, Blue Cross senior vice president for health services contracting.

Hollander responded that the law establishing the new uncompensated care fund "was based on the principle of shared responsibility among hospitals, business, insurers and government to support the safety net for the uninsured."

He said Blue Cross should do its part and called upon the company to continue making payments at their current level to the hospitals.

While the Blue Cross announcement Tuesday outraged hospitals and irritated legislators, it pleased businesses.

Blue Cross now pays hospitals about $1 billion a year. Based on that, it is obliged to pay about $20 million into the Uncompensated Care pool.

Insurance companies had not paid into that pool, but a law enacted last July requires them to contribute a total of $100 million a year.

Hospitals will pay $215 million a year, and federal and state governments will provide $100 million.

■ Israel

continued from page 1

with either order.

The strike was called because of a dispute with the government over pensions, wage agreements and government plans for privatization. Peretz was also angered by remarks by Neeman earlier this week.

Referring to union activists, Neeman said: "We don't need enemies from outside. We have among us bombs... homemade, exploding bombs."

Peretz rejected Neeman's subsequent apology and the strike went ahead despite an earlier appeal by Weizman to resume negotiations. The strike reportedly cost the Israeli economy $10 million in just the first day, and Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu warned it could scare away foreign investors.

■ mines

continued from page 1

delegates hold roundtable discussions on the next steps — notably raising funds to aid mine victims and clear away the estimated 100 million mines scattered round the world.

"Let us swear to the hundreds of thousands who have been murdered by land mines that we will not turn back," said Chretien, whose government pledged $70 million over five years. "This slaughter must end."

The treaty requires signatories to destroy their stockpiles of mines within four years and remove deployed mines within 10 years. Major holdouts refusing to sign include the United States, Russia, China, Turkey, Iran, Iraq, Libya, India, Pakistan, Egypt, Israel, North Korea, South Korea and Vietnam. Many of these countries sent observers who participated in discussions about mine clearance and other technical issues.

"We're part of this process," Ambassador Karl Inderfurth, the chief U.S. observer, said in an interview. "The United States is in a very special position, and other countries understand that." The United States has said it could sign the treaty only if exemptions were made to protect its troops in Korea and allow continued use of its anti-tank munitions, Inderfurth said Clinton has asked U.S. defense officials to address both these problems with a tentative goal of signing the treaty in 10

■ SGA

continued from page 1

Southwest and Orchard Hill Residential Areas 24 hours a day in an effort to fully utilize the UCard swipe system.

"I told [Housing Services] they were going to face some discontent," Kilbourne said.

A representative from Housing Services will be attending a future Senate meeting to discuss the program further, according to Kilbourne.

■ Amazon

continued from page 1

incremental process of cutting virgin rain forest to a potentially catastrophic situation," he said.

The alarm comes as representatives from more than 150 nations gather in Kyoto, Japan in hopes of finding solutions to global warming, which some scientists say is worsened by the burning of rain forests.

Tropical forests absorb large amounts of carbon dioxide, one of the gases that traps solar heat and is thought to increase global warming. Also, the burning adds to the atmosphere's carbon accumulation.

And this year, the Amazon and other rain forests have been scorched like never before. Burning of Indonesian forests has released as much carbon in 1997 as all fossil fuel emissions in Europe.

"If you put Indonesian burning and Amazon burning together, you'd see that more of the world was on fire in 1997 than ever in recorded history," said Thomas Lovejoy, an ecological consultant at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

Philip Fearnside, an American scientist at Brazil's National Institute for Amazon Research in Manaus, said burning half of the Amazon would release 35 billion tons of carbon into the atmosphere — the equivalent of 6 years' worth of worldwide fossil fuel emissions.

"That'll turn up global warming a notch," he said.

The Woods Hole research is the first hard evidence that suggests the Indonesia scenario may soon be repeated across the Amazon. In October, researchers dug 35-foot shafts into the clay soil of unlogged Brazilian rain forest at five different sites. Several years earlier, they had struck water deposits thick at that depth. This time, nothing.

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS ... YEAH

You know you're good.

Real Good

Here's your chance to shine!

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS • NOW HIRING
STOP BY AND PICK UP AN APPLICATION
113 CAMPUS CENTER

Student Affairs Special Services

UNDERGRADUATE COMMENCEMENT

- Preliminary Information -

The following preliminary information has been prepared to assist seniors and their parents in planning for Undergraduate Commencement.

Date: Sunday, May 24, 1998

Time/Place: 10:30-11:45 am, at McGuirk Alumni Stadium (rain or shine)

Eligibility: To be eligible to participate in the May 1998 Commencement ceremony, a student must pay the "Graduating Fee" and be scheduled for graduation in February 1998, May 1998, or September 1998. Students scheduled for February 1999 graduation who wish to attend the May 1998 ceremony must file a "Petition to Participate in an Earlier Commencement", which is available at the Registrar's Office, 207 Whitmore.

The year of graduation is established by the Registrar's Office. Questions in this regard as well as questions about degree requirements and graduation credits should immediately be referred to the Registrar's Office "Senior Staff," 207 Whitmore, 5-0555.

Listings: Only Seniors of record as of April 1, 1998, will be listed in the Commencement Program book (because of printing deadlines).

If you have a full Privacy Request on file but choose to be listed in the Commencement Program book, you must notify the Dean of Students Office not later than the close of business on March 24, 1998, that you wish to have the "privacy" removed. Otherwise your name will not be listed.

General: There is no Commencement rehearsal. A Commencement Information Brochure will be mailed to seniors and their parents in March. Included will be information about announcements, caps and gowns, disability services, food services, on campus housing, parking and shuttle services, seating for seniors , suggested routing, video tape orders, when and where to assemble, and the yearbook. An update with details about the ceremony will be distributed with caps and gowns (in May) and in one of the last issues of the "Collegian".

Tickets: Tickets are NOT required, and there is no limit on the number of guests you may invite. Guest seating is unreserved.

Housing: Sufficient residence hall space has been reserved on May 23 to accommodate prepaid guests who request this option. Details will be in the brochure.

Student Speaker: Those interested in being considered for Student Speaker are advised to watch for ads in the "Collegian". The deadline for submitting proposals is February 11, 1998. Contact 5-3464 for further information.

Information: Please call the Visitors Center at 545-0306.

Congratulations to all concerned. Good luck with Finals.

Student Affairs Special Services
Student Speaker
Undergraduate Commencement

Is there something you would like to say before graduating? If so, you are invited to submit a proposal for consideration as the Student Commencement Speaker.

Who is Eligible:	Graduating Amherst Campus Senior (Class of 1998).
Subject Matter:	Your proposed speech should be of general interest to graduating seniors as well as to parents and other guests, and address your impressions and experience(s) both academic and extra-curricular.
Format:	Submit approximately three word-processed/typewritten pages, double-spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time. Speeches exceeding this limit will not be considered.
Selection Process:	Authors' names will be deleted (by a non-voting staff person) after which a committee of students (majority), staff, and faculty will review the proposals. Three to five individuals will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March), after which the speaker will be selected.
Deadline:	Wednesday, February 11, 1998, 4:30 p.m.
Submit Proposals To:	Paul R. Appleby, Chair, Student Speaker Selection Committee, 308 Whitmore (545-3464).

Tanglewood director quits after 13 years

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — In the latest resignation at the Tanglewood Music Center, the summer music school's artistic director has quit after 13 years.

Leon Fleisher announced his departure in an angry three-page letter to Boston Symphony Orchestra Conductor Seiji Ozawa and trustees that was released Monday in Baltimore where Fleisher teaches at the Peabody Conservatory.

His departure means three of the top four men have left the prestigious music school run by the BSO since Ozawa dismissed Administrator Richard Ortner last year.

Orchestra spokeswoman Caroline Smedvig said Ozawa did not want to comment on the resignation.

Fleisher, a pianist, conductor and teacher, accused Ozawa, Ellen Highstein, who was recently appointed director of the center by Ozawa, and trustees of "unprofessional, unprincipled, duplicitous and totally self-serving" behavior.

Pianist Gilbert Kalish expressed similar views when he resigned Oct. 29 as chairman of the center's faculty, a post he held for 12 of the nearly 28 years he served on the faculty.

Six other faculty members have also resigned — some in protest — including Gustav Meir, head of the conducting program; Margo Garrett, coordinator of vocal activities; Julius Levine, a bassist; William Purvis, a hornist; Donald MacCourt, a bassoonist; and Joel Krosnick, a cellist.

Krosnick, a member of the Juilliard String Quartet, said that he will fulfill that group's pledge to offer a workshop at the center next summer, but will not serve as a faculty member or chamber music coach.

Ozawa complained about the faculty and its programs and said Boston Symphony players were not fully used as teachers.

Fleisher, Kalish and others did not agree but held a series of meetings last summer about Ozawa's concerns.

Highstein," Fleisher wrote saying he could not do that.

www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Pomp and praise at former Malawi dictator's funeral

By Angus Shaw
Associated Press

LILONGWE, Malawi — Kamuzu Banda, one of Africa's last old-style dictators, was entombed yesterday with military pomp and praise for his fight against colonialism — praise that obscured his three decades of brutal rule.

At least 80,000 people surrounded the tomb in Lilongwe's central Capitol Hill park, watching more with curiosity than emotion as the bronze-and-gold casket arrived on a gun carriage. Soldiers fired a 19-gun salute.

A military band played "Auld Lang Syne," and trumpeters sounded "The Last Post" as the casket was lowered into a stone tomb. Hundreds of supporters waved outstretched hands in a gesture of farewell.

President Bakili Muluzi, who ousted Banda in this Central African nation's first democratic elections in 1994, made only oblique reference to Banda's dictatorship in which thousands of political opponents were killed, tortured or jailed without trial. "He that dies pays all his debts," Muluzi said, quoting from Shakespeare's "The Tempest."

Muluzi, in a brief eulogy during the eight-hour ceremony, said the nation mourned the founding father who led Malawi to independence from Britain in 1964.

"I had no grudges against him. I fought against his system of government under one-party rule," he said.

Muluzi described Banda "as a truly remarkable man" whose fight for independence sent "shock waves and cracks into the colonial empire that ruled this region."

He added that Banda showed statesmanlike qualities when he accepted defeat in the first multiparty elections in 1994 forced by a freeze on Western aid and anti-government riots.

Muluzi ordered a state funeral in recognition of Banda's role as Malawi's founding father and a fighter for freedom in southern Africa.

About 10,000 people, including other African leaders, attended a rain-drenched memorial service outside the cream-and-rose Summer House at a $100 million palace Banda built and used once before his ouster.

Cablevision rents Radio City

By Tim Whitmire
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Cablevision Systems Corp., which already owns most of Madison Square Garden, is taking control of Radio City Music Hall and its famed Rockettes, a source familiar with the negotiations said yesterday.

Cablevision will acquire the theater's current leaseholder, Radio City Productions, and will sign a 25-year lease on the art deco landmark in Rockefeller Center, said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Radio City is best known for its leggy Rockettes dance troupe and popular holiday pageant.

Rockefeller Center's landlord, Tishman-Speyer Properties Inc., will continue to own the 65-year-old theater. But Cablevision, which will operate it through its MSG subsidiary, will invest $25 million in a restoration, the source said. Monthly rent on Radio City reportedly will be about $1 million.

The new Radio City Music Hall lease comes after a year of negotiations, the source said.

Cablevision bought half of Madison Square Garden, home of the New York Knicks and Rangers, in March from partner ITT Corp. as part of ITT's ultimately successful effort to repel a hostile takeover by Hilton Hotels Corp. The price was at least $650 million. The company currently owns 90 percent of the Garden and is negotiating to acquire the rest, said a source familiar with the company, who demanded anonymity.

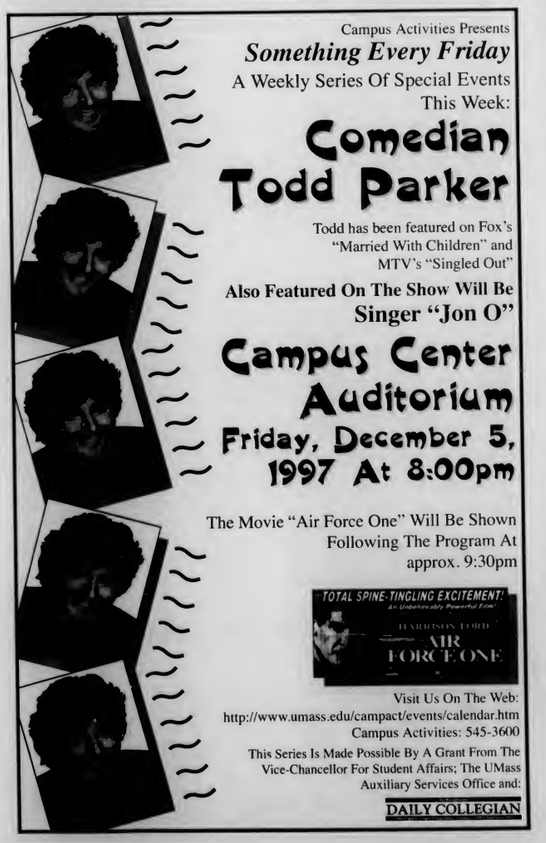
In June, Cablevision announced it would team with Rupert Murdoch and cable's Tele-Communications Inc. to form a national sports network, Fox Sports Net, to compete with ESPN.

Radio City opened on Dec. 27, 1932, and has been a venue for concerts, stage shows and films.

Rockefeller Center, the midtown Manhattan office complex that is anchored by Radio City, has shown profits of $500 million since a new ownership group took over in July 1996, one source said. At the same time, Tishman-Speyer has been working to attract more upscale retailers to the complex.

LAUREN KOSKY \ COLLEGIAN

Two of a kind



A noticed trend seen in the library yesterday afternoon.

Attention all Collegian Staffmembers:

Voting for Spring 1998 Editorial positions will take place today and tomorrow in the Business office from 9 a.m. – 3 p.m. Make sure to fill out a ballot!

Skilled with a camera?

The Collegian photo department is now accepting applications for next semester. Interested photographers should call Ken, Thang, or Lauren at 545–1701 or stop by 113 Campus Center with a portfolio.

Campus Activities Presents
Something Every Friday
A Weekly Series Of Special Events
This Week:

Comedian Todd Parker

Todd has been featured on Fox's "Married With Children" and MTV's "Singled Out"

Also Featured On The Show Will Be Singer "Jon O"

Campus Center Auditorium
Friday, December 5, 1997 At 8:00pm

The Movie "Air Force One" Will Be Shown Following The Program At approx. 9:30pm

Visit Us On The Web:
http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calendar.htm
Campus Activities: 545-3600

This Series Is Made Possible By A Grant From The Vice-Chancellor For Student Affairs; The UMass Auxiliary Services Office and:

DAILY COLLEGIAN

December '97

ARTS ON CAMPUS...

A monthly calendar brought to you by the UMass Arts Council.

Events

Thursday, December 4
THEATER The Who's Tommy 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS. Dec. 4-7, with 2 p.m. matinees on Dec. 6 & 7 only.
DANCE University Dancers in Concert 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS. Dec. 4-6

Friday, December 5
MUSIC Merry Maple Tree Lighting. Minuteman Marching Band, George N. Parks, director and Thomas F. Hannum, associate director. 5:15 p.m. in Amherst Town Common. 545-2227.
COMEDY Todd Parker. Part of the Something Every Friday series. 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. 545-3600.

Saturday, December 6
MUSIC Take 6. 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.
THEATER Mission Improvable (improvisational theater). 8-11 p.m. in Campus Center room #163. 545-5225. Also will be held Dec. 11-13.

Sunday, December 7
MUSIC Jazz Brunch. 11 a.m.-1 p.m., Franklin Dining Commons. 545-2804.
MUSIC Annual Holiday Concert. University Chorale, Richard du Bois, director. 2 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.
MUSIC Opera Gala. Opera workshop, Dorothy Ornest and Steven Coombs, directors. 4 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS. Reception to celebrate Dorothy Ornest's 38 semesters with Opera Workshop to follow concert.

Monday, December 8
LECTURE Ray Bradbury, science fiction writer. 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center. $ 545-3600.

Tuesday, December 9
MUSIC Jazz (And Beyond) for the Holidays! University Jazz Ensemble, Jeffrey Holmes, director. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS

Wednesday, December 10
MUSIC Student Composers Concert. 8:15 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall.

Thursday, December 11
MUSIC December Jazz. Chapel Jazz Ensemble & Jazz Lab Band, David Spomy & Chris Oberholtzer, directors. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

Friday, December 12
MUSIC Young Winds Winter Concert. Youth Wind Ensemble, Neil Freebern, director. 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.
5-College students can attend any Fine Arts Center event for only $5! * funded in part by a grant from the UMass Arts Council

ARTS COUNCIL INFORMATION:

Plan Your Spring Events NOW!

Apply for funding from the Arts Council to support your art event. The Council awards grants to UMass organizations, such as RSO's. Stop by and share your ideas, we'll help you get started... This year's remaining grant application deadlines are:
February 4 and March 11.

Exhibits

AUGUSTA SAVAGE GALLERY* 545-5177
BFA Thesis Exhibitions:
Anthony Loving
Meg Thorton
Dec. 8-12
Opening Reception: Dec. 8, 5-7 p.m.
BFA Thesis Exhibitions:
Patricia Hickey
Susan M. Fontaine
Dec. 15-19
Opening Reception: Dec. 15, 5-7 p.m.

HAMPDEN GALLERY* 545-0680
18th Annual Graduate Group Show
Dec 4-16
Opening Reception: Dec. 4, 4-6 p.m.

HERTER ART GALLERY* 545-0976
MFA Thesis Exhibitions:
Anne Faith LaPrade
Yeon Choi
Dec. 8-12
Opening Reception: Dec. 8, 5-7 p.m.

STUDENT UNION VISUAL & PERFORMING ARTS SPACE* 545-0792
BFA Thesis Exhibitions
Nov. 17-Dec 12
Opening Reception: every Monday at 4:30 p.m.

UNIVERSITY GALLERY* 545-3670
Heroic Painting
Through Dec 14

WHEELER GALLERY* 545-0680
A Collective Visual Portrayal
Nov. 24-Dec. 6
BFA Thesis Exhibition
by Bill Porter
Dec 15-18
Opening Reception: Dec. 15, 5-7 p.m.

12/97

UMass Arts Council, 101 Hasbrouck Lab, 545-0202

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

The doublethink of the '90s

Buy Nothing Day

The Adbusters organization, out of Vancouver, Canada, has produced a commercial that has failed to meet the high standards of our three major networks.

Against the backdrop of a pig, the ad questions overconsumption, calling on consumers to participate in Buy Nothing Day on the day after Thanksgiving. Despite having cash in hand, the ad was rejected by NBC because, in the words of VP Richard Gitter, the ad was "inimical to our legitimate business interests." An understandable reply.

But CBS went even further in a letter rejecting the commercial, announcing that Buy Nothing Day is "in opposition to the current economic policy in the United States." They did not say if criminal penalties would be invoked against nonconsumers. (Wall Street Journal, 11/19)

The "I have a dream" department

Coca-Cola has clearly found a visionary new leader in their new chief executive, M. Douglas Ivester. In his first public speech, Ivester urged his fellow executives to "expand the horizons of our businesses, and the horizons of our thinking."

To demonstrate his point, he told his audience the typical person drinks only four ounces of soft drink out of an average of 64 ounces of liquids per day. "That still leaves our industry," said Ivester, "with 60 ounces to go after. Put another way — we're only tapping four 64ths of the opportunity."

Such utter waste. And what a sense of mission. Can't you see thousands of Coke employees dreaming of leading the way to a world where the remaining 60 ounces have been reclaimed from the clutches of milk, fruit juice, water and lattes? (Associated Press, 11/9)

The muckraking press

Popular magazines are finding a sure way to produce quality feature stories on Hollywood celebrities. They let them pick their own writers.

The Wall Street Journal reports that magazines now routinely let major stars veto questions, topics and reporters who "look for the bad news," as Good Housekeeping editor Ellen Levine so delicately puts it. Critics claim this results in celebrity puff pieces that are just cogs in the culture industry's marketing plans.

But Vanity Fair editor Graydon Carter has a good retort. He says, "You can only have so many tough things in an issue and I think it's foolish to waste it on an actor." We are still waiting to discover what constitutes a "tough thing" for Vanity Fair. (Wall Street Journal, 11/18)

Do it yourself spy kits

Is productivity lagging at your company? Well, ABC Asia Pacific may have the answer. Spy cameras sell for only $2,200 apiece and for a limited time only, you can actually buy one and get the second free. Says CEO Jeffrey Tan, "Productivity really does go up with this system. You see a very quick return on your investment in any business."

Not only will installing the "Spy Eyes" system act as a deterrent to theft, but Mr. Tan reports it can help managers see if employees are really working and to "reduce unjustified management complaints."

This is bound to make it popular with workers. Summing up, Tan says, "It's a helpful tool for people who want to stay in control." Sounds like it should prove even more popular with executives and dominatrixes. (Reuters, 11/21)

"Come let us reason together"

For years, the management of the Los Angeles Times had talked about adding a weekly personal health section. Nothing happened until advertising VP Robert Brisco spoke the magic words: "You know we've been getting all these HMO ads."

And presto, there was a health section. Such is life under the stewardship of Times Mirror CEO and former baby food tycoon Mark Wiles, who has turned ad executives like Brisco into "partners" with news editors.

Individual news sections are being designed from the beginning by the marketing and news departments (or partners) and are expected to show a profit. The process is known as "streamlining cooperation," a phrase chosen over the more pejorative "selling out." (New York Times, 11/17)

Privatizing censorship

After efforts to censor the Internet via the government fell short, private industry has stepped in to fill the breach. Four of the largest search engines have agreed to "self-regulation."

"Censorship is being contracted out," says attorney Robert Corn-Revere. Taking the lead is Lycos, which has "thrown down the gauntlet" to other search engines to block sites that provide adult content or who refuse to agree to provide ratings of their contents.

The latter would be a crime under a bill introduced by Sen. Patty Murray, aptly named the "On-line Cooperative Publishing Act." Under it, sites discussing sexual issues would simply become invisible to search engines whether they "cooperated" or not. Fortunately it's not censorship because it's not the government doing it. (ACLU Press Release, 11/5)

Wayne Grytting is a syndicated columnist. More American Newspeak can be found on the Internet at http://www.scn.org/newspeak.

American Newspeak
Wayne Grytting

The price of fame

Sone girl at Time-Out last year asked me what it was like to be famous. I said I didn't know, but I'd tell her when I got there.

Yes, I'll never see her again (which, believe me, isn't a bad thing), but she gave me an idea for a story.

Ladies and gentlemen, a semi-treasured nugget from the back of my head, one that has brewed since last spring. (Think of this as a B-side, like "Yellow Ledbetter").

But then, I'm no Eddie Vedder.

Luke Meredith

Neither is pop-culture icon Kevin Bacon. Mr. Bacon, star of such hits as "The Big Picture," "Tremors" and the vastly underrated "He Said. She Said" (for which he should have won an Oscar), can be connected to everyone on the planet within six references.

But Kevin Bacon, though a legend, is not alone. We all know famous people. Or know people who know famous people. Or know people who know people who once met famous people.

My connections might be a bit odd.

I'll start off with my friend Jen. Jen goes to Michigan St. She e-mailed me with the news she went to the Michigan St.—Penn. St. game last week with none other than...

Chris Webber's brother.

Apparently "Little Webber" (which is what he is to those in the know) is currently matriculating at "State" (which is what MSU is called to those in the know).

But it gets better.

This summer Jen met my friend Ethan.

Anyway, Ethan has a dad named Fox. Fox writes for the New York Times, and has special glasses for his many TV appearances. Fox writes books. I once did a paper on Fox. (I got a C.) Long story.

Ethan knows a kid named Travis. Travis, well, Travis doesn't know anybody. Except...

Pat. Pat lives in Kansas, but grew up in Chicago, down the street from...

Fred Savage. They're good friends. Pat also is an actor, and stood in the background during a pivotal scene in last week's "Baywatch." Pat lived this summer in L.A. with our other friend D.J.

D.J. (no relation to P.J.) is a stand-up comedian. Rumor has it he is opening a show for...

Famed neurotic Richard Lewis.

D.J. knows Ian (of the Maryland Ians). Ian used to be a baseball star when he was little. (But hey, weren't we all?) He used to play baseball a lot, and was good friends with a kid down the street by the name of...

Tony Saunders, number one pick of the expansion Tampa Bay Devil Rays.

Saunders used to pitch for the Braves, who once faced the Blue Jays in the World Series. The Blue Jays once had a right fielder named...

George Bell. I know George Bell.

In the summer of 1987, George Bell was playing right field for the Toronto Blue Jays, and making an assault on the record books. P.J. took me to Fenway Park to see a Red Sox game, and George Bell started signing autographs. I'm in line with every kid from Melrose to Chelsea, clamoring for a piece of Bell. When I finally get to him, he looks at me, fresh off a signing tirade that left every kid in the park clutching his signature, and said, "If I have to sign for you, I have to sign for everybody."

I said "But George, you already have signed for everybody."

But George was off to right field, shagging fly balls (probably dropped half of them).

I myself have met a few famous people in my time. I once met "Rowdy" Roddy Piper at the Lawrence YMCA. I once walked by Grant Hill in an airport. I once showed the drummer from Extreme where the peanut butter was at Shaw's in Salem, N.H. (oh, jobs in high school).

Now that I think back, I think I know what I should have said to that girl at Time-Out. I should have told her the George Bell story.

Maybe she knew him.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Letters to the Editor

Carlin responds to editorial

To the Editor:

I am fascinated by how totally dedicated the academic community is to freedom of speech as long as they agree with what's being said.

Bring up a subject such as tenure, increased faculty tenure, more judicious research and it appears that freedom of expression ends... and the reaction is "step down."

Interestingly, nobody asked any of us on the Board of Higher Education to "step down" as we supported the two best higher education budgets in decades, the locating of Commonwealth College on University of Massachusetts Amherst campus, raising admissions standards, the endowment incentive matching program, providing over $1 million of scholarships to valedictorians and salutatorians from our state's high schools, a multimillion dollar capital expansion bond bill, tens of millions of dollars for short- term repairs and maintenance on our campuses and for technology improvements... I could go on and on.

I got a telephone call yesterday from a member of the Massachusetts Legislative leadership who, upon reading your editorial, offered to file a bill in the next session to grant me tenure as Chairman of the Board of Higher Education. An interesting thought.

James F. Carlin
Chairman of the Board of Higher Education
Natick

America is like a very bad actor

To the Editor:

I would like to make some remarks regarding Michael Colin and Steve Barg's letters to the editor (Nov. 21). Coming from Egypt, my views, though different from those of the two writers, may help shed some light on the issues in question (U.S. policy in the Mideast, Iraq and Israel).

Mr. Colin is surprised that Christine Soh, the Collegian's Multicultural Affairs editor, refers to the idea that the "issues surrounding Israel are heavily ignored by the Western and American press."

What Mr. Colin didn't want to speak frankly about, and what Ms. Soh was referring to, is why Israel's brutal acts against the Palestinians, its blockage of the peace process, its nuclear weapons and its U.S.-supported defiance of U.N. resolutions for almost 50 years now are ignored by the Western and American press. Why, every Arab asks, does the U.S. close its eyes (which are wide open at Iraq) to the nuclear weapons in Israel?

I also believe that Ms. Soh's point that the U.S. press offers "only generalizations and distortions" is absolutely right. This is not confined to the Iraqi issue but is quite applicable to the Arab world, to give one example. Who is responsible, if not the Western and American press, for portraying Arabs solely as a host of militant Islamists and crazy terrorists?

In Culture and Imperialism, Edward W. Said quotes an article from the Winter 1990-91 issue of Foreign Affairs magazine. The article says Saddam Hussein "came from a brittle land, a frontier country between Persia and Arabia, with little claim to culture and books and grand ideas." As Said says, the article perfectly encapsulates the sorry state of knowledge and power that gave rise to Operation Desert storm. The writer doesn't know that even school children are aware that Iraq was the seat Abbasid civilization, the highest flowering Arab culture between the ninth and 12th centuries. Abbasid civilization produced works of literature still read as Shakespeare, Dante and Dickens are still read. As a capital city, Baghdad is also one of the greatest monuments of Islamic art. To imply that Iraq and its citizens had no relation to books and great ideas, says Said, is to be amnestac about Sumer, Hammurabi, Assyria, and all the great monuments of ancient Mesopotamian civilization, whose cradle Iraq is. This is but one example of the American press's arbitrary "generalizations and distortions" of the reality of "others."

In his letter, Mr. Barg is angry about the "degrading expressions" used by Hussein Ibish. Are you joking, Mr. Barg? Ibish describes America as "American Empire," Benjamin Netanyahu as "Israeli chieftain," Richard Butler as "uncouth," etc. What kind of language, Mr. Barg, is used by the American government and press when talking about the Iraqis? Doesn't this language "belittle opponents"? And what kind of language, Mr. Barg, is expected from an angry person defending his people who are heavily opprcssed, belittled and misrepresented?

To establish a new government in Iraq is nobody's business but the Iraqi people's. It's a simple matter of sovereignty. Mr. Barg sounds quite American when he writes: "It's the U.N.'s and America's responsibility to make sure that Iraq is not given another military opportunity to attack another country." Again, are you joking? What kind of language is that — don't you think it sounds imperialistic?

If the U.N. has the right to do its job, what on earth gives America the right to usurp the role the U.N. should play? America, believe me, is exactly like a very bad actor who has, by sheer force, occupied the stage and is trying to force the audience to enjoy the monotonous and sickening show it tirelessly performs every day and night.

Many Americans, I believe, need to be un-American to know about the lies sold to them by the American government every day.

Shabban Mikkawy
Amherst

Guilt is essential to spirituality

To the Editor:

I would like to respond to Joe Sullivan's column ("Faith no more," Nov. 25). As an undergraduate student at UMass some 18 years ago, I can identify with the desire for spiritual nourishment that Mr. Sullivan describes and with his feeling of frustration at the Sunday vigil Mass he attended at St. Brigid's parish in downtown Amherst.

It is an unfortunate fact of life that not every Mass is a Christmas banquet and not every community gathered at Mass will be comfortable for each person in attendance.

The Catholic community at UMass worships at the Newman Center at 472 North Pleasant Street. There are several Masses offered each Sunday. The most popular with students is the 7 p.m. Mass on Sunday evening. It is common to have 600 students gathered for worship; Mr. Sullivan is likely to find many he would consider his peers. He is also likely to find many of them share his struggle with questions of spirituality, such as "Who am I?," "Who is God for me?" and "What is my relationship with God and other people?"

The Newman Center is a very large facility on campus that walks with students, Catholic and otherwise, as they probe these questions. Each person's journey to faith will have its own unique blessings and challenges that require a unique and individual response. I wish Mr. Sullivan many blessings on his personal journey.

One aspect of Mr. Sullivan's column requires special comment. He desires spirituality without guilt, which in my experience is no spirituality at all. Healthy guilt is what impels a person to growth in relationship with God.

My own relationship with God has taken many twists and turns for the past 18 years after UMass. I am now a student in a Catholic seminary preparing to become a Catholic priest. I would encourage every student to investigate their relationship with God as deeply and thoroughly as they can, and to use the resources that are on campus to assist them on their journeys.

John J. Gawienowski
GauchoJJG@aol.com
class of '80

your can also read the Collegian on-line at www.umass.edu/rso/colegian ... check it out

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Christopher Stamm Editor-in-Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatikar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sumanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Rodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

'TIS THE SEASON TO BE SHOPPING

THE GIVING SEASON

Emily Trask

Over-crowded stores, no parking spaces, long lines, miserable sales people, stressful family get-togethers, and rude shoppers, unfortunately these aspects have become all too familiar representations of the season that once used to epitomize hope and good will toward man.

We spend many long and miserable hours in search of the perfect gifts, which will probably end up being returned anyway. It seems that we have been trapped in a vicious commercially-driven cycle, propelled by greed and selfishness, which keeps us from seeing the true meaning of the holiday season.

While most of us are caught up in our own holiday nightmares, there are many among us whose lives, all year long, are filled with the prospect of hunger, homelessness, and despair.

Here is a list of local charities that are desperately in need of supplies for the holiday season. Each organization has indicated their need for specific items.

The Amherst Survival Center has asked for food, both perishable and non-perishable, possibly items for holiday dinners. Due to the cold weather, there is a large demand for warm hats, large jackets, warm socks, mittens, gloves, scarves, blankets, large male clothing and shoes. Items can be dropped off

Turn to GIVING, page 8

INDULGING THE TASTE BUDS

Sending holiday cards is convenient, but admit it, they eventually get thrown away. Giving flowers is nice, but admit it, after a few days they wither and die. Morbid, eh?

But, food remains... for at least a week or so under proper storage and refrigeration, and a few months in the freezer, if you're lucky.

As my friends and associates know already, when I want to show my immense appreciation for times well spent, and for a two-way respect that goes beyond the normal every day, I give food.

And, there is no better time to give food than the holidays.

Whether it is a full blown four-course meal for a group of special people in your life (I do something like Caesar salad, risotto, pasta primavera and chocolate-covered strawberries for dessert), or if it is something as simple as cookies or my favorite Finnish Apple Pie (apples dredged in brandy with walnuts and raisins) for one or two close friends, food is something that transcends time and space, and I give it as much as possible.

Jorma Kansinen

Truthfully, do you remember the card you received from Aunt Betty a few years ago? You know you don't...

However, do you remember Aunt Betty's pumpkin-cheese cake — or maybe her triple-layer German chocolate cake — she brought over to your house a few years ago?

You know you do, and you'll beg her over and over to cook it again.

If you're a semi-experienced cook, go with the meal deal.

You don't have to go wild, but a simple salad, maybe some garlic bread (or any bread), a pasta dish (because everybody is

Turn to FOOD, page 12

TAKING THE STRESS OUT OF HOLIDAY SHOPPING

The season of December and I have a fun relationship.

I love the lights, the decorations, the idea of celebrating the holidays with loved ones, but I hate the idea of shopping.

The whole idea of shopping for holiday snacks blatantly commercialism and kind of takes away from the magic warm fuzzy feeling of the holidays.

But, since shopping is a big part of the holiday season, you'll just have to suck that stiff upper lip and join the mall shop with the rest of America.

Shopping for gifts is stressful, and the throng of people clamoring up Toys R Us or The Gap don't help that headache much. Here are a few tips to make that shopping trip a little easier to take.

Seema Gangatikar

Make a list — Retailers like to jack the prices up during the mad holiday frenzy, since consumers are willing to pay up to $40 for a $30 toy. To avoid falling into the trap of paying too much money for a gift because you can't think of anything else, make a list in advance. That way you know exactly what you want and what your maximum budget is. Making a list also cuts down on the amount of time you spend shopping for the actual item.

Gift certificates — Not sure about the gift to get or which CD to buy? Most clothing and restaurants offer gift certificates so you can buy exactly what you want.

Wear comfortable shoes — Active-

WHAT SHE REALLY WANTS FOR CHRISTMAS

Tamar Carroll

Alright, it's that time of the year again! Time to pick out the best gifts ever for the special women in your life. Don't panic — I'll make it easy for you this year. Choose a few suggestions off the following list, and you'll be safe from gift purgatory.

What does she really want for Christmas? Here goes:

Something fun — Yes, you heard me, get her something fun. Choose something that will bring out the little kid in her personality and get her smiling and laughing. Need some specifics? Head to a toy store or the children's section of a book store and try to imagine what would most appeal to her. How about a box of bright crayons and a coloring book? A new water gun? Maybe a pair of roller skates? You get the idea — nothing serious or uptight in this group. One caveat: the gift should be fun for her — no remote controlled cars or war games unless she's really into them.

Something sexy — Whoa, I'm not necessarily suggesting black lingerie here. The idea is to give her something that will make her feel sexy by appealing to her senses. A fuzzy sweater, very soft gloves, or her favorite scent are all possibilities.

Something good to eat (or drink) — No, we don't live on bread and wine alone, but we do enjoy a really great meal when it comes our way. If you're lucky, the women in your life enjoy as wide a variety of fine food and drink as this woman does, making your shopping easy as pie. A box of really good chocolates, a nice bottle of wine, or dinner at her favorite restaurant are great choices. As always, keep her tastes in mind — vegetarians will not appreciate a steak dinner and cheesecake will not be a good choice for the lactose intolerant.

Something practical — I know this sounds boring, but a strategic gift could win you points all year. Case in point: my dad's gift of Triple A seemed staid at first glance, but when my radiator leaked all over Route 95, I was never more grateful for a gift. That Leatherman he gave me actually comes in pretty handy, too. Remember, random household appliances do not fall into this category — make sure your gift will really be useful to her, and you will have succeeded in your mission.

Turn to HER, page 7

GIFT IDEAS FOR HIM

Casey Kane

Does this Christmas list look familiar: gotta get presents for Dad, a brother or two, your boyfriend, Grandpa, maybe some assorted uncles and some guy friends. A lot to handle, especially if you haven't got a clue what's on a guy's wish list this holiday season.

Well, don't worry. We are here to help with our random assortment of potential gifts for guys.

If there is a college, high school or junior high school-age guy on your list, there two chances (slim and none) he wouldn't want a video game system. PlayStation, Sega Genesis and Nintendo 64 all top the list of arcade-action favorites. But, if your wallet can't take such a Super Mario hit, try a video game. Priced around $50 apiece, there is sure to be a game for any guy on your list.

If you want to purchase any CDs or tapes. Keep in mind that music tastes, like personalities, vary, so make sure you do a little sleuthing to find out his musical preferences (i.e. Dad may not love that Sublime CD as much as you do).

Of course, there are other options in the area of electronics: two-head VCRs are priced around $100, if your sweetie has his eye on that; or electric razors or beard trimmers, because your brother has to look distinguished for the office.

If electronic devices are not your thing, well how about clothes? I'm

Turn to HIM, page 7

Turn to SHOPPING, page 12

Tommy opens tonight in S.U.B.

By Emily Trask
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Theatre Guild and University Productions and Concerts will present the legendary rock opera Tommy in the Student Union Ballroom tonight through Saturday at 8 p.m. and on Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m.

"It is about Tommy, who is a deaf, dumb and blind pinball wizard and messiah," said Michael Hickok, the co-light designer and cast-member of Tommy. "It takes you into Tommy's mind, which is his world, where he lives."

Tommy, who is played by Rob O'Brien, is deaf, dumb and blind because of a traumatic childhood experience. Although he still possesses some of his perceptions, he has no way of overtly expressing himself. His struggle to express the feelings and thoughts that are in his head is chronicled through the rock opera, but these perceptions affect the reality of the show, so that nothing is what it seems.

"It questions our perceptions of reality, especially of good and evil and the gray areas in between," said director Michael Dziura.

"See me, hear me, touch me, heal me," the most famous lines from the rock opera, and have been plastered all over the UMass campus, are the words of Tommy's older self in an attempt to cry out to other people to heal his younger self and vice versa. Eventually, Tommy splits into two characters.

"I love it. I feel like all of my theater experience has been leading up to this show. I have always wanted to direct Tommy," added Dziura.

Tommy is a huge show with a full rock band and loads of lights. As the Guild's musical production of the semester, Tommy promises to be a mind-blowing, cathartic, loud, rocking experience for the audience. The stage of the auditorium has been extended into the boundaries of the audience in an attempt to bring the audience face to face with the action of the show.

"It will take the audience through dark depths and then bring them back again, taking them full circle," said Hickok. Both cast and crew are hoping to fill the 450-seat auditorium of the Student Union.

Conceived and developed by Pete Townshend and Kit Lambert, the Theatre Guild took a lot of liberty with its production of Tommy.

"It is different than any of the other productions that have been done," said Dziura. "It's a great show, everyone should come see it."

Tickets for this show are $5 for senior citizens and UMass students. Tickets for the general public are $7. Tickets are available at Tix Unlimited at 545-0412 and Northampton Box Office at (413) 586- 8686. For more information call UPC at 545-2892 or UMTG at 545-0415. This show is sponsored in part by the Massachusetts Collegian.

Ric Ocasek keeps on driving

By David Bauder
Associated Press

NEW YORK — His wife undoubtedly disagrees, but Ric Ocasek is not the most huggable of personalities.

Tall and lanky, his angular features have only recently softened with age. He favors black in his leather jackets, hair and sunglasses. Polite and personable in private conversation, he rarely speaks from the stage.

And no matter how engaging the melodies, Ocasek's music as a solo artist and with the Cars is best known for its icy, metallic sheen and deadpan vocals. Warm is never the adjective that comes to mind.

"That was the intention with the Cars. We tried to be cold," he said. "If we couldn't be over the top, we wanted to be under the top."

Now, he sees a surly band like Oasis has made it "cool to be cold again."

That may put Ocasek in the right place at the right time. Stocked with players from young, alternative rock bands, Ocasek's fifth solo album is higher energy and higher volume than much of his work.

Yet the songs themselves could fit comfortably on any of the albums he's made through the years, ones that produced such hits as "You Might Think," "Let's Go" and "Shake It Up."

"I have the strong sense that these are all chapters in the same book," he said. "You're getting the 15th chapter of it."

Ocasek had been concentrating on producing other people's music over the past couple of years when Columbia sought him out as an artist.

He convened players from Hole, Nada Surf and Bad Religion, bands with whom he's worked with over the years. Former Cars keyboardist Greg Hawkes also came along, and Smashing Pumpkin Billy Corgan — whose cover of the Cars' "You're All I've Got Tonight" is one of Ocasek's favorites — also participated in sessions.

Despite his own production experience, Ocasek gave Corgan control of the knobs for five songs. The two met after Ocasek attended a Smashing Pumpkins show and became friends.

The title, Troublizing, is Ocasek's made-up word to describe the album's theme. "It's kind of about people's troubles, but it takes a funny look at them," he said.

Hole bass player Melissa Auf Der Maur may be the most intriguing participant. She asked to add her vocals and the result, particularly on the song, "Hang on Tight," lends the project a certain playfulness. The tune is the album's high point, the one that best marries Ocasek's knack for catchy melodies and edgy arrangements.

Auf Der Maur's vocals are a counterpoint to short, clipped verses of the typical Ocasek song. A fan of poetry who has written a couple of books of verse, he likes phrases that leave an impression but not necessarily a lasting image: "It's the velvet circus in your head," and "Tinkertoy me into tears."

Ocasek said he likes books that he can pick up and start reading from somewhere in the middle, which tends to rule out most fiction and narratives. It's no surprise his songs, bereft of confessional lyrics and stories, fit the same pattern. That's one of the reasons why the public knows little about Ocasek, despite his status as one-half of a celebrity couple in a celebrity-obsessed time. He's married to supermodel Paulina Porizkova.

"You may not find out about my life, but you find out how I feel about life," he said of his writing.

want experience?

Adobe Illustrator 6.0 Adobe Photoshop 4.0

power mac 8600•zip drives•syquest 88/66 •film scanner•flat bed scanner•cd burner•quark xpress

Adobe illustrator, photoshop, pagemaker, acrobat, dimensions•freehand•netscape•page mail•over 700 fonts...

GET SOME!

if you're a design student looking for professional industry experience and want to work with the top equipment and software then look no further. the collegian graphics department is now hiring advertising designers for spring '98. anyone interested is welcome to stop by our office at 103 campus center and fill out an application.

QuarkXPress

internet site

Live New York Radio on Internet

Hip Hop Shop .com

Your Source for Hip Hop Community Interest. Your Fashion on the Internet

Now Hiring Students - E-mail us www.hiphopshop.com

IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL
20 Center St. Northampton

ALL AGES
ALL THE TIME

thursday, december 4, 8:30 pm
Strangefolk
soulful, roots-oriented groove rock, $10 adv.

friday, december 5, 7 pm
Voices of Winter
Anne Hills, Priscilla Herdman & Cindy Mangsen folk's three best voices, $17.50 adv.

friday, december 5, 10 pm
Percy Hill
the Granite State's top groovesters, $8 adv.

saturday, december 6, 10 pm
Jazz Mandolin Project
toothy jazz grooves, $8 adv.

sunday, december 7, 9 pm
Moxy Fruvous
smart, fun and tongue-in-cheek, $11 adv.

tuesday, december 9, 7 pm
Robert Bradley's Blackwater Surprise
plus Colony, $8 adv.

wednesday, december 10, 7 pm
Eric Burdon's I Band
the original rock 'n roll Animal, $17.50 adv.

friday, december 12, 10 pm
2 Skinnee J's
[illegible], $6 adv.

DECEMBER 13: ABDUL BAKI & NEW ROOTS

TICKETS: For the Record, at the Northampton Box Office or call 586-8686.

24-HOUR CONCERT INFO: 413 584 0610

amc
There is a Difference!
Silence is Golden. No child under 6 in any PG 13 or R rated film after 6pm.
Mt. Farms 4 •584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall

Jackal (R)
Today - Thurs. at (5:40) , 8:30
Starship Troopers (R)
Today -Thurs at (5:40), 8:30
Rainmaker (PG13)
Today -Thurs at (5:40), 8:20
Allen: Resurrection (R)
Today - Thurs at (5:50), 8:40

Hampshire 6 •584-7550
Hampshire Mall

Bean (PG 13)
Today -Thurs at (5:50)
Anastasia (G)
Today -Thurs at (5:40), 8:40
Flubber (PG)
Today - Thurs at (5:30), 8:30
Midnight In the Garden of Good and Evil (R)
Today - Thurs at (5:10), 8:20
Mortal Combat: Annihilation (R)
Today -Thurs at (5:30), 8:30
Boogie Nights (R)
Today -Thurs at (5:20), 8:20
The Man Who Knew Too Little (PG)
Today -Thurs at 8:40

$2.00 (Tue Last) Matinee Daily — Special Engagements by Popular Demand

Interested in a Challenging and Exciting Career that will put your Social Concerns into Action?

Consider a career in Clinical Social Work . . .

To find out more, attend the
Smith College School for Social Work

INFORMATION DAY

Saturday, December 6, 1997
2:00 p.m.
Wright Hall Auditorium
Smith College

For more information, call (413) 585-7960.

NOW HIRING
ALL SHIFTS
COMPETITIVE WAGES

• Flexible schedule around classes
• Monday, Wednesday, Friday Shifts
• Tuesday, Thursday Shifts
• Discounted Meals
• Enjoyable Work Atmosphere
• Advancement Opportunities

BURGER KING®

Join the Burger King® Team Today!
You will be working for people who really care about you as an individual.

Apply Within
353 Russell Street (Route 9) • Hadley, MA

Scott's LIQUORS
Thank You For Your Patronage
OPEN SUNDAYS 12-6p.m.
Tott's Champagne $4.49/750 ml
15% OFF Any 6 Bottles of Wine (sale items excluded)
We want to be your Favorite Liquor Store
549-2692
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst

$hop Scott's & $ave Lot$!
Happy Holidays

Ice House	30 packs	$11.99 +dep
Bud Ice	30 packs	$14.99 +dep
Busch & Busch Light	Bar Bottles	$9.99 +dep
Magic Hat	6 packs	$5.99 +dep
Long Trail	6 packs	$5.49 +dep
Guinness Stout	6 packs	$6.49 +dep
Cider Jack	6 packs	$4.99 +dep
• Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials •
Captain Morgan	1.75 Liter	$17.49
Absolut Citron	750 ml	$13.99
Cisco	750 ml	$2.99
E&J Cask & Cream	750 ml	$9.99
• Quantity discounts always available •

Tele-Check for your personal check

■ him

continued from page 5

Fight the cold with an easy French stew

It's cram time. Thanksgiving break is over, the leftovers are gone, it's cold outside and finals are coming up. My remedy for this syndrome is to make a large crock of a warm, filling, satisfying and comforting stew that lifts the spirits and recharges the brain.

The Cassoulet is one of my favorite preparations of this kind of dish. It originated in the Southwest of France in the region known as Languedoc. The three towns that make up this "fertile crescent" of cold weather gastronomy also claim responsibility for the creation of the infamous French Onion Soup. They also compete with the Germans for the title of best Sauerkraut makers.

The classic version of Cassoulet calls for the use of three or four different kinds of meats including a duck or goose confit (brined, cooked in its own fat and then preserved in the cooking fat), pork (usually roasted) and lamb. These meats are mixed together with white beans that were cooked in an aromatic broth and then served in a crock with a crispy, well- seasoned, bread crumb crust.

This Dormroom version uses readily available substitutes for many of the more esoteric ingredients and cuts out about three days worth of preparation without sacrificing the essence of the dish. This is a great meal for making on a

DORMROOM GOURMET
by
Louis Davis

Sunday and feeding yourself all week long. Or, bring this to a pot-luck or a tail-gaiter, feed an army and be a star!

As always: whenever and wherever you're cooking, think safety (and flavor) first. Always have a fire extinguisher close by and be sure to provide for proper ventilation. Rock and boil!

Louie's Kickin' Cassoulet

Ingredients:
- 2 Tbs. olive oil
- 1/4 lb. smoked bacon (roughly chopped)
- 2/3 cup flour
- 1 Tbs. black pepper
- 1 Tbs. salt
- 1 1/2 tsp. dried thyme
- 1 1/2 tsp. dried tarragon
- 1 1/2 tsp. dried marjoram
- 1 tsp. dried oregano
- 1 tsp. dried rosemary
- 1 tsp. dried savory
- 1 tsp. fennel seeds
- 2 bay leaves, ground into a fine powder
- 1 1/2 lbs. boneless chicken thighs cut into 2" cubes
- 2 large onions (or 4 small) chopped into a medium dice (about 1/4" squares)
- 1 large carrot (or 2 small) chopped into a medium dice
- 8 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 stalk celery, chopped into a medium dice
- 1 large kielbasa (or other similar sausage) chopped into 1" cubes
- 1 1/2 lbs. boneless smoked pork butt (or Canadian bacon) cut into 1/4" by 1/4" by 2" strips
- 3 cans white beans (cannellini, kidney or navy)
- 3 cans chicken broth (or 5 cups bouillon)
- 2 cups bread crumbs
- 4 Tbs. olive oil
- Salt & pepper to taste

Procedure:

1) In a large stock pot over a burner set to medium heat, add olive oil and bacon and cook, stirring often, until the fat has been rendered (leached out) from the bacon, and it just starts to turn brown and crispy. Remove the bits and reserve for later. Turn up the heat to high.

2) In a large shallow bowl, combine the flour with all of the herbs and spices and mix well. Add the chicken pieces to the bowl and toss them around with a fork until they are all completely coated with the spiced flour. Remove the chicken from the bowl while gently shaking off the excess coating. Reserve the remaining flour mixture for later use.

3) Add the chicken to the pot (without crowding it in the pan) and allow to brown, turning each piece to cook evenly. When done, remove from the pan, allow to drain on paper towels and reserve in the fridge.

4) Add the onions to the pan and cook for about 7 minutes, stirring often, until brown (caramelized, not burnt!). Add the carrots and cook for 5 more minutes. Then add the garlic and the celery and stir while cooking for another 3 minutes. Now sprinkle the reserved flour-spice mixture into the pan and stir well for another 2-3 minutes (by doing this, you are taking a short-cut to creating a "roux"

Turn to GOURMET, page 8

What's that you say? You have a sports fan, but can't afford the $200 Mo Vaughn jersey. Why not look into the possibility of getting him some sports tickets. This versatile gift can fit just about any price range (the Celtics have seats, albeit not great ones, for only $10 apiece) and time frame (if, say, your family is going away for the holiday, you can catch a hockey game when you get back).

And of course, if all your ideas are missing the bulls-eye with your athletic guy, he'll be sure to love a subscription (or renewal) to Sports Illustrated, or any of the other magazine of interest. Remember though (lights should be flashing and bells should be ringing) SI is the one with the swimsuit issue.

But wait, what if the man on your list prefers home improvement shows to NBA action? Not to worry. There are countless reasonably-priced construction items out there that will tickle his fancy. Check out Sears and their Craftsman line or places like Home Depot. Stay away from the advanced stuff (no buzz saws) for the rookie repairman, otherwise shop away and you'll have that guy fixing everything in sight faster than he can say "Bob Vila, get a load of me." A little hint, you can find all inclusive tool sets (screwdriver, wrench, hammer, etc.) that would be great for an apartment-bound college guy (or girl).

Other gifts that could find their way into your shopping basket: watches or jewelry (chains and the like); for the kid or the young at heart, check out toy stores for action figures or board games; and the traditional gift certificate (great if you are not sure about a particular guy's tastes).

There is no guarantee that you will find a cure-all to your Christmas shopping blues in this short list, but it might help get you started. Just remember, don't wait until Dec. 24 to get started, or those guys will all end up with socks and fruitcakes.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

■ her

continued from page 5

Something indulgent — Find out what she loves, and give it to her. Even better, give her lots of it. The adventuress might love ski passes or a weekend trip to the mountains. CD's, posters or other paraphernalia from her favorite band(s) are sure to please the music lover. Concert tickets are one step better. The latest hardcover from her favorite author or a print from her favorite artist — just make sure you take the time to find out some of her true loves in life, and you can't go wrong.

Now you're prepared: get set, ready and shop! (She'll love you for it!)

Tamar Carroll is a Collegian staff member.

Compaq Presario 1090ES Notebook
• 150MHz Pentium® processor
• 16MB RAM (expandable to 48MB)
• 1.4GB hard drive
• 11.3" Dual-Scan SVGA flat-panel display
• 128-bit Accelerated Graphics
• Internal 33.6K modem
• Internal 14X Max CD-ROM
• PremierSound Audio System
• Network-ready (Ethernet PC Card)
• Comprehensive software bundle for school and home
• Three-year limited warranty (carry in, pick up)²

HEY, IT'S THE WINTER BREAK.
(SAVE $400. NOW $1,799.*)

Just beyond your stack of classwork is a well-deserved holiday. What better time for something thor'll moke next year easier? With the Compaq Presario 1090ES, you con download photos off the Web, grab facts from the CD encyclopedia, drop them into your repart and e-mail it to your professor. And at only 7.3 pounds, you con do it ot school, at home, even ot the pizza shop. But while Compaq sells more computers thon ony other company on earth, this offer is not long for the world. It's good only until December 31, 1997 or while supplies last.

TO ORDER YOUR OWN CALL 1-888-215-8872 M-F 7-7 (CST); Sat 9-3 (CST)
For more information, visit your campus computer store.

COMPAQ
www.compaq.com/education

intel inside
pentium

■ giving

continued from page 5

at 1200 N. Pleasant St., N. Amherst, in the basement of the brick schoolhouse.

The Helen Mitchell Family Outreach Program has indicated a need for slightly used, but preferably new toys for children of all ages, which will be distributed to low income families. Toys can be dropped off Dec. 17–18, at the Lutheran Church.

The Amherst Shelter For Adolescents is in desperate need of frozen orange juice and other fruit juices for children. Also needed are socks and underwear for boys and girls, as well as bras for adolescent girls. The shelter is located at 685 West St., Amherst.

The Food Bank of Western Massachusetts is need of food items that are non–perishable and high in protein such as pasta, tomato sauce, tuna fish, peanut butter, etc. If you are interested in coordinating a food drive within your dormitory or organization for The Food Bank of Western Massachusetts please contact Nisa Zalta at 247–9738.

Necessities, an organization based in Northampton which serves the needs of homeless mothers and children, is in need of everything and everything, especially personal items, toothpaste, deodorant, in order to make care packages. They also need towels, sheets, children's clothes and toys. Items can be dropped off at 16 Armory St, located off of Pleasant St., Northampton.

The Northampton Survival Center Food Pantry needs non–perishable food items like peanut butter, tuna, canned vegetables, cereal, soup, pork and beans. They are open from Monday to Friday from 9–4 p.m. It is best not to bring stuff on Tuesday and Thursday morning, but drop–offs are accepted after 7 p.m. on these days. The Center is located on 265 Prospect St. about a half a block away from the Y.M.C.A.

Jessie's House is a homeless shelter in Northampton which serves anyone who is in needs of assistance.

PHUTO THANG VO

Toy stores in the malls rake it in every year with displays like this one in the window of Toyr 'R Us.

They are in need of linens, sheets, blankets and towels which are in good shape. Also needed are diapers and non–food items. Donations can be dropped off at 143 West St. Northampton.

Big Brother and Big Sister of Hampshire County has asked for donations of art supplies such as crayons, paints, markers, paper, glue, etc. The art supplies will be distributed to the big brother and big sister volunteers to use with their children. The Big Brother and Big Sister offices are located in the Bangs Community Center, up the stairs and on the right. The best time to drop stuff off is in the morning, but to ensure that someone will be there call ahead at 253–2591.

Not Bread Alone a center for homeless mothers and children needs children's toys, hats, and mittens. Also needed are women's sundry and personal care items. The center is located at 17 Seelye St., Amherst, MA, next to the Police Station.

On campus, there also some opportunities for students to make donations. The Newman Center is sponsoring a Christmas Giving Tree. Those interested in participating can pick up an ornament from the giving tree. Each ornament indicates the age and gender of the person who is in need of a gift. The wrapped gifts, bearing the identifying tag must be returned by Dec. 14 to the Newman Center. The gifts will be distributed on Dec. 15 to needy families in the Amherst areas.

The University of Massachusetts Community Service Program in conjunction with UMass Transit, Alpha Phi, Interested Women of Latina Promovoviendoha Sigma Comunidad, MassPIRG, MACC Leaders, Umass Women's Ice Hockey Team and SHARE are sponsoring the fifth annual "Fill–A–Bus" Clothing, Food, and Toy Drive. Members of the Women's Ice Hockey Team Mindy Corr and Amber Conboy, who assisted in the drive on Wednesday afternoon said that the drive was going well and that it was mostly students who were donating things. The drive which began on Dec. 1 will run through Friday from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m. The drive will benefit the Amherst Survival Center.

If the holiday blues have gotten a hold of you, make yourself feel better by helping those who are less fortunate than you. Helping someone else will help to put life in perspective by forcing those of us who are overwhelmed by petty holiday worries to realize that they are infinitesimally small in comparison to the nightmare of poverty. Although we should try to help those who are in need all year long, it is especially important to return the symbols of hope and good will to the holiday season.

Emily Trask is a Collegian staff member.

■ gourmet

continued from page 7

that will eventually aid in the thickening of the stew. Also, by including all the seasonings in the flour, the dish is infused from early on with all those incredible flavors that will come out in the rest of the cooking).

5) Add the kielbasa, the smoked pork, the white beans (with all the liquid in the cans) and 2 cans of the chicken broth. Stir well and bring up to a boil (at this point, the consistency should be a little loose and soupy. If it's not, add more chicken broth) and then quickly turn the heat to low and allow to simmer for 45 minutes.

6) At this point, the stew should begin to thicken up. Add the reserved chicken pieces and bacon and cook for 15 more minutes. Season with salt & pepper to taste.

7) At this point, you can ladle a serving into an oven-proof bowl, mix the bread crumbs up with the ollve oil and sprinkle the mixture on top of the stew in the bowl. Place the bowl under the broiler of a toaster oven and allow it to become crispy (about 5-6 minutes) and serve it up! Serving suggestion: Allow the Cassoulet to cool, cover it well and store it in the fridge. When you want to eat, follow step seven, except before you sprinkle and broil, make for 3-4 minutes first, then proceed as stated. For a party, adjust the size of the bowl, the time in the nuke, the size of the broiling oven (etc...) for the size of the crowd. I hope you all enjoy!

Louis Davis is a Collegian columnist. You can e-mail him with any comments about this column or any culinary questions in general at LouieXO@aol.com.

Flava Promotions & RS Productions present

TRIPLE THREAT

FEATURING

DJ JUSTIN TIME (TUNEL NYC)

DJ Kevin - Club Metro

DJ Arthur Lau - NYC

Saturday Dec 6th

FREE PAGER GIVE AWAYS

DRINK SPECIALS

UNDER 21 $8 21+ $5

Club Metro

INFO: 582.9898

DOORS OPEN AT 9PM 18+

TRAVEL SMART!

FROM BOSTON

Beginning Nov. 1

One Way	Roundtrip
LONDON
$162	$295
PARIS
$218	$399
ROME
$274	$473
MADRID
$226	$415

Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurail passes available.

Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.

PRISM TRAVEL

545 Fifth Ave., NY, NY 10017

212-986-8420*

800-272-9676

*In NYC

Are you sick of telemarketers trying to sell you stuff you don't need?

Do you want to escape from credit card companies?

Get away from it all and come write for Arts & Living. Trust us, you'll like it.

Creative jazz to provoke the ear

How refreshing it is to start with some imaginative, amazing recordings for one of my final columns. Yes, the folks at the always–mystical ECM label (best known for housing many recordings of Keith Jarrett, Jack DeJohnette and Dave Holland) have recently issued a couple of discs that provoke thoughts to follow the music, and to fully immerse oneself into the creative current of the electrical signals that become jazz.

Selected Signs 1 is the most recent anthology by the Europe–based label (distributed in the U.S. by BMG), and features tracks swinging from the bebop–based to more romantic, open sounds, illustrating the diversity of ECM's 1997 releases. The progressive be–bop of trumpeter Tomasz Stanko's "Svantetic" is followed by the daunting solo piece "Gorrion" performed by Dono Saluzzi on bandoneon (which is not unlike accordion).

The meditative "Morning," with star–gazing saxophone work by Tore Brunborg on pianist Misha Alperin's piece, as well as "Past Present" by flugelhorn player Kenny Wheeler's quartet, with the guitar of Bill Frisell creating a stained–glass window to view it all through complements more moving, and chaotic pieces. The short conversation between drums & other percussion on Marilyn Mazur's "Creature Talk" and the "out there" version of the traditional "Motherless Child" by Joe Maneri's quartet are two such tracks. This collection is a museum of international jazz communication.

Besides featuring the far–off tropical storm that is "Free Above Sea" that shows up on Selected Signs 1, Jack DeJohnette's Ones (ECM) is full of many other fine musical adventures.

Along with Don Alias (percussion), Michael Cain (piano; not the actor, mind you), and the young Jerome Harris (guitar), the drummer/composer launches into pieces of epic proportion, such as "Priestesses Of The Mist" (15:10), "Jack In" (12:35) and the double feature "From The Heart/C.M.A." (27:32), all amazing and individual on their own. DeJohnette is proof that one can travel through the jazz world for 30+ years and still have ideas to send shivers down even the biggest cynic's spine.

The first major tribute to the late jazz singer Ella Fitzgerald is out now on Verve, and has been put together by veteran singer Dee Dee Bridgewater with help by many others. Dear Ella, with a title taken from the final track on the album written by Kenny Burrell and performed by just that guitarist and Bridgewater in duo, is a tribute that features this vocalist in big band, combo, trio and string orchestra contexts. Fitzgerald was most often heard in front of such combinations, and so Bridgewater wanted to come as close to Fitzgerald's surroundings as she could.

Employing Ray Brown, Ella's main bassist and husband, was a good first step — actually, as the story goes, he prodded her to do the project. Despite all new arrangements for this album, it does not sail too far past standard jazz. It's not meant to be a creative innovation, but instead a "thank you" to the First Lady Of Song. "Undecided" succeeds most in its bluesiness with the big band, but "Slow Boat To China" is also a standout with trio. The disc could be completely empty if it had not been for Bridgewater's wonderful, sugary voice. Ella's grateful, I'm sure.

Now for a quick re–issue rundown for this week. RCA Victor's 80th Anniversary, Vol. 7: 1980–1989 is another collection this week that combines different manifestations of jazz. There's the electric funk of Steve Coleman's "Tschnaz," and the Brecker Bros. "Jennifer;" the quiet, sweet vocal tracks by Chet Baker, Cleo Laine and Carmen McRae; and other areas, like Roy Hargrove's be–bop oriented "Whisper Not," and Hugh Masekela's Afro–pop/jazz hybrid "Uptownship." It's all here, collected from RCA's biggest '80s albums.

Earl Hines Plays Duke Ellington, Vol. II (New World) follows up a previous 2–disc set with more solo performances by one of the most well–known jazz pianists of this century. "Fatha" Hines recorded these tracks between 1971 and 1975, and played only the Ellington tunes that could be arranged for piano — interesting liner notes by Bill Weilbacher tell the story behind the music. The bass runs on "In A Mellotone" take over the melody, as the chord runs on "It Don't Mean A Thing" outline that song's theme. You can't not like this stuff.

After commenting on some of Blue Note's Connoisseur Series releases, I'll finish off my overview with Baby Face Willette's organ jazz presented on his Face To Face album from 1961. Although the spaces reserved for solos take on typical hard–bop cliches, the main choruses of the tunes are where true greatness lies. Not that the solos are a waste of time — check out the way Willette uses his volume pedal for expressiveness at climaxes, or guitarist Grant Green's biting semi–distortion effects. Quite a nice session, though "Swingin' At Sugar Ray's" and "Whatever Lola Wants" stick out the most.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

Despite wait, Star Wars lives on

Hey kids, welcome to yet another Four Color Commentary, your source for all the happenings in the world of graphic literature. Apparently, I have a legion of computer illiterate fans out there who just can't seem to figure out how to send me comments and suggestions at scribe1974@aol.com. Either that, or rampant apathy is infecting comic readers across the pioneer valley like mad cow disease. Come on folks, start zapping me some e–mail or else I'm going to fill this column up with reviews of Valiant and Sonic the Hedgehog comics! Ask yourselves, do you feel lucky? Well, do ya punks? Ahem, now onto this week's column.

It's time to wake up and face reality folks, the new Star Wars movie is not coming out until May 25, 1999.

Let me repeat that.

May 25, 1999. Ouch.

Even though the film, which stars Ewan Macgregor (A Life Less Ordinary), Liam Neeson (Schindler's List), Natalie Portman (The Professional) and 10–year old Jake Lloyd (Jingle All The Way), wrapped up filming back on Sept. 26, George Lucas and his cadre of techno wizards at Industrial Light & Magic still have 18 months of special effects and post–production work to complete. After the success of the "Special Edition" re–issues of the Star Wars Trilogy last winter, the entire free world is chomping at the bit to lop down $8 for Star Wars: Episode I, (the new film's tentative title). But with a year and half to wait, how will Star Wars fans' rabid appetites be satiated? Luckily, the fine folks at Dark Horse Comics provide plenty of quality Star Wars comic books to keep us busy while we're waiting to find out how young Anakin Skywalker turns to the dark side and becomes everyone's favorite heavy–breathing baddie, Darth Vader. However, Dark Horse almost lost Star Wars last summer. Back in August, the license to produce Star Wars comics, which Dark Horse owned since 1991, expired. A massive bidding war then took place between several major comic publishers to acquire the highly lucrative Star Wars properties, which are considered "hot sellers" in a sluggish comic market, especially with the forthcoming brand new trilogy of movies. Jim Lee's Wildstorm comics, Rob Liefeld's Awesome Entertainment, and even the big Kahunas at Marvel Comics made presentations and argued for the rights to produce comics featuring Luke, Han and others. In the end, Dark Horse was granted a renewal of the license, and Star Wars fans everywhere let out a collective sigh of relief. Could you imagine a Star Wars comic drawn by Lee or Liefeld? We'd have a hulking, teeth–clenched Han Solo, and a six–inch Princess Leia with a 44DD chest, eight inch waist, and legs up to her neck!

To keep fans occupied in 1998, Dark Horse's big Star Wars project is Crimson Empire, a six–issue miniseries written by Dark Horse publisher Mike Richardson with art by Kilian Plunket (Shadows of the Empire). Crimson Empire follows the adventures of a lone Imperial Royal Guardsman (those cool red guys who said zilch in Return of the Jedi) who tries to defend the honor of the Emperor when another guardsman makes a play for the Imperial throne. Also coming out way in 1998 is Vader's Quest, by Darko Macan (Grendel Tales) and Dave Gibbons (Watchmen), which takes place between Star Wars and The Empire Strikes Back, and tells the story of how Vader finds out who destroyed the first Death Star and the ramifications that information has on his future. Star Wars novelist Kevin J. Anderson writes two Star Wars series in 1998, Tales of the Jedi: The Redemption of Ulic Qel Droma and Jedi Academy: The Leviathan of Korbos. Last, but certainly not least, the well–written and drawn adventures of cult hero Wedge Antilles and his X–Wing Rogue Squadron will continue throughout 1998. So you see, Star Wars is alive and well and there's a bounty of reading material out there for the Jedi in all of us. May the force be with you!

Turn to STAR WARS, page 11

Write for Arts!

Pizza Calzones Subs Buffalo Wings

CANTONE'S PIZZA

Fast Free Delivery

Sunday - Thursday: 3:30 PM - 1:30 AM

Friday & Saturday: 3:30 PM - 2 AM

Any Large Four Topping Pizza only $9.

May not be combined w/other coupon or offer. Expires 2/28/98

Spirit Haus

YOU HAVE TO SEE IT TO BELIEVE IT!

LIQUOR SPECIALS

Jamison	$15.99 750 ml
Bailey's	$16.99 750 ml
Beefeater	$12.99 750 ml
Stolichnaya	$14.99 750 ml
Bacardi Limon	$9.99 750 ml

MICRO BREWS

Sam Adams Lager + Winter Lager	$9.99 12 pack Bottles + dep
Oregon IPA	$8.99 12 pack Bottles + dep
Brooklyn Brown Ale, Pale Ale, IPA, Lager	$4.99 6 pack Bottles + dep
Smutty Nose Chuck Wheat	$4.99 six pack Bottles + dep

BEER SPECIALS

Bud Dry 30-pack Cans	$10.99 + dep
Busch + Busch Lite Case Bottles	$9.99 + dep
Beck's 12-pack Bottles	$9.99 + dep
Genny Summer Brew six pack	$1.99 + dep

Micro Kegs In Stock

DISCOVER, VISA, MASTERCARD ACCEPTED - OPEN 9am to 11pm RT. 9 EAST / 338 COLLEGE ST. (413)253-5364 / TAKE I-91 TO EXIT 19 / RT. 9 east

Full Redemption Center

WINTER SESSION 1998 AT FITCHBURG STATE COLLEGE

NICARAGUAN BIOLOGICAL RESEARCH

STUDY ABROAD PROGRAM

Offered in collaboration with the University of Mobile (Central American Campus at San Marcos) this two-week program runs January 3-18, 1998. Enroll in six credits (undergraduate or graduate), exploring the topography of volcanos, cloud forests and tropical islands of Central America.

COURSE TOPIC: Tropical Biology (6 credits)

- Accommodations in university dorms
- Meal Plan
- Shuttle service from airport to San Marcos
- Access to university facilities and services

For more information, call the International Education Office at (978)665-3089 or the DGCE Office at (978)665-3182.

THIS IS THE BREAK YOU'VE BEEN WAITING FOR

College Students: While you're home for semester break, why not take a course or two at Fitchburg State College? In just a few weeks, you can earn credits in English, art education, philosophy, psychology, sociology or computer science. Both graduate and undergraduate, our credits are transferable to virtually any college in the country.

WINTER INTERSESSION - Dec. 17 - Jan. 16

Register Today with the Division of Graduate and Continuing Education. Phone-In, Fax-In, Mail-In, Walk-In or E-Mail!

P.S. - For those of you who would like to plan ahead, ask about our summer course schedule, which this year includes amazingly affordable credit studies abroad in Rome, Italy and Dublin, Ireland.

VISIT OUR WEB SITE AT WWW.FSC.EDU

DIVISION OF GRADUATE AND CONTINUING EDUCATION 978-665-3181 Fax 978-665-3658 E-mail: dgce@fsc.edu

ADMISSIONS 800-705-9692 978-665-3144 Fax 978-665-4540 E-mail: admissions@fsc.edu

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT CENTER 978-665-3636 Fax 978-665-3639 E-mail: pdc@fsc.edu

IT AIN'T EASY, BUT IT'S SMART

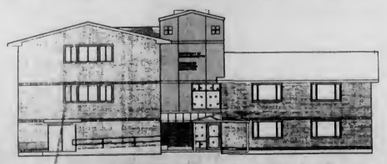
Winter Session '98

Why Winter Session?

- Catch up so you can graduate on time
- Focus on just one class, one set of homework assignments
- Make up lost credits
- Take a usually overenrolled prerequisite for your major
- Earn three credits in three weeks

Smaller classes mean more individual attention.

Winter Session '98
January 5-26



Pick up a blue course catalog at Continuing Education in Goodell Bldg. or anywhere on campus; in town at stores, restaurants, banks.

Or call 545-0107 and we'll send you one.

Check out the updated course list at www.umass.edu/contined/

Winter Session
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst

The Division of Continuing Education is

moving to 358 N. Pleasant St. in January.

MONTEGO BAY FROM $399

SPRING BREAK MONTEGO BAY!!!

ONE LOVE. ONE HEART. ONE GREAT PARTY!!!

IT'S THAT TIME OF YEAR WHEN THOUSANDS OF STUDENTS COME TO JAMAICA TO FEEL ALRIGHT - FOR AN UNBELIEVABLE PRICE!!!

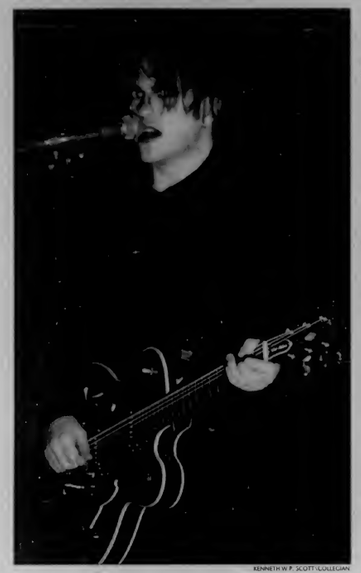
PACKAGE INCLUDES:

- Round-Trip Airfare
- 7 Nights Hotel Accommodations
- Round-Trip Airport & Hotel Transfers
- Free Welcome, Beach & Evening Parties
- Free Admission to Night Clubs
- Discounts on Restaurants, Water Sports & Side Excursions
- Negril Packages Available from $459
- Professional On-Site Tour Reps
- Complete Weekly Activities Program Offering Optional Sunset Cruise, Booze Cruise, Yoga Party & More!
- Free Bonus Party Pack

ASK ABOUT OUTRAGEOUS MEAL PLANS.

LOOK FOR ZIGGY MARLEY LIVE IN CONCERT!!!

SUN SPLASH TOURS 1 800-426-7710



STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES 1 800-648-4849

Price is per person based on quad occupancy, NY BWI/Wash, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus Nashville, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh departures. Other cities may qualify for reduction or require surcharge. US and Jamaica departure taxes (currently $571 and $6 handling charge additional. Add $30 for 3/6,7,8/98 bookings. Rates increase $30 on 12/15/97. Peak week surcharges/off-week discounts may apply. Restrictions and cancellation penalties apply. Limited availability. Subject to change without notice. Call for full details on hotel selection and availability.

Rock's endearing misfits

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

THE CURE (WBCN X-MAS RAVE)
Orpheum Theatre
Dec. 2

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT-COLLEGIAN

Robert Smith (pictured) and the Cure performing at the Orpheum Theatre Tuesday night.

BOSTON — During the beginning of the Cure's show in the cozy confines of the Orpheum Theatre, Robert Smith addressed the adoring throng and confessed "it's fun doing stuff we don't normally do."

Of all the bands that emerged in the immediate aftermath of punk rock In the late '70s, the Cure quickly became one of the most enduring and popular, thanks in no small part to Smith's ability to fuse the brain of Jim Morrison and the soul of the Pillsbury Doughboy. As the first non–heavy metal band to make it into the arenas, the Cure have always transcended simply being the world's most popular goth band.

In performing several lesser–known, but equally important songs over 18 songs and 100 minutes, the Cure gave those lucky enough to be in attendance (the show sold out in four minutes) something many undoubtedly weren't sure they wanted, but wound up embracing just the same.

Those comments he made early on waxed quite prophetic as the evening wore on during a performance that saw the quasi–goth English quartet eschew merely just playing the hits. What many expected to be a night spent reflecting back on their recently released Galore singles compilation was instead a mining expedition for lost gems.

Sure, they peppered the set with a few old standbys ("Fascination Street," "High"), but the majority of songs were either minor singles ("10:15 Saturday Night," "Never Enough") or older tracks culled from their creative burst in the mid–'80s, including the mesmerizing opener "Shake Dog Shake" and "One Hundred Years."

Not surprisingly, the show's climax was the regal synth– pop number "Just Like Heaven," easily the Cure's best song, and Incidentally, Smith's favorite. Drenched in a dense fog that engulfed the band in a haze of smoke, chubby Bob weaved a sublimely twisted juxtaposition of melancholy and bliss, delivered in his permanently sniffly voice.

By and large, what sets the Cure apart from their contemporaries lies in the fact that most of their songs' backbone is anchored by the synthesiser instead of the guitar. The guitar plays an important role, but mostly in a rhythmic capacity, adding textures and tone.

Two songs that eschewed this formula were tunes that serve to bookend their almost 20–year career. Newly released, the so–silly–it's–brilliant "Wrong Number" is a gregarious slab of Wire–derived power pop driven by a credibly angular guitar groove. Anchored by Smith's oversized Gibson, the song's outro ended up sounding like a jet engine preparing to take–off — signifying the Cure's subtle turn towards conventional rock 'n roll. "Killing An Arab," a song off their first demo tape dating back to 1979, had a similar raucous feel to it, with chunky riffage and hard–hitting drums.

Oh, and for those of you who must know, yes he was dressed in all black, yes his hair was a mess and yes he had baby–doll slabs of red lipstick on his lips.

Wide array of gift ideas for Grateful Dead fans

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

Editor's Note: This is the first of a 2–part column focusing on the wide breadth of Grateful Dead and Dead–related items released recently.

With all the millions of fans the Grateful Dead left behind in their wake following the Aug. 9, 1995 death of Jerry Garcia (causing the end of the Dead in turn), the recording industry has seen a large number of tribute discs, new projects by former members and lots of archival live material released from their wealthy vaults. If there's a Deadhead you know and love, you may want to look into the following items to bless their Christmas with fine music. You may want to put it on your own wish–list. There are no bad albums in this column.

•First released at a mega–party at the Revere, Mass. Wonderland Ballroom in October, Dick's Pick's 9 (Grateful Dead Records) is the latest from this seemingly (hopefully) never–ending series of Dead performances chosen by the band's personal archivist Dick Latvala.

The new 3–CD set features the full show from Sept. 16, 1990 at Madison Square Garden. This show was only the second show featuring Bruce Hornsby on piano and harmony vocals in his two–tour stint with the band. This is also the first recording of the Dead in its last incarnation: Keyboardist Vince Welnick replaces Brent Mydland who had died less than two months before.

The music itself is mostly amazing, with that dark reverb that only the MSG can produce over it all. The veterans truly put the spotlight on their two new keyboardists. The full blues soloing on "Little Red Rooster," the piano étude qualities of "He's Gone–>No MSG Jam" and assorted other spots over the three discs prove this in victorious glory. Not that the other members of the band were slouches.

In "Cassidy," everyone mounts a trail to a high climax, and they repeat that in "Deal." Near the end of the show, on disc 3, they end "Morning Dew" with a beautiful crescendo. Also, Mickey Hart and Billy Kreutzmann trot out both their trap/world percussion–drumming skills as well as their mindbending electronica devices. I say keep 'em coming, Dick!

•Does somebody you know need good reading material over this break? Despite being basically an encyclopedia, The American Book Of The Dead (Fireside) is a fine read–through. Author Oliver Trager's entries are critical where they need to be (less–than–average songs; album reviews), and always laced with exquisite biographies of well over 100 figures in music who were either in the Dead, associated with them, or influenced them. Not only that, but you get the stories and history behind the thousands of songs that made their way

Turn to DEAD, page 11

The Collegian... the Cure for all your ailments

Bucci
Best! 1997
HAIRCUTS $10
256-0733
586-0155

R&P Liquors
Largest Selection of Micro-Brews in S. Amherst
•Weekly Specials on Regular Beers •Fine Wines •
• Fridge Rentals

8 Billiards 9
10A Belchertown Road Amherst, MA 01002 256-8284
LIVE MUSIC
Friday 9:45pm: Crawdads
Saturday 9:45pm: Jesse

classé café
GREAT BREAKFAST TILL 3 P.M.!
Remember: all homemade. You are what you eat.
Mon - Sat 7am-9pm
Sunday Brunch 7-3
168 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-2291
O.C.M.P. Welcome

ERASER
SCHOOL SUPPLIES
A terrific selection of magazines, binders, notebooks, pens, pencils, paper clips, printer cartridges, T-shirts, art supplies, calendars, candy, toys, stationary & the best card shop in the Valley!
A·J·Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer
"Conveniently located in the center of Amherst"
46 South Pleasant St • 253-3540
OPEN: Weekdays 8 a.m. to 9 p.m.
Sundays 8 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Void if inhibited.
THE JASON BONHAM BAND
When You See The Sun
12.99 CD 9.99 Cass
BILLIE MYERS
Growing Pains
JANIS IAN
Hunger
DMA DANCE, VOL. 4
Various
BLACK LAB
Your Body Above Me
SHE MOVES
Breaking All The Rules
THE BACON BROTHERS
Forosoco
13.99 CD 9.99 Cass
MUSIC · SOFTWARE · MOVIES · BOOKS
MEDIA PLAY
MORE CHOICE. LESS PRICE. EVERY DAY.
Prices good until December 12, 1997
EXTENDED HOLIDAY HOURS
Hampshire Mall, Hadley, (413) 582-0410 • Newington Commons Plaza, Newington, (860) 594-7272
Stateline Plaza, Enfield, (860) 253-4777 • Crossroads Buckland Hills, Manchester, (860) 648-5870

Pearl Street Nightclub
Live Music & Dance Club
EVERY THURSDAY • 9–2am
THE AREA'S BIGGEST!
HIGH ENERGY
18+ Dance Party 99.3
PROPER DRESS & ID REQUIRED
FREE $1 Every Friday • 9pm–2am 18+
ANIMAL HOUSE COLLEGE NIGHT
$3 for 18–21 Party Mix Music
DEC. 28 & 30 • 7:30–11:30
TEEN NIGHT
Ages 15–19 Proper ID & Dress
NEW YEAR'S EVE... DOWNSTAIRS 21+
STASH
UPSTAIRS
18+ NEW YEAR'S DANCE PARTY
LIVE MUSIC
THURS. DEC. 4 • 7:00 PM 21+
ONE KING DOWN
Cause for Alarm/Holdstrong/Halfcrazed
Divided by Hate/ x Tripwire x
FRI. DEC. 5 • 7:00 PM 21+
DAYS OF THE NEW
LETTERS TO CLEO
Snow Show 97 Mary's First
Tickets Just $9.97!
DOWNSTAIRS:
BIG WRECK/MACHINERY HALL
SAT. DEC. 6 • 7:00 PM 21+
THE ALLSTONIANS/WESTON
and THE MARSHES Record Release Party
Shoeless Joe/Direxi
SUN. DEC. 7 • 7:00 PM 21+
TESTAMENT
Overcast/Barrett/Shadows Fall/Pleasure Crush
Another Society
THURS. DEC. 11 • 7:00 PM 21+
SHOOTYZ GROOVE
Stealth
Restraint/Hypnotic Kick/Imbalance/Burnside
FRI. DEC. 12 • 7:00 PM 21+
Pearl Street presents 3 rd Annual River Holiday Hooha
with Paul Cebar
& the Lonesome Brothers
FREE Admission
Downstairs 9:00pm 18+
MILL RIVER BAND
Brotherman
18+ SAT. DEC. 13 • 8:30 PM
MAX CREEK
SUN. DEC. 14 • 7:00 PM 21+
CANDERIA
Peshbutan Warefare/Catch 13/Stigmata
Dead Eyes Under/Crosstbread
THURS. DEC. 18 • 7:00 PM 21+
CONVERGE/BRUTAL TRUTH
Lay It
UPCOMING
FRI. DEC. 19 BANE RESPOKEN 21+
SAT. DEC. 20 BLACK REBELS All Ages
FRI. DEC. 26 LOOSETHE FROM MARZ 18+
SAT. JAN. 3 YNAUS PARK 18+
THU. JAN. 16 DIKE BROOKS PARTY All Ages
SUN. JAN. 18 THE PIXIES All Ages
Advance tickets available at the Northampton Box office, 586-8686 • 800-THE-TICK, Strawberries Record Stores, For The Record in Amherst, Silent Music in Greenfield, Fly Underwood at U. Mass., Platterpuss Records in Westfield, Music Quest in Enfield, & T-Shirt Records in Northampton. Like Pizza.
10 PEARL STREET, NORTHAMPTON
http://www.virtual-valley.com/pearl-street
★★★★★413-584-7771★★★★★

The hits and misses of '97 TV season

Tube Notes by Marty Keane

November was quite a month for television. From the demise of our adolescent cult–heroes Beavis & Butt–head to "ER" moving out of the emergency room and going to California for an episode, the much–vaunted November sweeps period provided for some interesting and often compelling viewing.

Still though, the current season has been on the whole mostly uneven, with even old reliables "The Simpsons" and "Seinfeld" experiencing some mis–steps.

Here then, is a thoroughly opinionated look at this season's hits and misses.

HITS:

• "South Park" (Comedy Central, 10 p.m., Wednesday). Without a doubt, Eric Cartman is the funniest character on television. Along with his cohorts and the inventively humorous bit players, they somehow manage to incite furor and offend nearly everyone in 30 minutes — and that's not easy. Who knew being Hitler for Halloween could be funny?

• "The Daily Show" (Comedy Central, 11 p.m., Monday–Thursday). Probably the most consistently hilarious half hour of television on a nightly basis. Former ESPN anchor Craig Kilborn presides over deliciously sarcastic mayhem every night and eggs his guests to get more questions right than Kathy Ireland during "5 Questions."

• "Dharma & Greg" (ABC, 8:30 p.m., Wednesday). One of a handful of freshman shows that has shown promise, "Dharma & Greg" features the mismatched love story between a serious and up–and–coming lawyer and his free– spirited wife, played by the season's only breakout star thus far, Jenna Elfman.

• "Saturday Night Live" (NBC, 11:30 p.m., Saturday). Even though every skit after Norm MacDonald's Weekend Update (which is a hoot) is lame, this season has provided some of the funniest moments in years. Anyone who saw New York Mayor Rudy Gulliani's guest spot on the Joe Pesci Show or MacDonald's take on Larry King know where I'm coming from.

• "ER" (NBC, 10 p.m., Thursday). Almost since its inception four years ago, this hospital drama has topped Nielson's ratings as the most watched show on television. This season has seen the show take some chances with their well–oiled machine. The "live" season premiere was interesting only in concept, but Ross (George Clooney) and Greene's (Anthony Edwards) trip to California illustrated why this show is — in addition to the highest–rated — the most compelling. The reason is simple: the rich character development and eminently compelling storylines that the most accomplished ensemble cast in T.V. since "L.A. Law" has to work with each week ensure the show's continuous quality.

• "Law & Order" (NBC, 10 p.m., Wednesday). Much as their counterparts in the ER, this gritty police/legal drama succeeds in producing gripping episodes through thought– provoking dialogue, interspersed with Det. Brisco's (Jerry Orbach) smarmy sense of humor and District Attorney Jack McCoy's (Sam Waterston) crusty demeanor. After winning the Emmy for Best Drama, it's about time this show is being shown the limelight after languishing in relative obscurity for several years.

MISSES:

• "Jenny" (NBC, 8:30 p.m., Monday). Easily the lamest show this season, featuring the woefully over–exposed Jenny McCarthey and her dead father, played by George Hamilton. The (supposed) humor is utterly sophomoric, pandering to people's lowest common denominator. Worry not though, even the hype machine at NB Must C can't keep holding onto this trash.

• "The X–Files" (Fox, 9 p.m., Sunday). The long, arduous trek downhill continues as this once–worthy creature of Chris Carter becomes ever more entrenched in weirdness. Even last week's attempt at period noir came off as contrived and just plain puzzling.

• "Brooklyn South" (CBS, 10 p.m., Monday). Set in Brooklyn, this new entry into the overcrowded cop drama genre is a bit too pretentious, and unrealistic. I mean, how are we supposed to relate to NYPD who look like pretty faces from Hollywood.

• "Fired Up," "Suddenly Susan," "Caroline in the City" (NBC, Monday nights) Can anyone tell the difference between these three female sitcoms? Does anyone care? Women on television deserve better than this.

• "Melrose Place" (Fox, 8 p.m., Monday). What was once a guilty pleasure for many has morphed into a laughably bad melodrama of sleaze and stupidity.

Marty Keane is a Collegian columnist.

The romantic sadism of Woody Allen

COURTESY BRIAN HAMEL

Woody Allen, shown here directing Mia Farrow and Judy Davis in Husband and Wives, has made his mark on filmmaking.

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

Woody Allen is one of the few true austere American directors. For over three decades he has both entertained and inspired through his multi–dimensional talents as an actor, filmmaker, comedian, writer and satirist of Western society. He has instilled humor in subjects so long conceived as taboo ranging from masturbation and infidelity to politics and religion. Despite his falls from glory within the world of Hollywood as well as the public eye, we can not deny the influence Allen has had on international cinema. Now with Deconstructing Harry, his 27th film as both writer and director which opens in December, Allen attempts once again to prove his unique, sophisticated filmmaking styles to the world.

First gaining recognition in the early '60s as a comedian and actor, Allen made his presence in Hollywood known in 1965 with his scripts for What's New Pussycat and What's Up Tigerlily. His hilarious reworkings of a Japanese film where he overdubbed the dialogue with his own absurd sense of comic brilliance led What's Up Tigerlily to become an instant cult classic. In 1969 he took his first shot at the director's chair with Take the Money and Run, but it wasn't until his 1971 sophomore effort Bananas that he was recognized as on the road to genius status. Throughout these years we have come to adore his nebbish New York eccentricities, his thick framed glasses, his lovable however nerdy persona, his urban neurosis, but most importantly his ongoing quest for love which almost always betrays him in the end. No one has ever made the romantic comedy as delightfully sadistic as Woody Allen.

Here are just some of the highlights from his exceptional career:

Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex but Were Afraid to Ask (1972) — Inspired by the classic book, Allen's reworking of human sexuality. Divided into separate chapters which discuss issues of sexual curiosity. Includes Gene Wilder's confessions of bestiality and a gigantic breast conquering the countryside.

Sleeper (1973) — The highlight of Allen's work in the '70s. A futuristic

Turn to ALLEN, page 12

■ Star Wars

continued from page 9

Review: Captain America #1 (Marvel, $2.99)

When I saw this comic on the shelf two weeks ago, I could've sworn there was a heavenly light pouring through it. This is the one comic I have been breathlessly waiting for since Marvel gave Mark Waid and Ron Garney the shaft and handed Cap over to Rob Liefeld for that woeful "Heroes Reborn" project. After reading it, I was not disappointed. Waid and Garney are back with a vengeance, delivering a tightly scripted, beautifully illustrated Captain America story full of good ol' slam–bang action and adventure. The Sentinel of Liberty has never looked better boys and girls. This might be Marvel's highest quality book and I can't wait to see what happens next. A

Jeff Carter is a Collegian columnist.

■ Dead

continued from page 10

through the Dead's repertoire and the studio/live albums, as well as recommendations on the best performances of certain songs circulating on live tapes.

•After the Dead disbanded following Garcia's death late in the summer of 1995, the surviving members all went their separate ways. Some followed musical endeavours that they'd been working on off to the side of the Dead. Weir had been playing small clubs & theatres with Rob Wasserman, who plays the slick electric 6–string stand–up bass, since the late '80s. Teaming up with other musicians, the two formed their current band Ratdog in the early '90s.

However, Weir/Wasserman Live (Grateful Dead) was recorded mostly at a 1988 club date and gives listeners an early look at this decade–old partnership. The music on this CD is luxuriant with Weir's completely unique songwriting, layering the lyrics of John Perry Barlow (and even a poem by Rudyard Kipling on "The Winners") under chord progressions that resound in a part of the mind the listener was unaware they possessed.

While "Looks Like Rain" and "Throwing Stones" would be most familiar to Deadheads, they are nicely reworked for just acoustic guitar and Wasserman's virtuosic bass abilities. "Eternity," taped from 1992, and "Easy To Slip" (which has since become a Ratdog standard at their shows) win the most points for their breadth of sound and splendid lyrics, but the whole disc is indispensable and is a must–have.

Dick's Picks, Vol. 9 and Weir/Wasserman Live can be ordered through Grateful Dead Mercantile at 1–800–223– 3323. They are not available in stores.

The Arts & Living section is always looking for new writers.
Stop by the Collegian or call 545–1491 for more information.
Just do it.

What is the BEST lunch value on Campus?
Taco Salads

T-MEX
Totally Mexican

The Hatch FOOD COURT
Located in the Student Union Basement
Great Food Where You Least Expect It.
Brought to you by Campus Center Food Services

Pizza
Calzones
Subs
Buffalo Wings
Cantone's Pizza
Fast Free Delivery
Sunday - Thursday: 3:30 PM - 1:30 AM
Friday & Saturday: 3:30 PM - 2 AM
Large Cheese Pizza only $6.95
May not be combined w/other coupon or offer. Expires 2/28/98

University Dental Associates
Dr. Sidney A. Brown • Dr. Marjan Z. Khodadoust
Convenient Hours • Insurance Accepted
New Patients Welcome • Dentistry for the Entire Family
Cosmetic Dentistry
867 Amherst Rd, Sunderland 665-5005

Auditions For
Not Ready For Bedtime Players
Not Ready for Bedtime Players
Monday, December 8 - 7:30 PM
Campus Center Rm. 163C
For more information call the Health Education Division of the University Health Services and ask for Sally or Mike 577-5181.

COME TO LIQUORS 44 AND SAVE A LOT OF "DOUGH! DOUGH! DOUGH!"
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
MILLER HIGH LIFE & GENUINE DRAFT & GENUINE DRAFT LIGHT $10.49 + DEP. CASE OF 30/12 OZ. CANS
HARPOON & RED HOOK $4.99 + DEP. ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES
BECK'S BEER $8.99 + DEP. LIGHT & DARK 12 PK. BOTTLES
SAMUEL ADAMS $4.29 + DEP. ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES
KOCH'S GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY $7.29 + DEP. LIGHT & ICE CASE 2-12 PK. CAN ROLLING ROCK $32.99 + DEP. 1/2 KEGS
1/2 KEGS $39.99 + DEP. BUD, BUD LT., BUD ICE, MICH., MICH. LT., MICH. AMBER BOAC, LIT, RED DOG, ICEHOUSE
WINE OF THE MONTH
Meridian $7.99 CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML
CARLO ROSSI $6.99 ALL FLAVORS 4 LT
GLEN ELLEN $3.49 WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML
CONCHA Y TORO $5.99 CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET, MERLOT, SAUVIGNON, SEMILLON 1.5 LT
ANDRE CHAMPAGNE $2.99 ALL FLAVORS 750 ML
POPOV VODKA 1.75 $10.99
Captain Morgan $17.49 SPICED RUM 1.75
FLEISCHMANN'S $11.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $8.49 PREFERRED WHISKEY 1.75
The GLENLIVET $21.99 SINGLE MALT SCOTCH 750 ML
AMARETTO DI SARONNO $14.49 750 ML
We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 12/4/97 THRU WEDS. 12/10/97
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

GRAND STANDS
SPORTS BAR-N-GRILL
THURSDAY & FRIDAY
KARAOKE
W/ DIVA PRODUCTIONS BY LAURIE
SAT. DEC. 6
Mentos & The New Horizons
SUN. DEC. 7
CLEMENTINE & Sharon American
UPCOMING SHOWS
Dec. 13 Love Bomb
Northampton (Exit 18 off I-91) 584-4830

Weaver reprises Ellen Ripley role

Alien: Resurrection fails to show audience anything new

COURTESY JOSEPH LEDERER

Winona Ryder, pictured here in Little Women, takes on a different kind of role when she joins Sigourney Weaver in Alien: Resurrection.

By Bryan McAllister
Collegian Correspondent

ALIEN: RESURRECTION
Directed by Jean-Pierre Jeunet with Sigourney Weaver, Winona Ryder, Ron Perlman
Playing at Mr. Forms Theaters

The movie sequel is getting much easier to make these days. No longer are deceased villains, or heroes for that matter, really gone for good. Thanks to genetic engineering, Hollywood can bring back its best bad guys — just imagine a cloned Jaws haunting the waters again. Or while they're at it, why not make a whole school of killer sharks? Luckily, this hasn't happened yet, because for once the movie industry had a decent idea. They decided to bring back one of the greatest action heroes in film history — Ellen Ripley. It's just too bad they couldn't resurrect a better movie as well.

Ripley and her aliens have a deep history, and Alien: Resurrection, the fourth installment, doesn't bother to explain much of it. It's a good idea to have seen the previous Alien films before viewing this one. However, you don't need much of an Alien IQ to appreciate another flawless performance by Sigourney Weaver. She truly stands above the material — still motherly and caring, yet tougher and more sardonic than ever before. She gets hit with a barbell and only suffers a nose bleed, and she firebombs a lab in the film's most disturbing scene. Oh, and it also seems she's not quite human anymore, because her blood oozes acid and she even has a curious physical attachment for the aliens. Hey, what's a horror movie without sex?

Alien: Resurrection begins 200 years after the last movie and Ripley's suicidal death. The evil "Company" of government officials has cloned Ripley in order to remove the alien queen in her stomach, and they plan to breed the alien in order to use its offspring for genetic purposes. Like in all Alien movies, the Company completely underestimates their captives despite warnings from Ripley like "She's a queen. She'll breed. You'll die." And what do you know, this is basically a summary of the movie.

Weaver's exchanges with the Company and crew members from a transport freighter are among the film's best moments. The movie luckily manages to maintain the sarcastic and playful humor that always elevated the series above the rest of the crowd. There are also a few welcome surprises — Winona Ryder as a crew member with a secret of her own, an engaging basketball scene showing off Weaver's toughness, and a beautifully shot underwater set piece featuring some nasty swimming aliens.

The Alien series has always been a director's dream. Ridley Scott (G.I. Jane), James Cameron (Terminator 2) and David Fincher (Seven) all challenged the genre with their inventive filmmaking. The latest edition to this group is Jean-Pierre Jeunet (The City of Lost Children), no slouch himself when it comes to style. He produces some good moments early in the film, namely a montage of Ripley hatching out of a cocoon-like substance and the aliens' escape from their glass prison. The production design and special effects are also very well done, especially considering the complex movements of the aliens and the actors' interaction with the sets.

However, the major challenge of any sequel is to show the audience something they haven't seen before, without sacrificing the theme and tone of the original. This is where Alien: Resurrection suffers. What made the first three movies so special was their calculated suspense and subtle touches. This was done through stylistic direction, photography mixing light and dark and morose music at just the right moments. They exhibited the "less is more" theory — suspense was created from not showing something, instead of placing it in front of us like conventional horror movies. Unfortunately, that's exactly what Resurrection is — conventional. It shows us everything, meaning more aliens, more action and much more gore. Alien 3 was criticized for being to slow and dialogue-based, so this fourth installment is pumped up to the max. While entertaining, many scenes are more disturbing than scary, especially as we discover that Ripley is more alien than human.

The Alien movies set the standard for mixing science fiction and horror. Recently, with movies like The Relic and Event Horizon, that standard has dropped. Alien: Resurrection isn't a bad movie at all, but it certainly doesn't re-raise the standard. It does, however, show off the diverse talents of Sigourney Weaver, who saves the day again, literally. But it's too bad, by the film's end, that she can't save the possibility of another sequel. C+

■ shopping

continued from page 5

cial deals before noon.

Catalogs — Catalogs offer a great way to shop from home and have everything delivered to your doorstep just in time for Christmas. Some catalog companies will even wrap your present and attach a Christmas card. You might be taking a chance by ordering clothes, but for the most part, catalog companies have a fairly liberal return policy.

Be assertive — Shopping malls at this time of year are nasty. Don't be afraid to be aggressive when you have to be. At the same time, don't be rude. Letting people push you around will make shopping a less than enjoyable experience.

Ask — If you can't find what you are looking for, track down the salesperson and ask. During the rush, things get misplaced or maybe the item you're looking for is out of stock. Asking will take away some of the aggravation and make shopping easier for you.

Indulge — Shopping is hard work. If you're starting to feel the first pangs of frustration, take a deep breath and head for a scoop shop or cookie place for a sweet treat. Take a load off, put the bags down and simply relax. However, avoid coffee — it'll make you more jittery and nervous.

Shopping is never easy, but with a few deep breaths and some careful planning, you can make it a more enjoyable experience.

Seema Gangaṅkar is a Collegian columnist.

■ food

continued from page 5

going to get their ham or turkey during the holidays) and a pie (either homemade or store-bought) will make your friends swear eternal devotion to you.

And no pun intended, you kill a whole bunch of holiday birds with one stone — or something like that.

If you're not an experienced cook, then when is a better time to learn? Come on, don't you want to screw up those chocolate chip and macadamia nut cookies over and over again? You know you do — don't lie to me.

My advice is to start small, like those pre-programmed recipes you find on chocolate chip bags, or on the back of Bisquick boxes. Those recipes are there because they're simple, not like the quadruple-layer chocolate and almond torte I'm famous for — on the other side of the pond, that is.

Most of all, just have fun. A famous cook from Georgia, who gave me his amazing recipe (through a airplane magazine) for Brunswick Stew, said something like, "Food is all about getting people together and having a good time... and I like being the person who can do that."

That's what it is all about. Happy Holidays.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

PHOTO: KENNETH W.P. SCOTT

The calm before the storm...

An overhead view of the soon-to-be-crowded Holyoke Mall.

■ Allen

continued from page 11

adventure starring Allen has a man who woke up from an operation 200 years in the future. This film is the quintessential comical homage to the classic dystopia novels.

Annie Hall (1977) — Allen won three Academy Awards for this amazing revisionist look at the genre of the romantic comedy. Annie Hall also served as a gateway to the more serious side of Allen's talents which he focused more on in later '80s. The film was a fascinating blend of comedy and realistic drama worthy of its place in film history.

Manhattan (1979) — One of his earliest confessions of his fondness for younger women, which as we all know got him into quite a bit of trouble in the years to come. With the skyline of New York serving as the backdrop, this comic drama attempted to enter the lives of Manhattan's inhabitants.

Zelig (1983) — This mockumentary is one of Allen's most interesting works. Taking place at the height of the roaring '20s Allen pokes fun at this period of American history as man under psychiatric observance for his ability to physically alter his appearance and personality to match whoever surrounds him.

Purple Rose of Cairo (1985) — From one point of view a heartbreaking romantic comedy and from another direction an intriguing insight into our obsession with movie stars.

Crimes and Misdemeanors (1990) — This overlooked drama about guilt and repentance may be Allen's finest script to date. Staring Martin Landau as wealthy doctor who must choose whether to kill his meddling mistress.

KAI GHI WE DELIVER 586-2774 Sun-Weds noon-midnight Thurs-Sat noon-2am

REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS 253-9526

THE AMHERST DELICATESSEN
MEMBER O.C.M.P.
WE ACCEPT ALL MAJOR CREDIT CARDS.
Can We Build One For You?
Serving Sandwiches, Bagels & Lox, Fresh Soups & Salads, Take Out.
★ DELIVERIES CALL 549-6314 ★
★ OPEN UNTIL 9p.m. ★

Pizza, Calzones, Subs, Buffalo Wings
CANTONE'S PIZZA
Fast Free Delivery
Sunday - Thursday: 3:30 PM - 1:30 AM
Friday & Saturday: 3:30 PM - 2 AM
Medium Two Topping Pizza & Two 12 oz. Sodas only $9.95
May not be combined with other coupon or offer. Expires 12/8/98

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring "Rolling Rock" 12-pk bottles $6.99
The "12-Pack" Special!
Sam's "Winter Lager"
Pete's "Winter Brew"
Sam's "Lager"
Mill City "Old Nutcracker"
Your Choice! $8.99
Genny Summer Brew $5.99 30-pk.
"MICRO MADNESS CONTINUES"
Catamount, Mill City, ALL FLAVORS!, Harpoon, Petes
Mix & Match "TWO" 6-pks . . . $9.95 Wow!
Hardcore & Chester Ciders $4.99
Vodka 80° $9.99 1.75 liter $5.99 half liter
Saranac $6.99 can All Flavors!
Check Out Russell's Indoor Specials!
• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 11:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

PANDA EAST
CHINESE RESTAURANT & SUSHI BAR
Mass Best 1997
"We bring Chinatown to you"
BEST CHINESE RESTAURANT IN THE VALLEY SINCE 1987
LUNCH SPECIALS
STARTING AT $3.95
7 DAYS A WEEK
FULL MENU
FOR SUSHI, SASHIMI AND TERIYAKI IS AVAILABLE
TELEPHONE: (413) 256-8923 / 256-8924 FAX: 253-1173
103 North Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002
Delivery Express: 549-0077

■ hoops

continued from page 16

sold out, but rarely full.

The 7,536 is the lowest turnout for any UMass game so far this season. Each of the three games in Alaska had a sellout 8,700 in attendance and the Minutemen drew 10,220 at Fresno State.

■ Torbin

continued from page 16

I've never been a huge basketball fan, but I'd always look forward to the games just because of the electric atmosphere and to hear the roar that would rumble unmuffled through Mullins. I'd like to hear it again starting Saturday.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

■ NFL

continued from page 16

off).

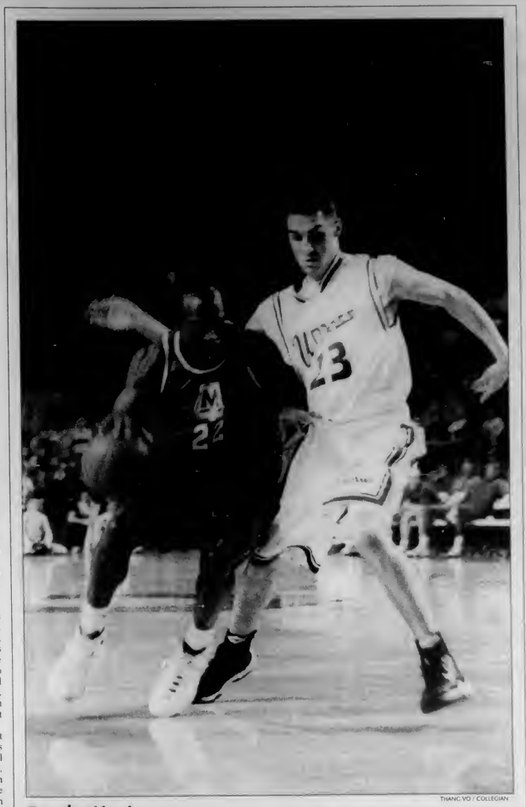
Now that I've talked about how strong the NFC Central is, let's talk about how weak the other two divisions are. The NFC West is just pitiful. The first place team can't beat a team over .500, and the other four teams have trouble beating anybody at all. Need I say anything else?

The NFC East is just a mess. Right now the Giants are the front runners, but either Washington, Philadelphia, or Dallas has a chance to win the division. Now the 'Skins have to put Jeff Hostetler at quarterback, thanks to the broken hip suffered by Gus Frerotte, which will either be a blessing or a curse. The Eagles have been too inconsistent, and should fold over the final three weeks. And as far as Dallas, I hate these guys. It's going to take more victories and less complaining to keep the Cowboys from hitting the links a little earlier than they are accustomed to.

Moving over to the AFC, the picture is just as fuzzy, with nine teams battling for six playoff spots. Someone has to win the AFC East, and Pittsburgh, Jacksonville, Kansas City and Denver appear to be shoo-ins. That leaves the other two AFC East teams, Seattle and Tennessee, playing for one spot. Whoever gets it will be the team that wants it the most. We'll just have to see who that is.

I am well aware of the fact that there are plenty of big games remaining to be played over the final three weeks of the season. However, by the time I write my next column in a couple of weeks, most of the playoff spots will already have been decided. So even though you probably don't care, I'm going to give you my playoff predictions anyway.

The AFC: Denver, Kansas City, Jacksonville, Pittsburgh, the Jets, and of course, New England. I really wanted to pick Tennessee to make the post-season, but I can't ignore the Jets.



The NFC: San Francisco, Green Bay, Tampa Bay, Minnesota, Detroit and the Giants will make the post-season. The other three NFC East teams will try to pull out a last-second surprise, but it will be to no avail.

I'll keep you in suspense with the playoff lowdown. After all, we'll have to see how many mistakes I made when I sit back down and write this in a couple of weeks.

Until then, sit back, relax and enjoy the games.

Michael Kobylanski is a Collegian staff member.

DO YOU LOVE SPRING SPORTS? THEN COME ON DOWN TO CAMPUS CENTER 113 AND BE PARTS OF THE SPORTS STAFF NEXT SEMESTER

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Toe the Line!

Mike Babul has provided a much needed spark as small forward for the Massachusetts men's basketball team.

Golden State star attacks Carlesimo during team practice

By Jim Litke
Associated Press

It took only a few days for somebody in the NBA to step forward and make Scottie Pippen look good. The trick will be to keep it from becoming a parade.

On Monday, Latrell Sprewell, a three-time All-Star with Golden State, attacked his coach — not once, but twice. Sprewell had been feuding with P.J. Carlesimo since training camp and apparently wanted out in the worst way. But attempts to accommodate him with a trade were stalled.

So when the first-year coach got on him in practice one more time for being lackadaisical, Sprewell came up with a way to kick-start the process.

And this is where he went Pippen several steps better: According to news accounts, instead of simply demanding a trade, Sprewell put Carlesimo in a stranglehold and told him, "I'm going to kill you. You better get me off this team, or that's what I'm going to do." Twenty minutes later, Sprewell returned to the court. He took another swipe at Carlesimo's head before teammates could pull him away. Within hours, the Warriors suspended Sprewell without pay for at least 10 games, which will cost him $940,000. Then they threatened to invoke a morals clause in the standard players contract and cancel what remains of the four-year, $32 million deal he signed two summers ago.

But Carlesimo and general manager Garry St. Jean insisted that a "dialogue" with Sprewell might still, somehow, convince them to lessen the penalty.

This is clearly wishful thinking. Since coming into the league in 1992, Sprewell has proven himself the worst kind of prima donna in a league increasingly loading up on them. With this latest rebellion, he can now claim to head the class of talented young malcontents who respect no one in authority and nothing that even hints of discipline. Sprewell has now defied three of the four coaches the Warriors hired during his tenure and helped force the trades of Tom Gugliotta and Tim Hardaway, both of whom went on to become stars elsewhere.

That's what people mean when they call the NBA "a player's league." Because of how much money is now at stake, and because one great player can make the difference between feast and famine, he often holds sway over a franchise. And if a franchise is desperate enough, a player like Sprewell, who puts up great numbers playing only for himself, gets to call a disproportionate number of the shots.

The sad thing is that this lesson was supposed to have been learned a few years ago. That's when Michael Jordan went off to play baseball and a league-wide panic set in to come up with replacements. The clubs threw fat, guaranteed contracts at players like Sprewell, Isaiah Rider, Derrick Coleman, Kenny Anderson, Chris Webber, etc., and the NBA star-making machine went into overdrive. Accorded a status they didn't deserve, paid a salary they didn't earn and tolerated even when they acted out, many of those players developed a warped view of life.

The scary thing is it could get worse before it gets better. Richard Lapchick, who heads Northeastern University's Center for the Study of Sport in Society and helps the NBA run its rookie orientation programs, says the league's discipline problems will grow as its average age keeps dropping.

And the generation coming in has had a lot more to contend with than its predecessors did.

"When Larry Bird and Magic broke into the NBA, AIDS was unheard of and crack was known only on a few street corners in the ghetto," he said.

"You've got more and more kids who grow up living on the edge, and they come to like it, because it's what they know. And all of these kids — not just the basketball players who become millionaires — are proving tougher to socialize."

Perhaps because the code of the street is silence, Sprewell hasn't apologized, hasn't said a word in public since the altercation. That is no big upset, because he quit talking to the media months ago, right after reports that he and the coach were not getting along. Honest.

The league front office hasn't said much, either. Rod Thorn, the NBA executive in charge of disciplinary matters, said the incident appeared to be a team matter and that the league's investigation was continuing. Commissioner David Stern, on hand Tuesday night for the opening of a new arena in Washington, D.C., simply stated the obvious: "We recognize that sometimes people step over the line, and sometimes they step very far over the line. This one looks — without having all the facts — like someone went into the stratosphere."

Asthma Sufferers
You may qualify for FREE Study Related CARE and FREE Study MEDICATIONS for your asthma as part of a research study.
If You Are:
• At least 15 years old
• Have had asthma for at least one year
• Are a non-smoker
You may be eligible to participate
Learn more about your asthma as you receive treatment
Compensation up to $250.00 will be provided to study participants
Call NOW 413-584-4010

Holly Days SOFTWARE
THE UNIVERSITY STORE HAS ALL THE BEST GIFTS FOR YOUR FAVORITE COMPUTER USER.
GAMES, ENTERTAINMENT, EDUCATIONAL, INTERNET, PRODUCTIVITY, AND MORE!
HARDWARE AND COMPUTER ACCESSORIES TOO!
WE ACCEPT AMEX, DISCOVER, MC, VISA, AND THE UCARD!
University Store
UNIVERSITY STORE IN THE UMASS CAMPUS CENTER
HOURS: M-F 9 TO 5 SAT. 11 TO 4
(413) 545-2619

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES
6 SINGERS 5 GRAMMYS 1 GREAT NIGHT
Take 6
With their fresh jazz harmonies, soaring vocals and seamless ensemble work, five-time Grammy-award winners Take 6 set the new standard for a cappella singing. Take the time. Take a friend. And don't miss the chance to Take 6.
SATURDAY, DECEMBER 6, 8PM, CONCERT HALL
Sponsored by WRNX and Easthampton Savings Bank
Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for tickets
Visit our Website at www.umass.edu/fac/fac.html
CONNECT WITH YOUR CENTER!
TICKETS ONLY $5 FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS
The Fine Arts Center, University of Massachusetts Amherst

Marshall Steinbeck
Complete Auto Collision & Painting Service
(413) 256-8157
53 So. Prospect St. Amherst, Mass. 01002
STATE REG. RS #1212 MA LIC. #1398

SPORTS CHANNEL, ESPN, ESPN2, NESN
Under New Management
Seven O's
Sunderland's Sports Bar For Live Music
Live Music by the "Hangmen"
Dec. 5th & 6th
"Lonesome Brothers"
Dec. 7th
Drink Specials
22oz. Petes Winter Brew $3.00
Never a Cover • SEVEN O'S • 665-8788
Route 116 IN SUNDERLAND (5 miles N of UMass exit)
ESPN, ESPN2, NESN

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom- Mill Hollow $540. Jan 1. Call Tracy 549-3759

One bedroom apartments available Jan-Feb 1st. Please contact the Brandywine Office at 549-0600.

1 bedroom at Puffton Village $545. Includes heat! Available 1/1/98. Please call 549-9221.

Take Over Lease 1 month free rent. Heat/Water Free! Move in anytime! Call 549-7105

Take Over My Lease One bedroom apartment. $550/month inclusive. Call Tang Odeh 586-5689

AUTO FOR SALE

Geo Prizm 1990 155,000. Very reliable. Well maintained (records). Blue Book says $2900. Asking $2000. 256-1845.

1989 Saab 900S Fully loaded. CD/Tape/Radio, sunroof. $3900 or B/O Call (413)548-1981

1986 Pontiac Sunbird High mileage, as is $800. B/O. Leah 685-1276.

88 Toyota Pick-Up 125k, runs well. $1100 firm. 367-7651.

89 Nissan 240SX Excellent condition. All extras. New: muffler, clutch, tires, brakes. $4400 or B/O. 549-8926

1986 Dodge Charger 2dr, hatch, 60k miles. Good gas mileage. $1200 or B/O. Call Lorraine 253-4626

1987 Honda Accord 5 speed, 158k. Great condition. Mika 584-8537.

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday 1-800-649-4795

COMPUTERS

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school! Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call DPC (413)564-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Janitor Tuesday and Thursday mornings beginning Jan. Hampshire Fitness Club. $7/hr plus membership! Call 256-6446

EMPLOYMENT

Customized Help, Customized Wealth. A Real. First twenty callers: (508)339-4784 or e-mail ideal@tiac.net

Applications are available for Tour Guides, Student Admissions Rep and Summer Orientation Jobs at Admissions Center.

Activists
$250-$400/Week
Holiday Jobs For The Environment
Work with the Sierra Club on an urgent campaign to
- Protect endangered species
- Prevent habitat loss
- Stop clear cutting in our NATIONAL FORESTS

Work over the holidays and beyond
Career Opportunities
On-campus interviews today at 11, 1, 3, 7, in Campus Center #178 or call Amy at 256-6434

January Jobs Use your winter break to make money. 2-4 week fun promotions around country. Great for the resume. Outgoing and independent people call (800)783-4237 Attn: Joe Collegiate Advantage

Summer Management Opportunities
Open across Mass. for the Summer of 1998. Earn $800-$900 per week. For more info please call College Pro Painters at (888)277-7962

Attention Slackers!!!
Use a mail? Know others who do? Little effort - Big money! Call (800)546-0744

Collegian Graphics
Now hiring for Spring Semester. Come work for New England's largest College Daily. Positions open
Day Graphics: advertising production
Night Graphics: editorial production
Stop by our office in the campus center basement and fill out an application

RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS

ADI Associates is looking for a few responsible people with good communication and computer skills who are available to work a minimum 20 hours per week. And will be available over winter break. Evening and weekend assignments are currently available. We offer flexible scheduling options, access to health and dental plans and paid training. The starting wage is $6.75/hr with regular merit increases. Free transportation from PVTA Bus Line is provided. For more information or to arrange a personal interview call:
413-587-1607
An Equal Opportunity Employer

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Jobs!!!
On campus Interviews Dec 11th
CAMP HASHOSA NORTH
Located in Southern Maine.
Currently hiring '98 Summer staff
If you have experience working with children we may have a place for you this Summer in Maine.
• At Chinh you will develop your communication, problem solving, teaching, and leadership skills. Most importantly we offer the opportunity to work with kids & staff from around the world and across the U.S. In an exciting and rewarding environment.
Call now!
Tele. 800-448-0136 or www.camphashoba.com

FOR SALE

Burton 6.1 Air Snowboard with bindings. $150 or B/O. Call Colin 546-2968

For Sale- Two pairs of skis K2 and Salomon. Almost brand new. $200 each or B/O. Call 546-6152

Take home speakers or a 16mm film camera for the break. Camera perfect for Film/Comm Majors. Call Sid at 549-6857. Free kittens 2.

Willpower In A Bottle
Lose Weight
Doctor Recommended
100% Natural
Moneyback Guarantee
(413)298-1922

FOUND

Found- Silver ring and silver earrings at Mullins Center after 311 concert. Call Barb 546-2985.

Found- Astrophysics Textbook in Campus Center. Call (413)467-3420.

JEWELRY

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3224 Open Daily.

LOST

Lost Wednesday near Boyden Gym- Purple zippered notebook with magnetivan and printing paper. Call 367-0266.

Women's Black Wool Coat Southwest area along Fearing St. Reward offered. Call Kara at 6-2465

Gold bracelet chain style with lobster claw. 527-3454

MISCELLANEOUS

Looking for concert photos? Kari 549-7242

PERSONALS

Congradulations
Dan and Joel!
Good luck and have fun!
Love you, Deb.
That's great Dan.
Did you send those letters

ROOM FOR RENT

Bedroom in Puffton Private bathroom. Available Jan 1st. $267/month. Female preferred. Call 549-2980

I'm graduating! One bedroom available in three bedroom apartment in Puffton Village. Pool thru Feb 1. Move in Jan. 1. $230/month. Heat included. Call 549-6729. Brian Large bedroom available for Wintersession- 5 minute walk to campus. $400. Call Dino 549-9972.

Quiet room, Downtown Amherst Available end of December. Lease 253-4236 9am-9pm

Furnished room available in a 4 bedroom Amherst house. $300/month. Near bus route. For more details call Tina 253-6428.

Dbe bedroom perfect for two in two bedroom apartment in Sunderland. Mindy 665-1276

Cheap rooms for Winteraession Live close to campus. Only $150. Includes heat/hot water. Call Jason 549-0958

ROOM FOR RENT

To share two bedroom apartment in Brandywine. Rent starting Jan 1. Call Tera 549-4390

ROOM FOR RENT

Looking for one male to share four bedroom apartment on Alpine Commons with three males. Two full baths. $300/month. Everything included. Starting ASAP. Call Josh 253-6481

2 roommates wanted to share 3 bedroom in Puffton. Available Jan 1. Call 549-8564

Roommate Wanted- 6 bedroom house, Amherst. $210/month. Own room (spacious), wood heated, pool table. Call 549-7177.

Geo bedroom available in two bedroom apartment. Walk to Uptown and UMass. On bus line. $270/month plus utilities. Call 253-4613. Available 1/98.

Geo bedroom is available in Cliffside Apartment. Call Franky 665-7831

Very quiet roommate wanted in Amherst on bus line. $260/month plus 1/3 utilities. 256-5402, 253-9457

SERVICES

I need someone willing to let me photograph them getting their body pierced for Photo Project. Will pay. Nicole 256-3005

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

DECORATOR SERVICE

Beautify your home- wallpaper, painting, staining. Expert work- 20 years exp. Free estimates. Call (413)533-6213 South Hadley.

GET NOTICED! Number One secret to resume writing for college students and gen-x. Send $5.00 check/money order + business size SASE to: Nina Smith, 507 Central Avenue, No. 2, New Haven, CT 06515.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906.

STEREO & CD EQUIPMENT

Marshall Speaker For Sale 4x12 Cab. LOUD! Great condition. Must sell! $500 or best offer. Call Mike at 546-0955

TO SUBLET

Take Over Lease Feb 1st 2 bedroom apartment at The Boulders. $725, heat/hot water included. On bus line. 256-1415

TRAVEL

Book Early & Save!
Great Spring Break Destinations! Best prices. Free parties, drinks, and food. Call Eve 546-2111

SPRING BREAK 98
Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399. Organize a small group and travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577

Spring Break and other travel Special rates for students. Call Travel Network at (201)533-0300 (800)699-4988 outside NJ

RELIABLE SPRING BREAK TOURS
Bahamas, Cancun & Ski Trips! FREE FOOD & FREE DRINKS! Sign up before Nov. 30. Organize a group- travel free. Call for details and free brochure. Call (888)SPRING BREAK Today!

PLEASE ADD A BLACK BACKGROUND WITH WHITE LETTERS!!!
SPRING BREAK TRAVEL with Sunsplash Tours. Lowest prices, guaranteed! Jamaica, Cancun, Barbados, Bahamas, Panama City, Daytona, Key West, Puerto Rico, South Padre Island. Book before December 22! Call Jason 549-0958

SPRING BREAK 98
Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399. Organize a small group and travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577

WANTED TO RENT

I need a one bedroom apartment for Spring. Will take over lease. Amherst preferred. Dan 546-2035

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida
From $299
Best Prices!
NOW HIRING REPS!
1-800-234-7007
http://www.ondeckspringbreak.com

Check it out!

The Classifieds have NEW Headings

Come and see us today!

Canyons Pizza
256-6100
1 2 LARGE CHEESE $13.95
2 2 CALZONES $8.95
3 4 CALZONES $15.95
4 2 LRG 1 TOPPING $15.95
No Coupons Needed w/ Specials
Free Delivery!

The most popular question on Campus:

"WHAT ARE YOU DOING IN THAT BOX?"

The Answer:

SELLING COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used as personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals or a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must have a faculty or staff member sign the ad. This number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELERY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND
DAYS FREE!
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR RENT
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP.
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, DEC. 4

Discussion — Amy Hoffman will discuss her recent book Hospital Time— A Memoir of Taking Care of Friends with AIDS at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803. The discussion is part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series and is co-sponsored by The Stonewall Center, GLB GSO, Women's Studies and the Chancellor's Task Force on GLBT Matters. For more information, contact the Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

Entertainment — "Not Ready For Bedtime Players" performing at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, Graduate Lounge.

Lecture — Anti-Semetism lecture today from 7-9 p.m. at the Hillel House entitled "Anti-Semitism in the International Arena." Come sit in on this one-credit course given by Lauren Levin, Eastern States Civil Rights Director, Anti- Defamation League. All visitors are welcome.

Information Session — The Domestic Exchange Program will be holding information sessions from 4:45-5:45 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 805. For more information stop by the office in Machmer E-26.

Meeting — The Peer Mentors' Network will be meeting at 6:30-8 p.m. in the Campus Center. See info desk for exact room. The meetings are for students and community members to support and discuss issues concerning disabilities. All are welcome. For more information, call Peter at 545-4602.

Blood Drive — American Red Cross Hampshire County chapter will hold a blood drive from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 168C.

Film/Talk — The classic film Dr. Strangelove or How I learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb will be shown at 7 p.m. at Stirn Auditorium, Amherst College, followed by a talk entitled "They are still trying to get us to love the bomb," given by Ira Helfand, M.D., a member of the Hampshire chapter of Physicians for Social Responsibility.

Floral Exhibit — The Annual Holiday Floral Exhibit of flower arrangements by UMass and Stockbridge students in the Introductory and Advanced Floral Design courses will be held from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. in French Hall, room 105.

Service — Shabbat service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. Welcome the Sabbath with a bit of song and prayer.

Vigil/Rally — World AIDS candlelight vigil at 6 p.m. at the Student Union entrance. Speak out and rally at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Cape Cod Lounge. Sponsored by the UMass Pride Alliance, Health Education, University Health Services and The Stonewall Center. For more information, call the Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

SATURDAY, DEC. 6

Comedy — MISSION IMPROVable will be performing their four-week comedy improv show at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163.

NOTICES

Applications — The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team is accepting applications for its training this January 12-16. Applications are available for any UMass student at 222 Hampshire House, Legal Studies. For more information, contact Leah at 545-5882.

Art Exhibition — An exhibition of more than 30 one-of-a- kind artist books and scrolls by William Schade will be on view from Nov. 11 through Jan. 25 at the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum. Museum hours are Tuesday - Friday, 11 a.m.–5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday, 1-5 p.m. and is closed on academic holidays from Wednesday, Nov. 26 through Monday, Dec. 1 and from Tuesday, Dec. 16 through Monday, Jan. 6. For more information, call 538-2245 or fax 538-2144.

Auditions — The Not Ready for Bedtime Players are holding auditions for next semester on Monday, Dec. 8 at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163.

Club — The UMass Amateur Radio Club Station W1PUO is returning and looking for people to join in Ham radio. Anyone interested in radio/electronics and a desire to learn and communicate are welcome. The club will sponsor FCC license volunteer examination sessions for all license levels. For more information, contact Richard Strycharz N1MTT at 549-6000 ext. 6000 or leave a message at facility services.

Entertainment — Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance production of "Italian American Reconciliation" at 8 p.m. on Dec. 5, 6, and 7 in Fayerweather Studio Theater, Amherst College. Admission is free, reservations are suggested. Call the box office at 542-2277, between 1- 4:30 p.m. weekdays and until 8 p.m. performance nights.

Exhibit — "Orchids and Works of Sculpture" at the Durfee Conservatory opening Dec. 5 from noon- 6 p.m. and continuing through Dec. 10. Conservatory hours are Monday- Friday 8:30 a.m.- 4:30 p.m. Sponsored by the Amherst Orchid Society and Sculpture Department of UMass.

Fill-A-Bus — Help fill a PVTA bus with clothing, toys and non-perishable food to benefit needy individuals and families in the Amherst area on December 1-5 from 11 a.m.- 3 p.m. daily in front of the Student Union. Volunteers to staff the bus and collect donations needed. Contact the UMass Community Service Program at 545-3368 for more information.

Internships — Environmental and Hunger Internships available for credit. Opportunities include helping to organize a Five College Earth Day, protecting Endangered Species and organizing the Spring Hunger Clean-up. For more information, call Robyn at 545-0199.

Normal — Spectrum Magazine is taking submission for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office at 545-2240 or come by in the Student Union, room 406F.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, C/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN 2 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN	Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN SI
25	Headline News
28	UCTV
27	TBS
28	BET
28	TV Land
30	Univision
31	Comedy Central
32	Cartoon
33	Much Music

545-3500

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 4, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	19	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Italian Americans (R) (In Stereo)			Andrea Bocelli:	Romanza In Concert (R)	Keeping Up		This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Billy Graham Crusade		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Dellaventura "Dreamers"	News		Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Promised Land (In Stereo)		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Dellaventura "Dreamers"	News		Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Dangerous World: The Kennedy Years (In Stereo)					20/20		Nightline
WLVI	56		Full House	Boy World	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★★ "Clean and Sober" (1988, Drama) Michael Keaton.			News			Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (R)	Union Square	Seinfeld (R)	Veronica	ER "Union Station" (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTXX		4	Cheers	Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Honey, I Shrunk the Kids		Seinfeld (R)	Veronica	ER "Union Station" (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Friends (R)	Union Square	Seinfeld (R)	Veronica		News		Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Living Single	Between Bros.	413 Hope St.	"Hate Crimes"	ER "Union Station" (In Stereo)	News		Deep Space 9
WWLP	61	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (R)	Union Square	Seinfeld (R)	Veronica		News		Tonight Show
WGBY	57	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Indian Motorcycle Memories		Mystery! "Prime"	"Victory Dickory Dock" (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 2)				Feetwood
WGGB	40	29	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Dangerous World: The Kennedy Years (In Stereo)				20/20	News		Nightline
WSBK	38		Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	Star Trek: Voyager "Displaced"		Seinfeld "Warriors" (In Stereo)		News	M*A*S*H	Frasier	Real TV
WTBS	48		Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach	Coach	★★½ "Uncommon Valor" (1983, Drama) Gene Hackman, Robert Block.				★★ "Medicine Man" (1992) Sean Connery.
A&E	25		Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Blood Is Thicker"		Biography: The Marshall Fields		Sea Tales (R)		Unexplained (R)	Law & Order
CNN	24	23	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today	Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	26	26	Premium	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★½ "Opposite Sexes" (1998, Comedy) Paul Hogan.				Lounge Liz.	Premium	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	52		Wings "Eyes in the Sky" (R)		Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery: Monsters			Into Unknown	Movie Magic	Wings "The Bear Trap" (R)	Justice Files "Murder One" (R)
ESPN	27		Up Close	Sportscenter		NFL Tonight	NFL Football: Tennessee Oilers at Cincinnati Bengals. (Live)						NFL Sportscenter
LIFE	29		Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Warrior in the Shadows" (1995, Suspense) Marcy Walker.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	31		MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		Daria (R)	Beavis-Butt.	MTV Live (R) (In Stereo)		TBA	Puffy Tour (R)	Loveline (R)
NICK	42		Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Bewitched	I Love Lucy	Odd Couple	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI	59		Twilight Zone	Masters	Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)		Seaquest DSV "The Stinger"		Forever Knight (In Stereo)		VR.5 "Parallel Lives" (In Stereo)	Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)
TLC	45	28	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Medical Detect	Without Warn.	Volcano: Daredevils (R)		Connections II (R)	Medical Detect	Without Warn.
TNT	54		King For Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		★★★ "Escape From Alcatraz" (1979, Adventure) Clint Eastwood, Patrick McGoohan.				Rough Cut	★★½ "Heaven's Gate" (1980)
USA	60		Baywatch "Promised Land"		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★½ "Stop Or My Mom Will Shoot" (1992) Sylvester Stallone.			Silk Stalkings "Dead Asleep"
HBO	46		(5:30) "Mystery, Science		★★★ "Le Bal" (1982, Biography) Lou Diamond Phillips. PG-13		"Wounded" (1997)		Malcolm Arnold."			Inside the NFL (In Stereo)
MAX	53		★½ "House Arrest" (1996, Comedy) Jamie Lee Curtis. PG				★★½ "Real Genius" (1985, Comedy) Val Kilmer. PG				★ "The Glass Cage" (1996) Charlotte Lewis. R		"Hellraiser III
SHOW	50		(5:00) "On a Clear Day"		★★½ "Runaway" (1984, Science Fiction) Tom Selleck. PG-13				★★½ "Sci-Fighters" (1996) Roddy Piper. R			★★ "Cover Me" (1995, Rick Rossovich. R

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Monkey Socials By Mookie Jackson

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You may want to take a break regularly today to check out how things are going outside your own domain. Keep tabs on new developments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may not be in a posittion to call all the shots today, but you can perform well no matter who is in charge. Trust yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You cannot blame yourself for what happens to another because he or she has been out of touch. You have been trying to maintain contact.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may feel as though you're in a slump at this time, but the current lull is only temporary, and you'll be up to par when the time comes.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — A strange and unexpected situation can prove once and for all today that you are a clutch performer. You have what it takes to come through.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Someone may be waiting for you to make even the slightest mistake so that he or she can exploit it to suit his or her own needs. Use caution.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — It shouldn't take you long to tend to routine affairs today. During evening hours, a surprise presents itself and requires immediate attention.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You may not be feeling up to par today — emotionally or physically or both. Still, you can accomplish one thing of great value.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Seek the advice of someone who has been in your shoes, and you'll realize that your instincts are keen and trustworthy. Be yourself at all times.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — It is your turn to play hero today — if you so choose. What you accomplish can win you the admiration of many and improve your self-esteem.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Your plans may have to change today as a result of unexpected circumstances which effect a close friend or relative. You can adjust with ease.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You must be ready to go the distance today. Do not look for the quick fix or the easy way out, but instead bear down and do what you must.

Quote of the Day

"We are not all vibrant, fun-loving sex mainiacs."

–Grandpa Simpson

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Pizza Casserole
Vegan Falafel Sandwich w/falafel sauce

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Jamaican Beef Patty
Shells w/Mushroom sauce
Grilled Cheese Sandwich

Worcester

LUNCH
Hot Turkey Sandwich
Elbow Macaroni/Tomato Sauce
Vegetable Lo Mein

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Black Bean Quesadilla
Vegan Black Bean Quesadilla
Pastabilities

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Barbecued Beef on a Bun

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Jamaican Beef Patty

Berkshire

LUNCH
Hot Turkey Sandwich
Hamburger on a Roll
Harvest Burger

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Jamaican Beef Patty
Pasta Shells w/Tomato Basil Broth
Pastabilities

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Mark McGrath
Photo Technician	Lauren Kosky
Copy Editor	Melissa Tauber
Production Supervisor	Sam Smullin
Production Staff	Angie Annese, Jannie Huang

ACROSS
1 Oater group
6 Pep
9 Kind of bear
14 Wedding-party member
15 Nabokov novel
16 Wipe out
17 Nursery purchase
19 Charters
20 Enemy
21 Has a cold
22 Unspoken
23 Type of sale
25 More impolite
26 Sniff
29 Box
31 Small bowl
32 Bossy's necklace
36 Type of beam or chair
37 Assist
38 Negative votes
40 Releases, as steam
43 Literary genre
45 Con
46 Tower
47 Happening
50 Hobgoblin
51 On — nine: ecstatic
52 Roman road
54 — Wiedersehen
57 Excuse
58 Bubbly drink
61 Misrepresent
62 Above, to Keats
63 Wear away
64 Scoff at
65 Beatty of films
66 Gold bar

DOWN
1 Huff and —
2 Norwegian capital
3 Loafer, e.g.
4 Baste
5 Before
6 Insipid
7 Matinee man
8 Tumblers' pads
9 Worry
10 Mountain nymph
11 Spear
12 Up and about
13 Take five
18 Less common
23 America's Cup contender
24 Malt brew
25 Not cooked
26 "Sort of" suffix
27 Tack
28 Colossal
29 Category of fiction
30 School of whales
33 Vestibule
34 Cougar's home
35 Stringed instrument
37 Shipboard direction
39 — forth: begin
41 Grittier
42 Toronto's prov
43 Gale or blizzard
44 Mo. with no holidays
47 Actress Barkin
48 Sheer fabric
49 Jazz pianist Blake
50 Facial hair
51 Taxis
52 Computer-screen graphic
53 "Or — I sing"
54 Excited
55 Loosen
56 Paws
59 Can. province
60 Prince Valiant's son

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

G	N	A	T		M	E	D	A	L		B	A	C	H
L	O	B	O		A	G	I	L	E		L	U	A	U
A	T	O	M		R	O	M	A	N		V	E	R	B
D	E	U	C	E	S		R	U	D	O	L	E	S
			A	S	H		O	M	N	I
F	O	O	T	P	A	T	H		A	I	R	E	D
A	M	A		L	A	M		N	A	O	M	I
V

SPORTS

Green Bay, UMass hoop need backers

From the "I've got a bridge to sell you real cheap" department...

The Green Bay Packers are looking for a few backers. The nation's frostiest franchise is issuing shares of its stock for $200 a pop. Problem is, this stock will never pay dividends, can not be resold, is not recognized by the Securities and Exchange Commission, and only offers extremely limited voting rights, representing exactly 0.0000195 percent ownership of the Lambeau Leapers. The entire offering of 400,000 shares represents about 8 percent of the club's outstanding shares and exactly zero percent of the profits.

Leigh Torbin

Basically, in exchange for a pair of 100-dollar bills that I don't expect to see until the AT&T people stop whining about the phone bill (translation, when the Packers replace Brett Favre with Bart Simpson), you get a nice piece of paper with both your name and the Packer logo on it.

Pretty sweet deal for the Pack, who plan on using the money to improve Lambeau Field. They're getting 200 bucks basically in exchange for nothing. So, in response, I'm following my sports idols.

Just drop off a $200 check at the Collegian made out to yours truly and you will receive 0.0000195 percent of the say in the content of this column on a week-by-week basis in the spring. I will also accept cash, and remember to make those checks out to Leigh Torbin, not Lee, I hate that.

What does all of this show exactly? Even in the remote outpost of life that is Green Bay, Wis., all that matters these days is the money, cash, dough, moolah, dinero, bread— whatever. They're talking Greenbacks in Green Bay.

I guess Puff Daddy's right. It's all about the Benjamins, or in my case the Abrahams and Georges. Ohhhhh yeah, with my salary, it's all about the Georges baby! And I'm not even talking about GW on the dollar bill, I mean his likeness on the quarter.

• Life has been hectic lately. I've gotten very little sleep since we got back here, and I might not touch my pillow again until Monday night. This presents a problem for me because I like to live in a dream/fantasy world sometimes. A devout Parrothead, I let my imagination flow and believe in the concept of a St. Somewhere.

While I might be missing this beautiful place, I still have another to keep me going... the wonderful world of SportsCenter. Lately there's been no problem, real life's more bizarre than anything I could conjure up:

• Suppose I told you even two years ago that a late- November game between Syracuse and Miami in the Orange Bowl, with the Big East title at stake for the 'Cuse, would draw just a shade over 25,000. That and do you realize that on Dec. 31, while the Hurricanes will be drinking a few Hurricanes, Pittsburgh will play in the Independence Bowl.

• Suppose I told you that the UConn women, who come to Mullins a week from tonight, would beat URI 101-38. So much for an off-year sans Shea Ralph. Heads up Ioanie.

• Suppose I told you that the prides of the south suddenly compare differently. Within a week of the release of his new album, a Billboard record 12 singles off of Garth Brooks' new CD Sevens would wind up on the country singles chart, but a week or two into the season, only seven SEC teams are on the women's hoop chart. Just seven Top 25 teams?? Guess it's a down year for the SEC with only three of those seven in the top ten.

• Suppose I told you about this whole Latrell Spreewell- P.J. Carlesimo thing. I won't even dignify the sordid episode with commentary. It sickened me like my 21st birthday.

• Suppose I told you that Bruiser could bring a team that was minutes away from last year's NCAA Sweet 16 into Mullins and a whopping crowd of 7,536 apathetic mostly- season ticket holders would show up.

If you're reading this, odds are you have some interest in the team and a big-time college atmosphere — it might even be why you came here to begin with — and if you skipped Tuesday night you should be ashamed of yourself. Likewise, if you went and sat on your thumbs the whole time that could almost be worse. Stand Up! Stand Up, damnit!

Just a few years ago the roof would come off of that place when St. Bonaventure or Duquesne came to town on a Monday during Wintersession. Tuesday's display was absolutely pathetic and that was exactly the lackluster type of first half that people talk about when they say a fiery crowd could have been a factor. Unfortunately for those of us who sat through the 19-14 frame, the apathy in the seats helped translate into a

Turn to TORBIN, page 13

Women's basketball team to visit Maine

Kelly Van Huisen and friends looking to trap the Black Bears

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's basketball team will look to return to their winning ways tonight when they take on the University of Maine. UMass is coming off their first loss of the season, a 59-56 defeat at the hands of Ohio State. They will travel to Orono, Maine for tonight's game, scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

UMaine will also be looking to rebound tonight, after losing to No. 23 Wisconsin in the title game of the Dead River Classic Tournament. The Black Bears had defeated James Madison University in the first round to advance to the title game, but were defeated by the Badgers 97-80.

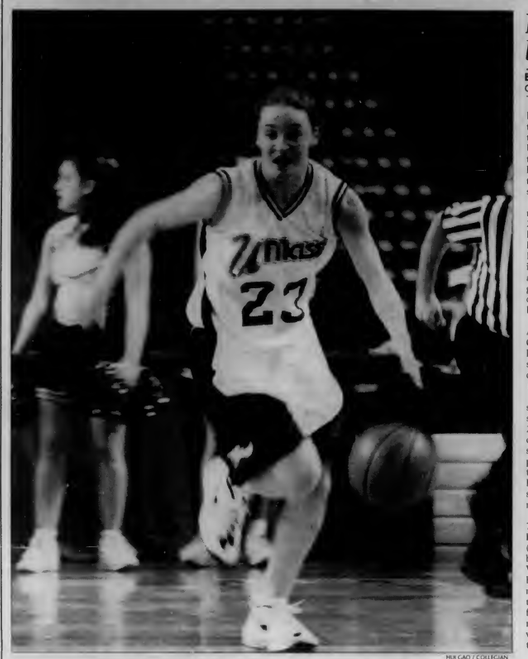
A member of the America East Conference, Maine has control of the standings with a 2-1 overall record and a 1-0 conference record.

The Black Bears are being lead this season by superstar Cindy Blodgett. A senior guard, Blodgett is averaging 28.7 points and 4.7 rebounds. She is currently on the verge of breaking several records. Blodgett needs 19 points tonight to up her career total to 2,406, and surpass Rachel Bouchard as the all-time leading scorer in school and conference history.

She currently has 2,387, and needs 735 more to break the NCAA Division 1 record for career points (3,122). The record is currently held by Patricia Hoskins of Mississippi Valley State. Blodgett could also become the first woman to lead the nation in scoring for three consecutive seasons. She has led the nation for the past two seasons, an achievement attained only once before in women's basketball and only four times in men's.

Blodgett scored 32 points in the game against Wisconsin and 23 against James Madison. Blodgett has scored in double-figures for 61 consecutive games. She was named to the Dead River Classic All-Tournament Team. She is also a two-time America East Player of the Year and was the America East Tournament Most Outstanding Player for the past two years.

Another strong contributor for the Black Bears is sophomore center Jamie Cassidy. Cassidy scored 23 points against Wisconsin and was also named to the All- Tournament team.



The Minutewomen have a 3-1 record after splitting two road games in a Thanksgiving trip to Ohio. The Minutewomen defeated Kent, 67-65, before falling to Ohio State. The Minutewomen did have a 14 point lead in the second half, as late as the 7:54 mark. But the Buckeyes went on an 11-0 run, keyed by junior Larecha Joner. Jones then hit two straight threes to seal the game for Ohio State.

Juniors Tez Kraft and Yolanda Rayside continued their surprising play. Kraft had a season-high 23 points against Kent, and Rayside put up a double-double with 14 points and 13 rebounds. Kraft is now averaging 14.8 points per game, and Rayside is averaging 8.0 rebounds per game.

Sophomore guard Kelly Van Huisen has also continued her strong offensive play thus far this season. She scored 21 against Ohio State, including a perfect 3-3 from three-point range, and had a solid 11 against Kent. She is currently averaging 16.5 points per game, and is shooting over 63 percent from three-point range.

Tonight's game was a late addition for both schools. They were both scheduled to play Stanford, but a late change in Stanford's academic schedule forced the Cardinals to cancel both games.

Women's Basketball
Massachusetts @ Maine
Tonight, 7:30 p.m.

MIA CAGI / COLLEGIAN

Kelly Van Huisen and Massachusetts women's basketball team travel to Maine to take on the Black Bears today.

CHANG YU / COLLEGIAN

Lari Ketner has led the charge so far for the Minutemen.

Basit and Smith injured for UMass

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts sophomore power forward Ajmal Basit went down clutching his right knee in the second half of Tuesday night's 52-40 win over the College of Charleston.

After a few minutes on the floor, Basit walked off to the bench with help from UMass trainer Ron Laham. He sat out the rest of the game, but is expected to be ready to play Saturday when the Minutemen host Marshall.

"He'll be okay," UMass coach Bruiser Flint said. "He'll be ready to play Saturday at 12:30; he'll be limping until then."

Basit, who was expected to see increased minutes backing up both Lari Ketner and Tyrone Weeks, has played inconsistently thus far. He is averaging 4.4 points and 5.0 rebounds per game.

Basit (who was on crutches yesterday) appeared to be in agony while on the floor after twisting his knee, so in the wake of Winston Smith's injury, the fact that Basit walked away is a blessing for UMass.

Smith, who has been sharing time with Mike Babul at small forward, aggravated a previously torn ACL in his right knee last Friday night against Purdue in the Great Alaska Shootout. The injury is considered serious, and pending an evaluation today, the sophomore swingman could miss the rest of the season.

Babul has been the starter thus far and has responded with consistent improvement marked by trademark, tenacious UMass defense.

Twin Towers

Ketner and Weeks — widely regarded as one of the best forward tandems in the nation — certainly made an impression on Charleston coach John Kresse.

After the game, Kresse gushed over the physical play of the two Minuteman inside forces.

"They are both legitimate first round draft picks in the NBA," Kresse said. "Weeks is a Larry Johnson-type player."

Larry Johnson might be a stretch, but Weeks is certainly making his own mark for the Minutemen and a good case for himself in next summer's NBA entry draft.

Tuesday night, Weeks recorded his fourth double-double in five games this season with 12 points and 10 boards. Weeks is now averaging 13.8 points and 11.2 rebounds per contest, including a season-high 20 and 15 against Fresno State.

The tandem is even more impressive, though. The two have combined to average 31.4 points, 19.8 rebounds and 3.8 blocks in their first five games.

That includes a game against Purdue in which the duo ran up against another of the nation's finest frontcourt pairs. Brad Miller and Brian Cardinal are as versatile a pair of big men as college hoops has seen in a while, but Ketner and Weeks kept the two in check.

Miller, considered one of the nation's best centers, was held to 14 points and five rebounds by Ketner, who played most of the game in foul trouble. Miller also committed a game-high seven turnovers. Cardinal had 15 points, but eight came from the foul line.

Weeks and Ketner combined for 22 points and 17 rebounds (Ketner had five blocks), even though both were in foul trouble for the duration of the game.

Sell out?

For the first time in the 54-game history of the William D. Mullins Center, a UMass men's basketball game did not sell out.

The reported attendance last night was 7,536, a far cry from the capacity: 9,493. With the walk-up crowd, the attendance appeared to be closer to 8,500 for the home- opener.

Last season, the Mullins Center was continually

Turn to HOOPS, page 13

Can the Pats win AFC East title? NFC East race is too close to call

Michael Kobelanski
on the NFL

What can I say? The Patriots fielded the onside kick this week.

It wasn't pretty, but it was a victory over the Colts that is. They may have beat the Packers, but they're still terrible.

Now the real test comes for Pete Carroll and his crew. Eight and five with three games left. Three tough games, that is. Pittsburgh, Jacksonville and Miami are not cupcake teams by any means. The math is fairly simple; win all three and move on to the playoffs. Lose all three and the New England media will have a field day. I'm not going to make any predictions now, but from a standpoint of a Patriots fan, I'd just like to say that I'd rather be watching Drew Bledsoe hook up with Ben Coates than Neil O'Donnell connect with Wayne Chrebet in an early January playoff affair. All I can say is Go Pats.

This has by far been one of the most confusing years in recent NFL history. Dallas is near the bottom of the NFC East, while Tampa Bay is near the top of the NFC Central. It's not Oakland who is battling for a playoff spot out west, but Seattle instead.

When you watch a San Francisco game, Jerry Rice is not out there fielding passes from Steve Young. A nasty torn anterior cruciate ligament and medial collateral ligament can do that to you. (Hopefully he will continue his "miraculous" recovery and return for the playoffs.)

Players like Michael Irvin, Mark Brunell, Bryce Paup and Ricky Watters are not leading their teams with career years. Instead it's guys like Mike Alstott, Brad Johnson, and Eddie George who have their teams in the playoff hunt. I don't know if you really care, but this is one of the things that make you go hmmm.

One of the more consistent players not only this year, but over the entire decade, is Barry Sanders. What can I say about this human highlight reel? Well, he is (like myself) a legend. The man is just unstoppable. He has 11 consecutive 100 yard games, and needs only a little more than 400 yards in his final three games to break the 2,000 yard plateau. But what's even more important to Barry is that the Lions make the playoffs, which they probably will (even though Scott Mitchell is their quarterback).

Continuing with the NFC Central theme, it seems very plausible that the Norris Division will send four teams to the playoffs this year. Green Bay is at the top of the division, or exactly where they're expected to be, while Detroit, Minnesota, and of course, Tampa Bay, have all been pleasant surprises. The Bucs are also in good shape to host a playoff game if they finish strong. So, with a little help from the 49ers, the Bucs may even end up in San Diego on Super Bowl Sunday (as long as they don't have to play in weather below 42-degrees at kick-

Turn to NFL, page 13

JEN JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Start stretching

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team hosts its first meet of the season on Saturday at 7 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 65 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, December 5, 1997

Drew Barrymore's long lost sister?

Kay Hanley and Letters To Cleo play Pearl Street tonight as part of 99.3's Snow Show '97. Check out our preview (see Arts & Living, page 5).

UMass looks to trample Marshall

The Thundering Herd stampedes into UMass to run with Mike Babul and the Minutemen, looking for an upset victory (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Libyan witness says CIA behind bombing

BERLIN (AP) — After recanting his alleged confession implicating Libya in a 1986 disco bombing, the prosecution's former star witness yesterday said the real mastermind was the CIA.

Prosecutors had expected Musbah Abulghasem Eter, who worked at the Libyan Embassy in then-communist East Berlin, to testify against his four co-defendants and implicate Libya in the attack on a Berlin disco favored by U.S. military personnel.

Two U.S. servicemen and a Turkish woman died in the April 5, 1986, explosion and about 230 others were injured. Then-President Reagan accused Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi of ordering the bombing and retaliated with deadly air strikes on two Libyan cities.

Eter, 40, went on trial last week along with two other employees of Libya's former embassy in East Berlin and two German sisters. Charges range from murder and attempted murder to being an accessory to a crime.

Prosecutors said Eter had confessed and turned state's evidence. But he surprised the court on Tuesday by denying he or his four co-defendants were involved, and testified that the Libyan Embassy had not approved it either.

NATION

Gore creates second deputy chief post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Al Gore, who's made no secret of his plans for a presidential campaign in 2000, is strengthening the ranks of his senior staff. But White House officials insist no one there is looking beyond 1998.

In a round of personnel changes announced yesterday, Gore created a second deputy chief of staff post. It will be filled by Pat Moore Ewing, a veteran communications adviser to Democratic campaigns, including Pennsylvania Sen. Harris Wofford's 1994 re-election effort.

Monica Maples Dixon is to fill the other deputy chief of staff position, which was vacated when David Strauss moved to the Pension Benefit Guarantee Corporation.

Dixon is executive director of the House Democratic Caucus, which sided with President Clinton — and against Minority Leader Dick Gephardt — in the administration's unsuccessful bid for "fast-track" authority in trade negotiations.

This early in the game, Gephardt is considered Gore's chief rival for the 2000 Democratic nomination.

One Gore aide, asked about the personnel decisions, privately acknowledged the vice president was "beefing up for the future." But White House officials say 2000 is off Gore's radar screen and electing a Democratic majority to Congress in 1998 is his and Clinton's sole political concern right now.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 39 LOW: 25	HIGH: 34 LOW: 19	HIGH: 36 LOW: 19

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Police still searching for clues in September death of Prentice

Two months after the death of junior Adam G. Prentice, campus police are still trying to answer questions in the unsolved case and piece together events that led to his death.

University of Massachusetts Police Chief John Luippold would not comment on the investigation but said, "we are still seeking anyone who might have information about Adam's death."

Police urge any student who was on North Pleasant Street between Puffon Village and Morrill Science Center and may have seen or been with Prentice the night of Sept. 26 or early Sept. 27 between midnight and 1:30 a.m. to call police at 545-0893.

According to Luippold, police have been unsuccessful in their search for anyone who was with Prentice around the time of his death.

Prentice, 21, died early Sept. 27 after he fell through a greenhouse roof near the Morrill Science Center. His cause of death was listed as massive bleeding and toxicology reports indicated that Prentice was intoxicated at the time of his death.

— Leigh Faulkner

UHS prohibits holiday decorating

By Sarah J. Kimmel
Collegian Staff

With the holiday season nearing full swing, many people are decorating their environments with symbols representative of the season. This is not possible for the employees of University of Massachusetts Health Services (UHS). For the past three years, the UHS staff have not been allowed to display any holiday decorations anywhere on the premises.

Three years ago Bernadette Melby was hired as the new Director of Health Services. She created a policy that prohibited holiday decorations during the winter holiday season.

One reason for this may be that by decorating for specific holidays, people who do not celebrate these days may feel left out of uncomfortable. Marie Fil, a nursing assistant at UHS, said that this could be avoided.

"We have many different ethnic groups represented here at Health Services. We want to recognize them all," Fil said.

"Bernadette said that she didn't want to offend people from other countries who may not celebrate the predominant holidays," Kerstin Stemple, a nursing assistant, said. "We want to educate those people about the holidays".

Not only are these decorations banned in the halls and waiting rooms of the UHS building, but also in the offices of the employees.

"We can't even hang our cards up in our own offices," said Joselyn Koldy, who is also a nursing assistant at UHS.

Koldy and her colleagues want to have a holiday party this year. This has been a desire of theirs for the past three years, but hasn't been allowed.

"We were going to have a holiday party here at work. It wasn't allowed... We tried to change the name to a 'end of the season party' but that was also denied because it sounded like we were trying to get rid of the students," Koldy said. "We just want to have a holiday party together as a faculty community."

The nurses also planned to have a mitten tree this year in order to collect mittens and then donate them to the Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) Foundation. This project was also denied because the tree could be considered a Christmas decoration.

"We just wanted to help the unfortunate who may not be able to do as much... it's the spirit of the season," Koldy said.

The nurses, however, did not give up.

"Instead of doing a secret holiday swap this year, we are making a collection and donating it to help out local areas that need it," Fil said.

In contrast to the bare walls of the inside of the facility, the security booth outside UHS is decorated with both a Christmas tree and a wreath.

"That is the first thing everybody sees when they drive in," Koldy said. "If it can be out there I don't see why it can't be in here."

In addition, when looking out of the windows of the Obstetrics and Gynecology wing located on the third floor of UHS, one can see the Chancellor's house in full Christmas decor. Koldy said, "If the Chancellor's house can display the feeling of the season, why can't we?"

The nurses believe that the decorations during this season boost the morals of both patients and faculty.

Turn to UHS, page 3

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Orchids and art

Amherst Orchid Society and the Sculpture Dept. here at UMass put on a show at the Durfee Conservatory starting today and running until Dec.10. (This image has digitally manipulated.)

Scott against further financial restructuring

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Professor Ann Ferguson, director of the Women's Studies program speaks at the final Faculty Senate meeting.

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Chancellor David K. Scott warned that the dramatic financial restructuring and reallocation the University of Massachusetts is in the process of undergoing cannot continue in the future.

"Enough, I say," Scott said "No more."

At yesterday's Faculty Senate meeting, the last of the semester, Scott discussed the financial restructuring and reallocation the University has undergone since 1994 and is set to undergo under his Strategic Action Plan through the year 2001.

Scott stressed the magnitude of the restructuring and reallocation — $24.5 million from fiscal years 1996-2000 alone — and said that this scope can not be maintained by the University in the future.

"No one should live under the illusion that what has been done in the past 10 years can be done for another five years," Scott said.

The University accomplished this restructuring and reallocation mainly by shifting resources from personnel to infrastructure.

In the past four years, 237 faculty positions were vacated. 32 percent of these positions were left unfilled, allowing funds to be shifted to other areas of the budget, such as infrastructure and information technology. The downsizing of the faculty, in addition to the redesign of administrative services, will contribute $14.7 million to the University budget during Strategic Action.

Reallocation within the University's departments and divisions, such as the shifting of faculty to new areas, will contribute $9.8 million to the campus budget in this time frame.

The monies created through restructuring and reallocation will fund all new programmatic investments made during this time period, as increases from the state legislature will be absorbed by mandated costs such as salary increases.

Scott characterized the restructuring and reallocation effort made by the University as equal or superior to efforts in the same areas being made by corporations such as I.B.M., G.E. and G.M.

"Allowing that it had to be done, we should be proud of what we have achieved here," Scott said. "I

Turn to FUNDS, page 3

Canadian postal workers end strike

By David Crary
Associated Press

OTTAWA — Threatened with heavy fines, Canadian postal workers grudgingly ended a two-week strike yesterday. Still, they vowed to show defiance by misdirecting corporate mail and handling regular letters even if unstamped.

Most of the 45,000 strikers returned to their jobs at midday, complying with back-to-work legislation passed by the federal government Wednesday night. Workers who defied the order faced fines of $700 a day.

The Canadian Union of Postal Workers said employees would find other ways to show their bitterness over the back-to-work order, which imposed a wage increase below that offered by the postal service during contract talks.

A prime target will be mail sent by government agencies and big corporations, said union president Darrell Tingley.

UMass Board of Trustees approves new alcohol policy

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — A new alcohol policy has been approved by the University of Massachusetts' Board of Trustees, but administrators say stepped up enforcement and better education are needed to curb excessive drinking.

The board of trustees voted Wednesday to approve an alcohol policy for its five campuses that's intended to crack down on underage drinking.

The vote follows a recommendation in October by the Massachusetts' Board of Higher Education that all state colleges and universities ban most alcohol use on campus.

"We're trying as hard as we can to make people understand there's a set of norms, a set of rules, that they're expected to adhere to," said Robert Karam, president of the board.

The new guidelines fall short of an out-and-out ban on alcohol on campus. They include strict adherence to the drinking age and all laws governing alcohol, and intolerance of alcohol abuse. Students who are of age are prohibited from drinking on campus with underage students or providing them with alcohol.

In many ways, said Karam, the new guidelines are a restatement of the old rules.

"They're not that different, but very clear," he said. By voting on new alcohol guidelines, both the higher ed board and the UMass board of trustees were responding to the deaths this fall of two students — one at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst and the other at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Karam said the UMass board of trustees stopped short of an all-out ban, because "we do not believe that's a practical application of what we as trustees, as administrators, can possibly be expected to do with the thousands of youth on our campus," he said.

Karam characterized a ban as foolish, impossible to administer and probably illegal.

"Amherst has 15,000 residents," he said. "It's a city. Are we going to say to that city, 'You can't bring alcohol into that city?' Are we going to say to students, 'You can't drink, so we'll push you to Northampton, we'll push you into cars, and we'll feel good about it'?"

He conceded, however that the schools could do a better job with enforcement and education.

David K. Scott, chancellor at UMass-Amherst, said the new guidelines aren't that much different from the university's current rules.

Mars surface once like Earth's

Findings pump life into possibility of finding evidence of life

By Paul Recer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Pathfinder robot uncovered evidence that Mars was once warm, moist and more like Earth than its forbidding surface might now suggest.

All of this is "a shot in the arm for the possibility of finding evidence of life" on the Red Planet, said one researcher. "The body of evidence returned by Pathfinder are suggestive that conditions had been conducive for the formation of life early in Mars' history," said Matt P. Golombek, a Pathfinder mission scientist and lead author of a research report in the journal Science.

Golombek said several lines of evidence have produced a strong consensus among scientists that Pathfinder landed July 4 on a Martian plain that was sculpted by liquid water sometime in the past and that such water proves the planet once was a warmer, more life-friendly place.

Although Pathfinder and its faithful wheeled rover, Sojourner, found no definite evidence of life, the report in Science said the spacecraft studies "appear consistent with a water-rich planet that may be more Earthlike than previously recognized, with a warmer and wetter past in which liquid water was stable and the atmosphere was thicker."

Finding evidence of liquid water, said Golombek, "is a shot in the arm for the possibility of finding evidence of life. If there was no liquid water, then there would be no need to search for life on Mars."

"There's nothing we found that would preclude life on early Mars," said John T. Schofield of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, the California Institute of Technology agency that controlled Pathfinder for NASA.

"Because there was liquid water billions of years ago, it is conceivable that there could have been life," said H. J. Moore of the U.S. Geological Survey, one of the principal researchers with Sojourner. "The liquid water makes that a possibility."

Liquid water would mean that Mars was much warmer than the minus-100-degree temperatures experienced by Pathfinder, the researchers say in Science. This, in turn, means that the atmosphere on Mars was then much thicker than now, the researchers say.

Moore said Sojourner, the small-wheeled rover that roamed for more than 170 feet around the landing site, found a number of rocks that bear a strong resemblance to rocks that on Earth are formed in the presence of water.

He said rocks named Shark, Prince Charming and Ender all appear to be conglomerates, or rocks formed of smaller pebbles bound together by a matrix, such as clay. Such rocks are formed by water forces on Earth, said Moore.

Some rocks also bore evidence that they may have formed on a lakeshore or even underwater, suggesting that water at one time possibly pooled on Mars, said Moore.

Moore said a search for life will be a part of NASA's continuing exploration of Mars, but he warns that "it is very much a crap shoot. Mars is a big place and where would you go to look? It is a very tough question."

It's unlikely that a search for life will turn up bones sticking out of Martian sand somewhere. More likely, any Martians that ever lived may have been microscopic, he said.

Golombek said it is unlikely there will be final answers about Martian life until samples are returned from the Red Planet. And even then, finding evidence of life would be only a "very remote possibility," he said.

NASA plans to send landers to Mars in 2001 and 2003 that will scoop up samples that may be returned to Earth on another mission now planned for 2005.

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Survey says...

Tom Apple of Forsight Land Services is taking measurements to determine an elevation for a topographical map.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
Dec. 2
UMPD assisted Amherst Police at an accident scene on East Pleasant Street.

Alarm—Fire
Dec. 2
A smoke bomb was set off in the 8th floor of John Adams Residence Hall.

Animal Complaint
Dec. 3
UMPD were asked to check on the well-being of a dog locked in a vehicle on Massachusetts Avenue.

Annoying Behavior
Dec. 1
A dispute occurred between individuals in Thompson Hall.
An individual reported annoying behavior by two individuals in parking lot 22 on Stadium Drive.

Assist Agency
Dec. 4
UMPD assisted Amherst Police with a large fight on North Pleasant Street.
UMPD assisted Amherst Police with two more fights on North Pleasant Street.

B&E/Burglary
Dec. 2
A vehicle in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive was broken into. Property worth $250 was stolen.
Dec. 3
A vehicle was broken into in parking lot 43 on Thatcher Way.

Disturbance
Dec. 4
A fight was reported in Pierpont Residence Hall.

Health and Safety Hazard
Dec. 4
A leaf fire occurred in the bowl area in Orchard Hill Residential Area.

Larceny
Dec. 1
An individual from John Adams Residence Hall reported a bicycle stolen.
An individual reported a credit card stolen from John Adams Residence Hall.
Gas cans were reported stolen from Tillson Farm.
An individual reported his wallet stolen from Crampton Residence Hall.
Dec. 2
An individual reported his mountain bike stolen from Cashin Residence Hall approximately three weeks ago. A large sum of money was in the bike bag. Estimated value $1000
A license plate was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.
Two individuals from John Adams Residence Hall reported being billed for credit cards they never requested or received.
An individual reported a wallet stolen from Bartlett Hall.
Dec. 3
Staff from Herter Hall reported a microwave stolen.
An individual reported a license and credit cards stolen from the Mullins Center.

Vandalism
Dec. 1
A window was smashed by a water balloon in John Adams Residence Hall.

Film may have caused shooting

By Ted Bridis
Associated Press

WEST PADUCAH, Ky. — The 14-year-old boy accused of fatally shooting three fellow students may have been influenced by a Leonardo DiCaprio movie that depicts a young man killing a teacher and students, a prosecutor said yesterday.

Michael Carneal acknowledged viewing The Basketball Diaries, a 1995 film based on the life of New York poet Jim Carroll, a former high school basketball player who turned to drugs, Commonwealth's Attorney Timothy Kaltenbach said.

"These movies are a factor. People come up with some of these ideas," Kaltenbach said.

The film includes a dream scene, in which Carroll shoots classmates and a teacher, and several scenes depict religion in a negative light.

Carneal is charged with opening fire on students at the conclusion of an informal daily prayer meeting Monday morning in the lobby of Heath High School. Three girls died and five other students were wounded.

One of two girls who remain hospitalized has been paralyzed from the waist down, Principal Bill Bond said today. Missy Jenkins, 15, was in stable condition. The second girl, Shelley Schaberg, 14, was in satisfactory condition and expected to be released from the hospital soon.

Without going into specifics, the prosecutor said evidence has surfaced that Carneal had planned the crime for as long as a year. Kaltenbach said others possibly knew of plans for the shootings and another arrest was possible.

"If someone engaged in the planning process, they will be punished," he said.

Sheriff Frank Augustus said Wednesday he had a "gut feeling" the shooter didn't act alone.

Kaltenbach, who plans to seek the maximum penalty of life without parole for 25 years for Carneal, said the boy has shown little emotion during interviews.

"The thing that struck me was the lack of emotion to acknowledge what he had done to the victims and to himself... and to his parents," he said.

Augustus said he wondered whether the five guns carried into the school — a pistol with extra ammunition, two rifles and two shotguns — were for accomplices. Augustus said, however, that he didn't anticipate other arrests.

The boy remains in a juvenile detention center in another part of the state, charged with murder, attempted murder and burglary. Authorities say he stole the guns from a neighbor's garage on Thanksgiving Day.

On Wednesday, Carneal's older sister, Kelly Carneal, returned to classes for the first time since the shootings. Afraid she would be ostracized, she found instead classmates who welcomed her with a remarkable sense of forgiveness.

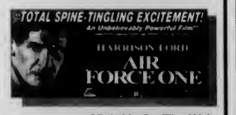
Bond said one student confided to him that he was uncomfortable being in classes all day with the 17-year-old sister, a senior who is expected to be the class valedictorian.

"We talked for a long time, and we talked about anger and controlling that anger, and that anger is a natural thing," Bond said. "There's some anger, yes, but he dealt with it and spent the rest of the day with Kelly. He understood that she's not the person who did this."

It was Miss Carneal who drove her brother to school on Monday, but authorities said they believe she didn't know what he had planned. The rifles were wrapped in a quilt, a bundle he explained were preps for a science experiment.

Funeral services for Nicole Hadley, 14, Kayce Steger, 15, and Jessica James, 17, and will be held today.

Campus Activities Presents
Something Every Friday
A Weekly Series Of Special Events
This Week:



Comedian Todd Parker

Todd has been featured on Fox's "Married With Children" and MTV's "Singled Out"

Also Featured On The Show Will Be
Singer "Jon O"

Campus Center Auditorium
Friday, December 5, 1997 At 8:00pm

The Movie "Air Force One" Will Be Shown Following The Program At approx. 9:30pm

Visit Us On The Web:
http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calendar.htm
Campus Activities: 545-3600
This Series Is Made Possible By A Grant From The Vice-Chancellor For Student Affairs; The UMass Auxiliary Services Office and:
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Holly Days

BOOK SIGNINGS

THE UNIVERSITY STORE IS SPONSORING A SERIES OF CELEBRITY BOOK SIGNINGS BETWEEN NOW AND THE END OF THE SCHOOL YEAR. ALL SIGNINGS WILL TAKE PLACE ON THE CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE ACROSS FROM THE UNIVERSITY STORE.

RAY BRADBURY
ONE OF SCIENCE FICTION'S MOST PROLIFIC WRITERS!
MON. DEC. 8 - 1PM TO 3PM

JAY NEUGEBOREN
IMAGINING ROBERT & DON'T WORRY ABOUT THE KIDS
WEDS. DEC. 10 - 12PM TO 1PM

BOB RYAN
THE FOUR SEASONS
WEDS. DEC. 17 - ABOUT 1PM AFTER THE SPORTS LUNCHEON

WE ACCEPT AMEX, DISCOVER, MC, VISA, AND THE UCARD!

University Store
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
UNIVERSITY STORE
IN THE UMASS CAMPUS CENTER
HOURS:
M-F 9 TO 5 SAT. 11 TO 4
(413) 545-2619

Come On In Out Of The Plain!

3 floors • stores galore • food & more

dictionary / six bucks • cup o'joe / a buck • "For Dummies" guides / nineteen bucks
beaded curtain / nine bucks • book bags / from eighteen bucks
Genko (for mental sharpness) / fifteen bucks • magic stone / twelve bucks
Armani hosiery / nine bucks • Lucky Jeans / sixty eight bucks
shower caddy / eleven bucks • CK boxer shorts / eighteen bucks
Hard Candy lipsticks / sixteen bucks

THORNES 150 MARKETPLACE
"under the big green awning"

On the bus route • Open Mon -Tue - Wed 10-6; Thur - Fri - Sat 10-9; Sun 12-5 • 150 Main Street, Northampton

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Tony, Toni, Tone

Tony the Tiger takes a break from his tour at the Worcester Dining Hall, one that brought friends like Snap, Crackel and Pop to campus.

■ funds

continued from page 1

will stack it up against G.M.... and all of the other transformative companies today. We have done as much."

However, Scott said, the University will achieve its practical maximum efficiency by the end of Strategic Action and cannot continue this restructuring and reallocation effort past 2001.

The University will continue to need a 6 percent increase in its budget each year, Scott said, and reallocation will only be able to supply 1 percent of that.

The other 5 percent will have to come from a special investment from the state legislature, Scott said.

"We will not live with less than 6 percent growth," Scott said. "We need to make a new pitch for a special investment in this University. We need to begin planning now, because the year 2001 will be on us soon."

In other Faculty Senate business, Professor Brian O'Connor of the Biology Department discussed the Dec. 3 meeting of the University's Board of Trustees.

At that meeting, the Board of Trustees approved an Alcohol Policy for the University which does not differ markedly from the previous policy.

However, O'Connor noted, it does specify that no advertisement of alcohol be permitted on campus, a change in policy.

Professor Anne Ferguson, director of the Women's Studies Program, presented Vision 2000, a set of recommendations for achieving gender equity on campus compiled by the New England Council of Land-Grant University Women.

The report lists nine broad recommendations, including ending gender bias and discrimination against women in the curriculum, implementing diversity initiatives, and ending sexual harassment and violence against women, as well as specific steps to take to implement these recommendations.

Ferguson, on behalf of the Status of Women Council, asked the Senate to endorse in principle the nine recommendations in Vision 2000.

However, several Senate members strongly objected to this motion, and requested that the various councils and committees have an opportunity to review the report.

Professor Joseph Larson, chair of the Rules Committee, proposed a substitute motion, which accepted the report from the Status of Women Council and referred it to the Senate's various councils and committees for approval by Feb. 5, 1998.

The Senate passed this substitute motion.

■ UHS

continued from page 1

"A child came into urgent care on Wednesday and was very excited about the lights that had been hung up," Fil said. "The lights were taken down the same day... I think this lowers moral.

To UHS employee, Sara Aierstuck, this issue could have been handled differently.

"This could have been handled without animosity and we, as a faculty, could come together... The people who want to decorate are not people who want to jam Christmas down people's throats. They are people who recognize diversity," Aierstuck said.

Melby's only response to these statements was that, "part of my job is to hear the voices of many and create a safe and comfortable environment for all people."

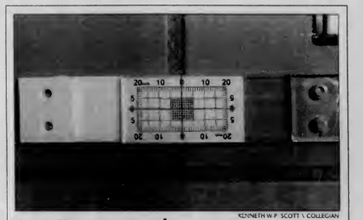
"This case is about the conflict between the right to express your religion versus the separation between church and state," said Michelle Leaf, a staff attorney who is employed by Student Legal Services.

"The problem isn't that they are banning Holiday decorations, it's that they're banning only winter holiday decorations," Leaf said.

UHS allows the staff to decorate for other holidays such as Halloween and Valentine's Day. These holidays originated as Saint Hallow's Eve and Saint Valentine's Day, both of which have religious derivation. "By not prohibiting or allowing all decorations they are discriminating against the season," Leaf said.

Several years ago there was a similar controversy in Amherst concerning a Christmas tree at the Jones Library. The Board of Library Trustees decided to remove this tree due to lack of multiculturalism. This generated many letters from townspeople who were upset about this action. Rather than completely disregard the holidays the Board of Trustees decided to have a multicultural display.

"I have not had the opportunity to research this issue," Leaf said. "However, generally speaking, in cases concerning public displays of religious symbols the courts would consider a number of issues."



One of these issues is the question why this ban is on only for winter holiday decorations. These seasonal holidays include Christmas, Yule, Chanukah, Three Kings Day and Kwanzaa.

"Another issue that the courts would look at is the rationale of this policy. Is this policy prohibiting the free exercise of religion? One must ask if holiday decorations are religious symbols," Leaf said.

Melby refused to comment on these issues.

Koldy said that she is concerned about the legality of this issue.

"We feel that it is not a state law that we can't celebrate a holiday... [Melby] has to be more open minded and let other people learn about culture. She should perceive the holidays as more than just a gift and a tree, it's people uniting."

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Say "No" to crack

This crack meter measures the separation of one of Hasbrouck Lab's stairwells.

when you sNEWS, you lose!
right for News, or the dog gets it!

IT AIN'T EASY, BUT IT'S SMART

Winter Session '98

Why Winter Session?
- Catch up so you can graduate on time
- Focus on just one class, one set of homework assignments
- Make up lost credits
- Take a usually overenrolled prerequisite for your major
- Earn three credits in three weeks

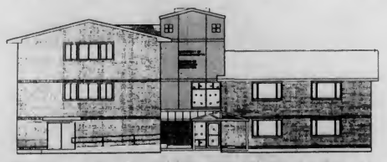
Smaller classes mean more individual attention.

Winter Session '98
January 5-26



Pick up a blue course catalog at Continuing Education in Goodell Bldg. or anywhere on campus; in town at stores, restaurants, banks.

Or call 545-0107 and we'll send you one.

Check out the updated course list at www.umass.edu/contined/

Winter Session
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst

The Division of Continuing Education is moving to 358 N. Pleasant St. in January.

Holly Days

WIN TICKETS!

TO THE 3RD ANNUAL
COMMONWEALTH CLASSIC
UMASS MINUTEMEN VS. BOSTON COLLEGE
DEC. 14, 1997 AT THE FLEET CENTER

COME REGISTER TO WIN IN THE UNIVERSITY STORE BETWEEN NOW AND DEC. 10, 1997 OR SEND IN THE ATTACHED ENTRY FORM.

THE DRAWING FOR TWO (2) TICKETS TO THE COMMONWEALTH CLASSIC WILL BE HELD AT 4:30PM ON WEDS. DEC. 10 IN THE UNIVERSITY STORE. YOU NEED NOT BE PRESENT TO WIN.

ENTRY FORM MUST BE COMPLETELY FILLED OUT. ONE ENTRY PER CUSTOMER PLEASE. NO PURCHASE NECESSARY.

WE ACCEPT AMEX, DISCOVER, MC, VISA, AND THE UCARD!

University Store
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
UNIVERSITY STORE
IN THE UMASS CAMPUS CENTER
HOURS:
M-F 9 TO 5 SAT. 11 TO 4
(413) 545-2619

MAIL-IN ENTRY FORM
ENTRY FORM MUST BE COMPLETELY FILLED OUT TO WIN.

NAME: _____
ADDRESS: _____
_____
PHONE: _____
BIRTHDAY: _____

WHEN WAS THE LAST TIME YOU VISITED THE UNIVERSITY STORE?
DID YOU BUY ANYTHING? WHAT?
DO YOU HAVE ANY COMMENTS FOR US?
IS THERE ANYTHING WE DON'T CARRY THAT YOU THINK WE SHOULD?
WHERE DO YOU USUALLY GET THOSE ITEMS?

RETURN TO: TICKET GIVEAWAY, UNIVERSITY STORE, CAMPUS CENTER, UMASS, MA 01003

ALL ENTRIES MUST BE RECEIVED BEFORE 4:00PM ON WEDS. DEC. 10, 1997. SORRY, BUT WE CAN BE NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR LOST OR LATE ENTRIES.

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

The not–so Promised Land

Elsa Allen

Last spring I truly believed that I was entering the Promised Land. I had dreams of tossing those wretched shower shoes once and for all, saying my good–byes to the process of signing friends into my building and never again having to worry about being caught using the men's bathroom.

Yes, joy of all joys, I was moving off–campus.

Our real estate agent was like a Messiah when he showed us a lovely second–floor bungalow, located on scenic, tree– lined Main Street. The only question we had for him was "where do we sign?" I wrote the biggest check I ever hope to write, we had to cover deposits, first and last month's rent and other, as of yet undisclosed, expenses, and we were in. My two roommates and I, we were golden!

Fast forward to the present. The land is not so promised any more. Living off campus is not as easy as just having mommy send the rent check every month.

Aforementioned Messiah (a.k.a. real estate agent) has morphed into a complete sketch–ball; getting our oven and a light fixed requires written requests and a lot of waiting. (The light got fixed, we gave up on the oven.)

Speaking of ovens, that reminds me of food, of which we rarely have any. Open up our refrigerator on an average day and here is a list of what you will find:

spaghetti sauce
salsa cheese
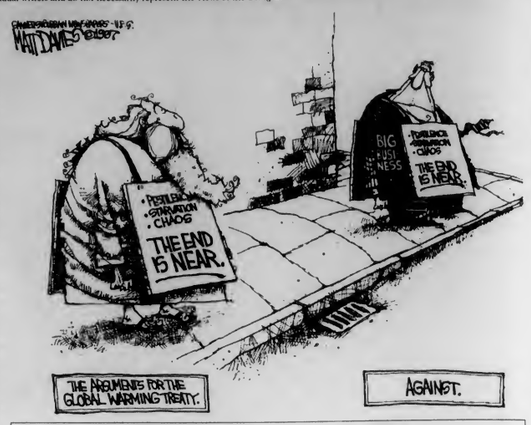
water

Groceries are a rare commodity. The idea of going to Stop & Shop actually sends shivers down my spine, that is, when I actually have the idea of going, which is rare. As bad as the DC is, at least there are always milk and Fruit Loops aplenty to keep you fed.

Another major issue is a means of transportation to and from campus each glorious morning. When I was on campus, I dreaded that walk under the tunnel from Southwest to the reality of class and work every day. But at least if I was running three measly minutes late, the tunnel would still give me access, so I could get to Bartlett on time. Unlike the PVTA, which cruelly forces punctuality onto the tardiest of us all. Only too often do I find myself sprinting across Main Street, dodging traffic, shoes untied, hair soaking wet, in order to catch the 8:52 bus. I can see the bus driver mocking me, a disheveled streak flying across the road. For those of you considering off–campus living, a word of advice, don't bother ever running for the bus. The doors will inevitably close while you are just out of range to bang for the driver to re–open them.



Then there's the issue of the $140 gas bill we just got. What?! It's amazing the amount of crude language that can spew forth from the mouths of three otherwise elegant young ladies when they find out that somebody wants to charge them $140 dollars to stay warm. So if you ever come to visit me now, be sure to bring an extra sweater because the heater dial has been banished back down to the 65 degree realms, making our apartment seem only slightly warmer than the Yukon. I've been seriously considering moving my room to the freezer, I think it's a little bit warmer.

Then there's the kicker. Thanks to certain events occurring in houses on Hobart Lane, certain properties also owned by our favorite real estate company, parties of more than 15 (15!?!) people are strictly prohibited in our house. We weren't told this when we signed, but rather through a letter sent by a lawyer in September. We frantically searched for ways around this one. Do they mean 15 people per apartment? Fifteen people per occupant? Fifteen people per room? Fifteen people per keg? We're still working on this...

So, what it boils down to is a reality check that inevitably comes. The perks of off–campus still far outweigh the sacrifices, such as not having to worry about picking up communicable diseases from the bathroom, no fire drills at three in the morning when it's raining and the privilege of being able to burn all the incense and candles that your little heart desires. Just watch out for that thermostat and make sure you know your bus schedules and you should be okay.

As for me, I'm going to go home, put on a down jacket, eat some cheese and throw on my shower shoes for old times sake (no, I didn't actually throw them out, they were the cool ones from J. Crew.), all the while screaming expletives over the still unpaid heating bill.

Elsa Allen is a Collegian columnist.

First week survival guide

Mike Grobs

The summer before your first year at college is one filled with anticipation, excitement, nervousness and sadness. You have finally made it through nursery, elementary, middle and high school. The road that started with nap time and building blocks has taken a sharp turn into the world of professors and final exams.

Now you, the student, must learn to live and succeed on your own. You are now in a world where you do not know everyone, mom and dad can't always lend advice and most of your professors do not even know your name, let alone get on your back for a missed assignment. Here are a few helpful hints and reminders to get through your first week at school, away from home.

The move–in day is a long, hot and tedious day at UMass. The preparation for this day starts in the summer when you are waiting for your housing assignment. You must pray every night to whomever you worship and beg for a dorm with less than five floors. When you receive the housing assignment, whether you are on the first floor or the 21st floor, make sure you are well packed, and the handles won't break on the way up. Make sure that every item essential to your living standards is packed because the campus store is not sympathetic to those whom might have forgotten shirts, notebooks, computer software, or even a teddy bear.

Next, make sure that you roommate and you arrive at different times. Move in day becomes very difficult when two sets of parents, brothers, sisters, girlfriends, boyfriends, aunts, uncles or whomever else decides they would like to help you are stuffed into a room that seems smaller than the ones they showed at orientation. Finally after everything is put away and the last tears are shed, it is time to break the silence and decide what you and your "new friend" are going to do.

The remaining days before classes start are probably the most awkward of them all here at UMass. You must prepare yourself for the first full day of cafeteria food. This is when you might have to make a late journey to the Campus Store and purchase some Pepto–Bismol. Next, after you have walked enough around campus and can not possibly hold anymore frat party flyers, you return to your room with enough scrap paper to last you a lifetime. After you become bored of watching TV, you must decide what to do for the rest of the night. You could make yourself present at one of many frat parties, or more than one. Entertainment could also be found by checking out a movie, or possibly driving into town. Those too tired to go out, or still fighting stomach pains, end up pulling out their little black books and adding to their already outstanding phone bill. Finally, when the noise dies down at four o'clock in the morning, you fall asleep.

The first and remaining days of classes that will end out the week are those that you have never experienced before. You might find yourself in a class that will eventually cover the material you learned in eighth grade, or in a class that seems like a foreign language taught in English. Once you have your schedule all squared away, you must leave for class about 20 minutes early to make sure that you find the building, and get a seat in an auditorium that seats two hundred, but for some reason, there are 250 signed up for the class. Next, once the professor has told you what books are needed, you must leave yourself about a day and a half to buy your books at the Textbook Annex.

Finally, you must become accustomed to your I.D. card and the key to your room. Make sure that after you wake up and sleep walk down to the bathroom, you roommate is there to let you in, or that you have your key with you. If you are unlucky and got locked out of your room you will then walk downstairs to the Cluster Office in hope of a spare; however, you will find out that it is never open when you might need it. After you have been locked out once you will not need to worry because you will make sure it will never happen again.

What seemed like an eternity has finally ended and the week is over. Life at home is behind you, but not forgotten. Your stomach is now feeling better, and the first pound of the Freshman 15 has been acquired. You have become accustomed to your schedule, and your classes have slowly decreased in size. The I.D. card and key have become like a third hand, and your door never seems to be locked. Now, life at college is slowly turning into just another year of school.

Mike Grobs is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Article unjust to Amherst church

To the Editor:

This letter is written in response to "Faith no more" by Joe Sullivan. Not only did the author make unknowledgeable and ignorant conclusions about the amount of Catholic faith among college students, he also put down the beautiful Catholic church in downtown Amherst.

The author attended one Mass at this church, and because only a few college–aged people were in attendance, he concluded that few people his age found satisfaction in going to church. Has he ever heard of the Newman Center? If he wants proof of spirituality in college students, then my advice to him is to go to a Sunday evening Mass there. He is sure to find hundreds of people his age who go there every week to celebrate their faith in God. Also, I don't see how he expected to be "uplifted" or "saved" by attending a single Mass. Spirituality is gained over time, it doesn't just appear overnight.

The author also did the church he attended a great injustice by calling its ceremony "lifeless." I have attended this church and feel it has a great sense of community. The priest even gave high–fives to the parishioners as he departed from the altar, and welcomed my roommate and me back as we left. Any typical 20–year–old Catholic should know that the Catholic church is about community and giving to others, not simply about going to church in an attempt to gain spirituality.

The next time Mr. Sullivan writes about an issue such as this one, I suggest he gains more knowledge of the topic before making any conclusions. I also invite him to attend one of the evening Masses at the Newman Center. I'd like to see if his opinion changes.

Annemarie Watson
Amherst

Gonzaga U. no "popcorn" team

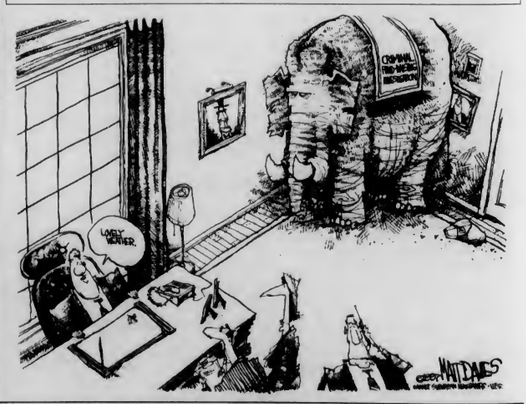
To the Editor:

In reading Casey Kane's article regarding the scheduling strategies of "Big Name" college basketball programs, I was surprised to discover a significant oversight. Surely a college basketball columnist would do her homework before belittling Gonzaga University as a "popcorn" opponent and a "small–blip–on–the –big–radar–screen." Since college basketball seems to be Ms. Kane's area of expertise, she might have paid attention to the box scores of the past few weeks.

At the "Top of the World Classic" in Fairbanks, Alaska (Nov. 21–23), your "popcorn" school proceeded to annihilate perennial Sweet Sixteen participant Tulsa 78–40. Next, the Gonzaga "no–names" edged 1996 Final Four participant Mississippi State 70–68. To close out the weekend, Gonzaga, dubbed by Dick Vitale as "The Princeton of the West" embarrassed ACC power and 5th ranked Clemson 84–71 to win the tournament. With a record of 6–1, Gonzaga is ranked #34 in the USA Today poll and #36 in the AP poll, 17 spots ahead of one very local "big name."

This success has not been a flash in the pan. Gonzaga has averaged 20 wins over the past six seasons, including a trip to the NCAA Tournament in 1995 and trips to the NIT in 1994 and 1996. Between 1994 and 1995, Gonzaga also had the third longest home winning streak in Division I (33 games).

In the future, I suggest that before you belittle teams like Gonzaga, do your homework!



Jon Kinloch
UMass
graduate student
Former Gonzaga basketball player

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor. Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include a name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass Amherst MA 01003, or by email to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu Letters may be edited for length, clarity, and style.

Collegian through letters to the editor. 113 Campus Center
Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor

Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co–Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co–Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley–Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Letters To Cleo come to Valley

COURTESY JOSEPH CULTICE

Boston popsters Letters To Cleo play 99.3's Snow Show '97 tonight at Northampton's Pearl Street.

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

Little has come out of the Boston rock scene in recent years and one might expect more from the city from which spawned the Pixies. However, the infectious bubblegum pop of the Beantown quintet Letters to Cleo is hands down one of the best — and underrated — bands to come out of Boston in a long time.

Like most of the female fronted Boston rock acts (Juliana Hatfield, Tanya Donneley), Letters to Cleo's basic sound can be defined by a cute, girlish voice over a loud rumble of guitars. The distinctive element of Letters to Cleo's songs is their infectiously catchy tunes that linger in your mind long after you have stopped listening to them.

The Cleo's newest release, Go!, marks a departure from their previous releases. Lead vocalist Kay Hanley's songwriting skills have matured during the two years since their last album—Wholesale Meats and Fish. On Go!, Hanley sounds more like a woman who is angry than a teenager who is depressed.

With Jason Sutter of Boston's Jack Drag (an opener for Cleo during the opening hometown shows) replacing Tom Polce on drums, the Cleos are coming back to Pearl Street tonight — their first area appearance since playing Smith College's spring concert earlier this year. Letters to Cleo, in their live shows, are given the opportunity to play with their instrumentation. With just two guitars, a bass, and drums on stage — they compensate well for the absence of keyboards and horns.

As Kay Hanley told the Collegian in an interview at the start of the tour promoting Go!, "We're definitely more of a live band than a studio band... our albums are a like a work in progress."

Letters to Cleo will be playing tonight as part of 99.3's Snow Show '97. They will be sandwiched in between openers Mary's First and 99.3's newest child prodigy Days of the New — whose hit single, "Touch, Peel & Stand," (bearing a striking resemblance to Alice in Pearl's Stone Garden) is currently the flavor–of–the–week at WHMP.

Hanley and company are also appearing at an autograph session at B–Side Records in Northampton at 3 p.m. this afternoon.

Grammy–winning Take 6 to play F.A.C.

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Leaving traditional instruments behind and using only their voices, the Grammy–award winning group, Take 6 will take the stage at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall tomorrow night at 8 p.m.

Take 6, an all–male a cappella group specializing in vocal jazz, has won seven Grammy awards, five Doves (gospel music) as well as honors from Downbeat magazine. Add to that a Soul Train Music Award and Black Radio Exclusive Vocal group of the year, and it becomes clear why the six young men have become one of the most acclaimed and influential groups in pop music.

The group, which consists of Claude McKnight, Mark Kibble, Joe Kibble, Alvin Chea, Cedric Dent and David Thomas, is known for their rich vocals and harmony.

Take 6 specializes in gospel music, but mixes spirituals with the traditions of jazz and rhythms and blues. According to a press release, Take 6 believes in the power of the message to come through to create something positive in what they see to be a "world of negativity."

The group started out at a small southern college as a four member a capella gospel group, originally named The Gentlemen's Estate. In 1987, with performances at local churches and campuses to their credit, the group moved to sign with Warner/Reprise records and officially became known as Take 6.

Since then, the group has appeared on movie soundtracks, including Dick Tracy, Do the Right Thing, Boyz N the Hood and Glengarry Glen Ross. Notable appearances include performing with Shania Twain at the Country Music Association Awards, as well as recording or performing with the likes of k.d. lang, Don Henley, Queen Latifah, James Taylor, Kenny Rogers, Joe Sample and Ray Charles.

The group's latest album is Brothers, features a remake of the Earth, Wind and Fire hit "Sing a Song" and "You Don't Have To Be Afraid." The spiritual "Jesus Makes Me Happy" focuses on the Take 6 tradition of recording inspirational songs. Other albums include He is Christmas (1992) and Join the Band (1994).

Take 6 will perform Saturday night at the Fine Arts Center at the University of Massachusetts. Tickets for this concert are $25, $20 and $15. Tickets for children 17 and under are $8 and tickets for Five College students are $5. For tickets or more information, call 545–2511 or (800) 999–UMAS.

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

The Grammy–winning a capella group Take 6 perform at the Fine Arts Center tomorrow evening.

WINTER SESSION 1998 AT FITCHBURG STATE COLLEGE

NICARAGUAN BIOLOGICAL RESEARCH

STUDY ABROAD PROGRAM

Offered in collaboration with the University of Mobile (Central American Campus at San Marcos) this two-week program runs January 3-18, 1998. Enroll in six credits (undergraduate or graduate), exploring the topography of volcanos, cloud forests and tropical islands of Central America.

COURSE TOPIC: Tropical Biology (6 credits)

- Accommodations in university dorms
- Meal Plan
- Shuttle service from airport to San Marcos
- Access to university facilities and services

For more information, call the International Education Office at (978)665-3089 or the DGCE Office at (978)665-3182.

THIS IS THE BREAK YOU'VE BEEN WAITING FOR

College Students: While you're home for semester break, why not take a course or two at Fitchburg State College? In just a few weeks, you can earn credits in English, art education, philosophy, psychology, sociology or computer science. Both graduate and undergraduate, our credits are transferable to virtually any college in the country.

WINTER INTERSESSION - Dec. 17 - Jan. 16
Register Today with the Division of Graduate and Continuing Education. Phone-In, Fax-In, Mail-In, Walk-In or E-Mail!

P.S. - For those of you who would like to plan ahead, ask about our summer course schedule, which this year includes amazingly affordable credit studies abroad in Rome, Italy and Dublin, Ireland.

VISIT OUR WEB SITE AT WWW.FSC.EDU

DIVISION OF GRADUATE AND CONTINUING EDUCATION
978-665-3181
Fax: 978-665-3658
E-mail: dgce@fsc.edu

ADMISSIONS
800-705-9692
978-665-3144
Fax: 978-665-4540
E-mail: admissions@fsc.edu

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT CENTER
978-665-3636
Fax: 978-665-3639
E-mail: pdc@fsc.edu

Taking their music to new heights

Helium re–invent the wheel musically, but without the fanciness

COURTESY STEPHEN APICELLA–HITCHCOCK

Helium raised their music to new heights at the Iron Horse Wednesday night.

By Alexandria Lipka
Collegian Staff

HELIUM
Iron Horse Music Hall
Dec. 3

NORTHAMPTON — At first, it was really hard to tell whether Mary Timony, lead singer and guitarist of Helium, was really pissed off, or just too engrossed in her music to smile. Yet, after seeing her and her bandmates perform live the other night, my vote is for the latter. But don't be mistaken. What Helium lacked in facial enthusiasm and conversation between songs, they made up for in the presentation and quality of their music.

After hearing Helium's newest Matador release, The Magic City, I was eager to find out how this trio from Boston accomplished such an intricate sound on stage and I was skeptical if they could, in fact, be successful. To much enjoyment and surprise, all doubts were pushed aside within the first few minutes of their performance and they proved not to disappoint.

Playing to a small but substantial crowd, Helium had the uncanny ability to transport those gathered on the Iron Horse's dance floor to a land of rainbows and unicorns; a place where gallant gentlemen ride white horses and rescue their damsels in distress.

Don't be fooled though, Helium is not weak and fruity but rather the opposite. Timony's voice is grating but not annoying — her lyrics were dark and mysterious and enchanting all at the same time. Her throaty vocals left a chalky, dry feeling in your ears while the piercing chime of her guitar made the room echo with an eerie glow as a warm tingle spread across your body from your eyebrows to the tips of your toes.

It was quite interesting to see how Helium created the special effects that are present on their albums. Thanks to the superior drumming of Shawn Devlin, Ash Bowie on bass and the addition of a keyboardist, it was pleasing to hear that nothing was lost in the CD to live show transition. Songs like "Aging Astronauts" and "Clementine" were close to, if not ideally perfect, and "Vibrations" packed such a punch that it was no wonder that they used it as their opener.

There was no moshing, no pushing or shoving and no senseless individuals "accidentally" spilling their beer on you. It was as though everyone in the room had come to this show for one reason, and that was because they genuinely wanted to enjoy the music — something that has become far to infrequent when it comes to concerts these days.

Grateful Dead will never die

Editor's Note: This is the second of a 2–part column focusing on the wide breadth of Grateful Dead and Dead–related items released recently.

After the death of The Dead, drummers Mickey Hart & Billy Kreutzmann pursued their own ideal situations. Hart's was the Mystery Box project, which toured on 1996's first Furthur Festival, and had a Rykodisc album as well. Kreutzmann's was the lure of the exotic ocean. He moved out to Hawaii and spent most of his time pursuing his obsession with scuba diving, and general marine studies. However, earlier this year, things creeped out of the islands that Kreutzmann was back behind his kit in a new rock trio.

Now we have Backbone (G.D.), the powerful self–titled debut comprised of singer/songwriter/guitarist Rick Barnett, bassist Edd Cook, and drummer Kreutzmann. The album swings between modern blues style ("Sittin' Here Thinkin'"), updated takes on the '60s Motown sound ("Nothing's Different") and '70s Motown sound — read: Marvin Gaye — ("Ocean Laughter"), as well as just pure, no regrets rocking ("Preserve The Blues").

Through most of the disc, Kreutzmann's drumming brings to mind the stripped– down R&B– influenced beat he lent to the Dead's debut in 1967. There are some points on this disc where the later, more present Billy K comes to bear, such as on the album's big jam spaces on "Only Son" (simply the best track on here), and "Earthchild." Barnett's voice howls through most songs with a modern blues tinge, and his guitar skills are well–versed between clean funk and blues and dirty trio rock. Cook's bass playing is admirable also.

• The voices from the past are calling. Donna Jean (Godchaux) MacKay's voice, which is one of the major components to the '70s Dead sound, had a range which went between gentle crooning on harmonies to Janis Joplin–style wailing. Well, past tense need not be used further.

Donna Jean (Muscle Shoals Records) has been released and fans of the Dead, and blues–oriented pop in general, should be glad we have this chanteuse back on the mic. You 'Heads out there will be glad to know she's stuck with her strong straight–ahead alto delivery and ousted the sometimes frightening screams of her Dead days.

Teaming up with her second husband, bassist David MacKay (her first was the late Keith Godchaux, the Dead's main '70s keyboardist, who died in a 1980 car crash) and other musicians from her child– and adult–hood home of the Soul Capitol that is Muscle Shoals, her band has crafted an often funky, often sweet mix of songs. You get many variations on the blues–pop genre, from the Bo Diddley–ish opener "Mercy," to the bar groove of "American Beauty." Then there is the gentle roots–rock–based "The Heart Needs" to close it out. Welcome back, Donna, we missed you!

• The end of the Dead also brought about many tributes, like saxophonist David Murray's jazz take on the Dead "Dark Star," and two collections of reggae versions of classics called Fire On The Mountain. Vols. 1 & 2. Last year, the modern big band Illuminati led by Joe Gallant put out a whole re–working of the Dead's '75 masterpiece Blues For Allah. That orchestra's new effort, Live, Vol. 2 (Relix) moves on to some other songs. Imagine a string arrangement with "Playin' In The Band": A space–age Vegas take on Garcia/Hunter's "Love In The Afternoon"; and sensual gospel–based vocals by Delfi Santi over all of it. You will find some interesting bits on this fine disc.

• Grateful Dead Records is proud to announce their first release that has (almost) nothing to do with the Grateful Dead. On Another Stoney Evening, David Crosby and Graham Nash's heavenly harmonies are draped gently over the 15 acoustic guitar with vocals arrangements of CSNY classics like "Wooden Ships" and "Guinevere," as well as the lesser known tunes like Crosby's "Traction In The Rain" and the solemnly upbeat "Used To Be A King." Their interactions with the audience are quite humorous and reveal how stoney the evening really was.

Be sure not to also miss the 2–11–69 2–disc set released by Arista and Grateful Dead in accordance, and the spectacular concert video Downhill From Here, released late this past summer, and featuring great documentary–quality footage of most of the full July 17, 1989 concert at Alpine Valley in Wisconsin.

Most of the discs above except 2–11–69 and Live, Vol. 2 are available via Grateful Dead Mercantile at 1–800–223– 3323.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

Words, words, words...
Collegian? why yes, thank you.
...Buses, buses, buses

SPRING BREAK
BEST PARTIES CANCUN JAMAICA FLORIDA BEST PRICE
Call today! Space is limited
1 800 648-4849
STS STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES
On campus with Giancarlo Grieco @413-546-5147

Great Gifts
Bags Stocking Stuffers Hats
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Earrings Rings Bracelets Chains Sweaters Toys India Print Bedspreads
Candles Gloves Socks Leather Sale Mugs
Merry X'mas Cards Chinese Shoes Dresses
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The Mercantile
Weeknights 9PM Dec. 4 - 22
Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton–18 Center St.
Amherst–Carriage Shops

Auditions For
Not Ready For Bedtime Players
NOT READY FOR BEDTIME PLAYERS
Monday, December 8 - 7:30 PM
Campus Center Rm. 163C
For more information call the Health Education Division of the University Health Services and ask for Sally or Mike 577-5181.

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES
6 SINGERS 5 GRAMMYS 1 GREAT NIGHT
Take 6
$5 TICKETS ONLY FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS
With their fresh jazz harmonies, soaring vocals and seamless ensemble work, five–time Grammy–award winners Take 6 set the new standard for a cappella singing. Take the time. Take a friend. And don't miss the chance to Take 6.
SATURDAY, DECEMBER 6, 8PM, CONCERT HALL
Sponsored by WRNX and Easthampton Savings Bank
Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for tickets
Visit our Website at www.umass.edu/fac/fac.html
CONNECT WITH YOUR CENTER!
The Fine Arts Center University of Massachusetts Amherst

Peter Pan & PVTA
Your Community Link To The Entire Northeast!
BOSTON
NEW YORK
DAILY EXPRESS SERVICE
Peter Pan
800-343-9999
Amherst, Peter Pan Terminal, 79 S Pleasant St
Umass Campus Cntr. or SW Hampden Dinning Common
Northampton, Peter Pan Terminal 1 Roundhouse Plaza

Hampshire Mall has for all!
JC Penney • BIG Kmart • Media Play
Bath & Body Works • EMS • AMC 6 Theatres •
Electronics Boutique • Kay Bee Toys
Plus Over 60 Specialty Shops & Restaurants
One Stop. Easy Parking. Close By.
Hampshire Mall Route 9 Hadley
Enter the Hampshire Mall's TOY CHEST GIVE-A-WAY
Over $500 of prizes for kids Big & Small.
Details available at Customer Service Desk
NO PURCHASE NECESSARY
Shopping Hours: Mon.–Sat. 10am–10pm, Sunday 10am–7pm • 413–586–5700

■ men's basketball

continued from page 10

Marshall opened the season on Nov. 22 by blowing out Bluefield St. 118–60, and followed that up with a 67–49 over Radford on Nov. 29. Both games were in the Thundering Herd's home court, the Henderson Center

UMass is coming off Tuesday's 52–40 win over Charleston, in which the Minutemen battled fatigue from the season–opening trip to Alaska to beat the Cougars. Lari Kelner scored 20 points and pulled down nine rebounds to lead the Minutemen who held Charleston to a Mullins Center record low for points in a half (14) and a game. Tyrone Weeks registered his fourth double–double with 12 points and 10 rebounds.

One of the goals for this year's team is to go undefeated at the Mullins Center. Coach Bruiser Flint feels it is important to get a few wins before the home crowd knowing they won't see his team again until they play George Washington at the Mullins Center on Jan. 10.

"We didn't feel like we took care of our home court last year like we were supposed to," said Flint of the 1996–97 Minutemen, who went 8–4 at the Mullins Center. UMass was 39–2 in the first four year's of the building's existence.

Minuteman Notes: Sophomore forward Winston Smith, who has been plagued by a torn ACL he re–aggravated during the Purdue game, will apply for a medical redshirt. Smith will sit out the rest of the 1997–98 season, and have surgery in late December.

"I believe Winston Smith is making the right decision for himself," Flint said in a statement released last night. "He's had a more difficult time dealing with the knee swelling this year. It's better for him to correct the problem now and avoid more serious injuries in the future."

Minutemen run with Bulldogs and Wildcats

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

In national collegiate magazines and newspapers, NCAA athletes are often indirectly defined as superhuman students whose aura is fueled by the bright lights of huge arenas or stadiums. Outside of the spotlight, it seems, competition does not exist.

The Massachusetts men's indoor track team competes outside that spotlight.

Silently, away from Tyrone Weeks and the headline– grabbing hockey player Tim Lovell, there are athletes working as hard as anyone on campus. Somewhere, far from the star linebacker Khari Samuel, there are individuals training so intensely they make themselves sick — and there is no fame or fortune waiting for them around the corner as a reward.

UMass track coach Ken O'Brien can only be satisfied when he thinks of the self–motivation that drives his runners. O'Brien can probably remember the feeling personally, as he held the conference record in the half–mile for 10 years. Now, after 31 years at the helm of one of the most respected track squads in the northeast, O'Brien has seen and admired this in his athletes, as the perennially solid Minutemen have continued to perform at a very high level year after year.

"For some athletes to play well, they need 10,000 fans and a band and cheerleaders," O'Brien said. "The external rewards lock a place in their personality. In other sports, you don't need the other stuff. You can win and do well without the band."

There will be no band when UMass takes the track against Yale and New Hampshire at Boston University tomorrow for the first meet of the 1997–98 season.

Still, the Minutemen will compete to the best of their ability. O'Brien takes with him into the meet an impressive resume built by his 31 years of overall success, which includes 15 Yankee Conference titles; three New England titles; two IC4A titles; and six All–American performers. This experience, along with the talent of runners like junior sprinter Tom Toye, will lead the Minutemen this weekend in Boston.

Men's gym to host UMass Open at Cage

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team opens up the 1997–98 campaign hoping to repeat last season's brilliant 8–0 performance.

UMass is in gear for tomorrow night's opener at the Curry Hicks Cage. The Minutemen will host the UMass Open which will bring in some other stellar squads. Army, Syracuse and Vermont among others will compete.

UMass will be directed by coach Roy Johnson, who is entering his 20th season with the program. While many of last year's top players will return, an undefeated season is always tough to replicate.

"Last season was a terrific time for the program," Johnson said. "We will be very competitive this year but we did lose a few key members of our team, which is to be expected. We have 12 freshman who need to step in and help the team."

The big losses came from the rings team, Ruslan Shupak and Chris Funk were the leaders in that category. The Minutemen look to Jeff LaValle and Stephen Pryor in particular to fill their roles.

UMass remains very deep on the parallel bars with Lavalle and Pryor again expected to be the anchors. Phil Lieberman and Dan Young are also expected to provide strong routines on the bars.

Coach Johnson will look toward a group of freshmen to contribute on the pommel horse.

"I expect some of our newcomers like J.J. Hershey, Andy Leis, and D.J. Surgent to really help out with the pommel horse," Johnson said. "Basically, I'm expecting a lot of output from the freshmen in general to overcome the losses."

While last year was an overwhelming success, losing to Temple in the EIGL championships by 0.25 was a frustrating way to go out.

"We performed really well in the championships," Johnson said. "We just came up against a really strong team and were outmatched. But the whole team should be proud of what they accomplished."

This year promises to be another momentous year for the Minutemen. In addition to putting out another quality squad, UMass will play host to several of the biggest east coast gymnastics events of the year. In addition to this weekend's Open, Amherst will be the site of the New England Championships and the NCAA East regionals.

"We have a lot to prove this year," Johnson said. "We would love to have good showings as we host these big events. It is very important for people to get a feel for what our program is all about."

■ women's basketball

continued from page 10

Summer Ivan is Holy Cross' second–leading scorer with 12.8 ppg. Sophomore guard Veronica Jutras leads the team in assists with 51 (8.5 apg) on the season.

In the Crusaders' 86–67 win over Siena Wednesday night, O'Brien collected 26 points and 12 boards. She was followed by Anna Kinne, who finished with 13, and Veronica Jutras, Ivan and Lara Marcsisin, who had nine each.

"We have to realize that this is one game," UMass' O'Brien said of the Maine loss. "Now it's time to get ready and play with emotion. Otherwise, we're going to have two more tough games right away."

Members of the graduate sports management department will be at the Hampshire Mall tomorrow afternoon to promote Sunday's game with the Crusaders during their Hampshire Mall Madness event.

Material from WMUA FM was used in this article.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

Mallen has rearranged his No. 1 line. With the steadily improving play of two of his freshmen, HE Rookie of the Week R.J. Gates and Kris Wallis, Mallen has decided to pair those two forwards up with his senior standout Tim Lovell, who will return from a one–game suspension.

■ women's swimming

continued from page 10

first real opportunity to put a full team together."

"I'm looking for the team to swim well this weekend. We're going there realizing that the group that we are facing is really good, but I don't want the team to get unnerved because of that," Newcomb said. "This meet will be good preparation for the A–10's. We'll need everyone to step up."

Following the Penn State Invitational, the Minutewomen will have to deal with another layoff. In fact, the team is done for the year. The calendar year, that is. UMass will travel to West Palm Beach, Florida on Jan. 3 for the LakeWorth Invitational.

"We'll get a lot of good training in over the break and the meet will give us the opportunity to swim the longer 50–meter course," Newcomb said.

Minutemen 3-2
William D. Mullins Center
1:00 p.m.
Radio WMUA 91.1 FM WHMP 99.3 T.V. WGGB 40
Marshall Thundering Herd 2-1
Probable Starters–Massachusetts
Monty Mack, So./G Charlton Clarke, Jr./G
Lari Kelner, Jr./C
Tyrone Weeks, Sr./F Mike Baird, So./F
About Saturday's Game
The Minutemen will be looking for their second straight win at home and third overall after beating the College of Charleston, 52–40, on Tuesday. Sophomore forward Winston Smith is out for the season due to a reaggravated ACL in his right knee; he is applying for a medical redshirt. Marshall's two wins this season are against Radford and Bluefield State
MARSHALL UNIVERSITY

Support UMass Sports !!!!!!!!!!

It's just as difficult to spot the Massachusetts Army National Guard member in this picture as it is in your school. That's because many Guard members are students – just like you.
You can join your friends and receive training just one weekend a month and two weeks a year while attending college full–time!
The Guard can help you afford an education with the 100% Tuition Waiver, good at 28 participating State Colleges and Universities, and a great paycheck. And some colleges even give academic credit for Guard service and training.
If you have the desire to gain valuable skills and experience, you can in the Massachusetts Army National Guard. Find out how you can be in the picture.
Call today!
1-888-NG-PRIDE
(1-888-647-7433)
MASSACHUSETTS ARMY NATIONAL GUARD YOU CAN

Students at these colleges came back from the holidays more gifted. So can you!
Dean's 3-Week Winter Session
ASSUMPTION BENTLEY BRIDGEWATER BRYANT BU CALIFORNIA STATE FRAMINGHAM FRANKLIN AND MARSHALL HARVARD HEIDELBERG HOLY CROSS LEHIGH MASS BAY NORTHEASTERN PROVIDENCE STONEHILL UMASS UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, CORK, IRELAND URI U VERMONT VANDERBILT W VIRGINIA WESLEYAN WHEATON AND 37 MORE
CONTINUING EDUCATION
Earn three college credits in just three weeks over the winter holidays, at Dean's unique Accelerated Winter Session. Bring your degree closer. Improve a grade. Satisfy course distribution requirements. If you need transferable credits fast, Dean Continuing Education makes it easy. Flexible course schedules, including days and evenings. Learning is focused, intense and rewarding. Choose from Business, Marketing, Computers, English, Math, Social Studies. Classes begin December 29, end January 16.
Register now by mail, phone, fax or walk–in. Free parking and (T)–accessible. For more information, call 800-870-6369 or 508-541-1629.
Registration Is On-going
Monday - Thursday 8:30 a.m. - 6:30 p.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.
NEW Saturdays Dec.13, 20, 27 9:00 a.m.–noon
Dean COLLEGE A private two–year college FRANKLIN, MA

4 out of 5 Sports writers say, "YOU should write for Sports!"

amc
There is a Difference! Silence in Cinema. No child seated if he says PG, 13 or R rated film after 6pm.
Mt. Farms 4 • 584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Jackal (R)
• Today at (5:10), 8:10, 10:50 • Sat at 2:00, (5:10), 8:10, 10:50 • Sun at 2:00, (5:40), 8:30
Starship Troopers (R)
• Today at (5:10), 8:10, 10:50 • Sat at 2:00, (5:10), 8:10, 10:50 • Sun at 2:00, (5:40), 8:30
Rainmaker (PG13)
• Today at (4:50), 7:50, 10:40 • Sat at 1:40, (4:50), 7:50, 10:40 • Sun at 1:40, (5:30), 8:20
Alien: Resurrection (R)
• Today at (5:00), 8:00, 10:40 • Sat at 1:50, (5:00), 8:00, 10:40 • Sun at 1:50, (5:50), 8:40
$2.50 (Tell Like) Show Daily! • Special Engagement, no Passes or Coupons
Hampshire 6 •584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Bean (PG 13)
• Today at (5:20), 8:00, 10:20 • Sat at 12:40, 2:50, (5:20), 8:00, 10:20 • Sun at 12:40, 2:50, (5:50), 8:40
Anastasia (G)
• Today at (5:10), 7:50, 10:10 • Sat at 12:20, 2:40, (5:10), 7:50, 10:10 • Sun at 12:20, 2:40, 8:40
Flubber (R)
• Today at (5:00), 7:40, 10:10 • Sat at 12:30, 2:40, (5:00), 7:40, 10:10 • Sun at 12:30, 2:40, (5:30), 8:30
Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil (R)
• Today at (4:40), 7:30, 10:20 • Sat at 1:00, (4:40), 7:30, 10:20 • Sun at 1:00, (5:10), 8:20
Mortal Combat 2: Annihilation (PG 13)
• Today at (5:00), 7:40, 10:00 • Sat at 12:30, 2:50 (5:00), 7:40, 10:00 • Sun at 12:30, 2:50, (5:30), 8:30
Boogie Nights (R)
• Today at (4:40), 7:30, 10:20 • Sat at 1:10, (4:40), 7:30, 10:20 • Sun at 1:10, (5:10), 8:20
Home Alone 3 Special Sneak Preview
• Sunday only (5:00) Stay over and see "Anastasia" Free

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
DAILY 7 & 9:15 /YOUR LAST WEEKEND TO SEE IT!
It's 1973, a year of waterbeds, Watergate and wife swapping in the suburban Connecticut town of New Canaan.
Kevin Kline Joan Allen and Sigourney Weaver
"A stunning achievement. One of the year's best." Peter Travers
"★★★★. A certain Oscar contender." Jack Mathews
The Ice Storm an Ang Lee Film
(WINNER - BEST SCREENPLAY - 1997 CANNES FILM FESTIVAL) R
ACADEMY of MUSIC Cinema House NORTHAMPTON. 584-8435

Look mom! I did This
COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS • NOW HIRING!
STOP BY AND PICK UP AN APPLICATION
113 CAMPUS CENTER

Holly Days
We accept AMEX, Discover, MC, Visa, and the UCard!
Don't forget Mom & Dad
Sweatshirts & Wind Pants
Keep Mom & Dad warm in style!
Sweatshirts as low as $19.99
Wind Wear Pants starting at $35.99
Sweaters
Comfy Cotton starting at $55.99
University Ustore
University Store
In the UMass Campus Center
Hours:
M-F 9 to 5 Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545-2619

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

SORORITY RUSH
Feb. 5th- 9th
Registration
12-5 SUB 12
in the Campus
Center Concourse
Come see what we're about
Banners will be there all day
or 549-8025

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom apartment- The Boulders. $595. Free heat. Call Jesse 259-9188

1 bedroom apartment available 1/98. Close to campus. Mark 549-5326

2 bedroom- Mill Hollow $540 Jan 1. Call Tracy 549-3759

One bedroom apartments available Jan-Feb 1st. Please contact the Brandywine Office at 549-0600

1 bedroom at Puffton Village $545. Includes heat. Available 1/1/98. Please call 549-9221

Take Over My Lease One bedroom apartment. $550/month inclusive. Call Tariq Odeh 665-5599

AUTO FOR SALE

82 Honda Civic $250. Reliable runs fine, but needs new clutch. 253-6585

Geo Prizm 1990 155,000. Very reliable. Well maintained (records). Blue Book says $2800. Asking $2000. 256-1845

AUTO FOR SALE

1988 Saab 900S Fully loaded, CD/Tape/Radio, sunroof. $3900 or B/O. Call (413)546-7081

1990 Pontiac Sunbird High mileage, as is $800. B/O. Leah 665-1276

88 Toyota Pick-Up 125k, runs well. $1100 firm. 367-2651

89 Nissan 240SX Excellent condition. All extras. New: muffler, clutch, tires, brakes. $4400 or B/O. 549-6926

1986 Dodge Charger 2dr, hatch, 60k miles. Good gas mileage. $1200 or B/O. Call Lorraine 253-4826

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

COMPUTERS

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Aerobics Instructor
January and Second Semester. Some mornings. Hampshire Fitness Club. 256-6446

Part-time change over crew and post-event cleaners needed at the Mullins Center. Must be available nights and weekends and willing to work. Apply in person. Mullins Center 2nd floor. 8:30-5:30pm.

Janitor Tuesday and Thursday mornings beginning Jan. Hampshire Fitness Club. $7/hr plus membership. Call 256-6446

EMPLOYMENT

Customized Help, Customized Wealth. 4-Real. First twenty callers. (508)339-4784 or e-mail nilesl@ici.net

Applications are available for Tour Guides, Student Admissions Rep and Summer Orientation Jobs at Admissions Center.

Activists
$250-$400/Week
Holiday Jobs For The Environment
Work with the Sierra Club on an urgent campaign to
- Protect endangered species
- Prevent habitat loss
- Stop clear cutting in our NATIONAL FORESTS

Work over the holidays and beyond. Career Opportunities. On-campus interviews today at 11, 1, 3, 7, in Campus Center #178 or call Amy at 256-6434

January Jobs Use your winter break to make money. 2-4 week fun promotions around country. Great for the resume. Outgoing and independent people call (800)783-4237 Attn: Joe. Collegiate Advantage

Summer Management Opportunities
Open across Mass. for the Summer of 1998. Earn $800-$800 per week. For more info please call College Pro Painters at (888)277-7962

Attention Slackers!!!
Use e-mail? Know others who do? Little effort = Big money! Call (800)546-0744

FOR SALE

Burton 6.1 Air Snowboard with bindings. $150 or B/O. Call Colin 546-2968

FOR SALE

For Sale- Two pairs of skis K2 and Salomom. Almost brand new. $200 each or B/O. Call 546-6152

Take home speakers or a 16mm film camera for the break. Camera perfect for Film/Comm Majors. Call Sid at 549-6857. Free kittens 2.

Willpower in A Bottle
Lose Weight
Doctor Recommended
100% Natural
Moneyback Guarantee
(413)259-1922

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

A Crayole Crew Birthday
Happy Birthday Ronite
RO-RO
Love Ya Red
From Green & Blue

JEWELRY

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

LOST & FOUND

Found- Silver ring and silver earrings at Mullins Center after 311 concert. Call Beth 546-2585

Lost- A gold bracelet on 12/3 between 10-11am around Haigis Mall or Bartlett 65. Extreme sentimental value. Reward offered. Call 6-4632

Lost Wednesday near Boyden Gym- Purple zippered notebook with negatives and printing paper. Call 367-0286

Women's Black Wool Coat Southwest area along Fearing St. Reward offered. Call Kara at 6-2495

LOST & FOUND

Gold bracelet chain style with lobster claw. 527-3454

MISCELLANEOUS

Looking for concert photos? Ken 549-7242

ROOM FOR RENT

Room in house in South Amherst. $375/month. ALL INCLUDED. Next to bus line. Start 1/1/98. Call 253-9482

Bedroom Available Jan 1 $342.50/month. Includes heat/hot water. Contact Kelly 253-1899

Bedroom in Puffton Private bathroom. Available Jan 1st. $267/month. Female preferred. Call 549-2980

I'm graduating! One bedroom available in three bedroom apartment in Puffton Village. Paid thru Feb 1. Move in Jan 1. $230/month. Heat included. Call 549-6729 Brian

Large bedroom available for Wintersession- 5 minute walk to campus. $400. Call Omri 549-9972

Quiet room, Downtown Amherst Available end of December. Lease. 253- 4236. 9am-9pm.

Furnished room available in a 4 bedroom Amherst house. $300/month. Near bus route. For more details call Tina 253-6428

One bedroom perfect for two in two bedroom apartment in Sunderland. Mindy 665-1276

Cheap rooms for Wintersession Live close to campus. Only $150. Includes heat/hot water. Call Jason 549-0958

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate/s wanted to share a 2 bedroom- Boulders Apts. Amherst. On bus line. Available Jan 1st or sooner. 259-2995

Roommate Wanted Jan 1 Behind Victory Market 4 bedrooms, W/D. $300+ 549-9130

To share two bedroom apartment in Brandywine. Rent starting Jan 1. Call Tara 549-4390

Looking for one male to share four bedroom apartment in Alpine Commons with three males. Two full baths. $300/month. Everything included. Starting ASAP. Call Josh 253-6481

2 roommates wanted to share 3 bedroom in Puffton. Available Jan 1. Call 549-8564

Roommate Wanted- 6 bedroom house, Amherst. $210/month. Own room (spacious), wood heated, pool table. Call 549-7177

One bedroom available in two bedroom apartment. Walk to Uptown and UMass. On bus line. $270/month plus utilities. Call 253-4613. Available 1/98.

One bedroom is available in Cliffside Apartment. Call Franky 665-7831

Very quiet roommate wanted in Amherst on bus line. $250/month plus 1/3 utilities. 256-5402, 253-9457

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your legal rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact The Student Legal Services Office. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

SERVICES

Decorator Service
Beautify your home- wallpaper, painting, staining. Expert work- 20 years exp. Free estimates. Call (413)533-6213 South Hadley

GET NOTICED! Number One secret to resume writing for college students and gen-x. Send $5.00 check/money order + business size SASE to: Nina Smith, 507 Central Avenue, No. 2, New Haven, CT 06515

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Take Over Lease Feb 1st 2 bedroom apartment at The Boulders. $725, heat/hot water included. On bus line. 256-1415

TRAVEL

"Spring Break Cruise"
Soak up the sun
Play in the sand
Dance in the moonlight
And, oh yeah,.. Party!!!
Don't be left at the dock
Book your cabin now
The price is right
Call 1-888-411-7447
Get your free gift

Spring Break 98- Sell Trips, Earn Cash, & Go Free!!! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus reps/group organizers. Guaranteed, lowest prices to Jamaica, Mexico, & Florida. Visit us @ www.ststravel.com or call (800)648-4849

SPRING BREAK TRAVEL [illegible] Bahamas Cruise, Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Padre, Barbados. Call for our Free Spring Break Travel Directory and Group Discount Info. Organize small group and travel free! Call (800)367-1252 or visit www.sunbreaks.com

Cantones Pizza
256-6100
1 2 LARGE CHEESE $13.95
2 2 CALZONES $8.95
3 4 CALZONES $15.95
4 2 LRG 1 TOPPING $15.95
No Coupons Needed w/ Specials
Free Delivery!

WANTED TO RENT

I need a one bedroom apartment for Spring. Will take over lease. Amherst preferred. Dan 546-2035

Looking for a DEAL??
FOR A LIMITED TIME ONLY
The Classifieds presents a new headline:
BOOKS FOR SALE
Need to sell your books? It's EASY and CHEAP. Just place Classified.
ONLY 10¢/ word

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exception are for birthdays or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or typo

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUNCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELRY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND (5 DAYS FREE)
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR RENT
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP.
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARO SALES

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, DEC. 5

Blood Drive — American Red Cross Hampshire County chapter will hold a blood drive from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 168C.

Film/Talk — The classic film Dr. Strangelove or How I learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb will be shown at 7 p.m. at Stirn Auditorium, Amherst College, followed by a talk entitled "They are Still Trying to Get Us to Love the Bomb," given by Ira Helfand, M.D., a member of the Hampshire chapter of Physicians for Social Responsibility.

Floral Exhibit — The Annual Holiday Floral Exhibit of flower arrangements by UMass and Stockbridge students in the Introductory and Advanced Floral Design courses will be held from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. in French Hall, room 105.

Service — Shabbat service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. Welcome the Sabbath with a bit of song and prayer.

Vigil/Rally — World AIDS candlelight vigil at 6 p.m. at the Student Union entrance. Speak out and rally at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Cape Cod Lounge. Sponsored by the UMass Pride Alliance, Health Education, University Health Services and The Stonewall Center. For more information, call the Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

SATURDAY, DEC. 6

Comedy — MISSION IMPROVable will be performing their free weekly comedy improv show at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163.

Sports — Women's Ice Hockey vs. Boston University at 1 p.m. in the Mullins Center practice rink.

MONDAY, DEC. 8

Auditions — The Not Ready for Bedtime Players are holding auditions for next semester at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163.

NOTICES

Applications — The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team is accepting applications for its training this January 12–16. Applications are available for any UMass student at 222 Hampshire House, Legal Studies. For more information, contact Leah at 545–5882.

Art Exhibition — An exhibition of more than 30 one–of–a– kind artist books and scrolls by William Schade will be on view from Nov. 11 through Jan. 25 at the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum. Museum hours are Tuesday – Friday, 11 a.m.–5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday, 1–5 p.m. and is closed on academic holidays from Wednesday, Nov. 26 through Monday, Dec. 1 and from Tuesday, Dec. 16 through Monday, Jan. 6. For more information, call 538–2245 or fax 538–2144.

Art Exhibition — Works by 13 members of the Williams College art faculty will be featured in "Artist/Teacher: Group Faculty Exhibition," opening Dec. 6 at the Williams College Museum of Art, and continuing through March 1. Museum hours are Tues.–Sat. 10 a.m.–5 p.m. and Sun. 1–5 p.m.

Club — The UMass Amateur Radio Club Station WIPUO is returning and looking for people to join in Ham radio. Anyone interested in radio/electronics and a desire to learn and communicate are welcome. The club will sponsor FCC approved volunteer examination sessions for all license levels. For more information, contact Richard Strychacz N1MFT at 549–6000 ext. 6000 or leave a message at facility services.

Entertainment — Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance production of "Italian American Reconciliation" at 8 p.m. on Dec. 5, 6 and 7 in Fayerweather Studio Theater, Amherst College. Admission is free, reservations are suggested. Call the box office at 542–2277, between 1– 4:30 p.m. weekdays and until 8 p.m. performance nights.

Exhibit — Orchids and Works of Sculpture at the Durfee Conservatory opening Dec. 5 from noon– 5 p.m. and continuing through Dec. 10. conservatory hours are Mon–Fri. 8:30 a.m. –4:30 p.m. Sponsored by the Amherst Orchid Society and Sculpture Department of UMass.

Fill–A–Bus — Help fill a PVTA bus with clothing, toys, and non–perishable food to benefit needy individuals and families in the Amherst area on Dec. 5 from 11 a.m.–3 p.m. daily in front of the Student Union. Volunteers to staff the bus and collect donations needed. Contact the UMass Community Service Program at 545–3368 for more information.

Internships — Environmental and Hunger Internships available for credit. Opportunities include helping to organize a Five College Earth Day, protecting Endangered Species and organizing the Spring Hunger Clean-up. For more information, call Robyn at 545–0199.

Normal — Spectrum Magazine is taking submission for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office at 545–2240 or come by in the Student Union, room 406E.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board	23 CNN
3	CBS/3	Hartford	24 CNN SI
4	CBS/4	Boston	25 Headline News
5	ABC/5	Boston	26 UCTV
6	PBS/57	Springfield	27 TBS
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.	28 BET
8	UPN/20	Hartford	29 TV Land
9	Weather Channel		30 Univision
10	NBC/30	New Britain	31 Comedy Central
11	Fox/61	Hartford	32 Cartoon
12	PBS/24	Hartford	33 Much Music
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield

545-3500

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 5, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Andre Rieu: The Christmas I Love			Andre Rieu – The Vienna I Love (In Stereo)			Andre Rieu	Wash. Week
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Pooh and Christmas		Family Matters	Step by Step	Nash Bridges "Found Money"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Pooh and Christmas		Family Matters	Step by Step	Nash Bridges "Found Money"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	★★★ "White Christmas" (1954, Musical) Bing Crosby, Danny Kaye.					20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Full House	Boy-World	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★½ The Little Drummer Girl (1984, Drama) Diane Keaton.				News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Players "Rashoom" (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Chvers	Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	"Switching Parents" (1993, Drama) Joseph Gordon-Levitt.				News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Players "Rashoom" (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WYIC	40	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Walter "Going Home"		Millennium "Covenant" (R)		News		Seinfeld	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Players "Rashoom" (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Public Housing
WGGB	29	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Sabrina-Witch	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Teen Angel	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	NBA Basketball	Boston Celtics at Miami Heat. (Live)				News		M*A*S*H	Real TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach	Coach	Grinch-C'mes	Flintstones Christmas Carol			★★★ "Harry and the Hendersons" (1987, Fantasy) John Lithgow.
A&E	69	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Guardian"		Biography: Neiman Marcus		America's Castles		Grand Tour		Law & Order
CNN	43	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	63	Lounge Liz.	Meks-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★★ "L.A. Story" (1991, Comedy) Steve Martin, Victoria Tennant.				Offsides		Tick 3
DISC	68	Wings "Instant Thunder" (R)		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Yellowstone		News	Storm	Fangs! "The Super Predators"		Justice Files "Women at Risk"
ESPN	45	Up Close	Sportscenter		Outside the Lines		Jeff Gordon	NASCAR Winston Cup Awards (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	67	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Murder or Memory? A Moment of Truth Movie" (1994, Drama)				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	53	MTV Live (In Stereo)		Putty Tour (R)	Week in Rock	Daria (R)	Beavis-Butt.	Yo! (In Stereo)		Straight Dope (R) (In Stereo)		Loveline (R) (In Stereo)
NICK	55	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Kablam!	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Bewitched	Love Lucy	Odd Couple	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI	66	Swamp Thing	Swamp Thing	Night Stalker "Bad Medicine"		★★½ "Lost Wharf's Happened to Rosemary's Baby" (1973, Horror)				Friday the 13th: The Series		Night Stalker	"Bad Medicine"
TLC	65	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Real America: 48 Hours		Killer Weather	Tornado (R)	Connections III (R)		Real America: 48 Hours (R)
TNT	54	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		NBA Basketball: Utah Jazz at Portland Trail Blazers. (In Stereo Live)					Inside-NBA	★★½ "Red Dawn" (1984)
USA	59	Baywatch "The Runaways"		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★★ "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" (1984, Adventure) Harrison Ford.				Sky Way
HBO	18	5:30 "Airplane II: The Sequel"		Inside the NFL (In Stereo)		★★ "Stigo" (1996) Mario Van Peebles. PG-13		"Fleeting" (1997, Adventure) Rutger Hauer.				Making of Fleet	Chris Rock
MAX	60	★★½ "Harriet the Spy" (1996) Michelle Trachtenberg. PG				★★★ "Top Gun" (1986, Drama) Tom Cruise. (In Stereo) PG				★★★ "Breaking the Waves" (1996, Drama) Emily Watson. R
SHOW	61	★★½ "Anne O" (1995, Drama) Coco Yares. (In Stereo) PG				★★ "High School High" (1996) Jon Lovitz. PG-13		Boxing: Frankie Liles vs. Andrea Schkeikov. (Live)

Bruno By C. Baldwin

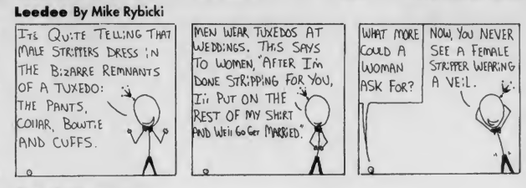
Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Thatch By Frank Cho

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Monkey Socials By Constant Jones

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Sven By Steven Higgins

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You may not know when you have crossed the line today, but someone close to you will tell you when it is time to mend your ways.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may not be able to avoid distractions today, but when it comes to intrusions you must put your foot down. Concentration is the key.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You may not score the success you expect today, but surprise dividends will come to you as a result of your initial efforts.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You can't afford to send in the second– or third–string today. Only those who perform best under pressure will be able to get the job done.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — An arrangement made some time ago may fall apart quite suddenly today — but you'll be able to pick up the pieces and profit handsomely.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You won't be able to read people's minds today, but if you study their behavior with care you should be able to anticipate their decisions.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Accuracy is the key today; you won't be able to get away with any guesswork at this time. Focus on facts and figures; assess unusual options.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You will need up–to– date information today in order to do your job to the best of your ability. Do not be premature; wait until you have the facts.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You may encounter an unexpected challenge today, but with all your preparation you should be ready for anything. Do you feel up to it?

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — It is time to address a difficult situation at home, and you'll need a good deal of cooperation in order to come up with a permanent solution.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You don't have all the answers today, but you should know where to start. Someone close to you will come up with a key idea.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You can't afford to sit by and watch someone else call the shots today. You must take a more active, aggressive stance at this time.

Quote of the Day

"All the leaves are brown, and the sky is grey."

–The Mamas and the Papas

Close to Home By John McPherson

While Jack kept the Watkins distracted in the kitchen, Muffy combed their house for their secret black book of baby sitters.

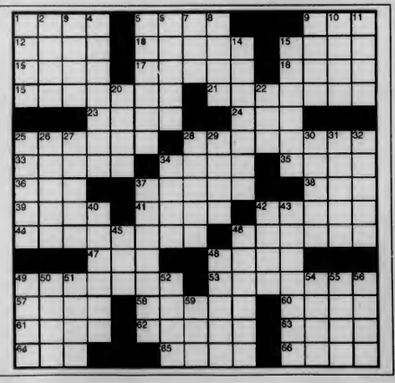
Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Cheesey Chicken Casserole w/ Cheese
Hot, Beefy Beef Sandwich
Fish in Batter
Fish in Eeevil Batter
DINNER
Friday's Fried, Feathery Chicken
Serendipitously Stuffed Shells in Suave Sauce
Gargantuan Grilled Steak Sandwich
You Yearn for Yummy Yellow Yams

Worcester
LUNCH
Evil Hamburger or Harvest Burger
Evil Krabbycake Sandwich
Raditore/Evil Tomato or Alfredo Sauce
Evil Vegan Falafel Sandwich
DINNER
Rockin' Rotisserie Glazed Chicken
Shrimpi Shrimp Scampi Pasta
Voluptuous Vegetable Gumbo Casserole
pasta: Shrimp Scampi Pasta

Hampshire
LUNCH
Cowburger
Grilled, Cheesed Sandwich
El' Cap-i-tan's Catch/Sesame Roll
Hampshire's Hairy Harvest Surprize
DINNER
Rotisserie Glazed Chicken
Stuffed Shells in Sauce
Fettuccini Alfredo
Fettuccini Cornholio

Berkshire
LUNCH
Crazy Krabbycake Sandwich
Chef's Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Disgruntled Student's Grilled Cheese
Rad Ratatouille
DINNER
Rosy Rotisserie Glazed Chicken
Perfectly Peculiar Pineapple Ham Steak
Vagabond Vegie Gumbo Casserole
Surprizingly Stuffed Shells In Savory Sauce



ACROSS
1 Vista
5 Bandleader Artie —
9 Mass
12 Singer Fitzgerald
13 Fable writer
15 Alter
16 Intends
17 Blue Grotto site
18 Fencing weapon
19 Aerobic togs
21 Corn parts
23 Chills
24 Actress — Dawn Chong
25 Minted
28 Fermentation agent
33 Wedding bands
34 Zip —
35 Edges
36 Outdated
37 Pen name
38 Regulation
39 Fish trap
41 Inquisitive
42 Last Greek letter
44 Seepage
46 Untie
47 Ooh and —
48 Dollar fraction
49 Stimulated (an appetite)
53 Opposed
57 Verdi opera
58 Goddess of peace
60 Presidential prerogative
61 Animal shelters
62 Juicy fruit
63 Actor Jannings
64 Highest mountain in Crete
65 Draft of air
66 A sight for — eyes

DOWN
1 Entree meat
2 Tennis pro Nastase
3 Pollster Roper
4 Squandering
5 Holy
6 Chiefs
7 Viper
8 Type of force
9 Yawn
10 Pitcher Hershiser
11 "So long" and "ciao"
14 Drills through
15 Plywood layer
20 Some fighter pilots
22 Traitor
25 Throng
26 OPEC vessel
27 New Delhi's country
28 Idaho capital
29 "An apple — ....."
30 Vexes
31 Picture
32 Nile dam
34 Wooden shoe
37 Site of Disneyland
40 Lariats
42 A Chaplin
43 Reasons
45 — King Cole
46 Map
48 Religious rite
49 Dry gully
50 Hurried
51 — St. Vincent Millay
52 Sketched
54 Fictional captain
55 Mix
56 Painted tinware
59 Inventor Whitney

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

P	O	S	S	E		V	I	M		P	O	L
A	R	I	E	S		A	D	A		E	R	A
F	L	O	W	E	R	P	O	T		R	E	N
T	O	E		A	I	L	S		T	A	C	I
			W	A	R	D		R	O	B	E	R
I	N	H	A	L	E		S	P	A	R
S	A	U	C	E	R	C	O	W	B	E	L	L
H	I	G	H		A	I	D		N	A	Y	S
	L	E	T	S	O	F	F		S	A	T	I
R	E			A	N	T	I		T	U	R	F
E	V	E	N	T		B	O	G	Y
C	L	O	U	D		I	T	E	R		A	U
A	L	I	B	I		C	H	A	M	P	A	G	N	E
B	E	L	I	E		O	E	R		E	R	O	D	E
S	N	E	E	R		N	E	D		I	N	G	O	T

12-5-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

Sprewell's punishment not enough

The news out of the Bay Area has not been good these past few days. First the architect of the '49ers dynasty (and all–around Football God) Eddie DeBartolo had to step away from his duties as owner due to a pending indictment in Louisiana regarding fraud. After the unbelievable series of events regarding the area's NBA Warriors though, DeBartolo's legal troubles have suddenly become back page news.

Before going on further, let's get something clear. What Latrell Sprewell (admittedly) did to his coach, P.J. Carlisemo, was perhaps the most reprehensible act in all of sports since... well, ever.

Mike Tyson biting off Holyfield's ear, that's bad enough, but physically assaulting and then threatening to kill your coach because he's looking for a little more hustle in a practice drill? What is the world of sports coming to?

Simply put, if anyone other than a

Marty Keane
Around the Horn

superstar athlete did this, they would have spent Monday night in jail; which is where Sprewell should be locked up, incidentally.

Perhaps taking a cue from Dick Vermeil and the St. Louis Rams, the Warriors on Wednesday night decided to terminate Sprewell's $30+ million contract immediately. The team should be applauded for finally taking a stand against uncontrollable athletes. It's about time athletes were treated for who they really are — the same as the rest of us.

David Stern took a step in the right direction by banning Sprewell from the league for a year, but that might not be enough — do something that will force this street thug to reflect back on what it means to respect authority.

• In other NBA tidbits, the entire Scottie Pippen situation is Chicago is giving the World Champs another headache they just don't need right now. With Dennis Rodman playing listless basketball and with underrated guard Steve Kerr still on the mend, the Bulls can do without Pippen's personal feud with general manager Jerry Krause. If Pippen's as mature as he says he is, he'll be back on the court before the end of the year — with the Bulls.

• While we're on the subject of the NBA, it looks like the league already has another generation of superstars–in– waiting with the Lakers' Kobe Bryant (easily the league's most–improved player thus far), Kevin Garnett of Minnesota and Damon Stoudamire — currently teammates with Marcus Camby in Toronto — but looking to get out now that Isiah has jumped ship for the Peacock.

• Before I continue, Michigan's Charles Woodson should (and probably won't) win the Heisman Trophy. He's the finest player in game by a country mile.

• Here's some for all you Patriots' fans to ponder — life without Bill Parcells. While the Pats have struggled all season long under the anonymous guidance of Pete Carroll, the Meadowlands hasn't seen such excitement since the glory days of the Giants under.. Parcells.

Regardless of his sour disposition and tyrannical tendencies, the man can flat out coach, and more importantly, can strike the fear of god in his players — a trait sorely lacking in many NFL coaches, most notably the soon–to–be–fired Dave Wannstedt in Chicago.

Inheriting an almost identical roster from a 1–15 Jets squad last year, Parcells suddenly has his team on track to make the playoffs for the first time in years, and a first–ever division title isn't at all out of the question.

• With baseball fans settling in for the long, hard winter, consider the plight of the Arizona Diamonbacks. Thanks to a superior marketing plan, local television rights revenue and the hungry fans of Phoenix, owner Jerry Colangelo has amassed an almost $400 million war chest of capital to spend on free agents.

With over $80 million in salary already committed on the left side of the infield for Jay Bell and Matt Williams, look for the Diamondbacks to become competitive very quickly, much like the Marlins and Rockies. So much for struggling expansion teams.

• College basketball is off to a fine start and if early season results (defeating quality Arizona and FSU teams) are any indication, next week's game for the Minutemen at Allen Fieldhouse against Kansas should prove to be a real test for Bruiser's squad.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Ajmal Basit and the Minutemen host the Thundering Herd of Marshall tomorrow at 1 p.m.

Minutemen host Herd

UMass looking for win before long road stretch

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

Well, at least the "Popcorn State" portion of the slate only lasts a week.

And to give the Massachusetts men's basketball team credit, even the Popcorn State's they're playing aren't as bad as they used to be. UMass has opened up the Mullins Center with two deceivingly tough non–conference opponents, something a lot of big–time schools don't do.

After muscling out a 52–40 win over the College of Charleston at the Mullins Center, UMass looks to make it two in a row tomorrow when they entertain the Marshall Thundering Herd at the Mullins Center at 1 p.m.

Tomorrow's contest will mark the last home game for the Minutemen until Jan. 10. In that time, UMass will travel to Kansas, Las Vegas, Cleveland, Hartford and Boston, in their quest to prove the UMass adage "Have Game, Will Travel."

However, the task at hand is Mid–American Conference member Marshall (2–1), long known more for football than for basketball. Marshall had considerable trouble putting the ball in the net in their last outing. The Thundering Herd lost to Chattanooga 57–47, the lowest scoring output for a Marshall team in seven years.

After finishing first in the Mid–American Conference's East Division in 1997, Marshall has been picked to finish fifth out of six teams in the East this season. The Thundering Herd went 21–10 in 1996–97, but were bounced in the first round of the MAC tournament and did not see post–season action.

The Thundering Herd have gotten a few solid performances from their starters, led by sophomore guard Deon Dobbs. Dobbs is second on the team in scoring at 13 points a game, including 24 in a win over Bluefield State. Down low, Marshall will look to junior center Terrell McKelvy, who has scored 10.7 points a game, and a team– high 11 rebounds per outing. Forward Carlton King leads the team with 13.3 points a game.

UMass faces off with HE–leading Huskies

Minutemen change up first line

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

This weekend, the Minutemen will face off against the Huskies of Northeastern in a home–and–home series, with UMass visiting St. Botolph St. and Matthews Arena in Boston tonight (7 p.m.), while resuming the series tomorrow night at the William D. Mullins Center (8 p.m.).

In one sense, the season has been a chilling suspense thriller for the Minutemen so far, with the 2–9 team (0–7 in Hockey East) treading the line of winning but not breaking on through to the victorious side. In the last six games, UMass has gone 1–5, while only being outscored 23–19 in that span.

UMass coach Joe Mallen has emphasized the positives in practice this week, especially after watching the game tape from last Saturday night's loss to the Huskies.

"We've worked on this team this week to be focused, and to stay positive," Mallen said. "There's no reason why we can't beat this team, but we need to make our own breaks. After reviewing last Saturday's game, I was not discouraged at all with our play."

In another sense, something somewhat chilling, yet not that suspenseful, but still thrilling for coach Bruce Crowder and the Huskies have been their start to this season. After being the cellar dwellers of HE last season, Northeastern now stands at a 6–5–1 mark, and at the top of the HE with a 5–3–1 conference record.

The top of HE is a high place for the Huskies right now, especially for a very young team, but that success has to be tempered with the fact that nationally ranked teams like Boston University, Maine and New Hampshire have played two fewer conference games.

Crowder realizes that fact, but he will take what he can get in such a tough conference.

"Basically, we're finding ways to win," Crowder said. "Its not pretty, and its not exciting, but at the end of the 60 or 65 minutes, it has been ending up good for us.

Men's Hockey
Massachusetts vs. Northeastern
Home–and–Home

"Obviously, we're happy with our success, but we also know that a lot of other teams have not played a lot of league games. So, we can't get too ahead of ourselves."

After being the bottom two teams in HE last season, UMass and Northeastern are a series of contrasts this season — the Minutemen have found ways to lose, while the Huskies have found ways to win.

"They're not catching the breaks, and last Saturday night, they outplayed us for two periods," Crowder said. "But these things start to snowball on you, and if you don't think you can catch a break, you won't."

In an effort to get that first conference win of the season for his team,

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore forward Jeff Blanchard battles on the boards against Vermont.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

UMass head coach Joanie O'Brien faces tough stretch.

Blodgett singlehandedly beats UM

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Maine guard Cindy Blodgett went into last night's game against the Massachusetts women's basketball team needing 19 points in order to become the all–time leading scorer in Black Bear and America East Conference record books.

With her 40–point performance, Blodgett, a senior, not only claimed the top spot on the two scoring lists, but helped Maine (3–1) to an 82–68 win over the Minutewomen (3–2).

"Cindy Blodgett's 40 points is what killed us," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "We wanted to make her go to her right every time she got the ball, because she doesn't shoot as well with her right hand. But she always found her left hand whenever she got the ball."

Blodgett passed Rachel Bouchard, who stood atop the list with 2,405 points. Blodgett is now 695 points away from the Division I mark of 3,122.

Kelly Van Huisen suffered against the prolific guard, scoring only seven points.

"Tonight we made it into an individual game, and we can't play that game," O'Brien said.

But, according to O'Brien, it was not just Blodgett's play that hurt the Minutewomen; UMass also had its fair share of mental errors.

Maine	82
Massachusetts	68

"There was a lack of intensity," she said. "Players who have been stepping up didn't show up mentally. There may be some changes to the line–up come Sunday."

There were, however, a few bright spots for the Minutewomen. Sabriya Mitchell pocketed a career–high 17 points and committed only four turnovers. Tez Kraft finished with 15 points.

"Kara Tudman played her butt off," O'Brien said. "We just didn't get many chances to get her the ball. Rekiya [Penton] changed some things in the game with her athleticism. I should have gotten her into the game earlier."

Maine's intensity denied the Minutewomen the ball at nearly every turn, especially in the opening frame.

"They scored so easily in the first half," O'Brien said. "As a result, we couldn't get into our game. They also dominated the paint."

UMass will not have much time to rest, as the Minutewomen host intrastate rival Holy Cross at the William D. Mullins Center, Sunday at 2 p.m. On Thursday, the Connecticut Lady Huskies come calling for a 7 p.m. tilt.

The Crusaders, who played to an 11–point loss at UConn in their season–opener, are led by 6–foot–1 junior forward Amy O'Brien. O'Brien is averaging 30.0 points per game and has led the Crusaders (4–2) in scoring and rebounding in all six contests.

Turn to WOMEN'S BASKETBALL, page 7

Women's swimming dives into Penn State Invitational

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

After keeping things in the northeast for the opening month of the season, the Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team will broaden its horizons this weekend when it travels to Happy Valley for the Penn State Invitational.

The Minutewomen, who currently sport a 3–2 mark, will go to battle against the likes of Penn State, St. Bonaventure, and Brown in the two–day event.

"This is one of the best collective groups that we have ever faced," UMass coach Bob Newcomb said.

"Penn State was ranked in the Top 20 last year, and we've never competed against a Top 20 team before St. Bonaventure won the [Atlantic 10] last year, and Brown is a very good Ivy League school," he said.

Host Penn State carries a 3–3 overall mark, 1–3 record into the Big 10 into their invitational. The Lady Lions are a large squad, and are dominated primarily by freshmen and sophomores. Out of a total roster of 32 swimmers, there are only seven seniors.

St. Bonaventure brings a talented squad to State College this weekend. The defending A–10 champs have four All–A– 10 swimmers and the co–rookie of the year on their roster. Nevertheless, the Bonnies are also a young squad, as over half of the team is either a freshman or sophomore.

Brown brings a 2–0 record to Pennsylvania this weekend. The Bears are a senior–laden club who has already upended Harvard and Dartmouth.

UMass has been out of action since Nov. 22, when they faced St. John's. After taking a few days off for Thanksgiving break, which allowed the team to recuperate and get back to full strength, things look promising for the Minutewomen this weekend.

"We have the vast majority of our team back now and we are relatively healthy," Newcomb said. "This is our

Also Today

• Men's Indoor Track runs with 'Dogs and Cats'... page 7

• Men's Gymnastics swingin' at home... page 7

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 65 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Monday, December 8, 1997

"Here and now"

Days of the New headlined a triple–bill show at Pearl Street. Also playing were Mary's First and Letters to Cleo (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Minutemen hold off Herd

Despite blowing a 22–point lead, UMass held on to beat Marshall, 61–59, at the Mullins Center Saturday (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Confessed killers seek amnesty

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The confessed killers of a black civil rights leader were to resume their quest for amnesty today in the Indian Ocean city of Port Elizabeth, where Steve Biko last was seen alive.

At September hearings before the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, former apartheid police described how officers slammed Biko's head into a wall in 1977 and chained him crucifixion style to a gate for 24 hours.

Biko died within a week, after being driven naked and without medical attention 660 miles to the Pretoria prison.

Five former policemen have admitted accidentally killing Biko. Their testimony was interrupted to allow a national celebration of the 20th anniversary of Biko's death on Sept. 12.

Biko was labeled a terrorist by the apartheid government for preaching that blacks should take pride in their culture and fight for control of the country. His death provoked international outrage and mobilized the anti–apartheid movement at home. His short life — Biko was 30 when he died — was the subject of the 1987 film, "Cry Freedom."

NATION

Gore wants to be President

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton is worried that Vice President Al Gore won't stand up for the Clinton White House's centrist policies during an expected protracted battle for the Democratic presidential nomination against liberal Rep. Dick Gephardt, Time magazine reported.

"The president and first lady are understandably concerned that there's going to be a lot of pressure on the vice president to move left to cut off Gephardt," Al From, president of the centrist Democratic Leadership Council, is quoted as saying.

"But when push comes to shove, Al Gore will run as a New Democrat," From said. "The lesson of Clinton 1992 is that you're better off keeping to the middle in a primary." The "New Democrats" follow the left–of–center ideology of the Clinton White House: balanced budget, tighter welfare laws, economic growth. In a recent interview aboard Air Force Two, Gore told Time he wants to be president more than ever.

"It's probably an impolitic remark," he said, "but it's true."

Former and current advisers say Gore needs to humanize his approach to campaigning.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 41 LOW: 16	HIGH: 39 LOW: 21	HIGH: 36 LOW: 20

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

$400 million in deferred maintenance at UM

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Editor's Note: This is the first of a two–part series examining the state of facilities at UMass. Today's story focuses on the problem of deferred maintenance. Tommorow's focuses on possible solutions.

For over 40 years, repairs and maintenance on UMass buildings have been systematically postponed, in many cases indefinitely.

It's called deferred maintenance, and its shadow is looming larger and larger over the University of Massachusetts campus.

Leaky roofs have gone unpatched, not only leaving rotting ceilings and floors, but classrooms that must be vacated when it rains.

Critical systems, such as heating, ventilation and electric, have not been updated since the 1950s. The result is laboratories, like those in Goessman, which must be closed because of poor ventilation, and offices, like those in Bartlett, which can't be equipped with computers because of dust accumulation.

The majority of buildings on the UMass campus were built in the '50s and '60s and have received very little maintenance through the years. Their main systems are wearing out, and there is not enough money in the campus budget to carry out the necessary repairs to keep these buildings functional.

The clock is ticking, and the situation on campus is worsening.

The result is a campus littered with buildings which will increasingly be unable to serve their constituents — the faculty and students of UMass.

The scope of the problem

The University recently finished a survey of the location and extent of deferred maintenance on campus.

Vice Chancellor for Administration and Finance Paul Page said the University hired Vanderbuilt Construction Company to work with the Physical Plant staff in assessing the amount and severity of deferred maintenance in the University's buildings.

"We have been concerned for a period of time relative to the conditions of our facilities," Page said. "So, two and a half years ago we started a comprehensive study to take a systematic look at each one of our facilities and quantify the scale and scope of deferred maintenance."

A team of architects and engineers completed a visual inspection of all major buildings on the UMass campus and met with maintainers and users of the buildings to find deficiencies.

The team examined the structural soundness of the buildings, the condition of their major systems, their general appearance and their compliance with building codes.

"We looked at over nine million square feet," Jim Cahill, director of facilities planning, said. "The roofs, mechanical equipment, electrical service to the buildings, windows, lights, code deficiencies... these were examined and catalogued."

The team's findings were disturbing — they documented $395 million in current deferred maintenance alone.

YVONNE YANG \ COLLEGIAN

This rotting floor at Boyden Gymnasium, caused by a leaky roof, is one example of deferred maintenance creating problems at UMass.

"That is a lot of money," Page said. "There has been a huge investment in this place, and it is loosing its value. Ultimately, it plays out at the level of those who occupy and need buildings."

This figure includes noticeable deficiencies such as the rotting floor in Boyden Gymnasium, the leaking roof of Cheneworth Laboratory and the missing floor tiles in Bartlett Hall.

It also includes less visible, but important, deficiencies such as the poor air quality in Bartlett Hall, the lack of ventilation in Goessman Laboratory and the deterioration of heating and cooling systems in several buildings.

"These are things users might not notice until they don't work," Cahill said. "Two–thirds of the problems are hidden."

However, this figure does not include costs for modernization (updating buildings for modern technology and use), furnishings, such as broken chairs and desks, or infrastructure, such as underground pipes and roads.

Turn to MAIN, page 2

THANG VO \ COLLEGIAN

"Reliving the Goodell Takeover"

Reliving last year's takeover is the theme of an event tonight in the Campus Center Auditorium. The event will begin at 7 p.m. with guest speakers, and will be highlighted by "A Living Documentary on Goodell," a film by senior communications and theater major Andre Collins. The event, which is free and open to the public, is sponsored by the Office of ALANA Affairs.

Renowned sci–fi writer Ray Bradbury to speak, sign books at UM today

By Sarah J. Kimmel
Collegian Staff

Tonight at 8 p.m., in the Fine Arts Center, the University of Massachusetts Distinguished Visitors Program presents renowned author and futurist Ray Bradbury, who will deliver a lecture entitled "The Great Years Ahead." There will also be a book signing reception on the Campus Center Concourse this afternoon from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Bradbury is the author of such science fiction novels as Fahrenheit 451, The Martian Chronicles, The Golden Apples of the Sun, The Illustrated Man and Something Wicked This Way Comes. He has also recently released two new works which are a short story collection, Driving Blind, and his first major book in over eight years, Quicker than the Eye. He will speak not only on his works but also on his futuristic views, which cover a wide range of topics.

As a novelist, short story writer, essayist, playwright, screen writer (for John Huston's Moby Dick, which was filmed in Ireland), a poet, an Academy Award nominee, an Emmy winner (for the teleplay of The Halloween Tree), and a theme park consultant (for Walt Disney Enterprises where he designed Spaceship Earth at Epcot Center), Bradbury has written more than 300 published works.

Since 1985, Bradbury has adapted 42 of his short stories for the Ray Bradbury Theater on USA Cable Television. He is the recipient of several awards, including, the O. Henry Memorial Award, the Benjamin Franklin Award, the World Fantasy Award for lifetime achievement, and the Grandmaster Award from the Science Fiction Writers of America.

Bradbury's works evoke the themes of racism, censorship, technology, nuclear war, humanistic values and the

Turn to BRADBURY, page 3

Speakers address importance of dialogue in peace process

By Elana Premack
Collegian Correspondent

Tying personal experiences to the broad issues of the Middle East peace process, Reena Bernards and Dr. Najat Arafat Khelil addressed approximately 20 University of Massachusetts students and community members on Wednesday, Dec. 3. The speakers discussed the importance of dialogue in resolving conflict between Palestinians and Jews.

Trained in conflict resolution, leadership and organizational development, Bernards and Khelil formed the Palestinian and Jewish American Women's Dialogue Project in 1989 following the Palestinian intifada. Sensing a need for understanding between the two groups, the women began the dialogue with 20 women, 10 Palestinian Americans and 10 Jewish Americans.

"We want to put a face on the enemy, to understand that we both have suffered and that we have to recognize the sufferling of each other," Khelil said. "We have to appreciate that each one of us has a side to the issue."

The personal experiences of both Khelil and Bernards contributed to their desire to create a dialogue. Khelil's hometown of Nablus, West Bank, was occupied in 1967, the same time she was receiving her education in the United States. At the time, her education was stressed over her connection to the conflict.

"The issue of the conflict was somewhere deep in my heart, except it was not occupying me," Khelil said.

It was her return to her home in 1977 that opened her eyes to the need for peaceful coexistence between Jews and Palestinians. For the first time she was able to humanize Israelis and began to believe that there could be a fair solution to the conflict.

"I [previously] thought no solution could be achieved except by having a Palestinian State on the land of Palestine," Khelil said.

Bernards was raised in the United States with a strong Jewish background — her father was a conservative rabbi, her mother a Hebrew school teacher. Bernards said her view of Israel was extremely positive.

"Israel was the savior of the Jewish people," Bernards said. "It was an incredibly creative, new country that came out of the ashes of the Holocaust."

On a 1968 trip to Israel, the then 13–year–old Bernards witnessed firsthand the feelings of Palestinians toward Jews. Visiting the occupied West Bank, she faced Palestinians angry at Jews for being in their town. While Bernards acknowledged that this initial experience produced only an unconscious understanding of the issues at hand, it was an understanding still, and one that provided a catalyst for her future actions, including the creation of the dialogue project.

Khelil said that the need for leaders to give an incentive for Israelis and Palestinians to move in the

Turn to PEACE, page 3

Reno under fire

By Laurie Kellman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republicans threatened Attorney General Janet Reno with contempt of Congress yesterday over her decision to forego an independent counsel's investigation of White House campaign fund raising.

One GOP senator, Orrin Hatch of Utah, said he's asking FBI director Louie Freeh to bypass Reno, his boss, and investigate allegations of Democratic impropriety in fund raising.

"I have no doubt that the political appointees in the department who have been influencing her are doing nothing but protecting the president," Senate Judiciary Committee chairman Hatch said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Sen. John Glenn (D–Ohio) shot back: "Was it protecting the president when she appointed four independent counsels that all took aim at the White House?" Before the cameras were turned on, Glenn flashed Reno a thumb–to–forefinger OK sign and told her he admired her for standing up to her principles on the independent counsel decision.

On Tuesday, Reno announced her decision not to request a court–appointed independent counsel to look into fund–raising calls that President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore made from the White House. In a 69–page brief and accompanying news conference, she said they had broken no federal laws.

Furious over Reno's decision, Republicans used yesterday's talk show circuit to lob a series of threats at her and the Justice Department.

Turn to RENO, page 3

YVONNE YANG \ COLLEGIAN

Trinkets for sale

Students' artwork, created in the Student Union Craft Center, are displayed at the Holiday Craft Fair on the Campus Center Concourse last Friday afternoon.

YVONNE YANG \ COLLEGIAN

Tree

Trees are the carriers of our watery burdens.

62 confirmed dead in plane crash

By Maura Reynolds
Associated Press

IRKUTSK, Russia — The crew of a military cargo jet said nothing before their fiery crash to provide clues to what had gone wrong, Russian safety officials said yesterday, baffled by the disaster in a Siberian city.

Investigators were studying at least eight scenarios for Saturday's crash — including contaminated fuel or inadequate de-icing in the 5-degree weather — but had few leads as to what actually happened, said Emergency Situations Minister Sergei Shoigu.

"We're not trying to hide. We're just trying to get you the truth," Shoigu said.

The jumbo jet-sized air force plane, carrying 23 people, crashed about 20 seconds after takeoff, plowing into a five-story apartment building and clipping an orphanage with its wing.

The 100 tons of aviation fuel in its tanks exploded, engulfing surrounding buildings in flame.

"There was fire. Flames. There were no people. Nothing but flames," said Galina Dmitrovna, one of the first emergency workers to arrive.

Yesterday, 1,400 rescue workers searched the charred wreckage, hunting for more victims beyond the 62 adults and children confirmed dead.

Twelve people — including four children — had been hospitalized with burns. Many were in serious condition, officials said. Pools of aviation fuel dotted the ruined neighborhood, and the stench of burned wood and fuel hung over the area.

Residents climbed among the fragments of their homes, looking for belongings. Ice covered many of the gutted apartments — water from firefighter's hoses had frozen in temperatures that fell to 20 degrees below zero overnight.

One woman, whose husband was missing, sobbed as she pointed at the burned shell of her apartment.

"All I can find are my kitchen knives," she said, begging people to find her husband.

Most of the remains found so far were minute or badly burned, making identification almost impossible, investigators said. "When I say we have a fragment, it means we have something like an elbow," a distraught Shoigu said.

He denied Russian media reports that the pilot radioed he had lost power in two engines just seconds after taking off.

"They didn't manage to say anything about what was happening," he said of the crew.

The 11-year-old An-124 had just passed a safety inspection in November, officials said.

Scenarios being considered included the possibility that the plane was loaded with substandard fuel that caused the engines to stall; the cargo may not have been properly secured and broke loose during takeoff; pilot error or improper de-icing.

The plane's black box flight recorders were recovered and sent to Moscow, but air force officials said it would take days to analyze the data.

All An-124s have been grounded until the cause could be determined, a Defense Ministry spokesman said. He declined to give his name.

■ main

continued from page 1

Also, the $393 million only accounts for things that are broken now. It does not include renewal costs, anticipated costs for systems which are expected to wear out in the near future.

"This is a very conservative number," Cahill said. "It does not include furnishings, and anything below $10,000 in costs was not even recorded."

So, Cahill said, to actually bring the campus into top condition would cost much more than the $393 million.

"We never put that kind of money into this work," Cahill said. "That is why we have the problem we do."

A problem with a history

During the '50s, '60s and '70s, the University built a tremendous amount of buildings — 80 percent of today's campus — as it experienced a dramatic growth in enrollment.

All of the capital budget was put into new building during these decades, and very little money was allocated for maintenance work.

As time went on and allocations from the state legislature were meager, money was shifted from maintenance to fund payroll and other expenses.

"It [maintenance] has not gotten the attention to the degree that it needed in the past," Page said. "Theoretically, we should have been putting money away over those 30 years. There were other hungry mouths out there during that period. You make other choices."

Now, those buildings are wearing out, and repairs that should have been made years ago have generated a slew of additional problems which will cost millions to fix.

"It is an insidious spiral. If you don't do maintenance in the beginning, problems become more expensive to fix," Earl Smith, director of the Physical Plant, said. "The less attention you pay to it, the worse it becomes in a compound way."

The University will be dealing with the legacy of that building spree — the $393 million in deferred maintenance — for the coming decades.

"It is a result of continued under-investment by institutions in their facilities," Page said. "Over time, it will come back and create a road block for you."

Hindering the educational process

Across the campus, deferred maintenance is directly impacting the quality of education students at UMass receive.

"This is impeding our basic mission, which is to educate students," Smith said.

The poor state of facilities puts constraints on the quality of teaching and learning which is achieved at UMass.

At a minimum, faculty cannot take advantage of technological advances in their research and teaching.

In extreme cases, classes have to be cancelled because of leaky roofs and other maintenance problems.

"It is not an environment conductive to people doing their best work," Chancellor David K. Scott said.

The condition of facilities will also play a significant role in the success or failure of the University in achieving national prominence as a major research University in the coming decades.

"If we are going to move to be in the AAU [Association of American Universities] this is going to hurt," Page said.

Perhaps most disturbingly, deferred maintenance has been allowed to accumulate to the point where campus buildings will have to be abandoned.

"In the next 20 years, we will see buildings falling down," Scott said. "It will just create a lot of problems."

This was already the case with the University Apartments, which were closed this fall because the University could not pay for the needed repair work on the buildings to be done.

Clearly, these repairs cannot continue to be postponed with out the campus suffering significant results.

"It has gotten to the point where we are saying the campus can not afford to ignore it," Cahill said.

YVONNE YANG \ COLLEGIAN

These buildings were abandoned this fall by the University because repair costs were too high. If deferred maintenence is not addressed promptly, more buildings may have to be closed

JANUARY CLASSES

Title	Cr.	Days	Time	Course Dates
Keyboarding For Information Processing	1	MTW F	9-12:15	1/2 - 1/7
Introduction To Dance	3	MTWThF	9-12	1/2 - 1/21
Computer Literacy	1	MT ThF	9-12:15	1/8 - 1/13
Introduction To The Internet	1	TWThF	9-12:15	1/14 - 1/20
English Composition I	3	MTWThF	9-12	1/2 - 1/21
English Composition II	3	MTWThF	9-12	1/2 - 1/21
Intermediate Grammar Review	2	MTWThF	10-12	1/2 - 1/21
French Skills Practice I	2	MTWThF	9-12	1/6 - 1/16
History Of The American People Since 1865	3	MTWThF	9-12	1/2 - 1/21
Counseling Skills	3	MTWThF	9-12	1/2 - 1/21
Winter Outdoor Recreation	2	MT ThF	12:30-4:30	1/2 - 1/16
Practical Nursing Practicum	2	TWThF	8-3:30	1/2 - 1/22
Introduction To Prof. Nursing And The Nursing Process	1	days and times to be arranged
Principles Of Psychology	3	MTWThF	9-12	1/2 - 1/21
Responding To Emergencies And Community CPR	3	MTWThF	9-12	1/2 - 1/21
Spanish Skills Practice I	2	MTWThF	9-12	1/6 - 1/16
Spanish Skills Practice II	2	MTWThF	9-12	1/6 - 1/16
Oral Communication: Public Speaking	3	MTWThF	6-9 p.m.	1/2 - 1/21

Take a course during January Intersession!

You can complete a one, two, or three credit course during January.

Register through Tuesday, December 23, 1997

Classes begin Friday, January 2 and run through Wednesday, January 21, 1998 - unless otherwise noted.

(No class on Monday, January 19, Martin Luther King Day)

To register, call 413-774-3131, ext. 272

GREENFIELD COMMUNITY COLLEGE
One College Drive
Greenfield, Massachusetts 01301

IT AIN'T EASY, BUT IT'S SMART

Winter Session '98

Why Winter Session?
- Catch up so you can graduate on time
- Focus on just one class, one set of homework assignments
- Make up lost credits
- Take a usually overenrolled prerequisite for your major
- Earn three credits in three weeks

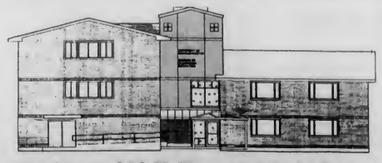
Smaller classes mean more individual attention.

Winter Session '98
January 5-26



Pick up a blue course catalog at Continuing Education in Goodell Bldg. or anywhere on campus; in town at stores, restaurants, banks.

Or call 545-0107 and we'll send you one.

Check out the updated course list at www.umass.edu/contined/

Winter Session
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst

The Division of Continuing Education is moving to 358 N. Pleasant St. in January.

■ Bradbury

continued from page 1

importance of an imagination. He addresses issues of the future and shows how some advances in technology can go drastically wrong. To this day, the acclaimed author uses only an old fashioned typewriter to write out his stories.

The author was born in Waukegan, Ill. in 1920. He began to write when he was 12 and moved to Los Angeles when he was 14. He is a lover of Shakespeare and a strong advocate of the library. Although he never went to college, upon his high school graduation in 1938, Bradbury spent much of his time in the library until he 'graduated' there at the age of 28. He now lives in Los Angeles.

Admission is free for UMass undergraduates with student identification, $2 for faculty, graduate students and students of the other Five Colleges with student identification, and $4 for all others.

■ Reno

continued from page 1

Rep. Dan Burton, chairman of the House Government Reform and Oversight Committee, said on "Fox News Sunday" that the panel will consider recommending a contempt of Congress charge if she refuses to comply with its subpoena seeking Freeh's memo endorsing an independent counsel.

"We're going to reach maybe a little crisis here," Burton said. Asked whether he would cite Reno for contempt, he said: "That's the step we'll have to look at next."

But with a chuckle, he acknowledged an inherent problem with that action: "Obviously if we cited her for contempt, it would have to go to the Justice Department for carrying out that contempt citation. And she would be making the decision on that."

Reno did not rule out sending Burton the memo, with sensitive information blacked out.

On "Face the Nation," Reno insisted: "I'm not protecting anybody. If I were protecting people, I'd close up the shop and go home."

She added that Clinton and Gore are not out of the woods."We have not closed this investigation in any way," she said. "No one has been exonerated."

Republicans contended that's not reason enough for her to continue an investigation of the man who appointed her, which both the GOP and FBI director Freeh consider a conflict of interest. Hatch surprised Glenn on the program with the disclosure that he plans to send Freeh a letter today asking him to investigate Democratic fund-raising irregularities separately from Reno, even though the FBI is part of the Justice Department.

"He should conduct an independent investigation without regard to the Justice Department, other than reporting to them and cooperating with them and talking to them," said Hatch. "He should do it independently, because that's the only way we're going to have, it seems to me, a way around these conflicts of interest that clearly exist."

Hatch's House counterpart, Judiciary Committee Chairman Henry Hyde (R-Ill.) said his panel will hold hearings on how to overhaul the Justice Department — with a critical eye trained especially on the Public Integrity Section, which advises Reno on the fund-raising probe.

■ peace

continued from page 1

direction of peace was of major concern. She said that Israelis would respond to a promise of security while Palestinians want sovereignty, self–determination and the establishment of a Palestinian state.

Although support for the peace process is high among both Jews in Israel and the United States as well as Palestinians, many consider the current Israeli government responsible for a setback to the peace process.

"Would a shift in the government in Israel contribute to success in the peace process? Yes, yes, yes, yes, yes," Bernards said.

In addition, Khelil said that Perez's slowness in acting on the peace process after Yitzhak Rabin's death also played a role in leading to the current deadlock.

The role the United States government has been playing in the peace process has affected Palestinian views. The lack of government action in support of Palestine has led to an eroding of the support of the peace process. Projects like Bernards and Khelil's dialogue will hopefully lead Palestinians, at least in the United States, to a more positive view.

Director of Jewish Affairs Larry Goldbaum said that he views the dialogue as a model for people to talk to each other as human beings and to begin to move through conflict, and he hopes to create a similar dialogue at UMass.

"The dialogue should not end here, but should start here," Goldbaum said.

Release of Spielberg's new film may be blocked

By John Horn
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The premiere of Steven Spielberg's historical slave ship epic "Amistad" is competing for attention with another drama opening this week: a courtroom confrontation that has turned personal and vitriolic.

The director's new DreamWorks studio is accused of stealing the story for the movie that Spielberg calls "perhaps the most important of my career." In turn, DreamWorks is attacking the integrity of the award-winning novelist who filed the lawsuit, Barbara Chase-Riboud.

A judge is to hear arguments today on whether she should block Wednesday's release of the film, about slaves who revolted at sea aboard a Cuban ship and won their freedom in pre-Civil War U.S. courts.

Lawyers on both sides say U.S. District Judge Audrey Collins is unlikely to stop the debut in New York and Los Angeles. A preliminary showing was held Friday in New Haven, Conn., where much of the original story unfolded more than 150 years ago. President Clinton saw "Amistad" Thursday in Washington and showings are set for Tuesday in Rhode Island, where parts of the movie were filmed. However, millions of dollars could be at stake.

Studio attorneys say Chase-Riboud is using the movie's imminent opening to pressure DreamWorks into a $5 million settlement. The fledgling studio says it has invested $70 million producing and marketing "Amistad."

YVONNE YANG \ COLLEGIAN

"The stick-flickin' kid"

Andrew Bergeron, a freshman Art major, demonstrates his homemade Andy's stix to Joseph Nichols, a freshman French major, on the Campus Center Concourse last Friday.

Boston man wants new trial, apology

BOSTON (AP) — A Boston man who says he spent 6 years in prison after police framed him wants a new trial.

Two prosecutors involved in the case told The Boston Globe they now question whether police got the wrong man, and a judge has urged state authorities to take a fresh look at the case.

"He knows. He knows what he did," said Christopher Harding of Officer Terence O'Neil, who may have lied on the stand to win Harding's conviction.

"Hopefully, out of this, I get my name cleared," he told the Globe.

On Aug. 17, 1989, Harding, 36, had just spent three weeks at a truck-driving school so he could earn enough to move his family out of the projects in the Mission Hill section of Boston. The night before he was to take his truckers' license test, friends wished him luck by throwing a street party for him.

He drank too much, but didn't want his wife to know. So he passed out on a staircase in the building he'd grown up in. At 1 a.m., Officers O'Neil, Justina Mitchell and Michael Stratton were in the projects following up on a report that a body had been dumped in a garbage bin.

They heard a gunshot and split up, O'Neil heading off in one direction, Mitchell and Stratton in another.

O'Neil saw Deron Jones, who had been shot once, running toward a walkway between two buildings.

He said he saw two assailants chasing Jones; one shot at him twice. Then O'Neil said he told them to drop their weapons, and one gunman fired at him. Then the gunmen kept running through the walkway.

One of the gunmen, Dwayne Owens, was caught — but just how he was caught isn't clear.

O'Neil first testified he did not cuff Owens, then under cross examination said he couldn't recall. Then last year he testified he did take the time to cuff Owens and then chased the other suspect. It's also unclear what Officer Stratton was doing. He testified he stood at the end of the walkway — where the gunmen were headed — and saw Harding shoot the victim. But he doesn't explain how he could have failed to apprehend Harding, who was presumably running right toward him.

Four months later, ballistics tests showed only three shots were fired from the gun that hit Jones — not four, as O'Neil testified. And Mitchell has offered versions of events that differ slightly from Stratton's. Although she was ordered not to testify at Harding's trial, she later testified she was unable to identify Harding as the other gunman.

What did happen was that Harding was arrested, tried as a would-be cop killer, convicted and sent to prison — even though no physical evidence linked him to the case.

This year, Owens was brought to trial on federal racketeering charges — a trial that cast fresh doubt on Harding's guilt. One of Owens' drug-ring lieutenants, Keillen Smith, turned against him and said it was Owens' cousin, Robert Owens, who shot Jones because he suspected he had robbed him.

Another witness testified he saw the Owens' cousins together just before the shooting, and Harding was nowhere to be seen. The only non-police witness recanted his previous identification of Harding.

WINTER SESSION 1998 AT FITCHBURG STATE COLLEGE

NICARAGUAN BIOLOGICAL RESEARCH

STUDY ABROAD PROGRAM

Offered in collaboration with the University of Mobile (Central American Campus at San Marcos) this two-week program runs January 3-18, 1998. Enroll in six credits (undergraduate or graduate), exploring the topography of volcanos, cloud forests and tropical islands of Central America.

COURSE TOPIC: Tropical Biology (6 credits)

- Accommodations in university dorms
- Meal Plan
- Shuttle service from airport to San Marcos
- Access to university facilities and services

For more information, call the International Education Office at (978)665-3089 or the DGCE Office at (978)665-3182.

THIS IS THE BREAK YOU'VE BEEN WAITING FOR

College Students: While you're home for semester break, why not take a course or two at Fitchburg State College? In just a few weeks, you can earn credits in English, art education, philosophy, psychology, sociology or computer science. Both graduate and undergraduate, our credits are transferable to virtually any college in the country.

WINTER INTERSESSION - Dec. 17 - Jan. 16
Register Today with the Division of Graduate and Continuing Education. Phone-In, Fax-In, Mail-In, Walk-In or E-Mail!

P.S. - For those of you who would like to plan ahead, ask about our summer course schedule, which this year includes amazingly affordable credit studies abroad in Rome, Italy and Dublin, Ireland.

VISIT OUR WEB SITE AT WWW.FSC.EDU

DIVISION OF GRADUATE AND CONTINUING EDUCATION
978-665-3181
Fax: 978-665-3658
E-mail: dgce@fsc.edu

ADMISSIONS
800-705-3692
978-665-3144
Fax: 978-665-4540
E-mail: admissions@fsc.edu

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT CENTER
978-665-3636
Fax: 978-665-3639
E-mail: pdc@fsc.edu

-- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian --

Media should admit racial bias

"Make sure she's white and middle class." That's what an editor once wrote on a story proposal of mine. I had pitched a profile of a woman who had been the victim of a crime and now helps others in similar situations. After many discussions with the magazine, I was on the verge of getting a contract. There was just that one final caveat: She had to be white.

The comment struck me like a 2-by-4, though I really shouldn't have been surprised. I had always know that racial bias existed in the media — that there is a general assumption that the public is more interested in stories about white people than about other races. However, I had never heard it expressed quite so explicitly.

The intense attention the McCaughey septuplets have received — the nightly updates on their progress, the outpouring of generosity from corporate America — says a lot about the two-tiered nature of American compassion.

Sara Eckel

The story was a go because my subject was white. If she had been black, I would not have received the assignment. Her story would not be considered worth telling. Because she was black.

I am reminded of that conversation when I see the way the media and the nation has responded to the story of the seven little white babies born in Iowa. The intense attention the McCaughey septuplets have received — the nightly updates on their progress, the outpouring of generosity from corporate America — says a lot about the two-tiered nature of American compassion. Because in Washington last May there was another miracle — one that occurred without the aid of expensive fertility drugs.

A group of sextuplets was born to an African-American couple. The parents, Linden and Jaqueline Thompson, saw a brief bit of media attention after the babies were born, but it quickly faded. The Thompsons were then left to raise their five babies (one was stillborn) in their small apartment, on the income from Linden Thompson's two jobs. A group called Sisters in Touch tried to generate donations for the family, but with little success. "We had a letter-writing campaign writing churches to ask for help. We got no response," Lynda Bugg of Sisters in Touch told The Washington Post.

Indeed, it was only after this disparity was brought to light that the Thompsons started to receive comparable assistance. One might argue that it was not race that worked against the Thompsons, but rather the simple fact that they didn't break any records. The first set of surviving American sextuplets was born in 1993, and since then two others have come into the world.

But these babies — the second and third sets of sextuplets — also enjoyed a high amount of community and corporate largess. The Hayner sextuplets, born in 1996, were the fortunate recipients of a Ford van, free baby formula, a year's supply of free diapers, and a year and a half's worth of Beech-Nut baby food. The Boniello sextuplets, born last March, prompted the donation of a minivan, diapers and a free college education for the brood.

But private industry did not see a public-relations opportunity in the Thompsons. Just as my editor did not think that her magazine's readers would be interested in a black woman's tragedy, corporate America did not think that consumers would be impressed with its sponsorship of a black family. And this begs the question: Are they right? Is it true that we are more interested in white babies in the heartland than black babies in the city? Is it true that we care more about a crime victim when she is white? After all, these producers and editors and sponsors are only trying to give us what we want, to tell us the stories they think we want to hear.

And so it is up to us to either tell them that they are wrong — to say that they have underestimated us in their assumption of our racial bias — or else admit that they are right. Because, as the old Alcoholics Anonymous saying goes, you can't solve a problem until you admit that you have one.

Sara Eckel is a syndicated columnist. Send comments to the author in care of this newspaper or send her e-mail at saraeum@aol.com.

The doublethink of the 90s

Most creative downsizing of the English language

AT&T's official 150-page downsizing manual leaked out and just in time for those of you who still speak of employees being fired or even laid off. No more. When AT&T fired 40,000 workers (as we would say in Oldspeak) they were really just carrying out a "force management program" aimed at reducing an "imbalance of forces and skills." Got it? Let's go on.

American Newspeak
Wayne Grytting

Employees not invited back are simply labeled "unassigned" and a dismissal notice is an "involuntary offer" to work elsewhere.

Even though AT&T speaks proudly of maintaining a loyal corporate family, Human Resources VP James Meadows warns that "People need to look upon themselves as vendors who come to this company to sell their skills." Jobs, he says, are being replaced by "projects" and workers need to see themselves as "contingent."

So much for family values. Welcome to the age of the Kleenex. However, not to despair. At least in one department, family values and old fashioned loyalty still matter. While 40,000 jobs have been unassigned, none have been in PR or human resources. Get the picture.

"Mother of All Welfare Mothers" award

Congratulations to the Lockheed Martin Corp. for winning the coveted "Welfare Mother of the Year" award for 1996. This defense company walked away with the honor for receiving approximately $1 billion from the Defense Department to cover merger costs.

Yes, you read that correctly. The Pentagon has a "long-standing federal policy" in place to encourage industry consolidation as a means of cutting costs, according to Lockheed's CEO, Norman Augustine. It has created incentives for poor struggling companies like General Motors and General Dynamics to merge with smaller rivals and receive what critics call "payoffs for layoffs."

This year the program fought off a challenge when Rep. Christopher Smith's (R-N.J.) bill to end it died in the Senate. No doubt many of you are wondering what happened to competition and the glories of the free market. Well, get with it. "The times are a' changin."

The Miss Manners "Defense of Normalcy" award

When Atlanta tidied up its streets for guests at the Olympics, Anita Beatry of the Atlanta Task Force on the Homeless revealed that 9,000 arrests had been made of homeless persons in the preceding 12 months — four times more than the previous Atlanta record.

City officials were assisted by a tough new ordinance destined for Newspeak fame. The law allowed police to arrest people for "acting in a manner not usual for law-abiding individuals" in parking lots and garages. Those who had been determined to be acting "not usual" could be sentenced to up to six months in jail or to a public works project.

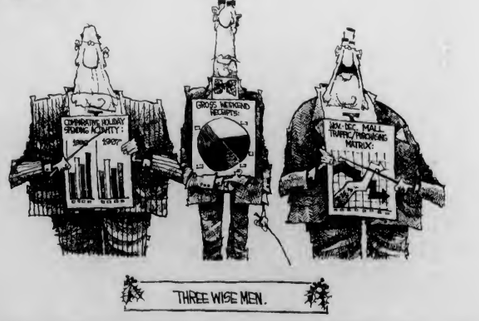
The law is a prime candidate to be struck down by the courts but we have to admire Atlanta for standing up for "usual" behavior and making their streets safe for the sensibilities of Sunday school teachers from Omaha.

Best law of the past two decades

Selling marijuana may actually be legal in Arizona thanks to an obscure law passed in 1983. In that year, the state legislature thought it had a clever idea. Not only would they arrest marijuana dealers, they would also charge them with selling without a "Cannabis and Controlled Substances Dealers License" and failing to pay a state tax of $1 0per ounce.

Many years later Peter Wilson, chair of the state National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, decided to take the law to court. He argued that the state could not have such a perfect Catch-22, it could not first make you pay ($100) for the privilege of dealing pot and then arrest you for it. By issuing licenses to sell marijuana, he argued, the state had tacitly accepted its legality. The court agreed.

The case has since become a legal hot potato. But now for the rest of the story... Guess who made it possible for marijuana selling to become legal? Guess who opened the door to lives of terrible addiction?... A Republican legislature. Shocking but true.



Best defense of America's security

In the wake of the discovery of the FBI files on 900 prominent Republicans, one of 1996's finer scandals, it was revealed that the federal government (not counting the CIA) spent $5.6 billion in 1996 just to keep secret documents secret.

To give some perspective, this sum is twice the budgets of the FBI and the DEA combined and one third of Bill Gates pocket change. The sum reflects, said Rep. David Skaggs, "a document classification system stuck on autopilot..." producing numbers of secret documents that range in the billions.

As expected, about 90 percent of this was the Pentagon at work. But also on the list was the Department of Agriculture, our award winner, which spent $1,153,000 to keep documents secret. Just what are they hiding? Illinois' poultry production? Iowa's corn output? Whatever, we can now rest secure in the knowledge that our agricultural secrets are safe.

Wayne Grytting is a syndicated columnist. More American Newspeak can be found on the Internet at http://www.scn.org/newspeak.

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words long, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes.

They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by email to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545–1592.

The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity, and style.

Ed/Op is looking for new writers!

The Ed/Op desk is currently seeking new columnists. The way to get involved is by submitting pieces for us to consider publishing. They should be 600-800 words long, well-written, and have a point. There are no restrictions on topics, but we are especially interested in pieces on campus politics, satire, and work that takes an unexpected perspective.

Editorials can be submitted by e-mailing letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu or in person to the Collegian offices in the Campus Center basement. Call Dan Bodah at 545-1491 for more information.

Doonesbury — BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor-in-Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangasirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Black Affairs

Monday, December 8, 1997

Note from the editor

Words can not begin to express how much of an impact being the Black Affairs editor for the past four semesters has had on my life. When I look back on it all (the humble beginnings of Mr. Gregory Casimir and myself, co-editing freshman year and then going it solo) I feel that I've been truly honored and privileged to have been the vessel from which the views and opinions of black students, professors, scholars and activists flowed. To be able to have served my community in the capacity that I have has truly been one of the most memorable experiences of my life. I've had the honor of working with some of the most intelligent and thought provoking writers, poets, authors and scribes to ever grace page five of your Daily Collegian.

Yet, despite it all, as this is the last Black Affairs page of the semester, it is also the last time I will be its editor.

I won't be returning to Black Affairs next semester, not because of any ill incident, but because I feel that it's time to take things to a new level in my my quest to educate myself and, in turn, help bring about change in the black community I love so much.

Fortunately (or unfortunately, depending on what side of the fence you're on) I'll still be writing at the Daily Collegian and submitting pieces to Edgar Barros, who will be taking over the Black Affairs page next semester.

Many of you have seen pieces by Edgar throughout the page this semester (peep the piece below), and it's very evident that he's going to keep spittin' the truth in the face of the devil (whatever form he may take). I can't speak enough on the confidence that I have in Edgar. He's one of those I speak of when I talk about brothas and sistas "who know."

I don't want to be long and dramatic with this, because there are a lot of phat pieces on this final page and I know y'all want to get to them. But, before I bounce, let me give full props to those who have been there from day one and have remained ever consistent.

First of all, I have to give props to Mr. Casimir for his dedication to the page over the past four semesters. He's been holding it down since the beginning and will always get crazy respect and admiration from me.

I'd also like to thank Allana E. Todman for her wisdom, time and insight; and for having the first consistent Black Affairs column, One Time for the Mind.

Special thanks go to Millicent Jackson, Omar Gayle, Suki Seetheraman, Stephanie Hope (not Johnson), the Dr. Manning Marable and every writer, poet, student or professor that has ever contributed to the Black Affairs page at any point in its history. Black Affairs is the voice of its people and all of you have helped in establishing that voice. There is no Black Affairs without you.

I also have to give full, full props and thanks to Lyle Henry. This brotha has helped me out when I just knew I didn't want to stay in the fight. Thanks, black.

The legendary Frederick Douglas quote, "Without struggle, there is no progress," has seemed to be the theme for every ALANA student on this campus. We've all worked hard to get everything we have. Black Affairs will continue to be a vessel for the people, by the people. With intelligence, audacity, determination, spirit (and a little style) we will continue to tear down the walls of oppression and unlock the shackles of ignorance from the minds of our brothas and sistas. As long as oppression and ignorance exists, so shall our fight to stop it.

Peace and stay in knowledge.

— Humphrey brown III

The finish line

The semester is just about over. Classes are coming to a close and the parties (whack as they were) are coming to an end. When the dust has finally settled and you ask yourself, "What have I gained this semester?" what will your answer be?

For you freshmen, you should have begun to understand the meaning of some of the sacrifices that your parents are making to send you to college. When you go back home and see the same heads chilling on the block, doing nothing with their lives, it kind of makes you see that getting out of bed to go to class really isn't so difficult after all.

You should have also begun to develop a sense of independence. Going home every weekend really takes away from the college experience. You're outside on your own for the first time; nobody is around to tell you when to study or do your homework. The way you start off your academic career during your first semester often sets the tone of how you will progress throughout the years to follow, so it's important to get off on the right foot. You have to motivate yourself to do well in school and, at the same time, be responsible for accomplishing basic domestic chores like doing laundry and cleaning your room.

Many of you have to find jobs, because not a lot of us have the luxury of having dad and mom send us money when we need it. We begin to start paying our own bills, and understanding the prudence of managing a budget when the money is coming out of our own pockets and not someone else's.

Part of what makes college so

Gregory H. Casimir

exciting, yet difficult, is the fact that we live here at school. It's no longer like high school when you dealt with individuals for 6 hours out of the day, and then you left. Now, you have to interact with these people on a daily basis; not only in class, but at the DC (Deadly Chemicals), parties and in your own dorm. Sometimes, you may be rooming with the very same person you can't stand.

College challenges one's communication skills. You have to learn how to be firm without being bossy, cool without sounding apathetic, and intellectual without being condescending. This applies when dealing with one another on a daily basis, when approaching teachers and in relationships.

Oh, relationships. Yes, relationships can often make or break a semester. Many of us are beginning to encounter our first real relationship in life at college. Many of you will begin to understand the subtle differences between "seeing someone" and "talking to someone" the hard way, of course. Playas will encounter playa hatas, and dogs will eventually get dogged out by the very same cats they were chasing. Those involved in long distance relationships will start to decide whether the distance will make them more distant, or whether the time honored adage holds true: Absence makes the heart grow fonder.

When finals are over, and all is said in done, I hope that all of you have had many pleasant experiences that made this semester enjoyable, and I sincerely hope you learned your lessons from the bad ones, and remembered them as well.

College is really all about growing up, and out. It's a time for you to expand yourself in every area of your life.

Lift weights and get that better body, join that student activity and help change campus life, try your hand at radio, TV, or try writing for the Collegian. Don't be one of those people who say, "Damn I wish I had done..." Now is the time to do it. It's okay if you didn't get to do it this semester; you've got plenty of time in the next one.

That is, if you were smart enough to cross this finish line.

Gregory H. Casimir is a Collegian columnist.

Labor organizing and the black poor

The most important election to take place this fall was largely unreported in the press. There were no public debates, no campaign slogans or posters, not even a bumper sticker. There weren't even any candidates running for office. This selection was not about personalities, but power. At stake was potentially the economic future of millions of people across the country.

Since the passage of the draconian 1996 welfare bill, the survival of several million poor women and children, the majority of whom are blacks and Latinos, became at risk. Hundreds and thousands of Aid to Families With Dependent Children (AFDC) recipients have been forced into various "workfare" schemes. In New York City, for example, many AFDC recipients are required to work 20 or more hours each week in order to receive their modest payments. These women usually work in jobs normally associated with the lowest wages: cleaning public toilets and streets, mopping hospital floors, picking up litter in subway stations. Few women receive proper equipment for their jobs. Health and safety safeguards are virtually nonexistent. Frequently women assigned to work outside are not even provided with toilet facilities.

Several decades ago, the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now, known as ACORN, began building a progressive, human rights movement among America's poorest and most oppressed people. Today, ACORN has over 200,000 members. In its latest initiative, ACORN began a campaign in New York City to achieve union representation status for workfare workers. Some political "experts" thought that ACORN's efforts to organize recipients was quixotic at best. Welfare mothers, for the most part, have no personal history or experience in unions. Besides, organized labor had traditionally viewed poor people's problems and concerns as being irrelevant to its own interests.

This October, New York City's 35,000 workfare participants were given the choice to determine whether they desired to have union representation. Over a period of four days, about 17,300 people cast ballots at 250 polling sites across the city. The election results were clear: almost 17,000 workfare workers voted in favor of organizing a union, with barely 300 voting against. The vote showed without a doubt that "welfare mothers" recognize the exploitation of labor inherent in the workfare program.

The most important factor in rebuilding the black freedom movement lies in the linkage of distinct yet overlapping constituencies within the African-American community. Two critical groups here are the low wage workers and welfare recipients. There is often tension and misplaced hostility between black workers who earn barely more than the federal government's minimum wage and poor people who have been unemployed for years, or those who barely manage to survive on public assistance. Both groups are manipulated against each other, to protect the interests of employers who want to keep labor costs low. The only long- term solution to this dilemma is to bring poor people into the organized labor movement.

The NAACP, Urban League and other civil rights organizations need to follow ACORN's lead in reaching out to organize the most oppressed people within Black America. The vitality and vision of our movement must be judged not against the economic gains of the black middle class, but within the material conditions and prospects for those black folk who have the least. As we elevate and empower workfare workers, we advance the interests of our entire community.

Dr. Manning Marable is a professor of history and Director of the Institute for Research in African-American Studies at Columbia University, New York City.

Pizza in purgatory

Not too long ago and not far enough away, my spouse and I endeavored to bring a group of friends to a Northampton eating establishment that consistently produced, in my own relatively jaundiced opinion, the best pizza in town.

This was to be the culmination of a wonderful day of conviviality. The friend, whose company we rarely have the time to enjoy, made efforts to provide the precious commodity of free time in hope that we might commiserate for a while. A motley collection of quasi-academics and professionals across the country, we were a pretty well educated, intellectually stimulating, polite group, if we weren't all too modest to say so for ourselves. We had spent the day basking in the glories of Western Mass: a candle maker with Disneyesque allusions here, a glacial pothole there. A good or at least expensive time was had by all, but now, we were hungry.

We entered our restaurant of choice tentatively, quietly dismayed at the lengthy line of patrons all clamoring to taste such delights as could be procured at such an establishment. To our delight, we were told that our wait would not be long as we were a large group and could be seated in a section reserved for such numbers. We sat down gleefully as providence had sincerely shined on us. The very size of our group working to our advantage. Yet, evil winds were yet ablowing.

Our waitress came to our table and euphoria of our future culinary repast, as well as our rapture in a day in the company of friends, was dashed as we all realized that which we had so conveniently and foolishly forgotten... we were black.

Yes, I know. How could one forget such a thing with all the efforts made to remind. Whether it be television, movies, books, an itinerant Mafioso university head cracking down on student protests, incarceration rates or talk radio, white folks (no, not you, those other, mean ones) are doing their best to remind us of the simple facts of racialized life. But we had, indeed, forgotten

"In our deep and utter foolishness, we requested new glasses. Big mistake. Having forgotten that we were black, we, in addition, forgot that we should have been thrilled beyond belief to be accepted as patrons. Asking to have a clean glass was a gross breach of racial etiquette."

G. L. Mazard Wallace

(as much as one can in this area).

As happens on occasion, a couple of people in our party had what we will refer to as "dense food particles" on their glasses. In our deep and utter foolishness, we requested new glasses. Big mistake. Having forgotten that we were black, we, in addition, forgot that we should have been thrilled beyond belief to be accepted as patrons. Asking to have a clean glass was a gross breach of racial etiquette. Yet, we persisted in our folly. After our waitress angrily took one glass back, the foolhardy among us decided to speak to the waitress, assuring that our dinning experience could continue without rancor. Such hopes proved inconsequential as the waitress was found just in time to be overheard complaining loudly to others of our most heinous of transgressions. And yet, it was not the pain of becoming "they" or "those people" that ultimately gave our group pause, it was that we knew better, yet had acted without thought.

Sometimes, despite the best laid plans of white mice and men, black people forget, and it's time we apologized to white people. We attend predominately white institutions (that damnable affirmative action), we try to move into predominately white neighborhoods, we sometimes procure decent jobs (that damnable affirmative action) or open our own business (that damnable reversal of the lynching law). We even date white people on occasion (that damnable reversals of anti-miscegenation law). We should know better. We've gone too far and it's time black people took responsibility for their actions.

The next time you go to a restaurant (this is for black people), call ahead. Ask politely if the restaurant serves black people. Don't laugh. It's called common courtesy. This way you won't show up and get bad service, because blacks aren't supposed to be served. If they do serve blacks, ask if you can complain if there are any problems. That way, you know if dense food particles on your glass are your problem or their problem.

Regarding other issues such as employment, housing, dating or traffic stops, use common sense. Call ahead. Don't be afraid to ask. White people don't want to discriminate against you, but when you show up unannounced, what do you expect? Remember... when you're black, be considerate, call ahead.

G.L. Mazard Wallace is a UMass student.

Plight of a People: Ill media

Latrell Sprewell, a thug?! This is what the American media is portraying him to be. We all know that Sprewell is not an innocent altar boy, but I don't think that he is getting a fair shake with the media.

The Friday, Dec. 5 issue of USA Today is a prime example. Those of you who saw its front page witnessed a first hand misrepresentation of a man who made a mistake. For those who did not notice what I'm talking about, let me enlighten you.

"The Amerikan media has and always will continue to depict black people as wild, uncontrollable savages."

Edgar Barros

They ran a picture of P.J. Carlisemo and Latrell Sprewell together, in the same section. Carlisemo's picture is a regular picture. Well, what is a regular picture, you might ask? I don't know, but I know what is not a regular picture. In Sprewell's picture, he has his mouth stretched wide open and his arm up in the air. His complexion appears to be darkened, much like Time magazine darkened O.J. Simpson's complexion, in order to make him appear black.

This helps to promote the American media's image of black being a synonym for evil or destructive.

Of all the pictures available of Latrell Sprewell, this is the only one USA Today could come up with? If USA Today is lacking decent pictures of Sprewell, I can supply them with a few decent ones. I have plenty of basketball cards of Sprewell, ones with very nice pictures. But let us not kid ourselves, that picture was no mistake. Their intention was to make Latrell look like an animal. Their whole purpose in running that picture on the front page (next to P.J. Carlisemo's, "Hey I'm just an innocent victim," picture) was to make the black man look like an animal. Let us be honest with each other now. If Latrell was a white man, he would not be depicted in this manner. Did you ever see any wild, evil looking pictures of Terry Nichols and Timothy McVeigh in the paper? Now these are true animals.

I feel that I need to give such examples to make my point that the American media is racist. As soon as a black man steps out of line, he is persecuted by the media. As soon as he stops playing the game, the media eats him up. It happened with O.J. Simpson. He was pronounced guilty by the media months before the trial was over. I could go on and on about the American media. For those of you local folks, do you remember the Reggie Lewis situation? The media, with no real evidence, was promoting the late Reggie Lewis as a cocaine addict. The man was dead for months, but they kept eating away at him. The heart condition that had been affecting him since he was a teenager was the real cause of death. "No", said the Amerikan media, it was cocaine. Any little chance they get at making a black man look bad, they will take it.

How come we don't see President Bill Clinton being portrayed as the adulterer that he is? How come the media jumps down Louis Farrakan's throat every chance they get? When Michael Jordan's father was murdered, they said it was because of his gambling problems. The Amerikan media has and always will continue to depict black people as wild, uncontrollable savages.

I do not agree with Latrell Sprewell's course of action, but like my man Chris Rock said, "I understand." We do not know what Carlisemo has been saying to Sprewell since he took over as coach of the Warriors. What exactly does "verbal abuse" mean? Words can be very strong. We are not being told by Carlisemo or the media, about what Carlisemo has or was saying to Sprewell in the past months and at the time of the incident. Mr. Latrell Sprewell is not some wild "street thug" who needs something to "make him reflect back on what it means to reflect authority." He is a man who made a big mistake, which he is currently paying a big price for — period. Because of the simple fact that he is a black man, the Amerikan media is depicting him as just another stupid "nigga".

The fact that this is happening to Sprewell, while Carlisemo is being depicted as a poor white man just trying to do his job, is not a coincidence or an isolated situation. The fact that you turn on your television to watch the daily news, and you see every petty crime committed by a black or Hispanic person reported in detail is also neither a coincidence nor is it an isolated situation. It is planned! By whom? Who do you think? The Amerikan media is managed by, and works for and in favor of, the only true citizens of this nation.

Edgar Barros is a Collegian columnist.

write for Black Affairs

Black Affairs is DEAD Without Dedicated Writers to Represent on the Page.

If interested Please call Humphrey brown III at 545.1851 and get involved.

This is Your Voice. Take advantage or get left Behind.

The REVOLUTION waits for NO ONE.

Audience interest divided at Days of the New show at Pearl Street

YVONNE YANG / COLLEGIAN

Despite their huge base of fans here in the Valley, Letters to Cleo chose not to headline a show at Pearl Street.

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

DAYS OF THE NEW
Pearl Street
Dec. 5

NORTHAMPTON — To say that 99.3 WHMP FM's Snow Show at Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton was a mixed bag of goodies may be putting things too simply. Such an inconsistent show could only be thoroughly enjoyed by audience members who arrived in time for the band they wanted to see, and then left as soon as their set was over. The lineup — consisting of Mary's First, Letters to Cleo, and Days of the New — is the key element of the explanation as to why Friday night's show divided the audience's interest.

Each band's musical style differs greatly, but since all three bands are featured artists on WHMP, the station must have thought their listeners do not change the dial setting when something they don't care for is aired.

Mary's First started off the night's festivities with their grating brand of fuzz guitar driven pop rock. Although technical problems plagued their set, the band was able to demonstrate their musical talents. However, Mary's First undermined their above average instrumentation with their brainless lyrics. Their set served well for its purpose as a warm-up act — it got the crowd excited, but not too excited.

Second on the bill were Boston rockers Letters to Cleo. Their nearly hour long set of quirky power pop consisted of a careful mix of material from their three LPs — Aurora Gory Alice, Wholesale Meats and Fish, and their newest release Go!. Starting off with "Demon Rock," Letters to Cleo immediately roused the audience and kept up their exuberant energy throughout their set.

With lead guitarist Michael Eisenstien and bassist Scott Riebling jumping around the stage, and lead singer Kay Hanley's voice ranging from a girlish whisper to a violent scream, the band pleased the audience with their insanely bouncy melodies; including their current single "Anchor" and the chirpy hit "Here and Now."

The headlining act, Days of the New, must be given respect for their attempt to revive grunge rock. But once their influences become clear, much of the allotted respect is lost. In a day and age when everything has been done, it is difficult to be original. But originality is what Days of the New need in order to make their music palatable. With Nirvana now defunct, Soundgarden calling it quits, and Pearl Jam drastically adapting their music, the Seattle sound has been exhausted and we've seen it all before.

Able to grip the audience's attention firmly with their hit single "Touch, Peel & Stand," Days of the New's set had its strong points. However, the vocals' attempting to sound like Kurt Cobain, Chris Cornell, and Eddie Vedder all rolled into one caused their performance to fizzle out quickly; and when the harmonization is obvious for what it is — a lame try to sound like Layne Stanley and Jerry Cantrell — one must ask themselves, "why they don't just go home and listen to Alice in Chains?"

Due to the fact that Letters to Cleo's fan base is strongest in Massachusetts, it would make sense for them to be billed before the newer, lesser known bands. But since their current single, "Anchor" does not receive the national exposure that "Touch, Peel & Stand" does, Letters to Cleo chose not to headline. Cleo's Mike Eisenstien explained.

"You don't want to follow the No. 1 song in the country," he said. "It's sort of anti-climactic."

Play attacks the American dream

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

ASSASSINS
Rand Theater
Dec. 5

With the production of Assassins, the University Department of Theatre decided against the innocent boy meets girl musical. The music and lyrics of Stephen Sondheim tackles American politics and history from the perspective of individuals who were so alienated that they had to strike out against the men who made history.

Director Maxwell Mount combined varied scenery with a sound cast to convey the musical's haunting message in a provocative way. The musical extracted presidential and would-be presidential assassins throughout American history and has them interact in ways that are both humorous and powerful. The ironic number "Unworthy of your love" finds John Hinckley (attempted to assassinate Regan) and Lynette "Squeaky" Frome (attempted to assassinate Ford) both declaring their love for respective inspirations, Jody Foster and Charles Manson.

Near the end of the play, a scene more explicit in its serious implications finds John Wilkes Booth (assassinated Lincoln) in the Texas Schoolbook Depository trying to convince Lee Harvey Oswald to assassinate President Kennedy. These types of encounters, which would not have been possible in history without time travel, attempt to identify common themes and motivation through different periods of American history which would convince an individual to kill the president.

In "Interior of a bar," Leon Czolgosz (assassinated McKinley), played by Michael Dratt, performs a vivid monologue about his life in a bottle factory. Dratt's physical mannerisms force the audience to confront the working class/immigrant voice in the play and in American life. Czolgosz, originally from Poland and Guisepe Zangarara (attempted to assassinate Franklin Roosevelt), who was of Italian dissent, through their specific actions help to shatter the myth of "The American Dream," for all who come to these shores.

The cast members really performed their cameos as disenchanted individuals who see their acts of violence as a service to the world.

Assassins, which first appeared off–Broadway in 1990 was not received well due to the outpouring of "Americanism," surrounding Operation Desert Shield. This rendition of the play is an entertaining and disturbing look at the role assassins have played in American history.

Who is naughty, who is not in soaps

Hi soap fans! Christmas is almost upon us and Santa's checking that list to see if the boys and girls of daytime have been naughty or nice.

If there's any justice in the world of soaps, Dimitri, Tim ("All My Children"), Eric ("Days of Our Lives") and Shane ("Another World") of the "brat pack" and Brooke ("Bold & the Beautiful") will all be inhaling coal this year.

I can't help but love the bad girls of daytime, Carly ("General Hospital"), Annie ("Guiding Light"), Molly ("As The World Turns"), Blair ("One Life To Life") and Kristin ("Days") for making naughty oh so nice to watch though. A word to Santa: don't mess with these ladies, just give them the gifts and pray they don't bite your hand off. Speaking of gifts...

"General Hospital" and "Guiding Light" are, by far, the shows to watch this week.

On the "GH" front: Bob Guza's (writer extraordinaire) stories finally begin to air this Monday (until now he's been wrapping up Richard Culliton and company's stories) and, oh boy, all hell breaks loose.

One of "Port Charles'" finest and most eligible bachelors takes a bullet, Brenda flips out and Carly's world comes crumbling down around her with some unsettling consequences as well, as its fair share of unexpected surprises. Sound intriguing? That's just the beginning of what Guza has promised to be a whirlwind of drama.

Let me just give you a little scoop too (if you're not a fan of scoops, feel free to scroll down a line or two), the big payoff is almost here as Bobbie finds out the truth about Carly (late this week or next week) and Carly announces the paternity of the baby after making a startling discovery (it's not who you think it is!). "GH" is back with a vengeance.

One of daytime's best kept secrets, "GL" isn't without its share of theatrics either as Reva, Michelle and Abigail find themselves trapped in a burning inferno. You won't believe who comes to their rescue! Expect this mess to throw Michelle's life into a tailspin (as if she hasn't had enough) as she tries to cope with the consequences (you're dying to know the details, but you're not going to hear it from moi... for once!).

One more thing, Annie's send-off is fast approaching and it's going to be big, so program those VCR's (if you

Turn to SOAP, page 8

ART GALLERIES

Amherst College — Mead Art Museum. Currently on display: The Fold Art of Twentieth-Century Japan (through July 1998), Branching: The Art of Michael Mazure, AC '57 (opens Oct. 17), Illegal Camera: Photography in the Netherlands during the German Occupation, 1940–45. European Art (through Dec. 15), The Cult of Lord Jeff (through Jan. 12), C'est La Guerre (through February 1998). Hours: Mon–Fri 10 a.m.–4:30 p.m.; Sat–Sun 1–5 p.m. Call the museum at 545-2335.

Hampshire College — Main Gallery, Harold F. Johnson Library. Hours: Mon–Fri 8:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m.; weekends 12– 4:30 p.m.

Mount Holyoke College — Art Museum. Currently on display: How to Remember? Designing the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum (through Dec. 14). Hours: Tue–Fri 11 a.m.–5 p.m.; Sat–Sun 1–5 p.m. Call 538–2245 for more information.

Smith College — Print Room, Museum of Art. Currently on display: Cigoli's "Dreams of Jacob" (through Dec. 14), Kinships, Family Images (through Jan. 1), Amazonian Activity (through Jan. 31), Colorful Tales (through Dec. 14). Hours: Tue, Fri & Sat 9:30 a.m.– 4 p.m.; Wed–Sun noon–4 p.m.; Thursday noon–8 p.m. Call 585–2770 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Augusta Savage Gallery, New Africa House. BFA Thesis Shows (throughout December) Hours: Mon–Tues 1–7 p.m.; Wed–Fri 1–5 p.m. Call 545–5177 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Hampden Gallery, Southwest Residential Area. The 18th Annual Graduate Group Show (through Dec. 16). Hours: Mon–Fri 3–7 p.m., Sunday 2–5 p.m. Call 545–0680 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Herter Art Gallery, Herter Annex. MFA Thesis Exhibition (through Dec. 12) Hours: Mon–Fri 11 a.m.– 4 p.m. Call 545–0976 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space, Student Union Building. Hours: Mon–Thurs 10 a.m.–5 p.m., Friday 10 a.m.– 3 p.m. For more information, call 545–0792

University of Massachusetts — University Gallery, Fine Arts Center. Currently on display: Cigoli's "Dream of Jacob" (through Dec. 14) and Drawing in Late Sixteenth– Century Florence (through Dec. 14), Heroic Painting (through Dec. 14). Hours: Tues–Fri 11 a.m.–4:30 p.m.; Sat– Sun 2–5 p.m. Call 545–3670 for more information.

The University of Massachusetts — Wheeler Gallery, Central Residential Area. Hours: Mon–Thurs 4–8 p.m.; Sun 2–5 p.m. Call 545–0680 for more information.

— Compiled by Seema Gangatirkar

COURTESY HERTER ART GALLERY

"Aztec," by Frank Ozereko, is on display at Herter Art Gallery.

Jones shines in Howe play

By Michael Kuchwara
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Is there any role the amazing Cherry Jones can't play?

Not likely.

In "Pride's Crossing," a sweet-tempered scrapbook drama which opened yesterday at Lincoln Center's Mitzi Newhouse Theater, the actress portrays Mabel Tidings Bigelow, a flinty New England matriarch in her 90th year, looking back on her considerable past.

In the course of the woman's recollections, Jones becomes a 10-year-old girl, a curious teen-ager, a robust English Channel swimmer and a married Massachusetts matron. She invests each of them with such a fierce truthfulness that you instantly believe you are seeing the same woman at various stages in her long life.

Playwright Tina Howe, author of "Coastal Disturbances" and "Painting Churches," has created a comfy, cozy remembrance, chock full of good cheer. Conflict and disturbances are kept to a minimum. In one scene, for example, the infirmities of old age are played for a comic effect that teeters but never quite tumbles into sentimentality.

Howe skillfully spins elegant dialogue and creates credible characters, starting with the formidable Mabel.

Turn to JONES, page 8

Jazz concerts highlight week

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Music Department will kick off the holiday season with two concerts this week.

Tomorrow night, the University Jazz Ensemble will perform a concert of holiday music. Thursday night, the Chapel Jazz Ensemble and the Jazz Lab Band will share the stage for a tribute to Miles Davis. Both concerts will take place at Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. on their respective nights.

Ellington, Tchaikovsky, Kenton and an assortment of familiar holiday songs are on the program for the University Jazz Ensemble. This concert marks the first time that Professor Jeffrey Holmes, director of the Ensemble, has dedicated a concert solely to holiday music.

The program begins with that ever popular holiday standby, Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker Suite, performed as a classical arrangement for brass instruments by David Sampson. A jazz version of the Suite, arranged by Duke Ellington, will provide a striking contrast in styles.

Stan Kenton's Christmas Album will include "The Twelve Days of Christmas" and "O Tannenbaum."

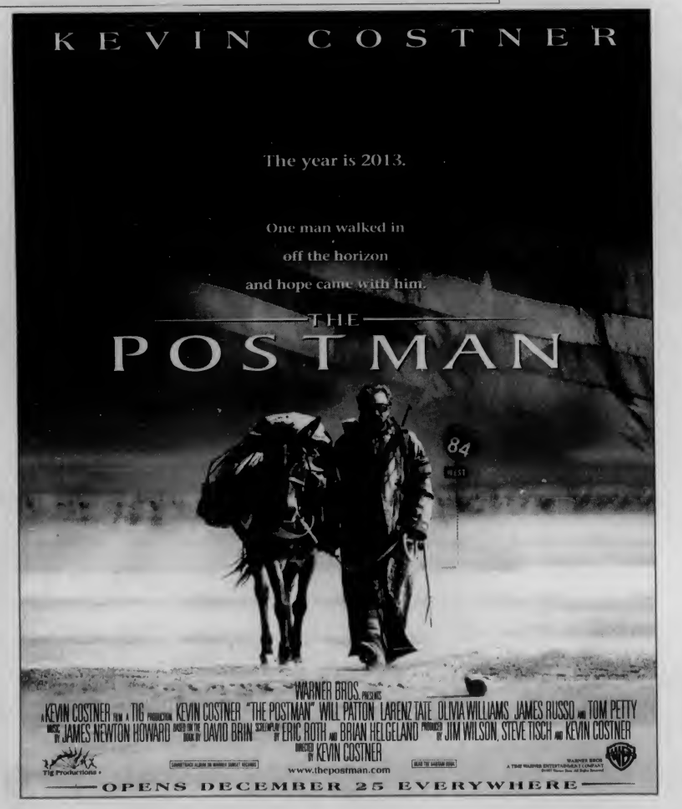
Other performing groups will be joining the University Jazz Ensemble, including the Acafellas.

Thursday night, in a concert titled "December Jazz," two jazz groups will pay tribute to Miles Davis and feature big band numbers on their programs.

The Jazz Lab Band, directed by Chris Oberholtzer, will perform a program of "Period Pieces" — music inspired by the Big Bands of the '40s. Among the pieces to be performed will be Jerry Mulligan's "Swing House." An arrangement of Tommy Dorsey's "Getting Sentimental Over You" by Eric Richards adds a Latin groove to the jazz piece. Also on the program is an arrangement by Holms of the Duke Ellington/Billy Strayhorn tune, "Chelsea Bridge."

Under the baton of Professor David Sporny, the Chapel Jazz Ensemble, will perform a program of music composed by Miles Davis.

"This music is great for the students in the ensemble," Sporny said in a press release. "Many of them have never heard these tunes — now they'll get the chance to play them."

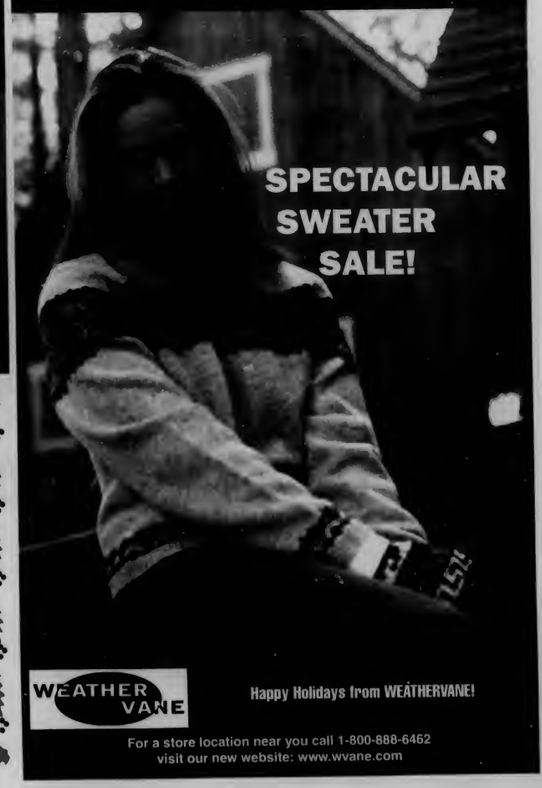


Considered an innovator in the be–bop, "cool" jazz and funk/fusion styles, Davis' career spanned five decades and some of the highlights will be featured Thursday night, including "Four," "All Blues," "Israel," "Seven Steps to Heaven" and "Someday My Prince Will Come."

Tickets for both concerts are $3 for University students; $4 for senior citizens, other students and children; and $8 for the general public. Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office or at the door the evening of the performance. Call 545–2511 for more information.

COURTESY DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC & DANCE

Ben Griffin will perform with the University Jazz Ensemble in tomorrow night's concert at Bowker Auditorium.



Express Lunch guaranteed to be served within 10 minutes of ordering or we'll buy dessert! 11:30a.m. 'till 2:00p.m.

- The Lunch Menu with something for everyone
- Fresh soups, salads, and sandwiches
- Daily vegetarian specials
- 12 Taps of Fresh Ales & Lagers, Cider & Draft Root Beer
- Open 11:30 am - 1 am
- Serving Lunch, Dinner, and Late Night Menu; brunch on Sundays at 11 am
- Seafood specials Thur. - Sat.
- Live entertainment Thur. - Sat. from 10pm to closing. Never a Cover!

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
36 North Pleasant St, Downtown Amherst
We Accept All Major Credit Cards 253-4400

EARN $2,000 - $3,000
$7.50 - $8.00 / hour
Work Local to Your Home
Mornings, Evenings, and Weekends
Taking Inventory
Paid Training
Advancement Potential
Call our Jobline 24 hours a day
1-888-242-RGIS
Equal Opportunity Employer
Interview with RGIS Inventory Specialists on the Campus Center Concourse
December 10th, & 11th
9:00am to 3:30pm

Holly Days
WIN TICKETS!
TO THE 3RD ANNUAL COMMONWEALTH CLASSIC
UMASS MINUTEMEN vs. BOSTON COLLEGE
DEC. 14, 1997 AT THE FLEET CENTER
USTORE STAFF AND FAMILIES NOT ELIGIBLE.
REGISTER IN THE UNIVERSITY STORE TO WIN BETWEEN NOW AND DEC. 10, 1997.
THE DRAWING FOR TWO (2) TICKETS TO THE COMMONWEALTH CLASSIC WILL BE HELD AT 4:30PM ON WEDS. DEC. 10 IN THE UNIVERSITY STORE. YOU NEED NOT BE PRESENT TO WIN.
ENTRY FORM MUST BE COMPLETELY FILLED OUT. ONE ENTRY PER CUSTOMER PLEASE. NO PURCHASE NECESSARY.
WE ACCEPT AMEX, DISCOVER, MC, VISA, AND THE UCARD!
Ustore
UNIVERSITY STORE IN THE UMASS CAMPUS CENTER
HOURS: M-F 9 TO 5 SAT. 11 TO 4
(413) 545-2619

WEATHERVANE

WEATHER VANE
Happy Holidays from WEATHERVANE!
For a store location near you call 1-800-888-6462
visit our new website: www.wvane.com

COURTESY DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC & DANCE

Music to the ears

Ryan Dexter, a member of the Chapel Jazz Ensemble, rehearses with the group, in preparation for Thursday night's concert.

■ soap

continued from page 6

know what's good for you). Annie's theatrics may be a lot of things but boring... never!

I thought I'd mention a few things about the state of several soaps.

"AMC" — It must be the year of the sleaze on "AMC." Decent men are becoming an endangered species as shown by slimes like Dimitri, Tim, Jim and the new fellow on the block, Mr. Cardiologist. This guy's got something big on Allie and obviously isn't against milking it for everything it's worth. Looks or no looks, this guy's creepy. Some other quick notes, someone seriously needs to kill Tim, what is Erica thinking, or not thinking for that matter? This isn't cops and robbers my dear and you might actually end up... breaking a fingernail or so. Not to mention the fact that living life on the run isn't exactly going to help your daughter's anorexia.

"AW" — Ugh... does Shane ever stop, and furthermore why is Lila so caught up with such a loser? Girl, you don't need a man and you certainly don't need that fool. Sniff, about Amy Carlson (losie) leaving the show. Her last air date is Jan. 14. Her spunk will be missed.

"Days" — Why oh why must I be tortured on a daily basis with this Marlena and John romance — now she goes and gives everything back? Seriously, the sight of the sanctimonious Marlena and her whipping boy, John, make me want to vomit at this point. A word to Eric, stop trying to dictate your mother's love life and get your own. On a good note though, I can't wait for the Peter story and I'm loving every minute of Kristin's scheme. Looks like I may get that Dimera vs. Dimera match-up after all.

"B&B" — News is, Rick Forrester is the next victim of SORAS (Soap Opera Rapid Aging Syndrome). Out with the younger, slightly out of shape boy and in with the much older stud. Don't you just love soaps?

"Young & and the Restless" — Poor Nina! I feel awful about what she's going through (about that half-wit stealing her man). Maybe now she can finally find a man who is deserving of her affections.

"PC" — It's so good seeing Dominique back, even though it is just a spirit. I wish they could find a way to bring this gem back to life. Jake, you should have pulled the trigger and Lucy, hope you nail that slime, Rex. If anyone can do it, it's definitely the ex-queen of deception.

I thought I'd divide daytime's top 10 storylines into two parts, throwing out the first five this week and the next five next semester and leave you panting for more. In picking the top 10 I asked around (friends and acquaintances at the Bluewall), tallied your e-mail opinions and threw in a few of my own. Here's the run-down so far...

• Marlena's possession on "Days." It may have been wacky but it was fun and it's the reason the show originally snagged the No. 2 spot in the Neilsen's. It is the reason we hate "Days," but at the same time, it's the reason we love it.

• Marty's rape on "OLTL." Some powerful stuff mostly due to the heart-wrenching performance given by Susan Haskill (Marty).

• B.J.'s death on "GH." Never have I cried so much during an episode. I keep telling myself, "Jay, it's a show for cryin' out loud," but it was to no avail during those scenes.

• The Loving Murders on "Loving." It was the end of the road for "Loving" but it didn't go down without a fight. The suspense was killing me (I skipped one of my classes freshman year so I could catch the killer's identity. It was the beginning of what would become one of my favorite pastimes).

• The Robin and Stone romance and his death from AIDS. Not only was this one of the most touching love tragedies I have ever seen but it was one of the most educational as well. In spreading AIDS awareness (realistically, I might add) even the skeptics had to swallow their pride and admit that daytime was doing a good deed. It doesn't get much better than this my friends.

In closing, I'd just like to throw out a few "Swims:"

• Sarah Brown as the wounded Carly on "GH." Sarah was incredible during her confrontation with Bobbie at the hospital (calling Bobbie a "phony witch"... yeah).

• Robert Kelker Kelly (Shane) on his departure from "AW." He said he's had "enough of the industry." Good riddance with an attitude like that. Bite the hand that feeds you and it's bound to bite back.

Thanks for reading and see you all next semester!

Jacob Fanning is a Collegian columnist. He can be reached at jfanning@student.umass.edu. Soap

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN WRITING A COLUMN FOR THE ARTS & LIVING SECTION NEXT SEMESTER?

WE'RE LOOKING FOR WRITERS WHO ARE WILLING TO WRITE A MUSIC COLUMN ON A SPECIFIC GENRE ONCE A MONTH.

WE ARE ALSO LOOKING FOR PEOPLE TO COVER TELEVISION, VIDEOS, BOOKS AND MORE.

IF YOU'RE INTERESTED, STOP BY THE COLLEGIAN OR CALL 545-1361 AND ASK TO SPEAK TO SEEMA.

■ Jones

continued from page 7

"Pride's Crossing" begins in the present with Mabel slowly, painfully using a walker to make her way across a bedroom. Jones' physical transformation is nothing short of astonishing. She becomes the elderly woman by using no makeup, just a contortion of her face and a quavery voice that carries a hint of Katharine Hepburn.

Howe's play, divided into 12 short scenes, alternates between present and past. Director Jack O'Brien stitches them together seamlessly, letting them ebb and flow naturally. Yet many scenes are punctuated by costume changes, most involving Jones. They allow the audience to watch her age or get younger simply by changing her dress.

The plot is wafer-thin, presenting a memory rather than a complete, tidy story. In the present, the cranky Mabel receives visitors from France, her middle-age granddaughter and young great-granddaughter. It is the Fourth of July weekend, and Mabel is determined to play croquet, a game she says has gone totally out of fashion — much like herself.

"I always wanted to be Charlemagne — soldier, emperor, scholar. Now there was a life," the old woman declares. And then Howe proceeds to tell that Mabel made a pretty good shot at life, too. Except for Jones, the actors portray two or more roles — so you get fine performers such as Dylan Baker playing everything from an inflatable geezer to a crusty Irish maid. Young Julia McIlvaine is remarkably natural as two different little girls. And Angie Phillips has several bright moments as the older Mabel's perpetually perky caretaker.

"Pride's Crossing" looks terrific on the theater's thrust stage with the audience perched above the apron-like playing area. Set designer Ralph Funicello has done up everything — from swirling curtains to bedspreads — in various shades of white. Robert Morgan's stylish period costumes follow the same pale color pattern. And everything has been lighted with a golden glow by Kenneth Posner.

Jones made an astounding transformation in her last New York stage appearance, going from mousy, dutiful daughter to steel-hearted spinster in the Broadway revival of "The Heiress." Her changes here are no less sensational — and there are more of them, each one accompanied by her fabulous smile, a shy, yet sexy grin that is absolutely captivating. Miss this remarkable chameleon at your own peril.

Write For Arts & Living!

STS (spring break)
1x2
12/8
p/u from 12-5
cr

The End is near...
Don't miss next week's specials in our Clothing Department
Of classes, that is!
THE LAST DAY OF CLASSES IS DECEMBER 12. THE NEXT WEEK IS YOUR LAST CHANCE TO GET GIFTS FOR YOUR FRIENDS BEFORE EXAMS. DON'T LET YOU FRIENDS GO HOME FOR A MONTH WITHOUT SOMETHING TO REMIND THEM OF YOU.
STOP IN TODAY, AND LET US HELP YOU PICK THE PERFECT PRESENTS.
University Store
Holly Days
We accept AMEX, Discover, MC, Visa, and the UCard!

amc
Hampshire 8 584-7550 Hampshire Mall
Mt. Farms 4 584-9153 Mt. Farms Mall
Jackal (R) Today at (5:40), 8:30
Starship Troopers (R) Today at (5:40), 8:30
Rainmaker (PG13) Today at (5:00), 8:20
Alien: Resurrection (R) Today at (5:50), 8:40
Bean (PG 13) Today at (5:50), 8:40
Anastasia (G) Today at (5:40), 8:40
Flubber (R) Today at (5:30), 8:30
Midnight In the Garden of Good and Evil (R) Today at (5:10), 8:20
Mortal Combat 2: Annihulation (PG 13) Today at (5:30), 8:30
Boogie Nights (R) Today at (5:10), 8:20

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Potato Skins Supreme 7.50 3.75
Nachos 5.95 2.98
Gorgonzola Buffalo Potatoes 7.25 3.63
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
DOWNTOWN AMHERST
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

LOSE WEIGHT NOW!
Our products are: • Doctor Recommended • 100% Natural • Guaranteed
You will: • Feel more energy • Lose up to 30 LBS in 30 days • Have more willpower
FREE SAMPLES
CALL: (413) 259-1922

The Right Place to Be!
3 Barbers Everyday
Unisex Hair Styling
Jan
Guys & Gals Clipper Cuts
Layer Cuts Razor Cuts
Flat Tops Kids Cuts
Fades
Appointment Not Neccessary
$9 & up 4 Barbers Wed. to Sat
Amherst Barbers
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA (Next to Newbury Comics)
Hours: Mon- Fri, 8-5:15pm • Sat 8-4:45pm
Terri
Gabe

For Fast Easy Delivery Call 256-4110
La Cucina di
PINOCCHIO
of Amherst 30 Boltwood
#1 Delivery in Town
Monday Night Football Special!!
Back by popular demand: Specials running Monday - Thursday!
1 Large Cheese Pizza $6.95
PLUS 10 Free Buffalo Wings
Must Mention Ad When Ordering!
Any Large 1 Topping $7.50
Any Calzone $4.00
Delivery Only. Not Valid in Restaraunt
Offer Expires 5/31/98

MINI MALL '97
ONE-STOP SHOPPING EXTRAVAGANZA!
TUESDAY, DEC. 9 THRU THURSDAY, DEC. 11
10AM-5PM STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
This Week!
FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 549-1710

UMass line struggles lead to 2–10–1 record

Front line not getting job done

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

If you're curious why the Massachusetts hockey team sits alone at the bottom of Hockey East, look no further than its front line. While coach Joe Mallen has shuffled his lines frantically all season in an attempt to develop combinations that play well together on a regular basis, the results just haven't been there.

With its 10 losses and one tie so far, UMass (2–10–1, 0–8–1 HE) is barely averaging two goals a game, which doesn't amount to much in college hockey.

It was the same story this weekend as the Minutemen scored just two goals in two nights against the Hockey East front-running Northeastern Huskies (7–5–2, 6–3–2 HE). After escaping Matthews Arena in Boston Friday night with a 1–1 tie, UMass welcomed the dogs into its backyard Saturday evening for the sequel, but got bit hard, 5–1.

The Minutemen didn't give themselves much of a chance Saturday, compiling just 10 shots during the first two periods and squandering the few opportunities that Husky netminder Marc Robitaille allowed. A two-goal lead rocketed to five goals in the early stages of the third period — goaltender Brian Regan was then removed for freshman Markus Helanen — and the Minutemen were left gasping for air.

"We had great scoring chances early and didn't score," Mallen said. "If we bury a couple of those chances, it's a different game."

The Massachusetts attack looked a bit sharper Friday night. UMass attacked Robitaille who was forced to make 24 saves, including five huge stops in the third period that helped send the game into overtime.

However, the story of the game was UMass goaltender Brian Regan. The senior, who had struggled of late, sat out last Saturday night's game before making his triumphant return to the net Friday. Stopping 32 Husky shots, Regan had his best outing of the season.

A disciplined first two periods turned into a free–for–all in the third period as both defenses seemed to lose their composure. Regan, after being beaten for the only time with a wrist shot near side in the second minute of the period, stoned four Husky breakaway opportunities — two in the final three minutes before overtime.

"Brian Regan played terrific down the stretch," Mallen said. "He made some key saves for us under pressure."

But what happens when Regan isn't at his best; the trend is, the Minutemen are losing handily. Scoring opportunities aren't being taken advantage of, and the pressure always seems to be placed on the shoulders of Regan, who is forced to keep UMass alive in low–scoring games.

The responsibility has to lie with the coaching staff, which has yet to find a place in the lineup where senior Tim Lovell's abilities can be harnessed.

Starting out the season on the first line with Jeff Blanchard and Steve MacKinnon, Lovell now plays alongside freshmen R.J. Gates and Kris Wallis — an experiment used this weekend that showed flashes of potential, though not in numbers.

Lovell, the much–heralded transfer from Maine, has had trouble fitting into the Massachusetts offensive scheme. He has tallied only three points since a loss to Boston University on Oct. 31.

JORMA KANJANEN / COLLEGIAN

Senior defenseman Tom O'Connor

MacKinnon — UMass' top returning scorer from last season — is having similar trouble getting back on track. Since the season began, MacKinnon has slipped down to the third line, where he has rejoined Blanchard and sophomore Nathan Sell. There, he has been virtually ineffective, not scoring a goal since he had two on opening night at UMass–Lowell — when he played with Lovell on the first line.

In their place, the freshmen contingent of Gates, Wallis, and Matt Smith have shouldered the scoring burden. Gates is second only to Lovell for the team lead in goals with four, and Wallis has chipped in with two goals and four assists as well. Smith, a second–line defenseman, has scored three goals and added two assists.

With the supporting cast behind MacKinnon and Lovell and an experienced core of defensemen, UMass has loaded itself with the potential to do damage in Hockey East. However, the potential on paper hasn't been realized on the ice yet and because of it UMass has just one lonely point in the standings.

■ hockey

continued from page 12

"One thing that was obvious was that we had a lot of great scoring chances early in the game," Mallen said. "Not one or two, but a multitude. Lately, though, we've run into some tough goaltenders like Robitaille and (Providence Friar goalie) Boyd Ballard, and we've had a hard time putting the puck in the net, but that shouldn't be an excuse.

"It doesn't matter how nice the goal looks, it matters if it is scored or not. We've been trying to make our goals look pretty lately, when we'll take the ugly ones right now."

Saturday night's game opened with a golden scoring opportunity for freshman forward Kris Wallis, who broke in on Robitaille off the opening faceoff. But, the Northeastern goaltender was able to force the right–handed Wallis to his backhand, and the puck squirted wide.

The pace of the first period was all UMass, and a period of quality attacking zone pressure resulted in another good scoring chance in the 15th minute of the period. Sophomore Nathan Sell broke in on Robitaille, but once again, Robitaille was able to make a stick save on Sell's wrist shot to maintain the scoreless game.

But, the lucky break went the Huskies way at the 17:21 mark of the period, and a questionable call went against the Minutemen.

Senior goalie Brian Regan was knocked to the ice and interfered with by a Northeastern player, but head referee John Gravalese did not think it was a penalty and play continued. Before Regan could recover, freshman Brian Cummings' wrap–around shot found the net for the 1–0 advantage going into the second period.

"I thought we played really well in the first period," Mallen said. "But like it always seems to happen, we have a great chance at one end of the ice, and it results in a counterattack goal for the other team.

"They were able to seize their opportunities in transition, and we just didn't pick up the open man."

A strong first period digressed into a sluggish second period for UMass, and the inability to clear the puck out of their defensive zone forced the team to commit penalties. The failure to clear the puck brought about sophomore Bobby Davis' goal at the 7:42 mark, and the offensive momentum was on the Huskies side, even with the slight lead of 2–0 going into the third period.

That lead was boosted up to 4–0 on two early goals by sophomore Todd Barclay and freshman Sean MacDonald respectively in the final stanzas for Northeastern, and after Cummings' second goal of the game at the 9:00 mark, Regan was pulled in favor of freshman goalie Markus Helanen.

Last week's HE Rookie of the Week, freshman R.J. Gates, kept up his scoring pace for the Minutemen at the 10:51 mark, capitalizing on a rebound from a shot by senior Brad Norton to negate Robitaille's shutout bid.

■ women's hoop

continued from page 12

committed a foul on UMass forward Yolanda Rayside, who found herself at the line with exactly one minute left to play. Rayside hit her first attempt, a shaky attempt at that, and missed her second, putting the score at 66–64.

"That free throw was an Al Maguire crier," Gibbons said. "It must have bounced around about eighteen times before it went in."

From there UMass converted on Holy Cross fouls, making six free throws, four from Van Huisen and two from Trent. O'Brien managed a layup for the Crusaders, but it wasn't enough, as Trent's free throws sealed the game for the Minutewomen.

"I thought we lost the game in the first half," Gibbons said. "We were too hesitant against their pressure in the backcourt... and too hurried in the frontcourt. We made adjustments at halftime, but I think we just dug ourselves into too deep a hole in the first half. Being down to UMass by 10 is like being down to other teams by 20, just because of the way they play."

Sloppy play prevailed throughout the game, with UMass commiting 29 turnovers and Holy Cross, 28.

"It wasn't a pretty game," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "Each, forced the other team into doing some things they didn't want to do, but fortunately we made some shots when we needed to and hit some free throws down the stretch, and kind of snuck this one away."

UMass Daily Collegian, The perfect gift for the holidays! MOM WILL LOVE YOU!!!!!!!!!!

■ men's hoop

continued from page 12

play — the difference between a 61–59 win and a 59–58 loss.

Basit — playing with a minor sprain in his right knee — had 10 points and three rebounds in 18 minutes off the bench. He accounted for all but one point from the Minuteman reserves. Chris Kirkland was 1–of–2 from the foul line in 16 minutes.

Junior center Lari Ketner, who scored half the Minutemen's points in the second half (13), finished the game with 17 points, 10 rebounds and four blocks to lead UMass.

Weeks chipped in 12 points and a season–low four rebounds for the Minutemen, whose post presence continues to dominate. UMass scored 43 points in the paint and held Marshall to 22.

"I've been in college basketball for 20 years and that's the most physical basketball team I've ever seen and had to play against," White said. "They're tremendous around the basket; they're just so big and strong."

"In the first half they just physically dominated us," he said.

UMass didn't allow the Herd to score until 5:25 into the game when Young hit a jumper. Marshall went another 4:36 without scoring again, and at one point, UMass was up, 30–8.

In the first 10 minutes of each of UMass' two home games, the Minutemen have allowed a total of four points. Two of those points came on a fast–break dunk.

■ Meredith

continued from page 12

basket like UMass."

The problem for UMass right now is the backcourt. They're young, very young — leaving junior Charlton Clarke playing point guard. But Flint has said time and time again Clarke isn't a point guard, which leaves UMass without experience at either the one or two spot. Mack's gaffe at the end, which could have cost the Minutemen the game, happened because UMass didn't have an experienced point guard for that situation, Flint said. With three guards in their first year of college ball, Flint knows he has to let them grow up on the battlefield, because he has no choice.

But UMass did pull it out Saturday, its third straight win. At 4–2, the Minutemen are well ahead of last year's pace after six games. The Minutemen were 2–4 at this point in 1996, after losing to Fresno St. 102–81 at home.

"Last year we would have lost this game," Flint said. "But this taught us a lesson. When you get a big lead, you have to put teams away. Like I've said, it's going to be ugly sometimes until guys get comfortable. But this is my team, and I know what we have to work with. I think we'll be okay."

There are things Flint knows his team has to learn, especially his young backcourt. But he said after the game like Saturdays in the "old days," coaches would send teams right back out on the court for an impromptu practice. But given the wish, Flint said he wouldn't work on breaking a press, shooting free throws or any of that. He'd be working on one thing, he said.

Conditioning. Good old–fashioned laps.

And if this were the old days, Flint might have had his team running laps all the way to Kansas.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

Auditions For Not Ready For Bedtime Players
Not Ready for Bedtime Players
Monday, December 8 - 7:30 PM
Campus Center Rm. 163C
For more information call the Health Education Division of the University Health Services and ask for Sally or Mike 577-5181.

CASTAWAY LOUNGE
Rte. 5 & 10 Whately, MA 413.665.8733
Adult Entertainment
PROUDLY PRESENTS:
EVERY MONDAY NIGHT IS FOOTBALL NIGHT
at the Castaway Lounge with
4 Beautiful Exotic Dancers
Starting at 4pm til 1am
Door prizes given away during the game!
$2.00 Draft Michelob & Bud Ice
All other days entertainment Starting at 1 pm till 1 am
Coming AMATEUR NIGHT
Ladies must apply in person
Our beautiful V.I.P Room is available for private parties
North of 91, Ext. 22, Take Rte. 5 & 10 North 2 miles
South of 91, Ext. 24 Take 5 & 10 South 2 Miles

THE MOLSON SUN & SNOW FEST! IN CANADA
5 DAY SKI & SNOWBOARD LIFT TICKET
5 NIGHTS LODGING, LUXURY CONDO, FULLY EQUIP
5 DAYS & NIGHTS OF COLLEGIATE PARTIES, CONTESTS ETC.
Students from over 150 U.S. Colleges
Group Leader & Campus Rep Discounts
Only $239
Please note: The legal age to consume alcohol in Canada is 18
SPRING BREAK
PARTY SNOW
SKI TRAVEL UNLIMITED
Call or E-Mail for a free color brochure
www.skitravel.com
1-800-999-SKI-9
MORE SPACE JUST ADDED FOR WINTERBREAK (JANUARY) & SPRINGBREAK

Hampshire Mall has for all!
JC Penney • BIG Kmart • Media Play
Bath & Body Works • EMS • AMC 6 Theatres •
Electronics Boutique • Kay Bee Toys
Plus Over 60 Specialty Shops & Restaurants
One Stop. Easy Parking. Close By.
Hampshire Mall
Route 9 Hadley
Enter the Hampshire Mall's TOY CHEST GIVE-A-WAY
Over $500 of prizes for kids Big & Small.
Details available at Customer Service Desk
NO PURCHASE NECESSARY
Shopping Hours: Mon.-Sat. 10am-10pm, Sunday 10am-7pm • 413-586-5700

The End is near...
Don't miss next week's specials in our Clothing Department
Of classes, that is!
THE LAST DAY OF CLASSES IS DECEMBER 12. THE NEXT WEEK IS YOUR LAST CHANCE TO GET GIFTS FOR YOUR FRIENDS BEFORE EXAMS. DON'T LET YOU FRIENDS GO HOME FOR A MONTH WITHOUT SOMETHING TO REMIND THEM OF YOU.
STOP IN TODAY, AND LET US HELP YOU PICK THE PERFECT PRESENTS.
University Store
Holly Days
We accept AMEX, Discover, MC, Visa, and the UCard!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

SORORITY RUSH
Feb. 5th- 9th
Registration
12-5 P.M.
in the Campus
Center Concourse
Come see what we're about
For more info
call Jess
@ 549-8925

TALKING ACROSS DIFFERENCES: EXPLORING COMMON GROUND & CONFLICT (2 Credits, Spring Semester) Your experience is needed! Participate in a 10 week Intergroup Dialogue course. Sections offered: 1) WHITE WOMEN & WOMEN OF COLOR; 2) PEOPLE OF COLOR & WHITE PEOPLE; 3) PEOPLE OF LATINO HERITAGE & PEOPLE OF AFRICAN HERITAGE. Issues discussed: Race relations on college campuses, Race & culture, Interracial dating, Affirmative Action, Immigration etc. Enroll now at the Residential Academic Program Office, 5th floor- JQA or 159 Hills South.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom apartment- The Boulders. $695. Free heat. Call Jesse 259-9198

1 bedroom apartment available 1/98. Close to campus. Mark 549-5326

2 bedroom- Mill Hollow $540. Jan 1. Call Tracy 549-3759

One bedroom apartments available Jan-Feb 1st. Please contact the Brandywine Office at 549-0600.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

1 bedroom at Puffton Village $545. Includes heat. Available 1/1/98. Please call 549-9221

Take Over My Lease One bedroom apartment. $550/month inclusive. Call Tariq Odeh 665-5599

AUTO FOR SALE

82 Honda Civic $250. Reliable, runs fine, but needs new clutch. 253-8585.

Geo Prizm 1990 155,000. Very reliable. Well maintained (records). Blue Book says $2800. Asking $2000. 256-1845

1990 Pontiac Sunbird High mileage, as is $800. B/O. Leah 665-1276

88 Toyota Pick-Up 125k, runs well. $1100 firm. 367-2651

89 Nissan 240SX Excellent condition. All extras. New: muffler, clutch, tires, brakes. $4400 or B/O. 549-6926

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795.

CHILDCARE

Occasional childcare needed for 14 year old boy for evenings and overnight when both parents are working. Need someone willing to commit for Spring Semester. Call Fred or Calla 548-9057

COMPUTERS

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Day Care Lunch Cook & Shopper, 17 hrs per week, $7 per hour. Classroom Subs, Variable Schedules, $6.25 per hour. Route 63, Leverett. Call Susan 548-9674

YOU WANT CASH MONEY??!! Do you know how to drink warm soda and eat a pound of lima beans??!! Be a part of the new comedy tape "AMERICA'S GREATEST BELCHES & FARTS." Send your best burps and farts on tape (audio, video, micro) to us. CASH paid if you make the cut! Maniac Marketing. 357 Cherokee St. Marietta, GA 30060. Need more info? Call the GAS LINE (770)590-5233

New Students Program Summer Positions Seeking active extraverts with 2.5+ GPA. May 27 to July 18, 1998. Salary plus, room; board & health coverage. Applications at Admissions Center.

Apply now to be a Tour Guide, Summer Counselor, Student Admissions Representative. Applications available on the concourse.

Aerobics Instructor January and Second Semester. Some mornings. Hampshire Fitness Club. 256-6446

Part-time change over crew and post-event cleaners needed at the Mullins Center. Must be available nights and weekends and willing to work. Apply in person. Mullins Center 2nd floor. 8:30-5:30pm.

Janitor Tuesday and Thursday mornings beginning Jan. Hampshire Fitness Club. $7/hr plus membership. Call 256-6446

Applications are available for Tour Guides, Student Admissions Rep and Summer Orientation Jobs at Admissions Center.

EMPLOYMENT

January Jobs Use your winter break to make money. 2-4 week fun promotions around country. Great for the resume. Outgoing and independent people call (800)783-4237 Attn: Joe. Collegiate Advantage

Summer Management Opportunities Open across Mass. for the Summer of 1998. Earn $600-$800 per week. For more info please call College Pro Painters at (888)277-7962.

Attention Slackers!! Use e-mail? Know others who do? Little effort = Big money! Call (800)546-0744

FOR SALE

CP Conga Orum $90. 16" Zildjian Thin Crash $80. Pearl Cymbal Stand $30. Excellent condition. Melissa 695-7353

Burton 6.1 Air Snowboard with bindings. $150 or B/O. Call Colin 546-2968

For Sale- Two pairs of skis K2 and Salomom. Almost brand new. $200 each or B/O. Call 546-6152

Frea Motorola Pagers limited Supply Great x-mas gifts. 1-800-784-6452 ID# 624421

Take home speakers or a 16mm film camera for the break. Camera perfect for Film/Comm Majors. Call Sid at 549-6857. Free kittens ?

Willpower In A Bottle Lose Weight Doctor Recommended 100% Natural Moneyback Guarantee (413)259-1922

JEWELRY

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. ...]-3324 Open Daily.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday Cathy, Rob, & David Love Thang

Jessica Happy Birthday I hope you had a great 21st. Now you can party with the big girls! Love, Joy

LOST & FOUND

Lost- A gold bracelet on 12/3 between 10-11am around Haigis Mall or Bartlett 65. Extreme sentimental value. Reward offered. Call 6-4632

Found- Silver ring and silver earrings at Mullins Center after 311 concert. Call Beth 546-2585

Lost Wednesday near Boyden Gym- Purple zippered notebook with negatives and printing paper. Call 367-0266

MUSICIANS

Marshall Speaker For Sale 4x12 Cab. LOUD! Great condition. MUST SELL! $500 or best offer. Call Mike at 546-0955

ROOM FOR RENT

1 bedroom apt. Av. 1/98 Close to Campus. Mark 549-5326

Looking for male to share large room in 3 bedroom apartment. Great location uptown. $250/month. Ask for Fitz 253-9359

Large bedroom in renovated 3 bedroom Puffton apartment. Available Jan 1. $375/month. 549-6857

ROOM FOR RENT

1 room in 2 bedroom apartment. Available Jan. End. Call 549-6087 ASAP.

UPTOWN
Room for rent in house for 1 or 2 persons.
$210/month Available 12/22.
549-9275

Room in house in South Amherst. $375/month ALL INCLUDED. Next to bus line. Start 1/1/98. Call 253-9482

Bedroom Available Jan 1 $342.50/month. Includes heat/hot water. Contact Kelly 253-1899

I'm graduating! One bedroom available in three bedroom apartment in Puffton Village. Paid thru Feb 1. Move in Jan 1. $230/month. Heat included. Call 549-6729 Brian

Furnished room available in a 4 bedroom Amherst house. $300/month. Near bus route. For more details call Tina 253-6428

One bedroom perfect for two in two bedroom apartment in Sunderland. Mindy 665-1276

Cheap rooms for Wintersession Live close to campus. Only $150. Includes heat/hot water. Call Jason 549-0958

ROOMMATE WANTED

Famale roommate/s wanted to share a 2 bedroom- Boulders Apts Amherst. On bus line. Available Jan 1st or sooner. 259-2995

Roommate Wanted Jan 1 Behind Victory Market. 4 bedrooms, W/D $300+ 549-9130

To share two bedroom apartment in Brandywine. Rent starting Jan 1. Call Tara 549-4390

ROOMMATE WANTED

2 roommates wanted to share 3 bedroom in Puffton. Available Jan 1. Call 549-8564

One bedroom available in two bedroom apartment. Walk to Uptown and UMass. On bus line. $270/month plus utilities. Call 253-4613. Available 1/98.

Very quiet roommate wanted in Amherst on bus line. $260/month plus 1/3 utilities. 256-5402, 253-9457

SERVICES

Looking for a place to live? Seeking a new roommate? Offering a Winter Session sublet? Commuter Services & Housing Resource Center can help you! Call 545-2145 to place your listing or stop by 428 Student Union Building, M-F, 10am-5pm.

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Oocorator Service Beautify your home- wallpaper, painting, staining. Expert workmanship. 20 years exp. Free estimates. Call (413)533-5213 South Hadley

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Take Over Lease Feb 1st 2 bedroom apartment at The Boulders. $725, heat/hot water included. On bus line. 256-1415

TRAVEL

Spring Break
Ask about our legendary Free Party Packages
★Jamaica
★Cancun
The best Meal Plan in the business!
★Daytona ★Panama City
CALL FOR FREE INFO PACK
Sun Splash Tours
1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK TRAVEL
SPRING BREAK
CANCUN From $599
Jamaica From $599
Bahamas From $629
Florida From $99
NOW HIRING REPS!
1-800-234-7007
http://www.sunbreaktravel.com

WANTED TO RENT

I need a one bedroom apartment for Spring. Will take over lease. Amherst preferred Dan 546-2035

Looking For A Deal?
Sell your Books through the Classifieds! It's EASY and CHEAP ONLY 10¢ / word

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOR RENT
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELERY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND (3 DAYS FREE)
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP.
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, DEC. 8

Auditions — The Not Ready for Bedtime Players are holding auditions for next semester at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163.

Meeting — Hillel public affairs committee at 7 p.m. Meet at the Hillel House and walk to Claudia's to discuss issues that are critical to a strong Jewish presence on campus.

TUESDAY, DEC. 9

Booksigning — Current scholarships in Women's Studies at the Five Colleges. Come meet the authors from the five college area at a booksigning reception at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room, Mount Holyoke College. For more information, call 538–2022.

Meeting — The Index, UMass' yearbook, will hold its general meeting at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Union, room 304. All are invited. For more information, contact Jill Aordkian at 545–0848.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 10

Blood Drive — American Red Cross, Hampshire County chapter blood drive from 10:30 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 165.

Entertainment — Not Ready For Bedtime Players will perform at 8 p.m. in the Pierpont Lounge.

Film — Italian club film night at 6:30 p.m. in classroom 2 of the Foreign Language Resource Center in the basement of Herter Hall Annex. Caro Diario will be shown in Italian with English subtitles.

NOTICES

Applications — The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team is accepting applications for its training this January 12–16. Applications are available for any UMass student at 222 Hampshire House, Legal Studies. For more information, contact Leah at 545–5882.

Art Exhibition — An exhibition of more than 30 one–of–a– kind artist books and scrolls by William Schade will be on view from Nov. 11 through Jan. 25 at the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum. Museum hours are Tuesday – Friday, 11 a.m.–5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday, 1–5 p.m. The museum is closed on academic holidays from Wednesday, Nov. 26 through Monday, Dec. 1 and from Tuesday, Dec. 16 through Monday, Jan. 6. For more information, call 538– 2245 or fax 538–2144.

Art Exhibition — Works by 13 members of the Williams College art faculty will be featured in "Artist/Teacher: Group Faculty Exhibition," opening Dec. 6 at the Williams College Museum of Art, and continuing through March 1. Museum hours are Tues.–Sat. 10 a.m.–5 p.m. and Sun. 1–5 p.m.

Auditions — UMass Theater department is holding auditions for "Coyote Gets Sober" on Dec. 8 and 9 from 7– 10 p.m. A co-production of New WORLD Theater and the Josephine White Eagle Cultural Center and will be performed Feb. 7 and 8 at 8 p.m. in Hampden Theater. For more information, call New WORLD Theater at 545–1972.

Club — The UMass Amateur Radio Club Station W1PUO is returning and looking for people to join in Ham radio. Anyone interested in radio/electronics and a desire to learn and communicate are welcome. The club will sponsor FCC approved volunteer examination sessions for all license levels. For more information, contact Richard Strychacz N1MFT at 549–6000 ext. 6000 or leave a message at facility services.

Exhibit — Orchids and Works of Sculpture by the Durfee Conservatory opening Dec. 5 from noon– 6 p.m. and continuing through Dec. 10. conservatory hours are Mon–Fri. 8:30 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. Sponsored by the Amherst Orchid Society and Sculpture Department of UMass.

Internships — Environmental and Hunger Internships available for credit. Opportunities include helping to organize a Five College Earthday, protecting Endangered Species and organizing the Spring Hunger Clean–up. For more information, call Robyn at 545–0199.

Notice — Spectrum Magazine is taking submissions for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office at 545–2240 or come by in the Student Union, room 406E.

Notice — The UMass Arts Council's next deadline for Single Project/Event Grants is on Wednesday, Feb. 4 at 5 p.m. for art events occurring after Feb. 24. Guidelines for application forms are available at the Campus Activities Office, 416 Student Union or at the Arts Council offices, Hasbrouck 101–103 or on computer disk at PC Software Support, Lederle low rise, room A118. Please call the Arts Council at 545–0202 for help with applying for a grant or to discuss your ideas.

This are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board	23 CNN
3	CBS/3	Hartford	24 CNN SI
4	CBS/4	Boston	25 Headline News
5	ABC/5	Boston	28 UCTV
6	PBS/57	Springfield	27 TBS
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.	28 BET
8	UPN/20	Hartford	29 TV Land
9	Weather Channel		30 Univision
10	NBC/30	New Britain	31 Comedy Central
11	Fox/61	Hartford	32 Cartoon
12	PBS/24	Hartford	33 Much Music
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield

545-3500

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 8, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone ⓒ	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ		Andrea Bocelli: Romanza in Concert			Carreras, Domingo, Pavarotti With Mehta: "The Three Tenors in Concert"
WFSB	3	News ⓒ	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV ⓒ	Cosby (R) ⓒ	Raymond	Cybill ⓒ	George & Leo	Brooklyn South (In Stereo) ⓒ	News ⓒ	Late Show ⓒ
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra ⓒ	Ent. Tonight	Cosby (R) ⓒ	Raymond	Cybill ⓒ	George & Leo	Brooklyn South (In Stereo) ⓒ	News	Late Show ⓒ
WCVB	5	News ⓒ	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ⓒ	Tales From the Tomb			NFL Football: Carolina Panthers at Dallas Cowboys. (In Stereo Live) ⓒ
WLVI	6		Full House ⓒ	Boy-World	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	7th Heaven (In Stereo) ⓒ		Buffy the Vampire Slayer ⓒ		News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	Sudden-Susan	Mad Abo. You	Caroline	Naked Truth	Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		14	Cheers ⓒ	Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy ⓒ	Judge Judy ⓒ	Malcolm-Eddie	Malcolm-Eddie	Good News ⓒ	Sparks (R) ⓒ	Vibe	Grace Under
WVIT		18	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy ⓒ	Sudden-Susan	Mad Abo. You	Caroline	Naked Truth	Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11	Home Imp.	Simpsons ⓒ	Seinfeld ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	Billboard Music Awards (In Stereo Live) ⓒ				News	Simpsons ⓒ	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	Sudden-Susan	Mad Abo. You	Caroline	Naked Truth	Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	5	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ		Members' Choice					Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	28	News ⓒ	ABC News	Seinfeld ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	Tales From the Tomb		NFL Football: Carolina Panthers at Dallas Cowboys. (In Stereo Live) ⓒ
WSBK	38		Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	Malcolm-Eddie	Malcolm-Eddie	Good News ⓒ	Sparks (R) ⓒ	News	M*A*S*H ⓒ	Mad Abo. You Real TV ⓒ
WTBS	15		Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	★★★ "Rhinestone" (1984, Comedy) Sylvester Stallone, Dolly Parton. ⓒ				★★★ "The Rescuers Down Under" (1990) Voices of Bob Newhart.
A&E	23		Northern Exposure ⓒ		Law & Order ⓒ		Biography: Jacqueline Kennedy		Judy Collins Christmas at the Biltmore				Law & Order "Extended Family"
CNN	24	32	WorldView ⓒ		Moneyline ⓒ	Crossfire ⓒ	Prime News ⓒ	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live ⓒ		World Today ⓒ		Sports Illus. Moneyline ⓒ
COM	25	36	(4:00)	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★★ "Something Wild" (1986, Comedy) Jeff Daniels, Melanie Griffith. ⓒ				Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	26		Wings "Eagles of the Crown"		Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery: Australia		Carrier – Fortress at Sea (R) ⓒ				Justice Files (R)
ESPN	27		Up Close	Sportscenter		NFL Prime Monday			Figure Skating World Championships – Men's and Ladies' (R)			Cheerleading	Sportscenter
LIFE	28		Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"On the Second Day of Christmas" (1997) Mary Stuart Masterson.			Homicide: Life on the Street ⓒ
MTV	29		MTV Live (In Stereo)		Scream & Video (In Stereo)		Daria (R)	Beavis-Butt.	Unplugged (R) (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Daria (R)	Loveline (R) (In Stereo)
NICK	30		Real Monsters	Doug ⓒ	Angry Beavers	Kablam! (R)	Hey Arnold! ⓒ	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Love Lucy ⓒ	M.T. Moore	Taxi ⓒ Newhart ⓒ
SCIFI	31		Twilight Zone	Twilight Zone	Time Trax "Face of Death" ⓒ		Sea-quest DSV "Hide and Seek" ⓒ		★★ "Darkman II: Alley" (1977) Jan-Michael Vincent.			Time Trax "Face of Death" ⓒ
TLC	33	26	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Roswell (R)		Alien Secrets: Area 51 (R)		Alien Secrets: Area 51 (R)	Roswell (R)
TNT	35		Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark: Superman		WCW Nitro (In Stereo Live) ⓒ				WCW Nitro (R) (In Stereo) ⓒ
USA	34		Baywatch (R) ⓒ		Highlander: The Series ⓒ		Walker, Texas Ranger ⓒ		WWF Raw (In Stereo) ⓒ		WWF War Zone (In Stereo) ⓒ	Silk Stalkings "Daddy Dearest"
HBO	42		(4:30) "Jack Frost" (1998) Cloris Leac. PG-13 ⓒ		Storyteller ⓒ		★★★ "The Godfather, Part III" (1990, Drama) Al Pacino. (In Stereo) R ⓒ				Tenacious D	Mr. Show With "Don King"
MAX	43		★★½ "Used People" (1992) Shirley MacLaine. PG-13 ⓒ				★★ "Space Jam" (1996, Fantasy) Michael Jordan. PG ⓒ				★★ "Back to Back" (1996) Michael Rooker. R ⓒ	★★ "Serpent's Lair"
SHOW	44		★★½ "Mars is Missing" (1995, Adventure) Tonari Caudell. PG ⓒ				Stargate SG-1 "Cold Lazarus"		★★★ "The Birdcage" (1996, Comedy) Robin Williams. R ⓒ			★★ "Cover Me" (1995) R

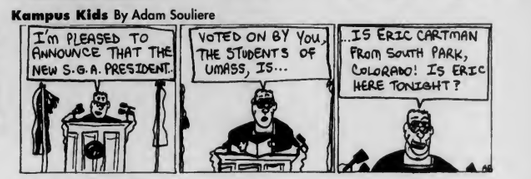
Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Thatch By Jeff Shesol



Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Monkey Socials By Constant Jones

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You may have to address a situation today which allows one or two mysteries to develop before the day is out. You must come from behind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You must be specific and complete in your instructions to others today. Do not leave anything out, and don't leave anything to the imagination.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20.–Feb. 18) — You are likely to tackle everything on the schedule today, but you'll have to do some things out of order. Be creative, flexible and a little daring.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may feel as though a current duty is a waste of your time — but those in authority know just how good it is for you right now.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You are going to have to come up with a few imaginative solutions today if you expect to get the results you seek. Superiors may be surprised.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Do not leave anyone in the dark today, particularly those individuals in charge. You don't want anyone doubting your methods or motives.

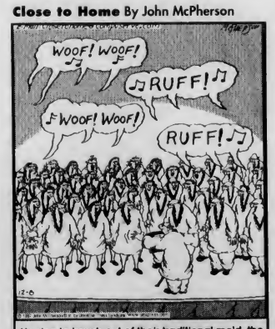
GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You may have to make excuses for others today, but when it comes to answering charges yourself you must be straightforward and honest.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You may not have quite as much time on your hands today as you thought, so you're going to have to pick up the pace as soon as you can.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — With every passing minute today you may find yourself becoming more frustrated about something you cannot identify easily. Talk to friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Certain chance encounters may tax your memory today. Be sure that you take down names and numbers before all is said and done.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You can put yourself in a better position to negotiate today, provided you have not been doing anything that can be interpreted as unfair.



SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — The more open and outgoing you can be today, the better off you'll be tomorrow — particularly when it comes to the pursuit of romance.

Quote of the Day

"GET 'EM OUT!"

–The Infamous Ben Bertocci

Close to Home By John McPherson

Hoping to break out of their traditional mold, the Mormon Tabernacle Choir performs the barking dogs version of "Jingle Bells."

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

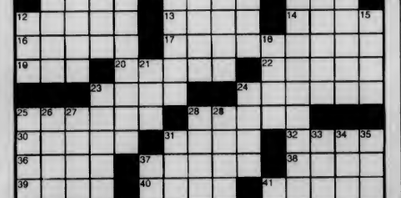
Franklin
LUNCH
Grilled Chicken Sandwich
Cheese Strata
Chiligetti
DINNER
Oriental Stew
Fried Shrimp Dinner
Parml
Quarter Pound Burger

Worcester
LUNCH
Charboiled Chicken Sandwich
Low-phAt nick
Fettuccini/Tomato /Meat Sauce
Golden Burgers
DINNER
Beef of Gabe
Fried Shrimp Dinner
Tofu Fajita
Manicotti in Sauce

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Donkey Noodles
American Chop Suey
Grilled Alicia Sandwich
DINNER
Beef Fajita
Ravioli with Tomato Sauce
Grain Alchohol

Berkshire
LUNCH
Noelle on a Roelle
Rotini with Tomato Sauce
Golden Burger
DINNER
Beer Fajita
A big larewell to Kada
Tofu Fajita
Man in Sauce

Today's Staff



Night Editor	Casey Kane
Photo Technician	Yvonne Yang
Copy Editor	Erin Murphy
Production Supervisor	Matt Wolover
Production Staff	Jocelyn Burrows, Susan Ely

ACROSS
1 Cut of meat
5 Bear: Lat.
9 Field sound
12 Less hazardous
13 Not spicy
14 Actress Albright
16 Lightning by-product
17 Severe storms
19 Affirmative response
20 Skinned (an apple)
22 Eight voices
23 Singer Irene —
24 Place in Turkey
25 Go ashore
28 Extend a subscription
30 Marry secretly
31 Exceedingly
32 Curved lines
36 Jai —
37 Tropical vine
38 Noose
39 Quick
40 Highest point
41 Type of charmer
42 Staffers
44 Served, as tea
45 By mouth
48 Water bird
49 Fox trot or waltz
50 Pale-faced
52 By way of
55 15 is — by 5 or 3
57 Grinding material
59 Bad mood
60 Page
61 Wedding-dress fabric
62 Cunning
63 Barrels
64 Flip (a coin)

DOWN
1 Level (a building)
2 Flying saucers: abbr.
3 "Of Mice and —"
4 Get ready
5 Shadow
6 Irritate
7 Coasted on ice
8 Woodworking tool
9 Kind of nut
10 Major artery
11 Birch
12 Oriental sauce
15 Movie terrier
18 Distinct
21 Clumsy boat
23 24-Across, e.g.
24 Writer Seton
25 Fell on — ears
26 Singer Fitzgerald
27 Feathery wraps
28 Paper units
29 Sea eagle
31 Bad habit
33 Hearty laugh
34 Soft drink
35 Exceeded the limit
37 Woman
41 Earliest
43 Quebec's Sept- —
44 "Annabel Lee" poet
45 At —; not in agreement
46 Druzles
47 Block for hammering
48 Cooks
50 Have — in one's bonnet
51 Smelting residue
52 Animal docs
53 Tall flower
54 Writer Rand
56 Sort
58 Chairman —

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

SPORTS WEEKEND

Monday, December 8, 1997 — The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Herd almost pulls upset, but UM survives 61–59

UMass blows 22–point edge; almost loses before quiet crowd

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

If ever a team deserved to win, the Marshall Thundering Herd did Saturday afternoon.

The Massachusetts men's basketball team blew a 20–point halftime lead, and with 3.6 seconds left Marshall had a chance to at least send the game into overtime after a Monty Mack shot clock violation.

Freshman point guard Travis Young's desperation runner came up short as did the Herd, 61–59, in front of a listless 7,107 at the William D. Mullins Center.

Marshall (2–2) was held to 15 points (5–of–23 from the floor) in the first half by a swarming and energetic UMass defense, but scored 44 points in the second frame to rally from a 35–15 halftime deficit.

"In the old days, you'd come back and practice after a game like this," said UMass coach Bruiser Flint of his team's performance in the second half. "They [the NCAA] don't let you do things like that anymore. Some people can get away with it; I can't.

Massachusetts	61
Marshall	59

"We just didn't put them away," he said. "The intensity wasn't there. They thought [Marshall] was going to lay down, and they didn't."

After an Ajmal Basit dunk gave the Minutemen (4–2) a 54–35 lead with 6:08 left, the Herd went on a scoring stampede.

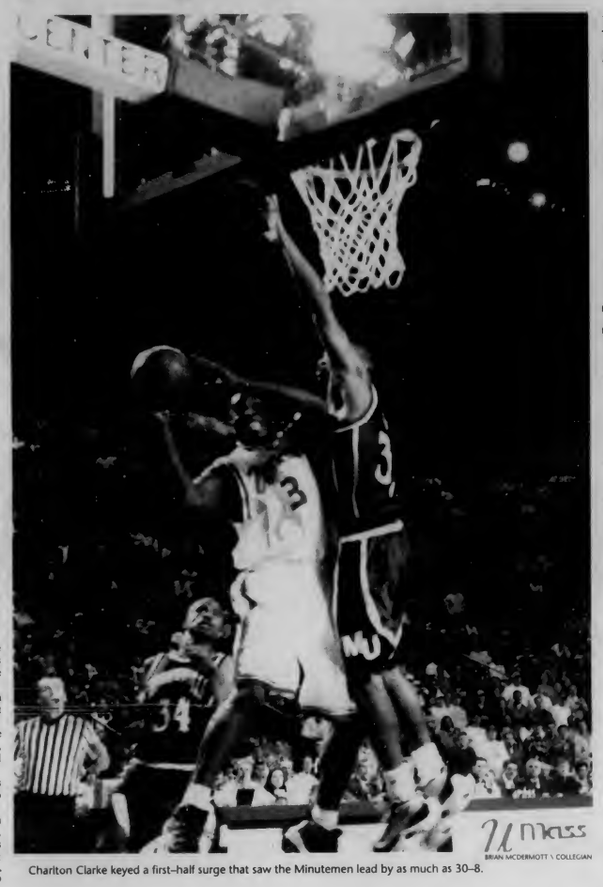
Led by VonDale Morton's nine points (seven in the final 1:49), Marshall went on a 24–7 run to close out the game. Morton's only points of the game came in that run. Young had six points in the rally and led the Herd with a game– high 19 points.

"They came up with the balls at the end, and they made big shots at the end," Flint said of Marshall's late run.

With 40 seconds to go, Morton drained a 3–pointer to make the score 61–59. Charlton Clarke broke the Marshall pressure and held for a final shot to make it a two– possession game.

Clarke swung the ball to Mack, who Flint said thought the shot and game clocks were in sync. Mack tried to run out the clock but instead turned the ball over and gave Marshall one last chance.

With no timeouts, Young pushed the ball up the floor and tried to pass off to the wing. Tyrone Weeks tipped the pass back to Young, whose shot grazed the bottom of the rim.



"I just wanted to try to push the ball up and get a good look," Young said. "It just didn't work out that way."

"We had never really been in that situation, because of our youth," Marshall coach Greg White said. "But, we got the ball in, we got it to the scrimmage area and we got a shot. We just missed it."

Had it not been for a little luck on the Minutemen's side, the Thundering Herd could have used those 3.6 seconds to run the clock out themselves.

Basit grabbed an offensive rebound with 5:09 left in the first half and, among three Marshall defenders, threw up a wild shot that somehow fell in. Basit was fouled on the "shot" and converted the three–point

Turn to MEN'S HOOP, page 9

BRIAN MCDERMOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Charlton Clarke keyed a first–half surge that saw the Minutemen lead by as much as 30–8.

Minutemen collapse after half; hoop not putting teams away

Luke Meredith

When Marshall's freshman point guard Travis Young was a kid, he and his friends all knew about the UMass basketball program.

To Young, UMass isn't just another basketball school. It's "UMass"— accent on the U — and the way the Massachusetts men's basketball team played in the first half reminded Young of the UMass he envisioned before facing them.

What team the Minutemen reminded Young of in the second half is anyone's guess.

The developing saga of the 1997–98 edition of the Minutemen took an interesting turn in the second half of Saturday's 61–59 win over Marshall at the William D. Mullins Center. After a first half as good as possible for this time in the season, UMass took its 35–15 halftime lead out to the floor thinking the Thundering Herd would lay down and let the Minutemen cruise to the easy win.

Marshall didn't lay down. In fact, they almost went out and beat UMass. Keep in mind this comes four days before the Minutemen saddle up to quite possibly the toughest assignment in college basketball — No. 2 Kansas, at Allen Fieldhouse, Wednesday night.

Marshall spent the last 6:08 Saturday outscoring UMass 24–7, and after Monty Mack misjudged the time on the shot clock in UMass' last possession, the Thundering Herd was left with 3.6 seconds to possibly beat the toughest team on their schedule on the road, after being down 23–3 at its lowest point.

But Young's desperation shot fell by the wayside, and UMass survived. And while the band played the school alma mater "When Twilight Shadows Deepen," like they always do, and a polite crowd of 7,107 cheered its skeptical approval, the UMass basketball team left the floor without the swagger of a team that had just won its third straight game.

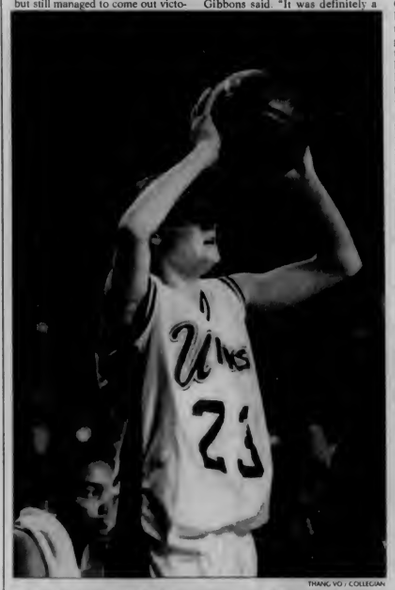
Bruiser Flint has been concerned about the team's inability to put teams away, fears that intensified following Saturday's second–half collapse.

"We just didn't put them away," Flint said. "It's like I've been saying all season. They thought Marshall was going to come out and lay down, but they didn't. Our intensity level dropped and they got back into it. It started to balloon, and all of a sudden [they're right back in it]."

Maybe the most disappointing thing about the collapse was that it came on the heels of the best 20 minutes of basketball UMass has played this year. The Minutemen dominated every phase of the game in the first half, pressuring Marshall with a suffocating defense that completely clamped down any offensive flow the Thundering Herd had. For the second game in a row, UMass made an opponent look like it had never played basketball in the first half. Much of that defensive presence can be attributed to the play of junior center Lari Ketner and senior forward Tyrone Weeks, whom Marshall coach Greg Wright called one of the best, if not the best, post combination in the country.

"They are the most physical team I've seen in my 20 years of coaching," Wright said. "And they play off that physicality. No one in the MAC is as tough around the

Turn to MEREDITH, page 9



UM takes close one from HC

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Sports

The Massachusetts women's basketball team received a scare from the Holy Cross Crusader's yesterday, but still managed to come out victorious. In a game that was decided by fouls and free throws, the Minutewomen beat Holy Cross 72–66.

Massachusetts	72
Holy Cross	66

"It was a great college basketball game," Holy Cross head coach Bill Gibbons said. "It was definitely a great one for the fans."

THANG VO \ COLLEGIAN

Kelly Van Huisen led the UMass women's hoop team with 18 points in the Minutewomen's 72-66 win yesterday.

Despite what was a very sloppy first half, for both teams, UMass led for most of the game and by as many as 10 at halftime. But the Crusaders came out more composed in the second half, and UMass began to see its lead slip away. Holy Cross put together a 7–2 run to bring it within four points with 6:20 remaining. Minutewomen rookie guard Kathy Coyner hit two free throws to put the Minutewomen up by five, but Crusader guard Anna Kinne nailed a three– pointer and followed it shortly after with a free throw to pull her team within two.

With both teams well over the foul limit, the game turned to the free throw line from there. UMass forward Tez Kraft sank two with 4:48 remaining to put the Minutewomen back up by two, but it was soon followed by a fast break layup from Holy Cross' Veronica Jutras. Jutras then fouled Kraft, and Kraft converted one of her two free throws to put UMass up 60–57. After a time out, Kinne was fouled by Kraft, but missed both of her free throw attempts. She did manage, however, to get her own rebound, and kick the ball out to Marcisin, who drained a three to tie the game at 60.

UMass guard Sabriya Mitchell hit a jumper to take back the lead with 3:04 left to play. Sophomore guard Kelly Van Huisen followed it with a three to up UMass' lead to five, but her shot was immediately followed by a three from Kinne.

Van Huisen finished the game with a team–high 18 points, but sprained her left knee in the waning seconds, making her questionable for Thursday's game against UConn. Kinne set a new career–high for herself with her game–high 19 points.

With 1:21 left, guard Kara Trent committed a foul, putting Crusader Monika Rothemich at the line. Rothemich made her first shot, but missed the second, leaving Holy Cross down by just one. Jutras then

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOP, page 9

Hockey ties, falls to Huskies

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Saturday night at the William D. Mullins Center, the Massachusetts hockey team dropped its eighth conference game of the year, losing 5–1 to Northeastern (7–5–2 overall, 6–3–2 Hockey East). The home loss comes on the heels of Friday night's 1–1 tie with the Huskies at Matthews Arena, which resulted in the first conference point of the season for the 2–10–1 Minutemen (0–8–1 HE).

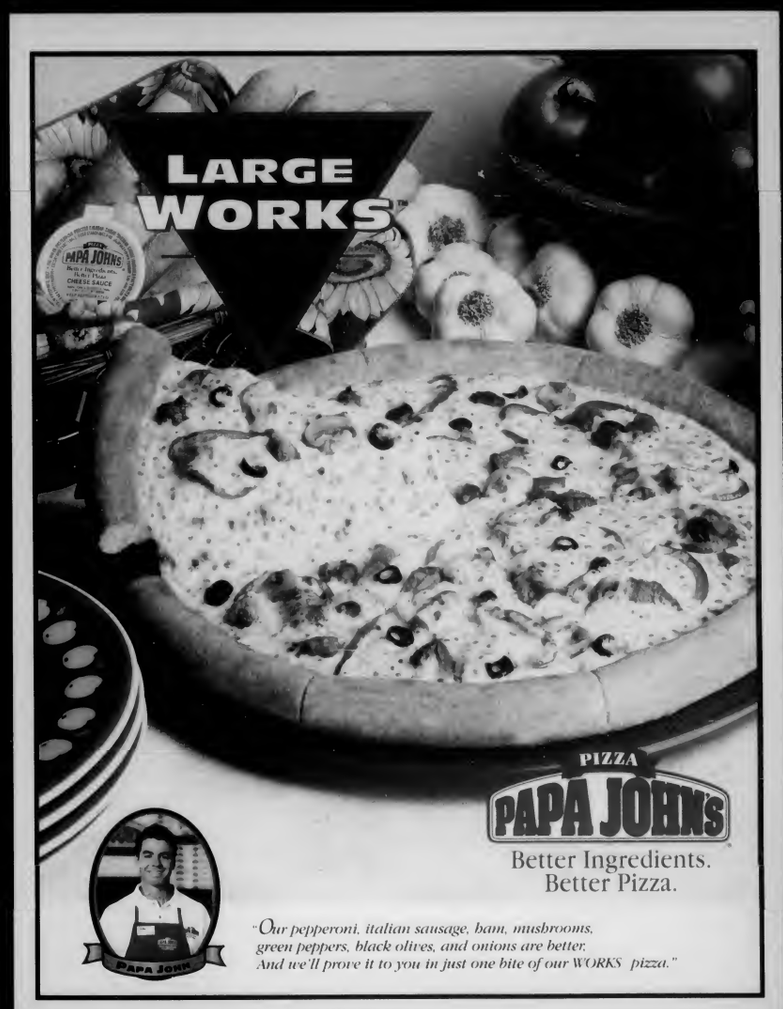
Northeastern	1
Massachusetts	1

The tale of two one–goal games for UMass this weekend could not have been written more differently. Friday night's overtime game was a tightly fought contest to the end, with the drama of senior Bryan Fitzgerald's first career goal for the Minutemen bringing a tie out of the clutches of defeat, but Saturday night's game digressed into offensive paucity.

Northeastern	5
Massachusetts	1

The Minuteman offense was only able to get off three shots on sophomore goaltender Marc Robitaille in the second period on Saturday — a period that saw the pace of play become muddled in a flurry of matching penalties for both sides.

Any momentum UMass had after a come–from–behind tie on Friday was lost, with five unanswered goals to start the game for the Huskies (two of them in a span of :27 in the third period) proving to be the stake in the heart.



For UMass coach Joe Mallen, it was another case of goal scoring chances missed, and while the team's offense has been ugly of late, he wants it to get uglier — as in, the style of the goals.

Turn to HOCKEY, page 9

JORMA KANSANEN \ COLLEGIAN

A scoring chance by senior Tim Lovell (No. 7) is surrounded by Huskies in Saturday night's 5–1 loss to Northeastern at the Mullins Center.

LARGE WORKS™ $9.95

Call Your Papa For Free Delivery:

Hadley
331 Russell St.
586-7772

$2.00 Off any Large
OR
$3.00 Off any Extra Large

FREE DELIVERY AND CARRYOUT

PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
Better Ingredients. Better Pizza.

$9.95
One Large with The Works
Expires 30 days. Not valid with any other offer Valid only at participating locations. Customer pays all applicable sales tax. Additional toppings extra
BETTER PIZZA.
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S Better Ingredients. Better Pizza.

$16.95
Family Special
One Large with The Works & One Large Two Toppings
Expires 30 days. Not valid with any other offer Valid only at participating locations. Customer pays all applicable sales tax. Additional toppings extra
BETTER PIZZA.
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S Better Ingredients. Better Pizza.

$6.99
One Large One Topping
Expires 30 days. Not valid with any other offer Valid only at participating locations. Customer pays all applicable sales tax. Additional toppings extra
BETTER PIZZA.
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S Better Ingredients. Better Pizza.

TOPPINGS:
Extra Cheese
Onions
Green Peppers
Jalapeño Peppers
Pepperoni
Sausage
Italian Sausage
Ham
Beef Topping
Bacon
Mushrooms
Anchovies
Black Olives
Banana Peppers (Only available at some locations)
Pineapple (Only available at some locations)

39336

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 65 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Tuesday, December 9, 1997

Time, love and hair loss

Michael Bolton, showing the reverse effects of Rogaine, returns on the schmaltzy All That Matters (See Arts & Living, page 9).

Massachusetts' All-American Girl

Erica Johnston was named an All-American after a stellar campaign for the UMass field hockey team (See Sports, page 12).

WORLD

American jailed on spying accusations

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's intelligence agency dismissed speculation yesterday that charges against an American accused of spying will be reduced.

Richard L. Bliss was questioned yesterday in the southern Russian city where he was detained Nov. 25 after making land surveys, the regional office of the Federal Security Service said.

He was freed from jail on Saturday on his U.S. employer's written guarantee that he would stay in Rostov-on-Don and be available for questioning.

The Federal Security Service, the main successor to the Soviet-era KGB, had indicated over the weekend that the charges might be reduced, according to news reports. But yesterday, agency spokesman Sergei Gorlenko said there were no signs they would be changed any time soon.

"Those who spread such rumors are at best rushing ahead of the events, and, speaking more candidly, they are engaged in wishful thinking," Gorlenko said.

Russia bowed to heavy U.S. pressure to release Bliss, with Vice President Al Gore, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and the U.S. ambassador intervening on his behalf.

NATION

Drugs nation's leading childhood concern

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans overwhelmingly believe drugs are the most serious problem facing children today, with crime and the breakdown of home life trailing behind, a survey finds.

The poll, released yesterday, suggests those who focus on family values are winning the battle for public opinion over those who say it is more important to improve the social condition of children, said the study's director, Robert Blendon, a professor at Harvard University.

"The family values side has really caught on in the American mind," he said. "All the issues that relate to kids in poverty have not caught on in the last decade."

A similar survey conducted 11 years ago also found drugs to be the top concern.

But while the breakdown of home life was a close second in 1986, with 46 percent mentioning it, just 22 percent see it as a serious problem today, according to the survey, which was sponsored by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation and conducted by the Harvard School of Public Health and the University of Maryland.

While 28 percent of Americans were concerned about child and sexual abuse in 1986, fewer than 2 percent of people mentioned it this year.

By contrast, this year's survey showed 24 percent of Americans concerned with crime, which didn't register in 1986.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 40	HIGH: 37	HIGH: 39
LOW: 28	LOW: 25	LOW: 19

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 8
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics .....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Facing the challenge of deferred maintenance

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Editor's Note: This is the second in a two-part series examining the state of facilities on the UMass campus. Yesterday's story focused on the problem of deferred maintenance. Today's story focuses on solutions to that problem.

The University of Massachusetts is beginning to tackle the problem of deferred maintenance.

Under Chancellor David K. Scott, funding for maintenance and repair work has increased significantly. Through his Strategic Action Plan, he allocated $8.5 million for deferred maintenance in the years 1996 to 2001.

This money comes out of the campus' operating budget, so what Scott is doing is taking funding from other areas — mainly payroll — and shifting it to the facilities budget to pay for deferred maintenance.

This shift of campus funds, in addition to money from a state bond bill, has allowed the campus to begin repairing its buildings.

Facilities Planning Director Jim Cahill said that the continued investment in deferred maintenance has allowed the University to initiate a program of classroom renovation.

"There is a definite commitment there with a stable investment of funds," Cahill said.

The renovated classrooms in Machmer Hall, the renovated lecture room in Thompson Hall and the renovated and modernized Mahar Auditorium are the first signs of this investment.

Classroom renovation is scheduled to continue, with 20 percent of all classrooms on campus slated to be refurbished in three years.

However, administrators are concerned that even this increase in funding for deferred maintenance is not enough.

A growing problem

The $8.5 million, in addition to the state funds, will not allow the University to diminish the amount of deferred maintenance on campus, because even as repairs are made, other facilities continue to deteriorate.

"This will only keep us even for the next five years or so," Scott said. "It is a good start, but the problem will escalate and the situation will begin to worsen."

As time goes on, more and more buildings will reach the end of their lifespan and will require repairs to remain functional.

"We are not spending enough to protect the current value of our facilities, so deficiencies continue to grow,"Cahill said. "We know we need to do something there."

In order for the University to make an actual improvement in the amount of deferred maintenance on campus, the funding for repairs must be dramatically increased.

The problem is the enormous scope of deferred maintenance on campus, and the resultant huge sums of money needed to eliminate the deficiencies.

A recent study conducted by the Physical Plant found it would cost at least $393 milllion to fix just what is currently broken on campus. As campus buildings continue to age, millions more will be needed for repairs and replacements in the coming decades.

The challenge for the University is to find sources of funds for deferred maintenance.

THANG "DISCO" VO \ COLLEGIAN

A shot of the recently constructed Conte National Polymer Research Center.

According to administrators, it will not be an easy task.

"The amount of money needed in the next 20 years to improve is so great, it is hard to see what strategy to use at all," Scott said.

Possible funding sources

In order to budget funds for deferred maintence, Scott has dramatically reduced the number of faculty and staff on campus.

Under the early retirement plan, a large percentage of faculty and staff who have left the University have not been replaced.

"It has been done at the expense of reducing faculty and staff in the retirement plan," Scott said. "We've been making funds for investment in infrastructure by not rehiring personnel. It's an attempt to strike a balance between people and the environment."

In the past four years, the University has lost 75 faculty positions alone, upsetting many faculty members and students.

"Clearly, it is worrisome to the campus," Scott said.

Scott does not think this trend of downsizing the faculty and staff in order to fund infrastructure can be continued in the future. And certainly, $393 million can not be carved out of the campus budget.

If the campus is to make serious improvement in deferred maintenance, alternative sources for funding must be found.

"The magnitude of the problem is not one that we can fix out of the operating budget," Scott said. "There will have to be a variety of strategies: internal help, private fundraising and state support."

Appealing for state support

Part of the purpose of the Physical Plant study, Vice Chancellor for Finance and Administration Paul Page said, was to document the extent of the problem, so the University can make a stronger case for state funds.

"[It] lays out in a stark way the magnitude of the problem," Page said. "Can we now make a more persuasive case for funding from the legislature?"

The administration plans to meet with legislators and other state officials in the coming months to impress upon them the severity of the problem. The first such meeting is scheduled for this Friday.

"It is such as huge problem... we need to get an awareness of that at all levels of government," Scott said.

Administrators are hopeful that the legislature may issue an additional bond bill to fund more maintenance and repair work.

"We need to ask the state to do their part and play their role," Cahill said.

However, Cahill said, it is also important for the state to raise its spending cap, so that the University will have an opportunity to actually use all the funds appropriated by the legislature.

Currently, he said, the governor's office has imposed a low spending cap, which keeps the University from using all the funds allocated to it by the legislature.

"The money isn't going to work," Cahill said. "The state needs to adopt a higher spending cap."

Soliciting private donations

Historically, benefactors have been reluctant to give money designated specifically for maintenance and repair work. In general, people prefer to donate funds for new buildings and facilities, rather than for revamping old ones.

This is a mind set the campus will have to work to change, Scott said. People may be more willing to help fix a particular building or section of campus, so that is how the University will approach prospective donators.

"Renovate a particular room or lab for something they are interested in. The restoration of a historic part of campus," Scott

Turn to MAINTENANCE, page 2

From Mr. Electro to Fahrenheit 451; author recounts influences in lecture

By Sarah J. Kimmel
Collegian Staff

Last night, acclaimed science fiction writer Ray Bradbury addressed a full auditorium at the University of Massachusetts' Fine Arts Center. Bradbury has written over five hundred published works, among those are The Martian Chronicles, The Illustrated Man, Something Wicked This Way Comes and Fahrenheit 451.

Born in Waukegan, Illinois, Bradbury began writing at the age of twelve after meeting the sideshow feature, Mr. Electro, when the traveling carnival came to his town. In his lecture, Bradbury spoke of his encounter with this unusual man who allowed himself to be electrocuted. While being electrocuted the man would often touch the tip of his metal sword to the heads of the watching children. He reached his metal wand out so that the tip touched Bradbury's nose and exclaimed, "Live forever." The next day, while returning home from his uncles funeral, Bradbury commanded his father stop the car. He ran down to the carnival to speak to Mr. Electro. He described this as "running from death to life." At the carnival Mr. Electro introduced the young Bradbury to the other carnival workers such as the illustrated man and the bearded lady. The two sat and talked. In this conversation the elder man told Bradbury that the two had met before, in a battle in Paris in 1918, two years before Bradbury was born. Mr. Electro said that Bradbury had died in his arms in France and that the two had the souls of best friends. Bradbury said, "This was the catalyst that helped me on the road (to writing)."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Renowned author Ray Bradbury signs books in the campus center yesterday afternoon.

Bradbury describes this incident as a pivotal point in his life. A few days later he started to write stories and he has not stopped doing so in 65 years.

His discovery of the Buck Rogers' comic strip at age nine, the World's Fair and a friend who built dinosaurs in his basement are also events that Bradbury said, "changed his life forever." That old friend that recreated the dinosaurs is still close to Bradbury. He is film maker Ray Herryhouser. The two, though mocked in their youth, grew famous together, and Bradbury handed Herryhouser an Oscar in 1991. They promised each other that they, "would love dinosaurs forever, and would grow old but never grow up".

In his teens, Bradbury moved to Los Angeles with his family. Though he never formally attended college, the writer describes ten years when he attended the library. From ages 18 to 28, Bradbury spent all of his time in the library. There, in the basement of the University of California at Los Angeles library, he wrote Fahrenheit 451 on a dime typewriter. The machine cost ten cents for a half an hour. Bradbury said, "After $9.80 and nine days, I had finished the book."

Bradbury is not only noted for his novels and short stories. He has also written several screenplays, including his first motion picture, Beast from 20,000 Fathoms, which was filmed by Warner Brothers in 1952 and Moby Dick, which was directed by John Huston in 1953.

After wanting to work with Huston for several years, Bradbury finally had the opportunity with Melville's novel, Moby Dick. Bradbury told the story of how he sent three of his pieces, Dark

Turn to RAY, page 3

Goodell lives through film

Documentary recounts student struggle

By Julie Siegal
Collegian Staff

Students were protesting and chanting, missing classes to brave the cold, winter weather to support their peers and demanding their rights for a more diverse campus be met by the University of Massachusetts administration.

It was the occupation of the Controller's Office in the Goodell building, which lasted from March 3–8 during the spring semester of 1997. And it happened again last night, except this time on film.

Sponsored by the Office of ALANA Affairs, senior communications and theater major, Andree Collins premiered his video last night in the Campus Center auditorium at 7 p.m. The video entitled, "The Living Document," recounted the six-day Goodell takeover for freshmen who were unaware of the situation and other students to look back and relive the experience.

"I was hoping to bring out a few people who didn't know what Goodell was all about," Collins said. "I hoped to send a message and re-motivate people. That was my aim."

Collins said last night's turnout would determine his success, but had nothing to worry about as most of the chairs set up in the auditorium were occupied by students who applauded the documentary from beginning to end.

The idea of making "The Living Document" hit Collins a couple of weeks after the takeover, so he started working on it soon after and presently continues to recall the events in his mind.

"I think about it everyday," Collins said.

The 90-minute video began with a peaceful panoramic view of the campus, followed by a rush of students filing into Goodell, preparing themselves for their almost week- long stay.

The list of demands facing students of color at UMass, including diversification of the undergraduate student population and more financial aid and financial aid services for undergraduate students, were highlighted in the video.

But negotiating with the administrators was not the only thing on the students' minds, as shown in Collins' documentary.

"The students united to prove we are one," said director of the office for ALANA Affairs, Nelson Acosta, before the movie presentation.

And the students did just that, according to the video.

Students interviewed in "The Living Document" said the ongoings inside Goodell were more than what was just shown on local evening newscasts.

Turn to GOODELL, page 3

BRIAN MCDERMOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Andree Collins speaks before the showing of his film "Reliving the Goodell Takeover."

Campus Police Log

Accident—Personal Injury
Dec. 4
UMPD assisted Amherst Police at the scene of a vehicle/pedestrian accident on North Pleasant Street.

Accident—Property Damage
Dec. 1
A past hit and run accident that occurred in parking lot 63 on Stockbridge Road was reported.
Dec. 5
A two vehicle accident occurred on Mullins Way.
Dec. 7
A two vehicle accident occurred on Washington Road. One vehicle left the scene. Amherst Police were notified.

Annoying Behavior
Dec. 5
Glass was thrown from Moore Residence Hall.
An individual reported fire extinguisher spray on his vehicle in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.
Dec. 6
A verbal argument occurred between individuals at Lincoln Apartments.

B&E/Burglary
Dec. 5
A vehicle was broken into in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive. A stereo was stolen.
A resident from Emerson Residence Hall reported that her room was broken into. Keys and ID were stolen.
A room in Gorman Residence Hall was broken into, drawers were ransacked.
Dec. 6
A vehicle was broken into in parking lot 49 on Orchard Hill Drive.
Dec. 7
A two-way radio was stolen from a vehicle parked next to Mahar Auditorium. The radio was recovered in a trash can after investigations.

Disturbance
Dec. 6
UMPD received a report of a fight in progress in John Adams Residence Hall.

Family Offenses, Domestics
Dec. 6
A resident requested an individual be removed from a room in Washington Residence Hall.
Dec. 7
A loud argument occurred on Commonwealth Avenue between two individuals.

Health and Safety Hazard
Dec. 8
Amherst Fire Department extinguished a fire in a bus shelter on North Pleasant Street.

Larceny
Dec. 4
Staff from University Health Services reported a stolen telephone.
A part was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.
Dec. 6
A bicycle was reported stolen from Franklin Dining Common.
A license plate was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.
Dec. 7
A license plate was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.
A bicycle was reported stolen from the Fine Arts Center. Estimated value $120.
License plates were reported stolen from two vehicles in parking lot 33 on University Drive.
A back pack was reported stolen from the Campus Center.
A bicycle was reported stolen from Presidents Drive.

Liquor Law Violations
Dec. 4
Brad C. Crosby, 20, RFD Box #2 780, Arlington, VT, was arrested in Kennedy Residence Hall for disorderly conduct and possession of liquor.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Dec. 8
Darrell C. Stevenson, 20, of 21 Jerome St., Medford, was arrested at Webster Residence Hall for possession of burglarious instruments and three attempts to commit a crime.
Guy J. Demetrius, 19, of 66 Milton Ave., Dorchester, was arrested at Webster Residence Hall for possession of burglarious instruments and three attempts to commit a crime.
Van D. Johnson, 19, of 886 Huntington, Boston was arrested at Webster Residence Hall for possession of burglarious instruments and three attempts to commit a crime.
Erhurogho E. Oruma, 20, of 1 Paseo Boriken, Boston, was arrested at Webster Residence Hall for possession of burglarious instruments and three attempts to commit a crime.

Traffic Stop
Dec. 5
Joshua D. Warnock, 18, of 74 Glendale Rd., Northampton, was arrested on Fearing Street for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license and no inspection sticker.
Dec. 6
Orion J. Palmer, 20, of 3 Plumtree Rd., Sunderland, was arrested on East Pleasant Street for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license, possession of a Class D drug, operating a motor vehicle with a revoked registration.
James E. Beaulac, 20, of 62 Marion St., Fitchburg, was arrested on the Southwest Mall for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol.
Dec. 7
Christian M. Baxter, 21, of 35 Amity Place, Amherst, was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue for operating a motor vehicle with an expired inspection sticker, not having a registration and operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license.

Vandalism
Dec. 4
An individual reported swastikas were written in a McNamara Residence Hall elevator.
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.
Dec. 5
A window was smashed in Grayson Residence Hall.
A vehicle was damaged in the Campus Center Garage.
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.
Dec. 6
Homophobic graffiti was written in an elevator in Washington Residence Hall.
Housing was notified of broken glass in an elevator in Kennedy Residence Hall.
A rock was thrown through a window in Worcester Dining Common.
Dec. 7
Three vehicles had their windshields smashed in parking lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.
A card access reader at Kennedy Residence Hall was damaged.
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.

■ maintenance

continued from page 1

said. "We will have to capture people's imaginations with specialized targets."

Internal strategies

There are other things the campus can do to improve the situation, such as ensuring that funds are spent in the most economical and resourceful manner.

"It's a big problem, but there are things that we can do," Earl Smith, director of the Physical Plant, said. "Take the money we do have and resources we can get and put them where we they need to go."

The campus should also begin planning now for the maintenance of newer buildings, such as the Mullins Center and the Conte National Polymer Research Center, so that history does not repeat itself thirty years down the road.

In the future, when new buildings are put up, trust funds for maintenance should be included in their budgets, so that when things break, they can be fixed in a timely manner.

"We need to establish facilities as a top priority and develop a long-range perspective," Cahill said. "We should be establishing endowments for new buildings, so that the money will be there to make repairs as they are needed."

Conclusions

It will take a combination of state funds, private donations and internal work to combat deferred maintenance on campus.

The size of the problem itself is intimidating, but the consequences of not addressing it are unacceptable.

The campus community and the state need to change their attitudes toward facilities in order for the situation to improve in the coming decades.

"The bottom line is that there needs to be continued adequate investment in facilities," Cahill said. "That hasn't occurred at this University."

Flight transcript released

By Pat Milton
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — In the final moments before TWA Flight 800 blew up, pilots chatted about restless passengers, a wildly fluctuating fuel gauge and how the jet was climbing faster than normal, like a "homesick angel."

At the end, there is an abrupt, tenth-of-a-second noise that trails off into silence, possibly the sound of the center fuel tank exploding.

The 54-page transcript released yesterday during the opening of federal hearings into the July 17, 1996, disaster was described by investigators as routine conversation, revealing nothing unusual leading up to the blast aboard the Paris-bound flight that killed all 230 people aboard.

Having ruled out a bomb or missile, investigators are searching for a mechanical explanation for the explosion in the Boeing 747's center fuel tank. Their goal: to prevent something similar from happening again.

The weeklong hearings are intended to gather facts, and a probable cause will not be determined until late next year. National Transportation Safety Board Chairman James Hall warned victims' relatives attending the hearings that they might want to leave the room before another exhibit — a videotape simulation that chronicled the disaster second by second, picking up where the cockpit voice recorder left off.

It shows the explosion, the nose of the plane shearing off, while the fuselage continues to rise. Suddenly, the plane slows and begins dropping, diving for a long time before bursting into flames and crashing into the Atlantic Ocean off New York's Long Island. On the transcript, a comment from TWA Capt. Ralph Kevorkian, six minutes before the explosion, appeared intriguing and a little eerie.

"Seems like a homesick angel here," Kevorkian said, using pilot lingo to say the plane was climbing faster than normal. "It's bleeding off airspeed," Capt. Steven Snyder responded, implying that the minor increase in speed was not a problem. "Yeah," Snyder said, ending that discussion.

Investigators have said the flight data recorder showed nothing unusual.

Then, two minutes before the explosion, Kevorkian said: "Look at that crazy fuel flow indicator there on No. 4. See that." Alfred Dickinson, the NTSB chief investigator, testified that it is not unusual for the indicator to fluctuate. Investigators cautioned that the transcript can be misleading if parts are taken out of context. Dickinson said the pilot communications seemed routine.

Lawyers allege drug use a factor in Terry Nichols trial

By STEVEN K. PAULSON
Associated Press Writer

DENVER — Terry Nichols' lawyers attacked the credibility of star witness Michael Fortier in the Oklahoma bombing case yesterday, calling to the stand a doctor who testified that a drug Fortier admits abusing causes paranoia and memory blackouts.

"People get hyper... They feel they're being followed. Dr. Michael Abrams said of methamphetamine. "They're open to suggestion to fill in the gaps.

Fortier, who previously testified that Nichols was present when Timothy McVeigh took Fortier to a storage shed containing explosives, has admitted using the illegal drug regularly. Defense lawyers contend that because of his methamphetamine use, his testimony cannot be trusted.

Abrams, a drug expert from the Broadlawns Medical Center in Des Moines, Iowa, testified that sustained use of methamphetamine causes users to become suspicious and to suffer mood swings. He said the drug kills parts of the brain, leaving gaps in their memories similar to alcoholic blackouts. Users can even reach a point where they kill themselves, "or they kill other people, he said.

Prosecutor Patrick Ryan noted that out of an estimated 4 million users nationwide, only 10 percent to 20 percent suffer serious problems.

In his testimony, Fortier said that McVeigh took him to the storage shed outside Kingman, Ariz., prior to the bombing and that Nichols was present, loading something into a truck.

Fortier said McVeigh had told him about his plan to bomb the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building to avenge the 1993 government siege at Waco, Texas.

McVeigh said someone else was in on the plan, but did not say who, according to Fortier. Fortier also testified that McVeigh and Nichols appeared to have disagreements shortly before the April 1995 bombing, which killed 168 people.

In other developments Monday, two witnesses invoked their right not to testify. Jason Hart and Shawn Morris were brought to Denver in custody but said they would take the Fifth Amendment if called to the stand, their lawyers said.

STILL WANT TO GET AN A WORK ENCE START

COME TO A
WELCOME TO FIELD EXPERIENCE SESSION

LEARN HOW TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF INTERNSHIPS AND CO-OPS!

DON'T LEAVE FOR HOME WITHOUT ONE...

THIS IS THE LAST WEEK OF "WELCOME" THIS SEMESTER! SESSIONS WILL START AGAIN NEXT SEMESTER

DECEMBER 9 - 11 @ 3PM
CAMPUS CENTER ROOM 804

UPCOMING CAMPUS CAREER CENTER NETWORK EVENTS:
STRATEGIES FOR SUCCESS
DEC. 10,11,17,18 @3PM CAMPUS CAREER NETWORK
Have you been actively looking for an internship or have you already found an internship and need to know what to do now? Come to a strategies for success meeting. Get important papers for your placement and tips on how to be successful on the job.

Campus Career Network

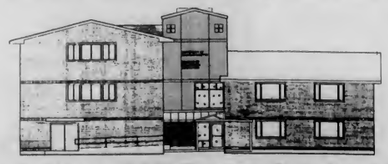
IT AIN'T EASY, BUT IT'S SMART

Winter Session '98

Why Winter Session?
- Catch up so you can graduate on time
- Focus on just one class, one set of homework assignments
- Make up lost credits
- Take a usually overenrolled prerequisite for your major
- Earn three credits in three weeks

Smaller classes mean more individual attention.

Winter Session '98
January 5-26



Pick up a blue course catalog at Continuing Education in Goodell Bldg. or anywhere on campus; in town at stores, restaurants, banks.

Or call 545-0107 and we'll send you one.

Check out the updated course list at www.umass.edu/contined/

Winter Session
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst

The Division of Continuing Education is

moving to 358 N. Pleasant St. in January.

Campus Perspectives

What is the first thing you are going to do after your last final?

Compiled by Sarah J. Kimmel • Photos by Brian McDermott

"I'm going to sleep!"

Christina Versailles
freshman/undecided
Sylvan

"I'm going to drink a Guiness stout.""

Justin Soares
sophomore/wildlif and fisheries
Southwest

"Go home."

Diana Nappo
senior/education
Amherst

"I'm going to go to sleep and hibernate."

Ben Pallle
senior/computer science
Northampton

"Leave."

Brendan Baranek-Olmstead sophomore/civil environmental engineering
Northeast

"I'm going to St. Martin in the Caribbean."

Jennifer Clark
senior/psychology
Amherst

■ goodell

continued from page 1

They retold the ways in which students who occupied the building helped each other out in any and every manner possible. They ate together, talked together and slept together in unity and in reach for a common bond.

"One word comes to my mind – solidarity," said Goodell supporter, Kola Olosunde before the video.

The occupation of Goodell was not a single effort, Olosunde said, because "all races were represented in the three-fold effort."

In his speech before the video, Acosta said without the takeover, students wouldn't be where they are today.

"Progress with the University of Massachusetts has been slow and painful," Acosta said. "But progress has been created by students."

He said that if not for students, certain buildings on campus would not have the names they do today.

"The New Africa House was originally called Mills dormitory," Acosta said. "Students had to take over to get the new name."

He also said the W.E.B. DuBois Library was renamed, due to the efforts of UMass students.

Acosta said without students' rallying efforts, Massachusetts will soon resemble California in that some sectors of affirmative action will be taken away, leaving law schools with no people of color because affirmative action discriminates against them.

The video and presentation last night could not have happened if not for students giving their time and energy, Acosta said.

"This documentary tonight is about sacrifice," he said. "It's not about people of color, ALANA or non-ALANA, young or old, undergraduate or graduate. It's about making UMass better and that's the good thing about Goodell."

Olosunde said the occupation of Goodell marks an important day in the history of UMass because it brought about new understanding and new commitment.

"The occupation was called an ALANA grievance but it was the plight of all students," Olosunde said.

Those who occupied Goodell have succeeded, Olosunde said, but giving up is not to be found in the near future.

"We succeeded, but are we done," Olosunde said. "Let us continue to hold true to "The Living Document."

■ ray

continued from page 1

Carnival, The Martian Chronicles and The illustrated Man, to Huston, and said, "If you like what I write half as much as I love your work, call me." Two years later the two decided to collaborate their talents and make the motion picture, Moby Dick. The only problem was that Bradbury had never read the story of Moby Dick. Huston told the author to read as much as he could and to write something down. That night Bradbury told his wife, "I have to read a book tonight and do a book report tomorrow".

The reason Bradbury was selected to do this screenplay was because Huston believed that Bradbury sounded like Melville. This is because, according to Bradbury, the two authors had the same influences. These are a love for Shakespeare, a love for the Bible and a love for dinosaurs.

"Of things in your life that quite often people tell you to throw overboard, you've got to grow up, you can't pay attention to this anymore, you can't pay attention to that, why not? Why can't you have as many loves as you want to have? Hell, I've got dozens of loves, there's room for all of them," said Bradbury.

Bradbury has just completed The Wonderful Ice Cream Scoop starring Edward James Olmos, a movie that will not be in theaters, but will be placed directly on the shelves of video stores. He is working on the motion picture of his Fahrenheit 451 which will star Mel Gibson and be in theaters next July. His latest book, Driving Blind, is a collection of short stories and is now available by Avon Press.

This program was financed and organized by the Distinguished Visitor's Program, an organization dedicated to educating the UMass community about world affairs.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

TV or not TV

Yeon Choi, an MFA student in computer art and design, polishes televisions for her show in Herter Annex yesterday afternoon.

Check out the Collegian's web page at http://www..umass.edu/rso/colegian

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
YOU Play Hard
Amherst 256-6446

Holly Days
This Sale and Classes End Dec. 12! Now's the time to get gifts for all your friends!
SELECTED GIFTS FOR ARTISTS 20% OFF!
Prismacolor Colored Pencil Sets Reg. $9.99 + up — Starting at $7.99
Strathmore "Kids Story" Drawing Book Reg. $3.49 — Now Only $2.79
Mr. Sketch Scented Marker Sets Reg. $4.99 + up — Starting at $3.99
UStore
University Store at the Lederle Graduate Research Center
Hours: M-F 9 to 5 Sat 11 to 4 (413) 545-2619
We accept AMEX, Discover, MC, Visa, and the UCard
UStore - Where the Pros Shop.

We're worker-owned. We do it all, we do it cheap... 7 days a week.
CollectiveCopies

we cute guys hair too!
Regency Hairstylists 253-9526

LOSE WEIGHT NOW!
Our products are:
- Doctor Recommended
- 100% Natural
- Guaranteed

You will:
- Feel more energy
- Lose up to 30 LBS in 30 days
- Have more willpower

FREE SAMPLES
CALL: (413) 259-1922

Bucci
Voted Best! 1997
HAIRCUTS $10. always
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256 0733
145 main st. northampton 586 0155

SCHOOL SUPPLIES
A terrific selection of magazines, binders, notebooks, pens, pencils, paper clips, printer cartridges, T-shirts, art supplies, calendars, candy, toys, stationary & the best card shop in the Valley!
A·J·Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer
"Conveniently located in the center of Amherst"
45 South Pleasant St • 253-2540
OPEN: Weekdays 5 a.m. to 9 p.m.
Sundays 5 a.m. to 9 p.m.

A Healthy Investment in Your Future

Health Care. Those two words have been the source of much discussion recently. Probably because we as a nation know the importance of investing in a healthy future.

So do millions of patients who choose chiropractic as their preferred source of health care. The chiropractic beliefs in fitness, nutrition, prevention, and natural maintenance make good sense.

Wellness, you see, is the normal state of being.

New York State government agrees. They have recently passed the Insurance Equality bill that mandates insurance coverage for chiropractic care.

For over 75 years, New York Chiropractic College has upheld a tradition of excellence in chiropractic higher education. Our combined traditions, old and new, have built the base from which the chiropractic doctors of the future are created.

Choose New York Chiropractic College. A healthy investment for today and tomorrow.

Visit with the NYCC representative at the Graduate and Professional School Fair on October 29, 10:00AM-3PM, University Career Center.

NEW YORK CHIROPRACTIC COLLEGE
2360 Route 89 Seneca Falls, NY 13148-0800
Phone: 315/568-3040 or 800/234-NYCC (6922)
Fax: 315/568-3087
E-mail: enrolnow@nycc.edu

EDITORIAL / OPINION

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Clean air bad for business

focus on Environment

Harry C. Alford

What does a meeting of world leaders in Kyoto, Japan have to do with your lifestyle or future? The answer is, "One heck of a lot!" The subject will be global climate change and what should be done to control it and protect our environmental future.

The international global climate meeting is the culmination of United Nations–sponsored negotiations that have been taking place since 1995, when 160 nations agreed to review the progress of the 1992 Rio de Janeiro "Framework Convention on Climate Change." To comply with terms of the Rio agreement, the United States and other developed countries undertook efforts to voluntarily reduce emissions of greenhouse gases.

Despite significant progress in a short period of time, some signatories of the Rio agreement viewed voluntary efforts as insufficient and pressed for legally binding measures. A number of participants are seeking to reach an agreement in Kyoto that will bind participating nations to specific goals and timetables for reducing greenhouse gas emissions. The proposal being considered would require deep reductions in carbon dioxide emissions between 2005 and 2010.

Here's the catch. Some developing countries, including China, India, Mexico and Brazil, have insisted that they be exempted from participating in a binding agreement that would require them to cut their greenhouse gas emissions (which are among the highest in the world.)

Unfortunately, most proposals currently on the table exempt these countries from binding commitments and President Clinton has agreed to their exemption. The United States and other developed countries will have to stabilize emissions at 1900 levels by 2008–2012 and reduce them to even lower levels five years thereafter, while the Administration's official position does not require developing nations to participate.

So, here we are offering to cut U.S. energy use by as much as 25 to 30 percent, which would do immense damage to the U.S. economy and severely change Americans' standard of living and lifestyle while exempting developing nations, whose growth in emissions will offset the progress made by our sacrifices. Exempting developing countries would also put U.S. industries at a competitive disadvantage, force companies and jobs overseas and devastate key sectors of the U.S. economy.

All of this and it may not be necessary. Scientists do not have a precise understanding of this issue. Analysis by Electric Power Research Institute, among others, clearly shows that nothing we do in the next 15 to 20 years will have an appreciable impact on 2050. Sufficient time exists to develop technology that will lower overall costs. So what's the hurry?

The hurry will hurt our urban communities and households. The cost of gasoline will rise 40 to 50 cents per gallon. The cost of other energy sources, including electricity and natural gas, will rise 30 to 40 percent. Plant and manufacturing facility expansion will, at best, be put on hold — and at worst, exported to China, India and other nations that will not have to bite this bullet.

Minority-owned businesses striving to prosper and to provide an economic safety net to at-risk communities by employing urban residents will face increased overhead costs and rising costs for goods and services. Layoffs, business closings and urban blight will return. All of these increased costs will offset our great economy and put us on the track toward inflation.

The above scenario will certainly happen if we don't wake up. The President should revisit the strategy and come up with a "win, win, win" solution: a win for the environment, for developed and developing nations, and for minority– owned businesses and urban communities. We must all work together so that we all carry our appropriate weight.

Harry C. Alford is the President and CEO of the National Black Chamber of commerce.

Wallets don't make good friends

I have this friend. He has absolutely no control over his wallet. All day long his brown wallet pushes him around and makes him do things he doesn't want to.

I'm telling you this wallet is just plain evil.

I actually doubt that it's a wallet at all because the thing can't stand to have money in it. The second money goes in, it starts to complaining: "You know, now that you've got a couple of extra dollars, why don't you give Tony and the guys a call and head uptown? What do you think?"

You know how wallets can be. They always get their way.

This friend of mine, he's broke. So it pains me to see him being pushed around like this. Truth be known, he's not all that thrifty and he'll be the first one to admit that to you. But I'm not so sure the wallet hasn't brainwashed him. It seems to be the root of all his problems.

Example: This friend gets ten dollars in a Thanksgiving Day card from his parents. Immediately after putting the money into his wallet, the little piece of leather starts acting up: "Listen, I got a couple of dollars here. Why don't you and me go get ourselves some Antonio's. A couple of slices, maybe. Go ahead, it's on me."

So my friend goes to Antonio's and the wallet buys him the pizza. As he's driving back to campus, he realizes that he doesn't want to park in the yellow lot and walk all the way back to the dorm with the pizza box. So, he parks outside the building.

The next day, as my friend is running around yellow lot puzzled and frightened because he can't find his car, he remembers the pizza and how he parked outside his building. As he lies down on the cold pavement and cries, he knows that his car is resting comfortably at North Amherst Motors, fraternizing with the other cars there.

Now the wallet doesn't even have to speak up. My friend just pulls out all the money he has and gives it to the guy smoking cigarettes behind the plexi-glass window.

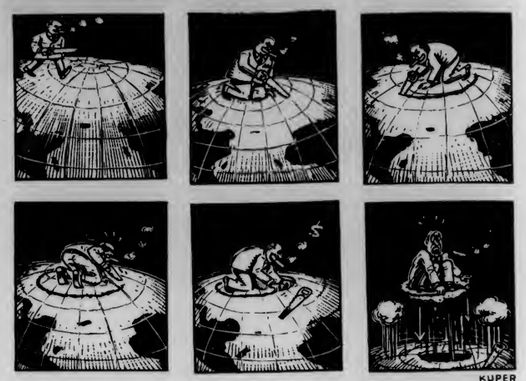
It's a vicious cycle. The wallet causes him to spend money, which causes him to make a poor parking decision, which causes him to spend more money.

The worst case scenario is when the wallet and the credit card team up. The credit card isn't into Antonio's as much as he is a nice sit–down meal — Judie's or Applebee's is more his speed. And to relax after a big meal, he just lies down on the table.

"I suppose you can't really blame these guys for doing what they do. If I were cramped up in a pocket all day long I would probably want to get out in the open and breathe the fresh air."

Bob Trombley

His little brother, Express Check, is always taking notes and learning from his big brother's movements. Right now, he's into the gas and grocery scene, but I can tell he's going to hunt bigger game when he grows up.



I suppose you can't really blame these guys for doing what they do. If I were cramped up in a pocket all day long I would probably want to get out in the open and breathe the fresh air. They must feel like they always have this pressure on them, and I guess they do.

So my message to you is be careful. My friend has crossed the line. His wallet has clearly established who wears the pants in their relationship. Learn from his mistakes. If you have plastic or leather friends, make sure you can control them.

They're wild animals, and if they get out into the open more than they should, they're going to bite you. So keep all this in mind when you go to the mall to do your Christmas shopping and you see everybody waving their animals in the air.

Just because everybody else is getting bit, that doesn't mean you have to.

Bob Trombley is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

UHS has become Christmas Grinch

To the Editor:

The Grinch who stole Christmas is alive and well and works at UMass. Shame, shame, shame. Where does Ms. Melby get off telling the staff and the UMass family (students, etc.) that they can't celebrate the upcoming holiday's with decorations when they are up at the Chancellor's house.

The idea that she doesn't want to offend the different ethnic groups is just a lame excuse. Even the Cooley Dickinson Hospital Emergency Room, which sees a much broader spectrum of the population, has a tree up, and while the other units may not have a tree, they do have decorations which celebrate all people. I'm not aware that we have offended anyone with these decorations, in fact, a majority of the people really enjoy them.

So Ms. Melby, maybe you aught to reexamine your thoughts on the holidays and maybe come up with a different solution that will celebrate people, not isolate them.

Pat Cohen
Florence
R.N. at CDH

To the Editor:

About the UHS holiday decoration banning situation: The whole PC thing has gotten way out of control. As a Jewish person, I am used to Christmas holiday decorations. True, when I was in the first grade, I felt "left out," but as I grew up I realized there's something called reality. The reality is that I am a minority in the United States and therefore, there will be certain holidays most people will celebrate that I do not. I understand most of my friends will be singing carols, decorating trees and yes, putting up bright colored lights and wreaths.

Instead of being a situation that makes me feel "uncomfortable," as Bernadette states, this will be a source of pleasure to me. To know that my friends are feeling good, that they are in festive moods, will make me happy. I have decorated trees with friends and colored Santas with little children. This does not make me less Jewish — this makes me a friend.

Holiday celebration of any kind is a means of bringing community together. Why ruin the positive things in our community because somebody wants to whine about another thing that's "not fair" or "not equal"?

We live in a melting pot of cultures here at UMass (and in this country) and I'm tired of us all having to walk on eggshells because we are constantly afraid someone will cry "inequality!" I'm tired of the people who make up the "rules of equality" on paper but do not really practice them. I believe in equality but I do not believe in a government that tries to create it by control.

I don't need to hide celebrating one of my holidays, in order to be fair. I'd rather celebrate mine and smile when my friends celebrate theirs. We are people, we are different and the sooner we start teaching one another about our differences in a positive way, rather than making up silly rules like "no happiness at UHS allowed," the sooner we will all really start to be "equal."

Following Bernadette's reasoning, maybe I shouldn't get a birthday cake for my little sister. The children in her class who don't celebrate birthdays in July might feel "left out."

Ms. Melby is ostracizing those of us who don't celebrate Christmas more by making those who do resent us. Meanwhile, Ms. Melby never asked us (the minorities) if we minded the Christmas decorations. I definitely never complained.

The staff at UHS does not seem to be hanging up crosses all over the clinics, praising "Jesus Christ our Lord" and requiring patients to perform the threefold benediction before they can receive their prescriptions. Seems like they just want to put up some lights, some tinsel and some sweet joyful cards from people they love. There is nothing exclusionary about that.

Chill out Bernadette and stop being such a Scrooge. If a child at the doctor's office is scared, why not have some decorations up to make him smile?

Jackie Cohen
Northampton

Iran's practices inhumane

To the Editor:

While the Western media portrays the newly elected President of Iran, Mohammad Khatami, as a "liberal reformer," the Islamic regime of Iran continues its act of brutality against Iranian people. In October 1997, three men and three women charged with prostitution and engaging in sexual relations outside of marriage were sentenced to death by stoning in Khazar Abad, near the city of Sari in northern Iran. News of the stoning was reported by Salam, a daily newspaper in Iran and international news agencies including Reuters.

Statistics on death by stoning are obviously difficult to obtain, even though one instance of this barbaric act is indefensible. However, based on information from human rights organizations, thousands of women have been killed by this revolting exercise of violence and suppression since the Islamic regime came to power in Iran. The Iranian government uses religious justification for the flagrant violations of international human rights standards.

Under the Islamic penal code in Iran, any form of association or friendship between the sexes outside marriage is punishable by flogging, imprisonment, forced marriage and stoning to death. For adultery, the penal code accords stoning or flogging depending on whether the accused are married or unmarried. The law stipulates the size of the stone which must be used in stoning to ensure maximum suffering of the accused through a slow and agonizing death. According to the Islamic penal code in Iran, "In the punishment of stoning to death, the stones should not be too large so that the person dies on being hit by one of two of them; they should not be so small either that they could not be defined as stones."

Stoning is particularly cruel and inhumane form of punishment, but it is just one example of gross human rights violations in Iran. The Iranian government has established, and new president Khatami maintains, a legal, social and economic system of gender–apartheid with no evidence of improvement.

In the so–called Western democracies and in the U.S., the silence around the Iranian government's acts of violent repression in the name of religion reflects economic and political interests of the interests of the capitalist world. At best, the brutality against women in Iran is often justified under the guise of cultural relativism and respect for non– Western culture. Human value and dignity knows no border. Inhumane and reactionary traditions, religious or otherwise, must not be tolerated. Stoning must be condemned outright. Only a united and collective protest can end the barbarism of the Islamic regime of Iran.

Mahmood Ketabchi
Amherst

Two Allen works left out

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Adam Levine's article published on Dec. 4. His article was about Woody Allen and his amazing career. I am in agreement with Mr. Levine. Allen is truly one of the best American directors. Levine's acknowledgement of Woody Allen was a welcomed surprise when I read this paper. However, it amazes me that Mr. Levine could summarize Allen's career and leave off Hannah and Her Sisters (1986) and Bullets over Broadway (1994). These are two glaring omissions from his list. It is astonishing that anyone who is a fan of Allen would forget to mention these films when discussing the highlights of his career.

Jeremy Sala
Dickinson

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

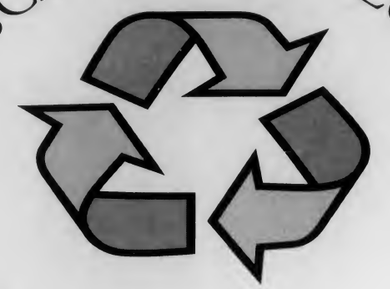
Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian



113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangairkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prentes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

REDUCE REUSE RECYCLE

CAMPUS CENTER:
1ST FLOOR - ROOM 162

Friday, December 12	9 AM - 5 PM
Monday, December 15	9 AM - 5 PM
Tuesday, December 16	9 AM - 5 PM
Wednesday, December 17	9 AM - 5 PM
Thursday, December 18	9 AM - 6 PM
Friday, December 19	9 AM - 6 PM
Saturday, December 20	10 AM - 5 PM

TEXTBOOK ANNEX

Friday, December 12	9 AM - 4 PM
Monday, December 15	9 AM - 4 PM
Tuesday, December 16	9 AM - 4 PM
Wednesday, December 17	9 AM - 4 PM
Thursday, December 18	9 AM - 4 PM
Friday, December 19	9 AM - 4 PM
Monday, December 22	9 AM - 4 PM
Tuesday, December 23	9 AM - 4 PM

HAMPDEN IN SOUTHWEST

Wednesday, December 17	10 AM - 5 PM
Thursday, December 18	10 AM - 6 PM
Friday, December 19	10 AM - 6 PM
Saturday, December 20	10 AM - 4 PM

Textbook Buyback

UNIVERSITY STORE'S Textbook Annex UMASS AMHERST

More loathing in the tents of Zion:
Israel and the Jews

More than a decade ago, Rabbi Irving Greenberg warned, in an essay entitled "Will There be One Jewish People in the Year 2000?" that divisions between different branches of the Jewish faith were leading to a period of unprecedented alienation and, perhaps, an irreparable schism.

Hussein Ibish

Twelve years ago, these warnings were dismissed as exaggerations. During the current period of unbridled loathing however, many are being forced to reconsider.

"The language of argument has turned into the language of deligitimation," says Greenberg. "This is not the language of family members fighting. This is the language of divorce."

Loathe me tender

Because of the nature of the Israeli state, this quarrel goes far beyond questions of theology and denominational identification and assumes a crucial political dimension.

Since the election of Bibi Netanyahu, Israel has been governed by a coalition that relies on ultra-Orthodox religious parties for its majority in the Knesset.

These parties have won the backing of Bibi for a series of new laws which would codify and expand the Orthodox control of the state religious machinery in Israel.

These laws are designed to counteract rulings by the Israeli Supreme Court that might open areas of exclusive Orthodox power to Reform and Conservative participation.

One law, for example, would codify existing practice whereby only conversions to Judaism carried out by Orthodox rabbis would be considered genuine by the Israeli state. Another law would prevent Reform and Conservative rabbis from participating in religious councils.

The sum of the new measures would be to ensure the continued monopoly of Orthodox control over the official Rabbinate of the Israeli state.

The power of the Rabbinate in Israel is such that it determines what one's official ethnicity is, who one may marry, where one may be buried, etc. Traditionally this arrangement has been deployed mainly as a vehicle to enforce a system of apartheid against Palestinians.

But the new laws and atmosphere threaten to extend discrimination into the Jewish community as well. Already women have to ride in the back of buses in Tel Aviv, and a number of streets in Jerusalem are closed to all traffic on the Sabbath, including one of the main roads.

All this is seen as tending towards the creation of an Orthodox theocracy which increasingly draws distinctions between "real" (Orthodox) Jews and others.

Tough loathe

Orthodox leaders refused to accept compromises suggested by a committee set up by Netanyahu. The proposal would have left the Orthodox with final control on all social and religious matters, but would have allowed for some Reform and Conservative participation.

In order to justify their power-grab, many prominent Orthodox rabbis have embarked on a campaign of vitriolic loathing.

Israel's Sephardic Chief Rabbi, Eliayhu Bakshi-Doron, has led the way. In July, Bakshi-Doron made remarks that were widely interpreted as endorsing the murder of Reform Jews. In explaining a Torah story, he described Zimri as "the first Reform Jew." According to the Torah, Zimri was murdered by Pinchas for marrying a non-Jewish woman.

"This is not," the rabbi explained, "a matter of revenge, but this is about the salvation of the people of Israel, as when a doctor operates and cuts... A doctor spills blood, but we accept his behavior because it is done in order to save the life of the patient. This is described in the Torah. It is a fact, it is about extremist behavior, and the Torah praises extremism."

As leaders of the Reform movement pointed out, this is "a deliberate slander of a large segment of world Jewry and an incitement to hatred and violence," and that according to Bakshi-Doron, murder is justified "if its purpose is to save the Jewish people from the plague of Reform."

In October, Bakshi-Doron added that Reform rabbis are "clowns who bring shame to the terms 'rabbi' and 'Judaism'," and that recognizing them would demonstrate contempt for the Torah.

Bakshi-Doron's ally and predecessor as Sephardic Chief Rabbi of Israel, Rabbi Ovidia Yosef, demanded the expulsion of Reform Jews from Israel. In October, he declared that "The Reform... do not belong with the people of Israel." "These people should be cast out, vomited out, so that they will not remain in Israel," Rabbi Yosef said, who is the spiritual leader of the Shas party, an important member of Netanyahu's coalition.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israeli Chief Rabbis

Rabbi Eliyahu Bakshi-Doron, the Sephardic Chief Rabbi of Israel, and his predecessor, Rabbi Ovadia Yosef, spiritual leader of the Shas Party, right.

Harsh words have been backed-up with violent deeds.

The Mevasseret Zion nursery school, which is associated with the Reform movement, was torched by arsonists on August 31. Jewish Agency Chairman Avraham Burg condemned the attack, saying "Yesterday's arson of a kindergarten is today's declaration of civil war and tomorrow's readiness to spill Jewish blood."

Such statements by the leadership of the Jewish Agency, which is the leading international Zionist organization and the group which directed the creation of the State of Israel during the first half of this century, have produced a serious backlash from the Orthodox leadership.

Rabbi Bakshi-Doron called on all political parties to leave the Jewish Agency and found a separate international Zionist organization that would strongly oppose the participation of Reform and Conservative rabbis.

Shas party leader Rabbi Aryeh Deri agreed, saying "We should leave the Jewish Agency and leave it to the Reform people alone, who can stew in their own juice."

There has also been a disturbing series of synagogue vandalisms in Israel recently. On Yom Kippur, a Conservative synagogue's glass door was smashed by a rock and its mezuzah was torn off its doorpost. On Oct. 7, vandals painted swastikas and "Damned Wicked Ones" on the entrance to the Harel Reform synagogue in Jerusalem.

Most shocking, perhaps, are the incidents involving attempts by groups of non-Orthodox Jews to pray in mixed-gender groups at the Western Wall in Jerusalem. During Shavuot, in June, a group of about 100 Reform and Conservative Jewish men and women attempted to hold a service towards the back of the Western Wall Plaza.

The worshipers were spat upon, taunted with cries of "Nazis," and their prayer shawls torn off. The group was then pelted with garbage and human excrement, reportedly thrown from the windows of the adjacent Yeshivat Porat Yosef.

Finally, the group was expelled from the Wall Plaza by the Israeli police.

In August, on the fast of Tisha B'Av, another egalitarian group of mixed-gender worshipers were expelled from the Wall Plaza by the police acting on orders of the Ministry of Religious Affairs.

My money lies over the ocean

Among other problems, this dispute has created something of a crisis for the Israeli state by producing disillusion and loathing in many parts of the American Jewish community that have traditionally been generously Zionist.

The problem is Israel's dependence on the billions it receives each year from the United States government and private Zionist organizations. Alienating large segments of the Jewish population of the United States puts the umbilical cord to those American billions in jeopardy.

Loathing comes primarily because the new laws strike at the very nature of Israel as an ethno-nationalist state. Israel is unique among nation states in as much as it defines itself as dedicated, not to the people who live in it, least of all the millions of Palestinians, but to the "Jewish people of the world" (without specifically defining that set).

The ongoing religious battle has brought to the fore the long-standing tension in the Zionist movement between conceptions of Israel and Jewish identity as principally racial and ethnic, based on presumed ties of consanguinity (a sort of extended tribalism), or principally religious.

It has been the understanding of most Zionists, especially in the United States, that Zionism was based on the ethnic model of Jewish identity. This understanding has been shaken by the recent Orthodox attempt to codify their control of state religious affairs in Israel in a way which denies the legitimacy of Conservative and Reform Judaism.

To add fuel to the fire, The General Union of Orthodox Rabbis of the United States earlier this year issued a statement declaring that Conservative and Reform Judaism are "not Judaism at all" but "different religions altogether."

American Jews, who are overwhelmingly non-Orthodox, are outraged. Bibi's new laws even invoke visions of some day being denied automatic Israeli citizenship. Is this what we have been paying for, they ask. Many are appalled to see the Israeli government moving to secure the exclusive right to determine who is Jewish to Orthodox rabbis who have described them as "apostates" and "infidels."

Rabbi Schorsch, a leading Conservative rabbi, has even called for the elimination of the Rabbinate, which he said was "without a scintilla of moral worth," and the withholding of private aid to Israel.

Jewish Americans are particularly outraged by the notion that conversions conducted by Reform or Conservative rabbis are not legitimate. Since marriage to people who are not from Jewish families is common among Jewish Americans, and often involves a conversion conducted by a Reform or Conservative rabbi, the implications are shocking.

"To many it seems to say: 'you may be Jewish, but your rabbi and synagogue are not," and even worse: "you may be Jewish, but your wife and children are not."

This loathing has expressed itself in the increasing distance between American Zionist groups and the Israeli government on a range of issues. Most dramatically, last week The Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, for the first time in its history, failed to back an Israeli Prime Minister in a dispute with an American President.

Labor Party leader Ehud Barak is trying to use this loathing among Jewish Americans to access those lovely billions for his next campaign. His fundraising trip to the United States focused on his opposition to the new religious laws. Barak met with tycoons such as Edgar Bronfman of Seagrams, Dan Abram of Slim Fast, Morton Mandel of Premier Industrial, and Jack Bendheim. He even met with some backers of the Likud such as Ronald Lauder of Estee Lauder and Laurence Tisch, formerly of CBS-TV.

Holy Cow

Of course, not all Jewish Americans are repelled by the Ultra-Orthodox movement. In fact, the sugar-daddy bankrolling some of the most extreme Zionist settlers in Jerusalem, Hebron and other occupied territories is an American bingo tycoon named Dr. Irving Moskowitz.

"Who is the Prime Minister of Israel?," his followers ask. "Dr. Irving Moskowitz," is the half-joking answer. Moskowitz' latest settlement activity, at Ras al-Amud in East Jerusalem, is a dramatic intervention designed to further bury the peace process. It was strategically placed to cut the largest Palestinian section of Jerusalem in half. Netanyahu was forced to negotiate with Moskowitz and accept a compromise.

Moskowitz' attitude towards the Palestinians is "whether there are Arabs in the way or not, the sacred principles of classic pioneering Zionism must override all else."

Moskowitz' fanatical followers, in groups such as Ateret Cohanim, dream of one day demolishing the Dome of the Rock and the al-Aksa Mosque in preparation for constructing a Jewish Temple on the site.

According to certain traditions, the area would have to be first entered by priests purified with the ashes of a perfectly red heifer which had never been yoked. One group claims to be raising a completely red heifer and discussion about the approved method of its ritual sacrifice and burning are underway.

Moskowitz' funding and encouragement of the "third temple fanatics" has infuriated Israelis who are committed to secularism and consolidation.

"We Israelis seethe with fury when a Jew who never joined us as a soldier or a taxpayer not only pontificates on how to manage our most sensitive affairs, but also actively meddles in them," wrote Amotz Asa-El in the Jeruslem Post.

Another leading consolidationist, Gershom Gorenberg, wrote in Ha'aretz that "Yitzhak Rabin acted like a sober driver who has forgotten that there are also drunk drivers on the road. Netanyahu and, especially, [Jerusalem Mayor Ehud] Olmert are inviting the 'Temple-drunkards' to take hold of the steering wheel, while the citizens of Israel are in the back seat — like little children who have fallen asleep and who are not wearing seat belts."

From the start of the Zionist project, there has been the question of partition in Palestine between Jews and Arabs.

But loathing in Israeli society has come to the point where a columnist for the Jerusalem Report suggested recently that perhaps Palestine would also have to be partitioned into two states: one for the ultra-Orthodox the other for the rest of the Israelis.

Hussein Ibish is a UMass Graduate Student.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Moskowitz in Jerusalem

American millionaire Irving Moskowitz, center, is greeted by right-wing lawmaker Benny Elon, left, and Israeli settlers in the East Jerusalem Palestinian neighborhood of Ras al Amud. Moskowitz has funded settlement activity by Israeli extremists in Palestinian areas of Occupied East Jerusalem.

Asiatic Understanding

Speaking the words of Apostasy from lessons learned in a
Eurocentric haze.
From a whiteness that shined too bright to be denied.
Ignorance prevailed, Ignorance
condoned.
Lost in their rhythm
I fought to find my rhyme,
Of songs sung in Talsouge tongue
A brown skin man reborn.
From Moro lore, the knowledge gained as Resistance and Aggression consumed.
my thoughts, my dreams, my prose.
Reflected those, lost like me.
In Amerikan hordes,
fell my Amerikan dreams.
And for the People of the Sun,
subdued and succumbed,
a child of tribal blood seeks tribal love.
With unity to spew this Apostasy,
my Rage, my words, to comfort me.
And an Asiatic Understanding from the Eurocentric loss.

by: I. Rasul Yusah

Aspiring to the legacy of Goodell

When a lot of us look out the window, we neglect to see beyond the surface. All we see is our reflection in the window panel. We hardly see past the glass to the people on the other side. We are satisfied with only seeing what we have in front of us because we assume this is all we have to see. But everything we have to work with has a history of its own as well as connections that go beyond our un- dynamic mirror. We do not remember that most of the "everyday privileges" we take for granted were won by students from years-ago, like co-ed dormitories, extended library hours, or even being able to be on campus-wide committees.

Lia Wong

One semester ago, while I was campaigning for this position, hundreds of students from all over the Pioneer Valley were taking part in the Goodell Takeover. Together, we stood for Affirmative Action, child care, financial aid for need-based students, academic and support programs for ALANA students and non-ALANA students, among other things. A few of the demands were met while we were in Goodell; a definite 21 out of the original 40 demands were signed by student negotiators and administrators in "The Living Document," an agreement to get us out of Goodell and continue negotiations outside. These continued negotiations were to finalize the 21 demands listed in the signed agreement and to work on the remaining 19 demands. And so, the negotiations did not end when we all came out of the six-day occupation; they have continued for the past semester albeit unsuccessfully.

So, where are we now? Only a handful of those who participated in Goodell are trying to maintain the flame of activism. Consequently, since the take-over, I have seen more than what I would have liked to for the past eight months. There is a lack of respect from the administrators toward the negotiators and the demands themselves. Because of where the negotiations are going, there is a great potential that we will be where we were before Goodell, even though our situation has improved since the 1992 takeover. While the administrators have traditionally blamed student apathy for these concessions not being put into effect, I tend to think that we have worked for the campus and for our own rights. I have witnessed numerous negotiating meetings — as a negotiator — and I have seen the blatant attempt to undermine the efforts of the students by the administrators. Why, just last Thursday, our negotiators were scheduled to meet with the administrators. A week and a half before finals, and the administration stands us up. This is but one example of the "progress" the administration says we are making.

While we thought we would eventually work on the remaining 19 demands, this has not happened. The negotiators have worked with administrators for the past semester on the question of accountability for the first 21 demands.

There is a practiced sentiment expressed to the students by the administrators that they really do not have to take the students seriously. Why? Because they feel that students in general do not care, but we do. Consequently, there are no results. How can there be when they take their responsibility and their constituency —the student body— lightly? We are the administrators' first priority as students of a Land Grant Institution, but this is not reflected in the actions of the administration. The run-around between students and administrators must end.

I have been a witness and participant in this administrative run-around because of my role as President. I have attended numerous meetings where the discussion always ended up revolving around the issue of communication. Therefore, the entire university is well aware of the problem surrounding issues of communication which exists on campus. Even so, it continues as a "favorite" topic in meetings. What is consequently side-tracked are discussions regarding such topics as: What solutions can we come up with to curb our poor communications? Are fundings being used appropriately and in their best capacities? Must children and their student-parents suffer because our child-care system is inadequate?

We must unite now. Let Goodell be the flame that leads our way. It should not be the one thing which we rely on for results. That lies within each of us. A little effort makes and contributes to great changes. Inactivity leads to nowhere. Do not stand by the sidelines as an observer. What you do not voice will never be gained. None of us can assume that someone else will have the foresight that can speak for us. That in itself is presumptuous.

Just think, if someone had taken the initiative to do and fight for what we now need and believe in, we would not need to struggle now. We do not have to struggle and stand up for what should already be ours. That is our fundamental right to strive, flourish, and share knowledge in a warm, diverse, understanding, and supportive environment, one which we could really call UMass Amherst.

I can not hope to represent all the views of the campus as Student President without being spoken to. I can not begin to claim I know all. I do not. I can only achieve that if my colleagues, my fellow students, would speak up and voice their concerns. To think, "well, someone else will do it eventually" is not good enough. To complain after the fact is not "a solution." We have a responsibility to ourselves, as well as to others, to speak up, to stand up for what we believe in, not merely to complain through letters of grievance. And definitely not through letters attacking another student who did something you disagreed with but which you yourself failed to do anything with. The last thing we need is to attack one another and not concentrate on what is more important: the pertinent issues which effect all of us here, now, and the students to come. Stop this internal conflict. Look at the big picture, and of the future of the student body.

Lia Wong is the Student Government Association President.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Multicultural Affairs

Tuesday, December 9, 1997

Did UMass Boston press the point when publishing Asian women porn?

The University of Massachusetts – Boston is scrambling to douse a fire burning relentlessly since three weeks ago. What is threatening to encroach upon major sections of this commuter school gave rise to a Dec. 3 rally convening over 100 people. The multi-racial group of men, women, students, staff, faculty, and community leaders who organized the event demanded the apology and disbandment of two student organizations, Mass Media — the weekly school newspaper — and the student government.

Viraphanh Douangmany

Mobilization jump-started after a 5-inch by 7-inch image of an Asian woman engaged in a sex act occupied the front pages of 4,000 copies of the Nov. 20 issue of Mass Media. It was accompanied by a news article alleging that student senate computers were being used to create a web-site of Asian women pornography.

Shortly after hitting news stands across campus 1,700 copies were recalled while some others were speculated to be stolen and destroyed. Protesters viewed the editorial decision to place the photo on the front page and others like it in consecutive pages as racist and sexist while supporters of Mass Media saw it as harmless freedom of speech.

The precipitous

The first signs of smoke were detected well over a year ago, when a white female senator of the Student Government Association (SGA) complained that senate computers were being used to down load and store scores of Asian women pornography from the internet. The SGA leadership failed to put a stop to this practice despite a clear policy that prohibits individuals from creating personal files. When complaints fell on deaf ears in the administrative level, the same individual then went to Mass Media as a last resort. Mass Media ran the story — along with the pornography — and so issued the flames. Before they knew it, instead of enjoying commendation for the coverage, Mass Media was fielding charges of inappropriate and irresponsible behavior along with the SGA they were condemning.

The story unfolds

To this day, the editors of Mass Media stand behind their decision. To show the explicit picture was, in their view, necessary to elicit a community response. However, according to protesters, while this visual went on the front page with minimal censorship, the story that accompanied it failed to provide sufficient empathy and critical information for and about Asian women. While the editors and authors of the article may have felt good about the story concerning student elected representatives using student government computers to download internet pornography of Asian women, according to Associate Professor Peter Kiang, "the hidden, multi-layered meanings of that controversy went unaddressed in what Mass Media headlined: "Senate Undresses Asian Concerns."

Addressing Asian women's concerns

Asians make up well over half the world's population with China and India at the top. What does it mean when many of our Asian women are dependent upon the sex industry? What does it mean when prostitution runs rampant around American military bases stationed in countries such as Thailand and the Philippines? What does it mean when U.S. imperialism is inextricably tied to weakening those nation's economies to the point that prostitution is the only viable trade? What does it mean that the faces of AIDS victims have been increasingly Asian women? What does it mean when Japanese and European men make up the majority of the sex industry's clientele? What does it mean when Iraqi and North Korean women are suffering from economic sanctions imposed by the United States and its western allies? What does it mean when Asian women are still being bought and sold to be used as domestic laborers and can be imported as mail order brides into this country? What does it mean that a Laotian woman in California faces three times the risk of complications in pregnancy due to a lack of adequate health care in comparison to white women? What does it mean when Asian women are the preferred workers of low paying, temporary, and menial work that offers no health care or other benefits?

Highlighting the need for Asian–American studies

I went down to UMass–Boston with two other Asian– American women on this campus: the SGA president and a close friend. We heard of the rally through the Five College grapevine. We were excited to support people that had the vision and the foresight to turn a negative experience into a rallying cry for social justice.

Tracey Tsugawa was a featured speaker at the Dec. 3 rally. She did her postgraduate work at the Amherst campus before heading down to Boston one year ago to serve as the Executive Director of the Asian–American Resource Workshop (AARW). Although we did not arrive in time for her speech, for those of us who were fortunate enough to be in her Asian–American Studies class in which she co-facilitated with graduate student Lucy Burns, imagining what she did say was not so hard. Ironically, we learned that she was teaching this year's Asian–American Women's class for UMass–Boston which was not provided with new money to hire a full time professor.

A look at our University

Although there is an Institute for Asian–American Studies (IAAS) at UMass–Boston, just like there is a Gaston Institute for Latinos and a Trotter Institute For African–Americans, UMass–Boston can at best offer an Asian–American Studies concentration.

At least it's better than what UMass–Amherst can boast. As far as progress for ethnic studies on the Amherst campus, the University has yet to fulfill the ethnic studies demand arrived inside the Goodell takeover. This semester, Asian–American histories and experiences are absent once again in the curriculum. There is currently no one teaching Asian– American Studies here.

Now, if you think our student senate is any better, think again. We have got members of the Republican Club serving as our representatives who are writing motions to do away with affirmative action and supporting other motions that give away a significant portion of our $90 student activities fee paid each semester to groups such as Zeta Psi to repair their fraternity house and thousands of dollars more to the men's crew team so they can pay for hotel stays while training in sunny Florida. Check out the previous two senate meetings.

Corruption does not fall too far.

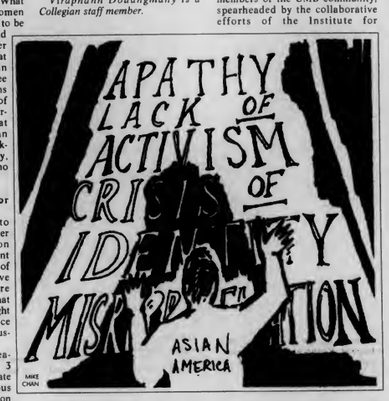
Viraphanh Douangmany is a Collegian staff member.

UMass-Boston:
Exposing a history of objectification

In the past two weeks, the UMass–Boston campus has been stirred up by voices of protest against acts of racism and sexism against Asian women. The Nov. 20 issue of Mass Media, UMass–Boston's student newspaper, ran a cover expose about an archive of pornographic photos of Asian women, downloaded from the internet, existing in a computer file managed by the UMB student senate. Mass Media's coverage has been criticized for its poor use of media's potential for subversion and exposure of acts of violation. The story it ran contained sensationalized headline and explicit photos from the archive while also reporting that the senate had failed to address internal complaints about the photos for a year.

Lucy Mae San Pablo Burns

Soon after the issue came out, members of the UMB community, spearheaded by the collaborative efforts of the Institute for Asian–American Students, Asian Student Center, and Dr. Peter Kiang, began organizing to demand actions against individuals accountable for such acts of violation. Chi Ngo, a senior at UMB, wrote in a public letter to the chancellor that she has never felt as "disturbed or unprotected at UMB until [she] saw the pornographic photos on the first page of the Mass Media." She pointed to the connection between exploitative images and representations to violence against women and Asians. Dr. Peter Kiang saw the recent events in the context of the exclusion of Asian–Americans in the political and educational arenas of this country. He stated that "it is the responsibility of the university to provide a positive learning environment that reflects the diverse students and communities served by UMass–Boston."



One of the things that these recent events reiterates to me is the license taken to continually exploit women and Asians because sexism and racism against Asians are still not clearly named as such. It is not sexist to indulge in images that violate and exploit women and it is not racist to objectify Asians because... where do Asians belong in the black and white racial paradigm in this country anyway? It's only racism when those two colors are involved. These events clearly point to the need to broaden that paradigm and the need for inclusion of marginalized others in the racial dialogue. The details of this event exposes the long history of objectification of Asian women through dominant representations of them as over sexualized, mute servants of any man.

The issues exposed from this do not just concern members of the Asian community, women, nor the UMB community. These are issues we must also deal with here. One of the most marginalized communities on this campus are the students of color. This campus is still denied of Asian–American Studies and other programs focused on ethnic and world studies. While our counterparts on the west coast have been gaining knowledge that prepares them for the issues of the 21st century regarding a diverse America and a shrinking world, we at UMass–Amherst are still left to occupy buildings, stage protests, educate our own institution, which were all done in the west coast over thirty years ago. Invisibility of the history and issues of a community that has been a significant contributor to the rise of this country as a "leader of the world" is cheating the students of a necessary knowledge to dwell in the present and future American and global society.

Thus UMB realized after a collective protest demanding immediate actions not only towards the accountability of Mass Media and individuals of the student senate but also institutional accountability for its exclusive curriculum. To continue building on the efforts of Dr. Peter Kiang to establish Asian–American Studies at UMB, the administration committed to hiring a full time faculty member to teach courses on Asian– American Studies focusing on women's issues. The voices of protest have made it clear to the UMB administration that it cannot continue to ignore the absence of Asian–American Studies. Although UMB offers many more courses on Asian American Studies than UMass–Amherst (that is, UM–Amherst offers a course once a year), it still does not grant a certificate, nor does it have a program nor department, of Asian–American Studies.

Universities in the east coast are waking up to the call responded to on the west coast more than three decades ago. Collective student demands have moved students at the University of Maryland, University of Connecticut at Storrs, and now UMass–Boston closer to being capable of participating fully in the complexities of a diverse America. Students at UMass Amherst must join together, build on the lessons learned from Goodell and others before that, to claim what they need and what is theirs.

Lucy Mae San Pablo Burns is a UMass graduate student.

Looking into the 21st Century:
The need for Asian–American Studies

As the United States moves into the 21st century, it is time for all people to move forward, especially with respect to race relations in this country. However, to do this, we must always remember the past. Change can take place when we learn, explore, analyze, and criticize the history of this nation. Part of this work involves the process of studying the various cultures within this society in order to help each other understand why inter and intra ethnic conflict occurs, why discrimination against minorities is still prevalent, why there is continued violence against people of all races and ethnicities, and why talking about multiculturalism and diversity is not enough.

Nina Ha

There should be a demand for more courses in the curriculum that explore the diverse history, literatures, and cultures of American people. This includes the exploration of the experiences of Asians in America, who have been a part of this landscape for more than 150 years. Yes, that's right, the Filipinos in as early as the 1500s lived along the coast of California. Although there are at least 143,392 (1990 Census data) Asians and Pacific Islanders living in Massachusetts alone, the study of this group has yet to be examined in depth. Does anyone know why Asians from China, Japan, Vietnam, Thailand, the Philippines, Cambodia, India, Pakistan, Laos, and other Asian countries and Pacific Islands came and are still coming to America? Do you know about their lives, their experiences as railroad workers, farm laborers, picture brides, refugees, and immigrants? Do you know how much they have contributed to the economic wealth and superpower of this nation? Isn't it about time you did know? Don't you think that you have a right to know?

Asian–American studies, as a movement, began during the 1960s Civil Rights Era. At this time, the Third World Student Liberation was formed at San Francisco State University to challenge the administration regarding its policy towards people of color on campus. These students demanded that classes be taught by faculty of color about the history, lives, and experiences of ethnically diverse groups in America. In fact, this student protest eventually led to a strike and the shut down of the University. The outcome was a program in ethnic studies, the hiring of a more ethnically diverse faculty, and a reconceptualization of what the institution should be teaching and producing. As Shirley Hune wrote in her article "Opening the American Mind and Body: The Role of Asian–American Studies," in Change (November/December 1989), "Asian–American studies is part of an effort to change education in all its facets, with an emphasis on making it more equitable, inclusive, and open to alternative perspectives."

Over 25 years later, racial politics is a cornerstone of American society. It is marked by bitter divisiveness and controversy that can only be held by acknowledging the past in order to move into the future. With globalization and transnationalism becoming more prevalent in our market economy, ethnic studies does play a powerful role in transitioning America over to the new millennium. Whereas many people still believe that African–American, Asian– American, Chicano, and Women's Studies are only supplemental to U.S. history, I propose that ethnic studies has always been a part of U.S. socio-economic, historical, and cultural discourse. Unfortunately, some universities are still resistant to this reality. Nevertheless, there is a growing need for students and all people, whether or not they are of Asian, Latino, or African descent, to know their diverse history in order to interact in a more global and world wide perspective.

Whereas students on the west coast in universities like San Francisco State University, UCLA, UC Berkeley, UC Santa Barbara, and UC San Diego have had a long tradition of Asian–American Studies, students on the east coast and in the Midwest are currently demanding courses that educate themselves about an unexplored history and literature of people who have, for the most part, been ignored, effaced, or subsumed under other issues. Students east of California are continuously taking actions to assert their right for a curriculum reflecting the diversity of this country. On Monday's Remembering Goodell, we were reminded of the spring 1997 take back of Goodell Building which outlined the need for more courses and programs on ethnic studies. Not too far from here, students of Mount Holyoke also occupied a building late spring to convey loudly to the administration their unmet curriculum needs. Students have a right to know about Japanese internment, Anti–Asian Immigration laws, US military involvement in the Philippines, Korea, and Vietnam and many other concerns as well. This history and knowledge must be passed on to new generations who have not had the chance to study and examine closely how the past still affects their lives today. They have a right not to remain ignorant of how the racial politics of the past influence the politics of the future. Each student must be given a chance to fully examine their location and position in history. We know that for us to participate in such exploration, we must demand for a knowledge base that is broad enough to reflect the diversity of this country.

(Asian Studies is offering an introductory course on Asian American Experience this spring. Asians 201, Monday evenings. This course is the only one at UMass to begin to examine specifically the experiences of Asians in America.)

Nina Ha is a graduate student in the English department.

The fall Goodell negotiations: a summary of give & take results

It's been eight months since the Goodell takeover. As promised in the commitments made by the administrators, the student negotiating team has met with the administrative negotiating team six times this semester. It is difficult to chart the progress of negotiations that are as complex as these, but from the student's point of view, we are presenting some highlights to inform students the overall tenor and trend of the meetings. These are some of the commitments that we have grave concerns and questions about.

Deepika Marya

• In our discussions regarding increasing the percentage of ALANA undergraduate and graduate students on campus: while there is an overall agreement that this is a good idea we do not agree with the administration that the ALANA graduate student population is 15 percent right now. We are stuck on different ways of computing the data which is the main cause of discrepancy at the meetings. We feel negotiations are not about understanding how each side is calculating percentages, but about the invisibility of ALANA graduate students on campus.

• We have had lengthy discussions on the commitment to reduce holds on students records due to outstanding bills. The administration has regularly presented to the student negotiators status reports on this commitment. We are looking forward for a discussion on the process that is being followed to fulfill the commitment. The process has not been spelled out clearly although a lot of discussion has taken place around it. We ask the administration to help us by letting students know the process that will be used to honor the commitment it made in March, 1997.

• Regarding helping individual students resolve financial aid problems: we have not received any definite plan that will be implemented. This commitment is of great significance to many students who run into financial aid difficulties. The promise to resolve some financial aid problems is a huge step for many of us. For the sake of these negotiations, it is important for students to know what financial aid "problems" can be resolved; what the students need to do from their end; how will the financial aid office inform students of opportunities to resolve some of these problems. We still do not know which financial aid problems the university has committed to resolve. We would like, on behalf of students, to be informed on this matter.

• There is an agreement which reads: "sufficient budget for ALANA recruitment needs; continuous review." We have not been told what a sufficient budget is. Who decides? The support programs or someone else? Recruitment is directly related to admissions and for many years ALANA students have felt that not enough effort is made towards ALANA recruitment — undergraduate and graduate. We consider it a responsibility of the university to inform its student body what it intends to do other than simply say that it has made this commitment. We realize the definition of "sufficient" will change as time goes by, but for now, what is sufficient budget? We would like this to be spelled out.

• A commitment has been made to encourage Opportunities for students to study Native–American, Irish, Latin–American and Asian–American cultures. We are aware that some opportunities do exist to pursue academic interests in these areas. However, we would like to be informed what form the "encouragement" would take. We realize it is not possible for the university to start programs in these fields without going through the proper channels (the faculty senate), we would like to know what the administrators had in mind when they made this commitment. It is necessary for this commitment to be spelled out exactly.

• Finally, there is a commitment to increase need–based financial aid through allocations and fund raising. The latter half of the commitment reads: "through FY98 budget requests and five year private support goal of $5 million." A commitment of this nature could have a deep impact on the lives of many students. The student negotiating team is not clear on what the proposed increase is for FY98. More financial aid creates opportunities for more need–based students to come to the university. The negotiating team has not heard anything on this commitment from the administration even though it is in a position to inform students on what to expect in FY98.

The commitments from the university that were made on March 8th, are indeed impressive. It clearly shows a move in the right direction. However, in the past eight months, having sat through several meetings with the administration, the student negotiating team has no clarity on how the commitments are to be put into effect. We have no way of knowing what will be done and when will it be done to ease the concerns of ALANA students on this campus. Without the necessary knowledge, the commitments merely resemble a list of good intentions that did not go anywhere.

Deepika Marya is a UMass graduate student.

Note from the editor:

As I lay out this page, student Andre Collins is preparing his documentary "Reliving the Goodell Takeover." His efforts, as well as those of our fatefool and dedicated student negotiators and countless others who remain nameless, are sacrificing their time and their personal lives to continue the struggle we named Goodell. They are re-shaping a legacy that was left for us by students who graduated either two years ago or ten, students who never graduated, and those whose positions were never justified. Certainly, they know that all along, they have stood on the shoulders of their ancestors with each generation getting closer to their goals, forever implementing progress.

Our struggles will never be in vain.

So concludes a semester of Multicultural Affairs.

Christine Soh

Novel's spirit lost in film version

COURTESY SAM EMERSON

John Cusack portrays magazine writer John Kelso in Midnight In The Garden of Good And Evil.

By Adam Levine
Collegian staff

MIDNIGHT IN THE GARDEN OF GOOD AND EVIL
Directed by Clint Eastwood with John Cusack, Kevin Spacey, Jack Thompson
Playing at Hompshire Six Theater

Throughout the 1980s and on into the early '90s a reporter from The New Yorker magazine, John Berendt, realized that truth can often be far stranger than fiction. He later proved this to the world with the publication of his book "Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil" an engaging exposé which chronicled his unique experiences visiting the southern paradise of Savannah, Georgia.

After being published in 1994, Berendt's book has continuously remained on the New York Times best sellers list and established the city of Savannah as a trendy hot spot for curious tourists. As critical as the book was at exposing the beautifully eccentric true life characters of the city, it nonetheless became positively referred to in Savannah as simply "the book."

Inevitably, the time came to adapt this literary phenomenon into film form, but a question arose: how do you transform a book where nearly every chapter focuses on a specific character or incident? The entire first half of the novel refrains from any linear narrative at all, and only a worthy screenwriter with a tremendous amount of creative freedom could do justice, not only to Berendt's work, but to the city of Savannah as well. John Lee Hancock, whose magnificent script for A Perfect World, which went virtually unnoticed by the public and was panned by the critics, managed to adapt Midnight into a screenplay and presented it to former collaborator Clint Eastwood, who had directed A Perfect World. The end result is a very decent film which appears as charming as the book, but unfortunately much of the essence is lost.

Eastwood uses John Cusack (Say Anything, Gross Point Blank) to represent Berendt himself, but now his last name is Kelso, by having Cusack play a New York journalist who has come to Savannah to write an article for his magazine. The focus of his article is to describe the elaborate Christmas parties hosted by a wealthy antiques dealer named Jim Williams (Kevin Spacey). The film's greatest moments are at these points when a bewildered Cusack walks about the city in complete awe. His eyes appear fixated on the wonders around him, the classic architecture, the beautiful scenery, and the elegant atmosphere, as if to say "I have never seen anything like this in my life."

Eastwood establishes his film's charm by introducing the local inhabitants, a man who walks an empty leash, another gentleman who people believe carries around enough poison to kill the entire city, and delightful drag queen named The Lady Chablis (playing herself) who is more than pleased to spend time with Kelso. As if Kelso wasn't intrigued already, things can only get stranger. He spends an evening at William's mansion, which was formerly owned by songwriting legend Johnny Mercer, and is there introduced to the high class members of Savannah society, including two rather pristine women who share stories of their husband's suicides. Shortly after this unique evening has come to a finale, Williams is charged with the murder of his hunky 20-year-old employee Danny Hansford, a part grossly overacted by up and coming Brit stud Jude Law.

The remainder of Midnight follows the experiences of Kelso who is actually following Williams as they each search for an adequate defense as well as substance for Kelso's book about his time spent in Savannah. Although, the film is enticing, it can't help but lose focus as it struggles to incorporate the other factors of Berendt's book, which do not have the time allotment to properly coincide with the ongoing murder trial. Jack Thompson displays some of the finest talent the film has to offer as Williams lawyer. Thompson's character is the leader of this section of the movie, with comical yet often thought provoking commentary concerning the case. Not only does he keep up with better known actors such as Cusack and Spacey, but surpasses them at times with one of the least pretentious closing argument speeches depicted in the history of Hollywood courtroom dramas.

Eastwood has once again proven himself worthy of breaking free of his stereotypical associations. Midnight is the farthest place he can be from a bad tempered San Francisco cop or the Western gunslinger absent of a name, and he survives in this unfamiliar realm quite nicely. He brings the essence of Savannah to life with his strange cast of eccentric misfits but maintains a grounded level to refrain the film from being far to over the top. A particular scene when Williams and Kelso visit a voodoo priestess at the cemetery at the wake of midnight is so cleverly constructed it puts chills down your spine.

Although Midnight at times leaves you wondering what the purpose of this movie is, as it spreads away in random tangents, again a hopeful attempt at staying loyal to the novel, the film maintains enough intrigue to keep it fresh and altogether interesting. Like many adaptations, if you haven't read the book you may enjoy a bit more of what Midnight has to offer. Still Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil, for no other reason, is a story about one of the most bizarre places on the continental United States, and its story should be told. B

Even though the semester is almost over the Arts & Living desk is looking for people to write for next semester. So call the Collegian and ask for Seema at 545-1861.

UMTG director– show gets back to Tommy's original rockin' roots

By Karen Evans
Collegian correspondent

Friday night the Student Union Ballroom pulsed to the music of Broadway's popular musical, The Who's Tommy.

Brought together by the efforts of the UMass Theater Guild (UMTG) and University Productions and Concerts (UPC), the show was a stunning performance both for its music and its acting.

The musical begins with a very energetic overture, pantomiming the marriage of Captain Walker (Bill Dempsy) and Mrs. Walker (Susan Boyle). Assisted by a fantastic ensemble cast, Captain Walker is whisked away to war on his wedding night, leaving his wife and unborn son to believe that he has been killed.

Years pass and when Walker escapes from the P.O.W. camp he returns home to find that Mrs. Walker has taken a lover (Tim Fisk). A scuffle ensues between the two men, and Walker pulls out a gun, killing the lover.

The tragedy of the play is that ten–year–old Tommy (Michael Levey) witnesses the murder. The boy is so traumatized by this, he goes deaf, dumb, and blind from the shock and fear.

It is when the parents have gone out and left Tommy with the comical, though alcoholic, Uncle Ernie (Jennifer Bean) and the sadistic cousin Kevin (Christopher Cook), that Kevin discovers Tommy's amazing ability. Even though he is blind and deaf, he can play pinball better than any of Kevin's seeing friends.

As Tommy grows older (Rob O'Brien), his mother and father attempt several "miracle cures" which range from a doctor (Tim Fisk) who shoots himself full of drugs, to the Acid Queen (Fatima Elmi) who sings a fantastic song about curing the boy with sex.

When these cures fail, Mr. Walker is approached by Hawker (Jaime Perez) who takes Tommy to Pinball competitions, and act one ends when the two champion pinball players (Evan Hickok and John Okanish) sing the hit song "Pinball Wizard."

Act Two opens with an "underture" and a pantomime of Tommy dreaming that his father has shot him as a young boy. Following this are a few more of the hospital scenes in which Tommy is poked and prodded and abused in various ways by the hospital staff.

What finally ends up being the cure for Tommy's trauma is his mother. Instead of taking her own life, or Tommy's, she points her husband's army revolver at the television, and "smashes the mirror."

The end of the play is a dramatic realization for Tommy, that stardom cannot end his pain, and that the people who follow him don't really understand him at all. Instead, he must face his family and forgive his father.

Tommy started out as concept album by The Who in 1968, and has gone through many changes since it has become a hit musical, even being adapted by the UMTG for this performance.

Director Michael Dziura said in his director's note, "We have tried, in our own small way, to get back to the roots of Tommy: rock n' roll, social commentary, and theatrical experimentation."

There were a few problems with the headset microphones. A few times they got bumped out of place and the volume was lost. There were a few scenes played out downstage that could not be seen by certain sections of the audience, but overall the performance was flawless. The band was superb, and the acting and singing was wonderful.

THE AMHERST DELICATESSEN
MEMBER O.C.M.P.
WE ACCEPT ALL MAJOR CREDIT CARDS.
Can We Build One For You?
Serving Sandwiches, Bagels & Lox, Fresh Soups & Salads, Take Out.
★ DELIVERIES CALL 549-6314 ★
★ OPEN UNTIL 9p.m. ★

FAMOUS FOR 2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
I always get Fish n' Chips at Pete's
PETE'S DRIVE-IN
ROUTE 9 HADLEY, MA YEAR 'ROUND http://www.javanet/~mrburger/

amc
Hompshire 9 •584-7550 Hampshire Mall
Mt. Farms 4 •584-9153 Mt. Farms Mall
Jackal (R) Today at (5:40), 8:30
Starship Troopers (R) Today at (5:40), 8:30
Rainmaker (PG13) Today at (5:00), 8:20
Alien: Resurrection (R) Today at (5:50), 8:40
Bean (PG 13) Today at (5:50), 8:40
Anastasia (G) Today at (5:40), 8:40
Flubber (R) Today at (5:30), 8:30
Midnight In the Garden of Good and Evil (R) Today at (5:10), 8:20
Mortal Combat 2: Annihilation (PG 13) Today at (5:30), 8:30
Boogie Nights (R) Today at (5:10), 8:20

OOPS!
• Free Estimates
• Lifetime Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center (On bus route - one mile from UMass)
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880

THE MOLSON SUN & SNOW FEST! IN CANADA
5 DAY SKI & SNOWBOARD LIFT TICKET
5 NIGHTS LODGING, LUXURY CONDO, FULLY EQUIP.
5 DAYS & NIGHTS OF COLLEGIATE PARTIES, CONTESTS ETC.
Students from over 150 U.S. Colleges
Group Leader & Campus Rep Discounts
Call or E-Mail for a free color brochure
www.skitravel.com
1-800-999-SKI-9
MORE SPACE JUST ADDED FOR WINTERBREAK (JANUARY) & SPRINGBREAK

ATTENTION all DECEMBER GRADUATES
Great jobs.
Great pay.
Great environment.
Get on the fast track with MBNA New England.
As MBNA New England continues to grow, exciting career opportunities are becoming increasingly available at our offices in Belfast and Camden, ME.
Career opportunities are available in:
• Customer Assistance
• Customer Satisfaction
• Marketing Activation
The exceptional work environment you'll find at MBNA New England is complemented by professional, enthusiastic people, an unparalleled compensation and benefits package, and an unlimited opportunity to excel
It's time to consider your future!
MBNA NEW ENGLAND
For full-time positions in Camden and Belfast, ME call David Wyllie at 1-888-437-6262 or 207-338-7205. Or fax your resume to 207-338-7215.
Visit us on the Web at: www.mbnainternational.com
MBNA New England is an Equal Employment Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer
©1997 MBNA America Bank, N.A. CLAD P170997

MINI MALL '97
ONE-STOP SHOPPING EXTRAVAGANZA!
TUESDAY, DEC. 9 THRU THURSDAY, DEC. 11
10AM-5PM
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
This Week!
FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 549-1710

New Bolton album nothing new

COURTESY NAOMI KALTMAN

The newly coiffed Michael Bolton returns with more over– the–top love songs on All That Matters.

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

ALL THAT MATTERS
Michael Bolton
Columbia Records

Those looking for surprises should not look on Michael Bolton's latest, All That Matters. From the first track "Safe Place From The Storm," Bolton relies on his deep–throated and grating vocals to carry him through a CD of mediocre songs.

Bolton, whose career began in a heavy–metal band, turned his career around in the mid 80s as a soft–rock balladeer. With hits like "That's What Love Is All About" and a cover of Otis Reddings' "(Sittin' On) The Dock of the Bay," Bolton made a name for himself.

It wasn't until 1989, with the release of Soul Provider, that Bolton turned himself into a bonafide Top 40 artist. Soul Provider spawned five Top 40 singles, including "How Am I Supposed To Live Without You" (originally written by Bolton for Laura Brannigan) and "How Can We Be Lovers."

All That Matters solidifies Bolton's position as a soul singer, with very little departures from earlier releases.

The album opens with "Safe Place From The Storm," a song co–written with Diane Warren. Bolton is uninspiring and utterly mechanical as he sings. Part of the problem could be the weak and mushy lyrics, exemplified best by the chorus: "Come on out of the rain and into my arms/ run to me, to a love that's safe and warm/ I'll be yours, your safe place from the storm." The other part of the problem is that the song sounds exactly like previous recordings by Bolton.

Bolton teamed up with Babyface for "The Best of Love," a smoother track mixed with elements of R&B. The song is a departure for Bolton's usual ballad style, but at the same time, he whines more than usual on this track and coupled with uninspiring music and bored backing vocals, "The Best of Love" fails to capture the ear.

"Lets Make a Long Story Longer" is a more upbeat selection and probably one of the highlights on the CD. Bolton exudes confidence while singing — probably because this particular song gives him more to work with than the first two tracks did. Also, Bolton does better on songs that have a faster tempo, rather than when he sinks into some of the slower songs.

Diane Warren's "A Heart Can Only Be So Strong" is up next, giving the album its first real strong music and lyrics combination and on this romantic tune, Bolton doesn't whine or try too hard. He even injects some real feeling into the song.

With the strong lead in of the two previous songs, it would be almost too much to hope that Bolton could keep it up for the fifth track, "Fallin'." "Fallin'" returns to the R&B mood that Bolton set at the beginning of the CD with "The Best of Love." Once again, Bolton is bogged down with weak lyrics (the song was written by Tony Rich) beginning with "Angels heard me callin'/Saw the mountain crumble/Fell in love with the wind/ And all the time I spent/Dreamin' of you." The pleading tone of the song is enough to make even the strongest Bolton fan cringe.

The album ends on a positive note — the theme from Disney's Hercules, "Go the Distance." It's probably the fact that the song is a complete departure from any of the other album which makes it a standout. It also shows that Bolton doesn't need to rely on tired love songs to boost up his CD's.

All That Matters is pure Michael Bolton — nothing new, nothing exciting or experimental. In other words, we've heard this before. C

■ gym

continued from page 9

"I was not expecting to do this well in the first meet," Leis said. "I'm glad I could help the team with a strong routine."

The rings team was another strong point for the Minutemen. Their tally was not far behind the pommel horse at a 36.7. Hershey earned a 9.4 and Ben Kendall gained a 9.25.

There were some other outstanding individual performances from the Minutemen. Junior Phil Leiberman picked up a 9.55 on the horizontal bars and Stephen Pryor came up with a 9.7 in that same event.

"Those two routines were brilliant," Johnson said. "Stephen and Phil really displayed a lot of talent during this event. It's really great to see performances like that at this stage of the season."

After picking up this victory, the Minutemen now have a month until their next event in which coach Johnson will be preparing them for the tough winter ahead.

"We don't compete until the 10th of January at West Point," Johnson said. "So we have plenty of time to improve and ready ourselves".

"The season is not won by one meet. Hopefully our skill levels and concentration will continue to improve. The main goal is to stay focused and to continue to get better. This should be a really good year for our program."

Tribe signs Kenny Lofton

By Ken Berger
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — In a stunning turnaround, the Cleveland Indians yesterday signed Kenny Lofton and traded Marquis Grissom and pitcher Jeff Juden to Milwaukee for three pitchers including Ben McDonald. Lofton, Cleveland's career steals leader who played for the Indians from 1992-96, agreed to $24 million, three-year contract with his former team. He will get $7.5 million in each of the next three season, and Cleveland has an option for 2001 at a minimum of $8 million and a maximum of $9 million, depending on his performance. If the option isn't exercised, Cleveland must pay a $1.5 million buy out.

In addition, the Indians agreed to a two-year deal with pitcher Dwight Gooden worth $5,675,000.

Cleveland got Lofton for significantly less than the four-year deal worth about $40 million he rejected last year.

Grissom, acquired with David Justice from Atlanta for Alan Embree and Lofton on March 25, was sent to the Brewers for McDonald and relievers Ron Villone and Mike Fetters, according to baseball sources who spoke on the condition they not be identified. The moves reunited Lofton, a four-time Gold Glove and five-time AL stolen base champion, with the team he led to the World Series in 1995.

Cleveland traded Lofton, 30, late in spring training because they were afraid he would sign with another team after the 1997 season. The speedy leadoff hitter had an injury-plagued, sub-par year with Braves, hitting .333 with only 27 steals.

Grissom and Justice led the Indians to the World Series for the second time in three years, taking leadership roles on a club whose personality made a complete reversal from the volatile days dominated by Albert Belle.

The unlikely reunion of Lofton and the Indians effectively reduces the blockbuster Cleveland-Atlanta trade to this: The Indians gave up Embree for Justice, and got three pitchers on top of that. The Braves have no regrets because the deal allowed them to clear money to sign the best starting rotation in baseball to long-term contracts.

McDonald, a 6-foot-7 power pitcher known for a big-breaking curveball, was 8-7 with a 4.06 ERA for the Brewers last season, but made only 21 starts because of shoulder injuries.

Fetters was set to be Milwaukee's closer, but pulled a hamstring in spring training and lost the job to veteran Doug Jones. Fetters was 1-5 with a 3.45 ERA and six saves.

Villone gives the Indians another quality left-hander in the bullpen to complement Paul Assenmacher and Tom Martin, acquired the recent trade for Matt Williams. Villone was 1-0 with a 3.42 ERA, striking out 40 in 52 2-3 innings.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Turnaround?

The hockey team hopes to end it's losing ways this weekend when they face Princeton and Dartmouth.

JAPAN! JAPAN!
AEON, one of the largest English conversation schools in Japan, currently seeks enthusiastic professionals to teach English in one of our 230 branch schools located throughout Japan. Recruitment will be conducted beginning of February in Boston. BA/BS degree required. ESL teaching preferred. These positions are salaried and offer benefits and housing assistance. For consideration, please send resume and one-page essay stating why you want to live and work in Japan by January 9th to:
AEON Intercultural Corporation
203 N. LaSalle, Suite 2100
Chicago, IL 60601 (EOE)
AEON

push
Push your limits, and help students push theirs.
Our application deadline is quickly approaching.
Applications must be complete (including transcripts and recommendations) and postmarked by January 15, 1998, to meet our next deadline.
TEACHFORAMERICA
Take two years to teach in America's most under-resourced urban and rural public schools.
No previous education coursework required. Positions are full-time and paid.
1-800-TFA-1230 • www.teachforamerica.org
Also, find more information in your campus career services office.

JOBS IN THE GLOBAL MARKET . . . . .
Being Asian Bilingual is Your Ticket to Success.
Interview with the world's top companies at the Pan-Asian Job Fair.
Past Participants have included: Adobe Systems, Exxon, Fidelity Investments, Johnson & Johnson, Procter & Gamble, and more!
January 30, 1998
Sheraton Boston Hotel
39 Dalton Street, Boston, MA
To register or get more information, contact:
International Career Information, Inc.
Phone: 1-800-859-8535
http://www.ricl.com/acw • e-mail: jfinfo@ricl.com
PAN ASIAN JOB FAIR
China • Hong Kong • India • Indonesia • Japan • Korea
Malaysia • Philippines • Singapore • Taiwan • Thailand • Vietnam

EARN $2,000 - $3,000 over break
$7.50 - $8.00 / hour
Work Local to Your Home
Mornings, Evenings, and Weekends
Taking Inventory
Paid Training
Advancement Potential
Call our Jobline 24 hours a day
1-888-242-RGIS
Equal Opportunity Employer
Interview with RGIS Inventory Specialists on the Campus Center Concourse
December 10th, & 11th
9:00am to 3:30pm

Holly Days
This Sale and Classes End Dec. 12! Now's the time to get gifts for all your friends!
Selected GIFTS for ARTISTS 20% OFF!
Prismacolor Colored Pencil Sets Reg. $9.99 + up — Starting at $7.99
Strathmore "Kids Story" Drawing Book Reg. $3.49 — Now Only $2.79
Mr. Sketch Scented Marker Sets Reg. $4.99 + up — Starting at $3.99
Ustore We accept AMEX, Discover, MC, Visa, and the UCard!
Ustore - Where the Pros Shop.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

SORORITY RUSH
Feb. 5th- 9th
Registration:
12/8 - 12/12
in the Campus Center Concourse
Come see what we're about
For more info call Lisa @ 549-8025

TALKING ACROSS DIFFERENCES: EXPLORING COMMON GROUND & CONFLICT (2 Credits, Spring Semester) Your experience is needed! Participate in a 10 week Intergroup Dialogue course. Sections offered: 1) WHITE WOMEN & WOMEN OF COLOR, 2) PEOPLE OF COLOR & WHITE PEOPLE, 3) PEOPLE OF LATINO HERITAGE & PEOPLE OF AFRICAN HERITAGE. Issues discussed: Race relations on college campuses, Race & culture, Interracial dating, Affirmative Action, Immigration etc. Enroll now at the Residential Academic Program Office, 5th floor- JQA or 159 Hills South.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over Lease Feb 1st 2 bedroom apartment at The Boulders $725, heat/hot water included. On bus line. 256-1415.

2 bedroom apartment- The Boulders. $895. Free heat. Call Jesse 259-9188

1 bedroom apartment available 1/98. Close to campus. Mark 549-5326

2 bedroom- Mill Hollow $540 Jan 1. Call Tracy 549-3759

APARTMENT FOR RENT

One bedroom apartments available Jan-Feb 1st. Please contact the Brandywine Office at 549-0600.

1 bedroom at Puffton Village $545. Includes heat. Available 1/1/98. Please call 549-9221

Take Over My Lease One bedroom apartment. $500/month inclusive. Call Tariq Odeh 665-5599

AUTO FOR SALE

82 Honda Civic $250. Reliable, runs fine, but needs new clutch. 253-6585

Geo Prizm 1990 155,000. Very reliable. Well maintained (records). Blue Book says $2900. Asking $2000. 256-1845.

1990 Pontiac Sunbird High mileage, es is $800. B/O. Leah 665-1276

89 Nissan 240SX Excellent condition. All extras. New: muffler, clutch, tires, brakes. $4400 or B/O. 549-8926

Wented: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

CHILDCARE

Occasional childcare needed for 14 year old boy for evenings and overnight when both parents are working. Need someone willing to commit for Spring Semester. Call Fred or Calila 548-9057

COMPUTERS

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Drivers Wanted Spring Semester. No classes before 10am. Must be herd working and have reliable transportation. $10/hour. 6-8 hrs/week. Contact Ryan or Lyle at The Collegien 545-3600 or come to the Campus Center Basement.

Day Care Lunch Cook & Shopper, 17 hrs per week, $7 per hour. Classroom Subs. Variable Schedules, $6.25 per hour. Route 63, Leverett. Call Susen 548-9674

YOU WANT CASH MONEY??! Do you know how to drink warm soda and eat a pound of lima beans??! Be a part of the new comedy tape "AMERICA'S GREATEST BLOOPERS & FARTS." Send your best burps and farts on tape (audio, video, micro) to us. CASH paid if you make the cut! Meniac Marketing, 357 Cherokee St. Marietta, GA 30060. Need more info? Call the GAS LINE (770)590-5233

New Students Program Summer Positions
Seeking active extraverts with 2.5+ GPA. May 27 to July 18, 1998. Salary plus, room, board & health coverage. Applications at Admissions Center.

Apply now to be a Tour Guide, Summer Counselor, Student Admissions Representative. Applications available on the concourse.

Aerobics Instructor
January and Second Semester. Some mornings. Hampshire Fitness Club. 256-6446

Part-time change over crew and post-event cleaners needed at the Mullins Center. Must be available nights and weekends and willing to work. Apply in person. Mullins Center 2nd floor. 8:30-5:30pm.

EMPLOYMENT

Janiter Tuesday and Thursday mornings beginning Jen. Hampshire Fitness Club. $7/hr plus membership. Call 256-6446

Earn $75- $100
Untrained males needed for exc. sci. study over winter session. Call Steve.

WINTER BREAK JOBS- Abt Associates has openings available over Winter Break For a few reliable people with good communication and computer skills who are available to work a minimum of 20 hours per week, including 1 weekend shift, evenings and weekend assignments are currently available. We offer flexible scheduling options, access to health and dental plans and paid training, the starting wage is $ 5.75/ Hr. with regular merrit increases. Free transportation from PVTA busline is provided. For more info or to arrenge an interview call 413-587-1807. An equal Opportunity employer.

January Jobs Use your winter break to make money. 2-4 week fun promotions around country. Great for the resume. Outgoing and independent people call (800)783-4237 Attn: Joe. Collegiate Advantage

Summer Management Opportunities
Open across Mass for the Summer of 1998. Earn $500- $800 per week. For more info please call College Pro Painters at (888)277-7862

Attention Slackers!!
Use e-mail? Know others who do? Little effort = Big money! Call (800)546-0744

FOR SALE

CP Conga Drum $90. 16" Zildjian Thin Crash $80. Pearl Cymbal Stand $30. Excellant condition. Melissa 665-7353

FOR SALE

For Sale- Two pairs of skis K2 and Salomom. Almost brand new. $200 each or B/O. Call 546-6152

Willpewer In A Bottle
Lose Weight
Doctor Recommended
100% Natural
Moneyback Guarantee
(413)259-1922

HOUSE FOR RENT

4 BED HOUSE Good location, Northampton. For Jan. $925 plus utilities. Skibiski Realtors 584-3428

JEWELRY

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324

LOST & FOUND

lost- Black Frash Water Pearl Bracelet Lost Friday 12/5. Call 253-8967

MISCELLANEOUS

WINTER HEAT TIPS! Don't turn your thermostat below 60 during winter break or you risk broken water pipes for which you are responsible (not the landlord). This is an expense you do not want. If you are going away for only a few days ask your landlord to check the house. If you have questions or want more information call Commuter Services at 545-0865 or come to 428 Student Union.

MUSICIANS

Marshall Speaker For Sale 4x12 Cab. LOUD! Great condition. MUST SELL! $500 or best offer. Call Mike at 546-0955

ROOM FOR RENT

Quiet room, downtewn Amherst Availeble end of December. Lease. 253-4236. 9am-9pm.

Room available in Main St apartment. Parking and heat included. Call Paul or Miki 253-1450

Bedroom Availeble Two bedroom apt $216/month. On bus route. Call 665-4894 Ask for Scott.

Looking fer male to share large room in 3 bedroom apartment. Great location uptown. $250/month. Ask for Fitz 253-9359

Large bedroom in renovated 3 bedroom Puffton apartment. Availeble Jan 1. $375/month. 549-8857

1 room in 2 bedroom apartment. Availeble Jan. End. Call 549-8082 ASAP.

UPTOWN
Room for rent in house for 1 or 2 persons
$210/month. Available 12/22
549-9275

Room in house in South Amherst. $375/month ALL INCLUDED. Next to bus line. Start 1/1/98. Call 253-9482

Bedroom Available Jan 1 $342.50/month. Includes heat/hot water. Contact Kelly 253-1899

I'm graduating! One bedroom available in three bedroom apartment in Puffton Village. Paid thru Feb 1. Move in Jan 1. $230/month. Heat included Call 549-6729 Brian

Furnished room available in a 4 bedroom Amherst house. $300/month. Near bus route. For more details call Tina 253-6428

ROOM FOR RENT

One bedroom perfect for two in two bedroom apartment in Sunderland. Mindy 665-1276

Cheap rooms for Wintersession Live close to campus. Only $150. Includes heat/hot water. Call Jason 549-0958

ROOMMATE WANTED

Bedroom available in Sugarloaf. $333 monthly. Call 665-3558

Prefer female non-smoker to share house in Belchertown. Call 323-9268

Apartmentmate Wanted: $220 plus 1/2 electricity. Right on bus line. Female, non-smoker. Call 253-4982. Available Jan 1, 1998.

Looking fer 1 person to share large room in two bedroom apt. Starts Jan 1. Call Brad or Mike 549-3992

Female roommate/s wanted to share a 2 bedroom- Boulders Apts. Amherst. On bus line. Available Jan 1st or sooner. 259-2995

Reammate Wanted Jan 1 Behind Victory Market. 4 bedrooms, W/D. $300+ 549-9130

To share two bedroom apartment in Brandywine. Rent starting Jan 1. Call Tara 549-4390

Roommate Wanted- 8 bedroom house, Amherst. $210/month. Own room (spacious), wood heated, pool table. Call 549-7177

One bedroom available in two bedroom apartment. Walk to Uptown and UMass. On bus line. $270/month plus utilities. Call 253-4613. Available 1/98.

Very quiet roommate wanted in Amherst on bus line. $260/month plus 1/3 utilities 256-5402, 253-9457

SERVICES

Knew Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Looking for a place to live? Seeking a new roommate? Offering a Winter Session sublet? Commuter Services & Housing Resource Center can help you! Call 545-2145 to place your listing or stop by 428 Student Union Building, M-F, 10am-5pm.

DECORATOR SERVICE
Beautify your home- wallpaper, painting, staining. Expert work- 20 years exp. Free estimates. Call (413)533-6213 South Hadley

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SPRING BREAK TRAVEL
Spring Break
Ask about our legendary Free Party Packages
★Jamaica
★Cancun
The best Meal Plan in the business!
★Daytona ★Panama City
CALL FOR FREE INFO PACK
Sun Splash Tours
1-800-426-7710

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exception is your birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, sell roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation a subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUNCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELERY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND
(5 DAYS FREE)
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR RENT
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP.
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, DEC. 9

Auditions — UMass Theater department is holding auditions for "Coyote Gets Sober" from 7–10 p.m. A co– production of New WORLD Theater and the Josephine White Eagle Cultural Center and will be performed Feb. 7 and 8, at 8 p.m. in Hampden Theater. For more information, call New WORLD Theater at 545–1972.

Book signing — Current scholarships in Women's Studies at the Five Colleges. Come meet the authors from the 5 college area at a book signing reception at 7:30 p.m. In the Dickinson House Living Room, Mount Holyoke College. For more information, call 538–2022.

Meeting — The Index, UMass yearbook, will hold its general meeting at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Union, room 304. All are invited. For more information, contact Jill Aordkian at 545–0848.

Meeting — Amnesty International last meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 801. For more information, call 545–1975.

Party — Holiday party sponsored by Alpha Chi Omega from 7–8:30 p.m. at 38 Nutting Ave. For rides call Laurie or Danika at 549–8459.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 10

Blood Drive — American Red Cross, Hampshire County chapter blood drive from 10:30 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 165.

Entertainment — Not Ready For Bedtime Players will perform at 8 p.m. in the Pierpont Lounge.

Film — Italian club film night at 6:30 p.m. in classroom 2 of the Foreign Language Resource Center in the basement of Herter Hall Annex. "Caro Diario" will be shown in Italian with English subtitles.

THURSDAY, DEC. 11

Lecture — Christian McEwen presents a lecture on "A Celebration of Tomboys" at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803 as part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series and is co–sponsored by Food for Thought Books, The Stonewall Center, GLB GSO, Women's Studies and the Chancellor's Task Force on GLBT Matters. For more information, please contact the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Slide–lecture — Kim Tripp, director of the Smith College Botanic Garden, will describe a recent plant–collecting trip during a slide–lecture, titled "A China Expedition" at 4:30 p.m. in the Neilson Library Browsing Room at Smith College.

NOTICES

Applications — The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team is accepting applications for its training this January 12–16. Applications are available for any UMass student at 222 Hampshire House, Legal Studies. For more information, contact Leahat 545–5882.

Art Exhibition — An exhibition of more than 50 one–of–a–kind artist books and scrolls by William Schade will be on view from Nov. 11 through Jan. 25 at the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum. Museum hours are Tues. – Fri., 11 a.m.–5 p.m. and Sat. and Sun., 1–5 p.m. and is closed on academic holidays from Wed., Nov. 26 through Mon., Dec. 1 and from Tuesday, Dec. 16 through Mon., Jan. 6. For more information, call 538–2245 or fax 538–2144.

Art Exhibition — Works by thirteen members of the Williams College art faculty will be featured in "Artist/Teacher: Group Faculty Exhibition," opening Dec. 6 at the Williams College Museum of Art, and continuing through March 1. Museum hours are Tues.–Sat. 10a.m.–5 p.m. and Sun. 1–5 p.m.

Club — The UMass Amateur Radio Club Station W1PUO is returning and looking for people to join in Ham radio. Anyone interested in radio/electronics and adesire to learn and communicate are welcome. The club will sponsor FCC approved volunteer examination sessions for all license levels. For more information, contact Richard Strycharz N1MFT at 549–6000 ext. 6000 or leave a message at facility services.

Exhibit — Oscuds and Works of Sculpture at the Durfee Conservatory opening Dec. 5 from noon–6p.m. and continuing through Dec. 10. conservatory hours are Mon–Fri. 8:30a.m.–4:30 p.m. Sponsored by the Amherst Orchid Society and Sculpture Department of UMass.

Internships — Environmental and Hunger Internships available for credit. Opportunities include helping to organize a Five College Earth Day, protecting Endangered Species and organizing the Spring Hunger Clean–up. For more information, call Robyn at 545–0199.

Notice — Spectrum Magazine is taking submission for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office at 545–2240 or come by in the Student Union, room 406E.

Notice — The UMass Arts Council's next deadline for Single Project/Event grants is on Wednesday, Feb. 4 at 5 p.m. for art events occurring after Feb. 24. Guidelines for application forms are available at the Campus Activities Office, 416 Student Union or at the Arts Council officer, Hasbrouck 101–103 or on computer disk at PC Software Support, Lederle low rise, room A118. Please call the Arts Council at 545–0202 for help with applying for a grant or to discuss your ideas.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
GET YOUR'S TODAY!
(It's free)

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 International
15 UMass Academic TV
17 HSCN Programming
19 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN SI
25 Headline News
26 UCTV
27 TBS
28 BET
29 TV Land
30 Univision
31 Comedy Central
32 Cartoon
33 Much Music

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 9, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		John Tesh: The Avalon Concert (In Stereo)					John Tesh Live at Red Rocks (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	JAG "Deliverance" (In Stereo)		Michael Hayes (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)	News		Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Deliverance" (In Stereo)		Michael Hayes (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)	News		Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Grace Under	Soul Man	Home Imp.		NYPD Blue "Lost Israel" (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 2)	News		Nightline
WLVI	6	Full House	Boy-World	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★½ "My Blue Heaven" (1990, Comedy) Steve Martin.					News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Med Abo. You	Just Shoot Me	Frasier		Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Cheers	Med Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Moesha (R)	Clueless	Malcolm-Eddie	In the House		News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Herd Copy	Med Abo. You	Just Shoot Me	Frasier		Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	★½ "Son-in-Law" (1993, Comedy) Pauly Shore. (In Stereo)					News		Simpsons
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Med Abo. You	Just Shoot Me	Frasier		Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WGBY	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Italian Americans (In Stereo)					Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	28	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Grace Under	Soul Man	Home Imp.		NYPD Blue "Lost Israel" (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 2)	News		Nightline
WSBK	38	Med Abo. You	Med Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	Moesha (R)	Clueless	Malcolm-Eddie	In the House	News	M*A*S*H		Real TV
WTBS	29	Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	★★★ "Octopussy" (1983, Adventure) Roger Moore. Maud Adams.					★★★½ "Moonraker" (1979)
A&E	41	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "The Blue Wall"		Biography: Stanley-Livingstone		Story of Magic "Mystery in America"				Law & Order "Indifference"
CNN	23	World View		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	39	Comic Cabana	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Aspen Comedy Festival II (R)		Sinbad: Brain Damaged (R)		Vire Yenery	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	42	Wings "Fly Navy" (R)		Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery: Desert		New Detectives		Code Red: Submarine Rescue		Justice Files	"Young Guns" (R)
ESPN	43	Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball	Fresno State at Temple. (Live)				College Basketball Arkansas at Louisville. (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE	45	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo) (R)		?A Different Kind of Christmas" (1996, Drama) Shelley Long.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	46	MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life "Pressure"		Daria (R)	Beavis-Butt.	MTV Live (R) (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Loveline (R) (In Stereo)
NICK	47	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Love Lucy	M.T. Moore	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI	48	Twilight Zone	Screem2	Time Trax "Revenge" (R)		Seaquest DSV (In Stereo)		★★ "Crash and Burn" (1990, Science Fiction) Fred Ganus.				Time Trax "Revenge" (R)
TLC	24	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Sideshow (R)					Rituals of the World (R)	Sideshow (R)
TNT	49	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		NBA Basketball: New York Knicks at Chicago Bulls. (In Stereo Live)					Inside-NBA	★★ "Above the Rim" (1994)
USA	50	Baywatch (R)		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		Boxing. Herol Graham vs. Vinny Pazienza. (In Stereo)				Silk Stalkings "Fraudian Slip"
HBO	51	(5:45) ★½ "Pandemon" (1995) Kevin Costner.		Arrested. First		★★★ "Star Trek: First Contact" (1996) Patrick Stewart. PG-13				Dragnime (In Stereo)		★★★ "She's the One" (1996) R
MAX	52	★★½ "Real Genius" (1985, Comedy) Val Kilmer. PG				★★★ "That Thing You Do!" (1996) Tom Everett Scott. PG				★½ "Relentless IV: Ashes to Ashes" (1994) R		Inside Out (R)
SHOW	53	"Soul Survivors" (1995, Comedy-Drama) Ian McShane. PG-13				★★ "Changing Habits" (1997) Moira Kelly.			★★½ "The Mirror Has Two Faces" (1996) Barbra Streisand.				Women

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You may be fighting against a sudden onset of fatigue today. You can get things done, but you're going to have to pace yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Like your Sagittarius neighbor, you may find your energy waxing and waning in an inconsistent fashion throughout the day.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20.–Feb. 18) — You may have to bend the truth slightly today in order to ensure the success of e new plan. Take care that you don't stoop to falsehood.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Your perceptions can benefit others today, so you must be willing to share your thoughts and feelings freely whenever possible.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — It shouldn't take you long to get started today — and if it does, you know that there is something wrong with the way you've laid your plans.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Do not allow a minor error to develop into e major crisis today. As soon as you spot the mistake, take steps to correct it; don't delay.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You have waited long enough to put the last piece of a puzzle into place. Do so today, and you'll find that taking the next few steps is quite easy.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You are eager to get to the more creative part of a project. You have planned thoroughly, and now it's time to have a little fun!

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You may find yourself immersed in some kind of administrative work today. Take care that you don't leave something until the last minute!

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You may have the chance to make a new friend or two before the day is out — all in the process of getting some routine work done ahead of schedule.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You feel as though fortune is smiling upon you today. Do not take chances at this time; follow your own rules carefully for best results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Stick to the plan today and you'll come out on top. The moment you try to improvise, you may be risking some of your success.

Quote of the Day

"Curiouser and Curiouser"

–Alice (in Wonderland)

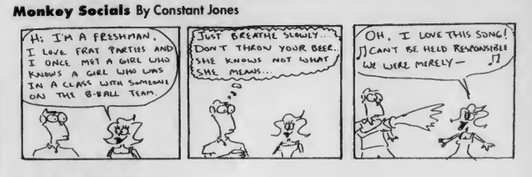
Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

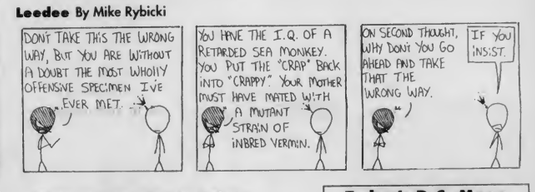
Dilbert By Scott Adams

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley



Kampus Kids By Adam Soulire

Non Sequitur By Wiley



Monkey Socials By Constant Jones

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

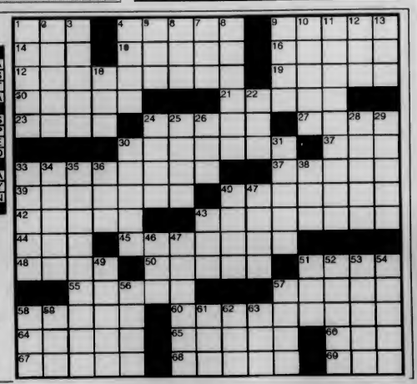
Franklin
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Kielbasa Grinder
Chicken Burrito
Mad Piece of Alicia
DINNER
Pineapple Ham Steak
(Chicken) Breasts with Rice Stuffing
Eggplant Cutlet
Grilled Cheese Sandwich

Worcester
LUNCH
Stir Fry Pasta and Vaegetable
Ziti/ Tomato Sauce
Chicken Burrito
Bean Burrito
DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Chicken Parmesan
Harvest Burger
Pastabilities

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Chicken Burrito
Saucy Slice of Steph
DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Chicken Breasts with Rice Stuffing
Krunchy Kurty Bird
Lisa Lisa and Strawberry Jam

Berkshire
LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Doubleplusgood Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Chicken Burrito
Bean Burrito
DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Hot & Spicy Chicken Wings
Harvest Burger
Pastabilities

Daily Staff
Night Editor — Chris Stamm
Photo Technician — Brian McDermott
Copy Editor — Petra van Ziegesar
Production Supervisor — Rob Snow
Production Staff — Mike Krezy, Joe Sovich



ACROSS
1 Sixth sense: abbr.
4 Fume
9 Passed out the cards
14 Society-column word
15 Actor Costner
16 One-celled plants
17 Peace Nobelist of 1989
19 Subarctic forest
20 Correct (a manuscript)
21 Signified
23 Changed colors
24 Marathoner
27 Humid
30 Horsemen
32 Paving material
33 Clouded
37 Hazard a guess
39 Well-liked
40 Hot pepper
42 Use a baton
43 Sled
44 Ending for "auction"
45 Withdraws formally
48 Plumbing problem
50 Avarice
51 Roman poet
55 Ballroom dance
57 Sports complex
58 "Eek!" producer
60 Scuba diver's spot
64 Greek philosopher
65 Join forces
66 Paid athlete
67 Actress Hayes
68 Heroic tales
69 Sault — Marie

DOWN
1 Finished
2 Sordid
3 Martinique volcano
4 Type of row?
5 Actor Gibson
6 Roe
7 Kipling novel
8 Glossy paint
9 Information
10 Large antelope
11 Stirring up
12 Trail behind
13 Iced —
18 In addition to 22 Blunder
24 — -avis
25 Declare positively
26 Nongentleman
28 Food from heaven
29 Primp
30 Picks over
31 Toys on strings
33 Made a choice
34 Arbor assistants
35 Type of song
36 Mongrel
38 Wooden pin
40 Secret language
41 Not up yet
43 Jeans' partner
46 — on: incite
47 Spring flower
49 Preschool staple
51 Bobby of the NHL
52 Certain
53 Motionless
54 "Platoon" actor
56 Gas used in signs
57 Pub offerings
58 Speedometer info
59 Bullfight cheer
61 — Clear Day ...
62 Tractor-trailer
63 — premium: scarce

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

RUMP URSA BAA
SAFER MILD LOLA
OZONE BLIZZARDS
YES PARED OCTET
GARIA ANKARA
DEBARK REVIEW
ELOPE VERY ARCS
ALAI LIANA LOOP
FAST ACME SNAKE
ALDES GOURED
ORALLY COOT
DANCE ASHEN VIA CIVISIBLE EMERY
SNIT LEAF SATIN
SLY KEGS TOSS

12-9-97 © 1997 United Feature Syndicate

Attention Sports Staff:
There will be a mandatory meeting of all Sports Staff on Thursday at 5:00 p.m. Any questions, call Casey Kane at 545-0719.

SPORTS

Ketner, Weeks shore up UM's inside game

KEN MCDONALD \ COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts men's hoop team is 4–2 heading into tomorrow's game with No. 3 Kansas.

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

Defense wins championships.

The Massachusetts men's basketball team has played suffocating, championship–level defense in its first two home games, allowing 29 total first–half points at the William D. Mullins Center.

In the first 10 minutes of each game at Mullins, the Minutemen have given up two buckets — four points.

The physicality of the UMass interior defense is phenomenal. Lari Ketner and Tyrone Weeks have combined to clog up the paint and negate any post presence the opponent might have.

Ketner is fast becoming one of the dominant centers in the nation with his instinctive shot–blocking skills and his evolving offensive repertoire.

With Weeks' pure rebounding skills and the shear size of Ketner, teams are hard–pressed to compete with the UMass big men — especially with a consistent Ajmal Basit coming off the bench.

In turn the perimeter defense is that much stronger when Ketner and Weeks are dominating and staying out of foul trouble. Charlton Clarke and Monty Mack are both big physical guards who can frustrate opponents with their strength.

Mack has shown the ability to be a strong one–on–one defender, but his interest in the game seems to wane in and out. Clarke is built like a tight end, and though not spectacular, he's not a liability on defense.

The player that epitomizes UMass coach Bruiser Flint's defensive scheme is sophomore small forward Mike Babul.

He is constantly in someone's face, always around a loose ball. The team's best leaper, he can sneak into the paint and grab rebounds away from bigger players. An off–season conditioning regimen has Babul in better shape than he was last season, and now he can compete on a more consistent basis.

Opposing coaches have seemed overwhelmed by the size and tenacity of the UMass defense. Marshall coach Greg White called the Minutemen the most physical team he's ever seen, and College of Charleston coach John Kresse was so impressed with Ketner and Weeks that he called them both legitimate first round NBA draft picks.

Nice touch

Weeks was a perfect 15–for–15 from the foul line in the first four games of the season, but in two games at Mullins he has yet to attempt a free throw. Weeks, whose percentage has improved every season, came into this year with a career .701 mark at the charity stripe.

All dressed up...

Joining injured forward Winston Smith in street clothes last Saturday was freshman Ronell Blizzard. No explanation has been given for him sitting out, but he has yet to play a minute for UMass this season.

Men's gymnastics captures UMass open

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

Picking up where they off last season, the Massachusetts men's gymnastics team captured the UMass Open on Saturday night.

The Minutemen pulled away from the pack of competitors to finish with a total score of 218.65. UMass rival Temple fished second among the also–rans with 211.09. Army took third place with 204.1 and Syracuse placed at 191.8

"Beating Temple was impressive since they knocked us out in the tournament last year," coach Roy Johnson said. "However, the payback really comes at the end of the season, not at the first meet."

Nonetheless, the Minutemen received a big boost by beating the Owls so early on.

"It was good for the team to get this victory," Andrew Leis said. "Temple beat us by so little last year, and we wanted to prove that we could take them. It was a very satisfying victory."

The UMass performances on the pommel horse proved to be the difference in the meet. The Minutemen came away with their highest score in this event by posting a 37.25.

"Our pommel horse squad is so much potential," Johnson said. "They can only get better, hopefully to the point of being one of the best pommel horse teams in the country."

Leis led the way with a terrific routine that earned him a 9.65. Freshman J.J. Hershey chipped in with a 9.2 and Lloyd Alquist scored a 9.1.

Turn to GYM, page 9

BRIAN MCDERMOTT \ COLLEGIAN

The UMass men's gymnastics team opened up the season on a winning note.

Men's indoor track wins opener

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

Led by junior Tom Toye from Scarborough, Maine, the Massachusetts men's indoor track team bested six other schools in its season opening meet at Boston University.

The Minutemen outscored the second place University of New Hampshire by ten, 106–96, on the heals of Toye, who qualified for the IC4A Championships in three separate events.

The junior was victorious in the 200 meters, placed second in the 55 meter dash, and took part in the first place 4x400 meter relay team. His time of 21.99 in the 200 meters missed the school record, which he set, by .02 seconds.

Joining Toye with IC4A qualifying times were teammates junior Neil Concepcion and freshman Marc Sylvander in the 400 meter dash, placing first and second respectively. In the 55 meter hurdles, Ben Baraldi recorded New England Championship qualifying time with a fourth place, 7.89 second showing. Senior Scott Price, who joined Toye, Concepcion, and Sylander in the first place relay team, also penciled himself in at the New England meet with a 6.62 second time in the 55 meter dash.

In the field events, Andre Roach and Jan Stevens also worked their way into the New Englands in the triple jump and shot put respectively. Roach, a junior, won the triple jump with a 43–5 3/4 bound.

Following UNH in the seven team meet was Yale with 85 points, Maine with 52, Providence with 46, the host, BU, with 40, and Bentley with six.

The dominating performance by UMass was a pleasant turnaround from the inconsistent men's cross country season, during which the Minutemen did not win a single meet. Senior Ryan Carrera, the team's number one runner this fall, paced the Massachusetts distance crew with an 8:30 3000 meter run.

The meet is a good sign of things to come for the University of Massachusetts, as the Minutemen held eleven top four places in the meet, winning four events outright. Coach Ken O'Brien, in his thirty–first season as the UMass skipper, will take this victory into a nearly five week scheduling dry spell, as the next competition for the squad is not until Jan. 17 at Hanover, New Hampshire for the New England Challenge Cup trials. Many of the teams present this weekend will compete at the annual NECC meet in January.

Randy Moss Heisman hopeful

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. — When Randy Moss showed up at Florida State, coach Bobby Bowden was almost giddy over his new wide receiver.

"He can run, he can jump, but what he does best is run like a scalded dog," Bowden said before Moss ran afoul of the law and was kicked off the team.

A year and another school later, Moss hasn't stop running. And no one can catch him.

"Nobody in America can cover him," Ball State coach Bill Lynch said after Moss caught five touchdown passes in Marshall's 42–16 victory against the Cardinals.

The only sophomore among this year's Heisman Trophy candidates, Moss set the Division I–A single–season mark with 25 receiving touchdowns — five covering 70 yards or more — and has caught 90 passes for 1,647 yards to set a Mid–American Conference record. In two seasons, he has scored 53 TDs for Marshall.

"He's doing this with people putting triple coverage on him," Marshall coach Bob Pruett said. "They doubled and triple–teamed Randy, but he always seems to find a way to make big plays." At 6–foot–5, Moss is taller than most defensive backs and he's faster, with 4.25 speed in the 40–yard–dash. He's also got an impressive 39–inch vertical leap and huge hands with tentacle–like fingers that rarely drop passes.

The 1997 Randy Moss highlight film begins with a 90–yard touchdown against Army.

Cradling a screen pass behind the line of scrimmage on his own five, Moss took off across the field, faking two linemen off their feet, stiff–arming another defender, hurdling yet another and, without losing a step, accelerating down the left sideline while the rest of the field seemed to be in slow motion.

Already named the MAC player of the year and a finalist for the Biletnikoff Award given to the nation's best receiver, Moss is setting new standards for receivers, having scored at least one touchdown in each of his 27 college games.

But Moss says he would rather watch the Heisman Trophy ceremony Dec. 13 on his living room television than in person. He is one of four players invited to New York for the ceremony.

"I think just for the fact that I'm coming out of a small school here in Huntington, it would be very difficult for me to win it," Moss said.

"Hopefully it's not that big of a factor, but deep down inside I think it is."

Moss' college career was almost over before it began.

One of West Virginia's most celebrated high school athletes, Moss was headed to Notre Dame but the Irish revoked the scholarship after he was charged with attacking another student at DuPont High School.

Moss pleaded guilty to battery and was sentenced to 30 days in jail. He was allowed to defer most of the sentence until after his freshman year in college.

Florida State was quick to roll out the welcome mat, but a year later rolled it back up when Moss violated his probation by smoking marijuana. A one–year jail sentence was reduced a month later to time served after he completed algebra and speech communications classes in a work–study program.

Although Moss never played at Florida State, Bowden was well aware of his talent.

"He's just got so many tools, limitless tools," the coach said after watching Moss practice.

After his release from jail, Moss walked on at Marshall and scored 28 touchdowns, leading the Thundering Herd to the Division I–AA championship and a 15–0 record. This season, Marshall (10–2) returned to Division I–A after a 28–year absence and faces Mississippi in the Motor City Bowl on Dec. 26.

But can a wide receiver in the MAC win the Heisman? For that matter, can a wide receiver from any school win it? The last receiver to win it was Michigan's Desmond Howard in 1991.

"If the Heisman Trophy is for the best college player who does the most for his team, I think Randy deserves a shot," said Marshall quarterback Chad Pennington. "When the offense needs a big play, he's going to make one almost every time."

Nonetheless, the award is expected to go to players at higher–profile programs such as Tennessee's Peyton Manning, Michigan's Charles Woodson, or Ryan Leaf at Washington State. But one–by–one, Moss has made believers out of each of his opponents.

UM's Johnston All–American

JORMA KANSANEN \ COLLEGIAN

Erica Johnston earned second team All–America honors for a stellar 1997 campaign for the UMass field hockey team.

As if her stellar season weren't enough, Massachusetts field hockey forward Erica Johnston has been named to the National Field Hockey Coaches Association 1997 Div. I All– American second team.

Johnston, the 29th Minutewomen to receive All–America honors in field hockey, was UMass' leading scorer this season with 24 goals, three assists and 51 total points. Her goal total places Johnston fourth on the all–time single season list in that category, while her 51 points ranks her fifth all–time for a single season.

In addition to being named to the coaches' second team, Johnston was named to the Northeast Regional All–American team, the Atlantic 10 All–Conference team. She was also named A–10 Player of the Week four times.

An offensive catalyst the entire season, Johnston tallied in all but three regular season games in which the Minutewomen had at least one point. UMass finished the season 13–10, 4–1 in the A–10.

In the A–10 tournament, Johnston helped the Minutewomen to their second straight title. She earned Most Valuable Player accolades for her four goals in the tourney.

— Casey Kane

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVII Issue 66 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, December 10, 1997

Take this!

A capella singing sensation, Take 6, dazzled their audience with their finest tunes with a memorable Christmas performance Saturday (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Get the point?

Freshman guard Jonathan Depina will be the point man for the UMass basketball team tonight in Lawrence, Kansas (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Murder suspect to be extradited

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Amsterdam district court judges yesterday approved the extradition of an Irishman linked to the killing of a prominent Dublin crime reporter.

The suspect, Brian Meehan, was expected to appeal. In addition, the extradition request must be approved by Justice Minister Winnie Sorgdrager.

An extradition request charged Meehan, 31, with involvement in the June 1996 slaying of Veronica Guerin, who reported extensively on Dublin's underworld bosses for the Sunday Independent.

Meehan is accused of driving a motorcycle alongside Guerin's car while it was stopped at a traffic light on the outskirts of Dublin, while his passenger opened fire on the 36–year–old journalist. During his extradition hearing, Meehan told the three–judge panel he was innocent. Meehan's lawyer also claimed his client could not be guaranteed a fair trial in Ireland due to intense media coverage.

Meehan, who was arrested in Amsterdam earlier this year, faces a maximum life sentence if convicted in Ireland.

NATION

Higher prices part of anti–smoking campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Increasing the cost of cigarettes by $1.50 a pack would reduce teen smoking only if combined with other anti–smoking measures, two of three specialists told a House subcommittee yesterday.

"There is no single magic bullet," DePaul University psychology professor Leonard Jason told the House Commerce subcommittee on health and environment. "The best approach is a combination of tools, including restricting access and advertising, school–based programs and price increases."

Economic studies show that just a 10 percent price increase reduces overall smoking among adults by about 4 percent and teen smoking by 7 percent, said Michael P. Eriksen, director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's Office on Smoking and Health.

A third witness — Howard Beals, a George Washington University professor who has worked as a consultant for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. — disagreed. He said the most effective approach would be educating teen–agers about the consequences of smoking and imposing penalties for tobacco use.

Several members of Congress have introduced bills that would raise prices by $1.50 a pack, and anti–smoking groups have taken up the call in hopes that Congress will act next year on the tobacco settlement reached between tobacco companies and state attorneys general in June.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 36 LOW: 28	HIGH: 35 LOW: 19	HIGH: 37 LOW: 18

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Prentice family asks students for answers concerning death

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Two months after the death of their son, the parents of Adam G. Prentice, Barbara and Dennis Prentice, are still facing many unanswered questions about events that occurred on the night of his death.

The Prentices believe there is at least one student on this campus who was with Adam at the time of his death, and accordingly, they issued a statement to the University of Massachusetts community asking for help.

"The friends and family of Adam Prentice believe he was not alone on the night of his tragic fall through the greenhouse roof on Friday, Sept. 27 between 12:30 p.m. and 1:30 a.m.

"As the holiday season approaches, our prayer is that we are blessed with the truth about what happened to him so we can begin the painfully slow process of healing," Mrs. Prentice said.

Prentice, 21, died early Sept. 27 after he fell through a greenhouse roof near the Morrill Science Center. His cause of death was massive bleeding. Toxicology reports indicated that he was intoxicated at the time of his death.

Since Adam's death, Mrs. Prentice feels he was not alone when he fell through the greenhouse.

"You just don't do something like this alone regardless of sobriety," she said.

In addition, Mrs. Prentice said Adam was 5–foot–3 inches tall.

"The roof to the greenhouse was as tall as he was. Someone had to be there to help boost him up," she said.

In addition to believing that Adam was accompanied by friends at the time of his death, Mrs. Prentice also questioned whether Adam was being chased and running away from someone.

The UMass Police Department does not have any evidence to indicate this might be true.

"I truly believe that a mother's intuition is usually 99.9 percent correct," Mrs. Prentice said.

According to UMass Chief of Police John Luippold, Prentice's case remains open, however, investigators have been unsuccessful in their search for anyone who was with Prentice the night of his death.

Luippold refused further comment on any other details of the investigation.

"We want to appeal to anyone who may be afraid of going to the police or the DA's office," Mrs. Prentice said.

The Prentice family has requested that anyone with information about their son's death contact them at (508)362–7978 or (508)362–4804 or e–mail barpren@capecod.net.

"If you saw Adam that night between these hours, have knowledge of someone else who did, or details regarding his fall, we would love for you to answer our prayer," Mrs. Prentice said.

Amherst gathers in support of NIOT

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — Over 300 people filed past the display window of Amherst Typewriter, which only months before served as the touchstone for a community movement against hate, to gather in support of the Not In Our Town (NIOT) coalition at the Amherst Cinema on Sunday.

The gathering consisted of the showing of the movie Not in Our Town which documents the efforts of Billings, Mont. residents to combat hate crime in their community, and featured a number of speakers including author and Mt. Holyoke professors Andrea Ayvazian and Beverly Ann Tatum and Amherst Typewriter owner Robert Green.

The movie portrayed Billings as a friendly, family–oriented community located in an area (the Pacific Northwest), which is also where the Aryan Nations are attempting to establish their homeland.

These groups began by distributing hate flyers, and committing minor acts of vandalism. This soon escalated into major desecrations, violence and acts of intimidation.

The Billings community was fortunate in that they acted early, and together, to fight the hate.

They formed a coalition Not In Our Town, the model for the Amherst group of the same name, in which people of all religions, races

Turn to NIOT, page 2

Flowers for a cold day

KEN MC DONALD\ COLLEGIAN

Evan Gerber, a resident of Belchertown, looks at his display at the Mini–Mall. The Mini–Mall is Hillel House's annual fundraiser and will continue through Thursday in the Student Union Ballroom.

Iraq says U.N. inspectors investigates kindergarten

By Wasel Faleh
Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — U.N. weapons inspectors visited 34 sites in Iraq yesterday, including a kindergarten, the Iraqi News Agency reported.

The visit to the Baghdad school caused "a scare among the children and their teachers," the state–run agency quoted Maj. Gen. Hussan Mohammed Amin as saying. Amin is director of Iraq's National Monitoring Committee, which keeps tabs on the inspections.

It was not immediately clear why the inspectors wanted to check the building that housed the kindergarten, and officials at the U.N. Special Commission could not be reached for comment.

The commission is responsible for monitoring Iraq's compliance with U.N. resolutions that call for the elimination of its weapons of mass destruction.

U.N. trade sanctions imposed after Iraq's 1990 invasion of Kuwait cannot be lifted until the inspectors certify that the weapons have been destroyed.

The news agency said 28 of the inspection visits were made without advance warning, including stops at civil training centers and a printing house.

Amin was quoted as saying that "searching such places signals that the Special Commission is affected by American intelligence information against Iraq, which claims Iraq is still keeping... prohibited weapons."

Iraq has long accused the United States of providing misleading information to the inspectors in order to keep the punishing sanctions in place.

In October, Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein announced that U.S. inspectors would be expelled on the grounds that they were spying. The U.S. inspectors were ordered out Nov. 13, and the United Nations ordered the other inspectors to leave.

The inspections resumed Nov. 22 under a Russian–brokered deal, and no major confrontations have been reported since.

The head of the Special Commission, Richard Butler, is due in Baghdad later this week to discuss "sensitive sites" such as presidential palaces that Iraq does not want to be inspected. The Iraqi News Agency also reported that Vice President Taha Yassin Ramadan met yesterday in Tehran with U.N. Secretary–General Kofi Annan. Both are attending the three–day summit of the Organization of the Islamic Conference.

Israel will not be rushed into troop pullback

By Revital Levy–Stein
Associated Press

EILAT, Israel — Facing U.S. pressure for a speedy and substantial troop pullback in the West Bank, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said yesterday that Israel would not be rushed into a decision.

"When we are dealing with such a fateful process — and in the West Bank we are talking about the heart of the country — we will not act quickly and hastily," Netanyahu said. "No outside pressure will help. Before we have an agreement with the Americans, we need to reach agreement in Israel."

U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright has said she expects Netanyahu to provide a more "credible" withdrawal plan at their Dec. 17 meeting than he has offered to date.

Last week, Albright told Netanyahu she wanted Israel to hand over at least 12 percent of the West Bank to Palestinian control in the next stage, the Israeli dailies Haaretz and Maariv reported yesterday.

But Netanyahu faces strong opposition to such a significant pullback from right–wing coalition allies, and many Israeli commentators believe he is stalling to avoid a crisis at home.

"There is talk of American pressure," Netanyahu said during a visit to this Red Sea resort. "The pressure that I feel is the responsibility of dealing with the future of our country ...Nothing will force our hand."

Netanyahu would not say how much land he was ready to hand over. He reportedly has floated plans to add 6 percent to 8 percent of the West Bank to the 27 percent of the territory where the Palestinians now have full or partial autonomy.

In a meeting with his Cabinet ministers Monday, Netanyahu was

Turn to PULLBACK, page 2

KEN MC DONALD\ COLLEGIAN

It's hip to be square...
A different view from the balcony of the TOC of the Flagstone Concourse.

Talks aim "to reduce tensions" on Korean penninsula

By Clare Nullis
Associated Press

GENEVA — A first day of talks that aimed to transform a tense, 44–year truce on the Korean peninsula into a permanent peace adjourned yesterday with little outward sign of progress.

"Ongoing" was all North Korea's delegation leader, Kim Kye Gwan, would say when the day of talks ended. Diplomats from South Korea, the United States and China said nothing publicly.

This round of talks continues through today.

Peace negotiations could drag on for years, and just getting the North and South together in the same room to discuss a permanent peace was considered a major breakthrough. Only an armistice, not a peace treaty, was signed to end the Korean War in 1953.

"The shadow of the Cold War is still hanging over the Korean Peninsula," China's vice foreign minister said in an opening speech.

"We know for sure that the future course will still be long and difficult," Tang Jiaxuan said. "Nevertheless, we have already struck a good beginning."

In Washington, Defense Secretary William Cohen and his South Korean counterpart said the talks "provide the most realistic means to reduce tensions and achieve lasting peace on the Korean peninsula."

In a joint statement, they "expressed the hope that all partielpants would make sincere efforts to achieve substantial progress."

One of the many stumbling blocks to progress is North Korea's desire for a withdrawal of 37,000 American troops in South Korea. The North Korean delegation raised the issue again yesterday, according to South Korean journalists briefed by diplomats. The North, they said, also pressed the American delegation for an end to an economic blockade in force since the Korean War and for direct talks between Washington and Pyongyang.

South Korea said the armistice — which it periodically accuses the North of violating — must be respected pending a full peace deal, according to the journalists.

The Korean War began when more than 60,000 North Korean troops, armed by the Soviet Union, invaded the south on July 25, 1950. U.S. forces were ordered in two days later as part of a U.N. force, which advanced across North Korea in the coming months until the Chinese drove them back.

Faculty creates Jewish group

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Staff

A group of Jewish faculty members have organized an informal group, the Jewish Faculty and Staff Group, to celebrate being Jewish.

Richard S. Ellis, professor of mathematics, and Marilyn Kushick, professor in the music and dance department, are co–chairs, and co–founders of the group.

"We're not a religious organization," Ellis said. "I want to set up an environment where people can celebrate being Jewish."

The group works closely with the University of Massachusetts Hillel House and Rabbi Saul Perlmutter, Executive Director, and organizes activities involving Jewish students and faculty on campus.

"We don't have a full time staff," Ellis said. "[Rabbi Perlmutter] provides the space for meetings. Everybody is welcome, some people read Hebrew, some don't."

Some of their activities include a "mini–conference" in each of the last three years, a Torah study group, and bringing in speakers and holding luncheons.

Ellis says that the goals of the group are "as broad as the Jewish people are broad."

Turn to GROUP, page 2

KEN MC DONALD/ COLLEGIAN

Law–breakers

A flock of seagulls blatantly ignores a sign by the campus pond.

■ pullback

continued from page 1

evasive when asked whether Albright had set a minimum.

"Yesterday, I clearly asked Bibi whether (Albright) dictated a certain percentage, whether he had to come to the next meeting with certain percentages," Public Security Minister Avigdor Kahalani told Israel radio, referring to Netanyahu by his widely used nickname. "I did not understand his answer."

As part of a U.S.-brokered agreement, Israel has agreed to pull back troops in the West Bank in three stages by mid-1998. The Palestinians rejected the first pullback offer of 2 percent in March as insufficient. Israel recently declared readiness to withdraw troops from an as yet unspecified area in a second stage, on condition that the Palestinians do more to fight terrorist groups.

Chicago cab drivers walk out

By Alexandra Zavis
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Office workers, out-of-town visitors and Christmas shoppers were left standing on snowy street corners yesterday as Chicago cab drivers staged a one-day strike over a proposed ordinance they say endangers their lives.

The measure would increase penalties for cabbies who turn down customers or refuse to drive in crime-ridden parts of Chicago. Six cabbies have been slain over the past year — the latest, a 58-year-old Yellow Cab Co. driver who police say was shot by a 14-year-old passenger the week of Thanksgiving.

"I'm not risking my life for the city," declared 42-year-old Mansur Nazih, who was planning on working yesterday just long enough to earn the $60 a day he pays to lease his cab. "I have a family. I have kids at home."

Just 30 of 1,200 radio dispatch drivers were working yesterday morning at Yellow Cab, which handles an average of 4,000 calls per day, spokeswoman Jan Johns said. Checker Taxi Association said it was operating with 20 percent of its 1,760 drivers.

"Feet, do your stuff," said Mitch Ray, a Michigan business who was in Chicago for a conference at a hotel. "I don't know where we're going for dinner tonight, but it will be somewhere close." Only a few cabs were to be seen at O'Hare and Midway airports, but extra limousines and airport shuttles picked up the slack, said city Department of Aviation spokeswoman Monique Bond. She said there were no major delays.

Guests at the downtown Fairmont Hotel had to wait 20 minutes during the morning rush hour for taxis, which are usually lined up in front, doorman Boutros Abraham said. Some people shared rides. Others opted for limousines, and a few decided to walk.

At the Renaissance Chicago Hotel, managers doubled as chauffeurs for the day, ferrying guests around the city in hired minivans. The proposed ordinance, which would increase the maximum penalty for turning down a customer from $500 to $750, goes before the City Council today.

■ NIOT

continued from page 1

and backgrounds worked to prevent the spread of hate crimes.

The Amherst chapter of NIOT is also a group dedicated to fighting prejudice, and abolishing acts of hatred.

Among the acts NIOT opposes are name calling, violence to people, and the vandalism of property in the name of hate.

The coalition was created following the vandalism of Amherst Typewriter, owned by Green, which had a display window shattered, display items broken and stolen, and feces smeared on the store exterior.

Ayvazian said that the films reminded her of nuclear free zones established in the 1980's, and that towns should create racist free zones.

She amended this to allow for the fact that every community will have some racism, and called for anti–racist zones.

"When I encounter an anti–racist community, people are daily trying to prevent racism," Tatum said.

Green said that Amherst is not a racist town, and while racist people do live within its bounds they currently do not take away from its overall character.

"Amherst is not utopia," Green said. "But it's about the closest I've ever been to it."

The vandalism occurred just after Green had moved Amherst Typewriter from its previous location where it had been for 20 years.

"The move cost Green a lot of money, and he looked forward to fall semester returning students for income.

"I invested all I could scrape and borrow into new inventory, anticipating the return of students," Green said, "[the vandalism] hit me like a ton of bricks."

Following the vandalism, Green was in utter dismay about what he should do next, and out of desperation he called up a local minister who hosts a radio show on Sunday morning.

"I told the minister "I need a prayer,"" Green said, "and not long after the phones started ringing, and for the next few days I could not work without people coming in from everywhere."

Speakers urged for the crowd to put the Green incident in its proper context, and to view it not as an isolated incident, but as part of a continuing pattern of racism in American history.

At Sunday's NIOT gathering, Green reiterated his thanks to the Amherst Community for rallying around him and supporting him in his hour of need.

Green said there is a need to keep such NIOT together in order to provide other victims with support.

"I and other victims need to know you will be there," Green said, "I'm no coward, but I'm afraid these people will come back."

Reasons Green gave for this fear include harassing phone calls he has repeatedly received, a known member of a racist organization appearing in Amherst Typewriter under the guise of browsing and a poster for Sunday's event being set on fire.

Despite being urged to forget the incident, Green insisted that it must be remembered.

"We need to remember it," Green said. "We need to send the message that this sort of behavior won't be tolerated."

■ group

continued from page 1

Ellis listed several goals for the organization. The first was building a safe and welcoming environment in which UMass faculty and staff can speak to each other, learn from each other and can deal with issues about being Jewish.

The group also seeks to "foster a cohesive, communicative and interactive Jewish community on campus." Perhaps most important to Ellis is the goal of serving as a resource for Jewish students at UMass.

"We wanted to be as inclusive as we can," Ellis said. "I'm happy and I think it serves a full–time purpose."

On Nov. 16, the group held one of its mini–conferences, and according to Ellis, there was a "very good turnout." Ellis also said that they must gear activities to resources, and receive small grants from national Hillel to run their conferences.

Ellis said that the group has no agenda. "If someone is interested... fine," he said. "People are very confused about being Jewish."

The group has been sponsoring events for three years, and Ellis said they will continue to try to build a community.

"It's important enough to do," Ellis said. "It's very gratifying."

Campus Activities presents

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY

"Scared Scriptless"
Comedy Improv

"Scared Scriptless" High Energy, Quick Wit, and ability to wring Humor from the most incongruous of situations makes the group a HIGH POINT of the New York comedy scene!" -May... BACKSTAGE

- Student opener: Chris Walsh -

Campus Cente...
8:0...
Friday, Dec...
Movie: "EVENT HORIZON" ...
"Event Horizon" featuring ...
December 14 ...

Visit us on the Web:
http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calender.htm
Sponsored by Campus Activities through a grant from the Umass Auxiliary Services and the Vice-Chancelor for Student Affairs

The Massachusetts DAILY COL...
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

Student Affairs Special Services
Student Speaker
Undergraduate Commencement

Is there something you would like to say before graduating? If so, you are invited to submit a proposal for consideration as the Student Commencement Speaker.

Who is Eligible:	Graduating Amherst Campus Senior (Class of 1998).
Subject Matter:	Your proposed speech should be of general interest to graduating seniors as well as to parents and other guests, and address your impressions and experience(s) both academic and extra-curricular.
Format:	Submit approximately three word-processed/typewritten pages, double-spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time. Speeches exceeding this limit will not be considered.
Selection Process:	Authors' names will be deleted (by a non-voting staff person) after which a committee of students (majority), staff, and faculty will review the proposals. Three to five individuals will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March), after which the speaker will be selected.
Deadline:	Wednesday, February 11, 1998, 4:30 p.m.
Submit Proposals To:	Paul R. Appleby, Chair, Student Speaker Selection Committee, 305 Whitmore (545-3464).

HAPPY HOLIDAYS TO YOU.

Last Day of Classes Dec. 12

THE UNIVERSITY STORE IS YOUR HOLIDAY HEADQUARTERS.

WITH AMHERST'S WIDEST SELECTION OF GIFTS FOR EVERYONE YOUR LIST, WE CAN HELP YOU GET YOUR SHOPPING DONE EARLY!

STOP IN TODAY TO SEE OUR HUGE COLLECTION OF CARDS AND SPECIAL GIFTS ITEMS.

PLEASE, COME BY FOR A VISIT AND LET US HELP YOU GET SET FOR THIS SPECIAL TIME OF YEAR.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS!

Holly Days

University Ustore
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
UNIVERSITY STORE
IN THE UMASS CAMPUS CENTER
HOURS:
M-F 9 TO 5 SAT. 11 TO 4
(413) 545-2619

WE ACCEPT AMEX, DISCOVER, MC, VISA, AND THE UCARD!

Global warming negotiations wind down after nine days

By Charles J. Hanley
Associated Press

KYOTO, Japan — Haggling over chemistry, calendars and the future of Earth's atmosphere, European and U.S. negotiators worked through the night and into early today to save a historic deal to control fuel emissions across the industrial world.

The U.S. delegation to the global warming talks in Kyoto eased its position by offering deeper gas reductions, but clung to features of the proposed agreement that the Europeans called "loopholes."

Despite their remaining differences, both sides sounded determined to succeed as the 9-day-old negotiations headed toward a deadline late today.

"We still have far to go," said Stuart E. Eizenstat, the chief U.S. negotiator. "Nevertheless, we are hopeful that... we will be able to bridge the gaps."

"I think we are making genuine progress," Britain's environment minister, Michael Meacher, said after key talks broke up about 2:30 a.m., to resume later in the morning.

Earlier, Japanese Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto telephoned the leaders of Germany, Italy and Britain to ask that their delegations take a more flexible position in the talks, Japan's Kyodo news service reported.

It said Hashimoto also planned to call President Clinton. If the disagreement between the United States and Europe is settled, an overall deal would be presented to the 150-nation conference today for consensus approval.

The accord would wrap up two years of negotiations to strengthen the 1992 Climate Change Treaty by setting legally binding limits on 34 industrial nations' emissions of such greenhouse gases as carbon dioxide and methane.

It could help set the energy course for much of the world well into the 21st century, from how we generate electricity to what we drive.

Governments are expected to take steps such as converting coal-fired power plants to gas, encouraging development of more fuel-efficient automobiles and lifting subsidies that keep fossil fuel prices low.

The treaty had set only voluntary goals for industrial nations to roll back greenhouse gas emissions to 1990 levels by 2000. Because few countries were meeting that goal, governments decided in 1995 to negotiate mandatory cutbacks.

The gases, mostly byproducts of fossil fuel burning, trap the Earth's heat when they accumulate in the atmosphere.

An authoritative U.N. scientific assessment in 1995 found global temperatures rose slightly in the past century, apparently in part due to human activities, and would rise up to 6 degrees more by 2100 if emissions were not controlled.

Such warming would shift climate zones, disturb weather patterns and raise sea levels — because of melted glaciers and heat expansion of the oceans — flooding islands and low-lying coastlines.

Clinton has proposed that 1990 levels be retained as the binding goal, to be achieved between 2008 and 2012 The European Union proposed a more ambitious plan: cutting emissions by 15 percent below 1990 levels by 2010.

The trans-Atlantic argument over targets and timetables dominated the conference.

The United States contended its "zero" plan actually amounted to a 30 percent reduction from what U.S. emissions would be in 2010 if no controls were imposed.

The Europeans objected that as the world's biggest emitter of carbon dioxide — 24 percent of the global total — America needed to do more.

Vice President Al Gore, in a one-day visit Monday, authorized the U.S. delegation to come off its "zero" position. By yesterday, European sources reported the U.S. team was offering reductions of more than 5 percent.

The complex, highly technical talks offered negotiators many ways to adjust the balance among parties: the chemical compounds to be covered, the year-by-year timetables, the "baseline" years for measurement.

The Europeans objected to "loopholes" in the U.S. position, especially the American idea of international trading of emissions quotas — allowing U.S. plants, for example, to obtain the right to continue emitting by buying "rights" from countries that underutilize their quotas.

The Americans wanted to cover up to 50 percent of their emissions cuts via such "offshore" reductions. The Europeans wanted to limit traded quotas to one-third of a nation's cutback requirements.

Another U.S. demand — that developing countries also submit to binding reductions — met even tougher opposition.

Throughout the years of talks, developing countries have been exempted from mandatory emissions cuts. But the U.S. Senate threatened to withhold ratification of the protocol unless it extended the cutbacks to some Third World nations.

KEN MC DONALD/ COLLEGIAN

The shadow knows...

Mike Kelley, a sophomore art major, and Erin MacEachen, a senior art major, talk by the Fine Arts Center as their shadows are projected on the wall nearby.

Leader of FBI's probe into Flight 800 retires

BALTIMORE, MD. (AP) — James Kallstrom, who led the FBI's investigation into the explosion of TWA Flight 800 and helped bring down scores of organized-crime figures during a 28-year career, said yesterday he will retire from the agency at the end of the month.

"My time has come," the FBI assistant director and chief of the agency's New York office said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"I have to take care of my family and make sure my daughters are educated properly. I don't leave because I want to leave, but it is time for me to think about other responsibilities," he said. Kallstrom, 54, said he will take a job as senior executive vice-president at MBNA Inc., an international bank and credit card company based in Wilmington, Del.

Kallstrom, who is two years short of the FBI's mandatory retirement age, said he was "honored to run the flagship office of the FBI and I leave it in good hands."

Kallstrom became a familiar face to Americans during daily news conferences after TWA Flight 800 exploded on July 17, 1996, killing all 230 people on board.

Two weeks ago, Kallstrom called off the agency's massive criminal investigation into whether a bomb or missile was responsible, saying no evidence of foul play was found.

The National Transportation Safety Board is continuing an investigation into mechanical failure, and is holding hearings this week in Baltimore on its findings.

Colleagues said Kallstrom had considered resigning last year but decided against it before the TWA investigation was completed. "It was not in my character to leave before the TWA Flight 800 investigation was concluded. I thought I owed it not only to the bureau but to the victims' families and to the American citizens," he said yesterday.

Kallstrom has found friends among the families of those who died in the explosion.

"I love this man," said Michel Breistroff, a Paris man who lost his Harvard-educated son in the explosion. Breistroff said he had grown to trust Kallstrom despite his own doubts at times about the openness of the U.S. investigation.

COME SUPPORT THE UMASS MINUTEWOMEN AS THEY TAKE ON THE CONNECTICUT HUSKIES THIS THURSDAY, DEC. 11TH AT 7:00PM IN THE MULLINS CENTER!

All Students who attend will be eligible to win one of two chances to shoot for towards tuition in the Phoenix Halftime Shootout!

UMass basketball

STUDENT TICKETS ARE FREE, SO PICK THEM UP AT THE TICKET OFFICE IN CURRY HICKS CAGE TODAY!

The Best Deal Of The Year For The Ultimate High!

Gift Certificates For the 1998 Season (April - November) At An Outstanding Discount
If Purchased Before Dec. 31st!

Tandem Skydive $125 (Normally $185)
Static Line Jump $120 (Normally $175)

Call The UMass Skydiving Club Office
At 545-0005
Or Jumptown
Orange, MA At 1-800-890-5867

Holly Days

BOOK SIGNINGS

THE UNIVERSITY STORE IS SPONSORING A SERIES OF CELEBRITY BOOK SIGNINGS BETWEEN NOW AND THE END OF THE SCHOOL YEAR. ALL SIGNINGS WILL TAKE PLACE ON THE CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE ACROSS FROM THE UNIVERSITY STORE.

JAY NEUGEBOREN
AUTHOR OF IMAGINING ROBERT &
DON'T WORRY ABOUT THE KIDS
WEDS. DEC. 10 - 2PM TO 1PM

BOB RYAN
THE FOUR SEASONS
WEDS. DEC. 17 - ABOUT 1PM
AFTER THE SPORTS LUNCHEON

University Ustore
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
UNIVERSITY STORE
IN THE UMASS CAMPUS CENTER
HOURS:
M-F 9 TO 5 SAT. 11 TO 4
(413) 545-2619

WE ACCEPT AMEX, DISCOVER, MC, VISA, AND THE UCARD!

— The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian —

The bird–feeder

War on Liberty and Pleasure

Hussein Ibish

Editor's note: This is the final installment of a five-part feature analyzing the emergence of a New Puritanism.

"It is an amazing Vengeance of God, that gives a Sinner up to Sin for Sin, and Curses a Sinner for one Sin, by Leaving him to another." — Cotton Mather

Having thoroughly dissected the most egregious specifics of the neo–puritan assault on liberty and pleasure through which we are living, the question that remains is: Why is this happening now and what does it mean?

Of course, like all social phenomena, this resurgent politically correct Puritanism is, as they say, over determined. But we can certainly start by identifying some of its key aspects.

If nothing else, the neo-puritan ethic is a perfect symptom of Clintonism, a "distinguishing characteristic." It is the liberal impulse drained of all of its politically progressive elements, leaving only a hollow shell of hypocritical moralizing.

What could be more appropriate in a society governed by a man whose policies, such as welfare abolition, have devastated the impoverished and many communities of color, and who at the same time launches a phony crusade of empty rhetoric preaching against racism and demanding compassion?

Having run up against an iron wall of corporate resistance, liberalism has been emptied of its socio-economic reformism agenda. Instead, it turns its attention today to the "sins" of the individual, seeking to reform society one person at a time.

Rather than pursue a political program designed to correct some of this society's savage inequalities or advance an egalitarian vision, PC Puritanism steps into the void left by an evaporated liberalism, and renews the call for a "Utopia of human virtue."

In this sense neo-puritanism is doubly harmful, since it is not only socially destructive, but it also distorts an otherwise admirable and useful impulse: the yearning to make the world a better place.

It also draws upon an ever-increasing sense of social claustrophobia. That was observed as early as 1984 by Frances Ferguson in her article on the "Nuclear Sublime." It is, as Slavoj Zizek notes, an "enhanced awareness of how others threaten us, of how totally we are 'exposed' to them," to the point where "every contact with others is perceived and experienced as a violent encroachment."

Most dangerous of all is the enjoyment of others, which, in such an atmosphere, cannot simply be tolerated but is always experienced as a theft of one's own enjoyment.

Therefore, like its Olde New England predecessor, PC Puritanism is defined by the gnawing fear that somebody, somewhere is having a good time.

What's next? Fatty foods? Provocative dancing? Profane language? Short skirts? Raucous, disruptive laughter? Or what about that great Amherst sin, the sin of smoking?

Our local, contemporary Cotton Mathers have managed to go one better, for while their 17th and 18th century forbears were concerned exclusively with human morality, PC Puritanism extends its sphere of interest.

For example, the Daily Hampshire Gazette in its Nov. 8-9 issue featured an article entitled: "Bird-feeder debate: are we making the birds too fat and happy?" The writer explains that "In general, the argument goes that birds become dependent on human handouts and lazy about finding food on their own..."

There you have it — the neo-puritan logic of the Clinton era following itself into patent absurdity.

Think of the bird-feeder next time the Amherst Board of Health tells you not to smoke, Sally Damon tells you that drinking is bad because it's too much fun, or Chancellor Scott tells you protesting is disruptive and who he thinks you shouldn't have sex with.

This is not to say that we should necessarily resolve, like Sir Epicure Mammon, to dine on "The tongues of carps, dormice, and camel's heels... The beards of barbels, served, instead of salads; Oiled mushrooms; and the swelling unctuous paps of a fat pregnant sow, newly cut off, Dressed with an exquisite, and poignant sauce." Or to search, as Norman Mailer vowed, always for "an orgasm more apocalyptic than the one which preceded it."

The idea rather is to recuperate the sense that pleasure is good in and of itself; that bitter resentment of other people's enjoyment is perverse, and that guilt attached to having a good time is neurotic.

These are fundamentally life-affirming concepts, as opposed to the dismal, deadening affect of neo-puritanism.

So, resolve to allow those around you to enjoy those little pleasures which enrich life unmolested, and save your moral outrage for those political and economic crimes that make this world so unjust and genuinely immoral.

Oh, and remember the birds of the air: they neither sow nor reap, yet your heavenly father feeds them.

Hussein Ibish is a UMass graduate student.

A hero indeed

It is something special when your idols turn out to be really good enough to hold the spot. You know when you get a hero in your head, someone who stands for certain essential parts of what you are striving to be, the spirit of your future self, you might as well call them a hero. When you're younger and dreaming, instead of living your life, they make the awe complex rise up in you.

Michael Medeiros

Have you ever felt this? I bet you have. Whenever you hear their name, see their picture, find something related to them (no matter how distant or esoteric sometimes), all the day stops and you have to go off and bask in the great thing. Find out more. Absorb, in the hopes, of maybe becoming more like them, or just feel the intensity of their life, and live vicariously in something more powerful for a moment. Isn't it just great when these best people, on whom you stupidly put importance, based on nothing but hope and a kind of religious fervor, turn out to be wonderful, human, good and, most terrifically of all, worth being your particular heroes?

It happened to me.

Ray Bradbury came to campus this week. For the past three years the old man has been my hero. I found out about him by accident. I wandered into the science fiction section of a book store, bored and hoping for something better than what I had been reading. Since I am a bibliofreak, I constantly need new books. I can't stop reading. I am addicted, quite literally. There is an error in my genetics that makes me dependent on ink and paper pulp (with pretty illustrations and photographs as my extra boosts of vitamins).

I needed a fix.

All of a sudden the name Bradbury pops into my head, and I go searching.

I'd heard the name batted around before, but I'd never picked up one of his stories. I was a book snob, I suppose. I thought science fiction was some mutt dog that everyone kicked around and only pet when the labradors and collies had gone home. But then I found Bradbury's name on the shelves, and saw the title The Halloween Tree. All of a sudden my heart started pounding. My blood rushed; muscles clenched. I snatched it up, read the back. Put my eyes back on the shelf, scanned more titles... Something Wicked This Way Comes. I'd heard of that, too!

Now mind you, I may never have been into science fiction, but I've always been wrapped in my own fantasy world, a wonder world where Pippi Longstocking lives and vampires bite, where magic happens and charms can be made and broken. I've been lost in that world since I was two and thrilled by leaves (tree leaves, yes, one of my passions to this day). Anything or anyone that can make me wonder, and seems sincere and thrilled about wondering, and feels wonder to be a passion as dangerous and full–blooded as any in the world, is my downfall. Or my saving grace, maybe.

Well, this Bradbury was another one of the freaks of that world! He was one of those beautiful creatures who wonders and creates and loves. I'm a creature of love too, though I may never have said it that way before reading Bradbury. It's true. And since people honestly in love cling to similar loves. I jumped to this person, my early birthed twin brother!

Anyhow, I read as many books of Bradbury's that I could find (and from there a whole bunch of science fiction that I'd hitherto ignored for no good reason but ignorance). Every book was a thrill. When he came here this week, he turned out to be as good as the pages. He was real flesh and blood magic. Things turned out right.

It is the finest thing in the world to have happen, to have a thing turn out right. It reaffirms that there are good things in this world, things that rejuvenate and revive amidst all the deformities, failures, pains and atrocities. And these things help bring us through this life alive. And thank god for them, because if they didn't exist we'd all go insane, whether we realize this or not.

Thank god for heroes that turn out to be heroes. Thank god for Ray Bradbury. And you know what? Thank god for friends, because in the end, that's all I think we want heroes to be. And hopefully our lives will be surrounded by tons of heroes, tons of friends that save our lives every day. I know mine is. Thank god.

Michael Medeiros is a UMass student.

And the winner is...

As the end of the year approaches, it's time to make mention of some dubious achievements of 1997.

Every year, people do things that are less than intuitive, leaving the rest of us asking, "Why the hell would someone do something stupid like that?"

This year, the award winners are less than stellar and their achievements (or lack thereof) border on the sketchy side.

Should Have Stayed in Bed: Poor Marv Albert, what a year he's been having. The former NBC sportscaster pleaded guilty to various sex offenses, including forcible sodomy and biting. Ouch. Adding to the humiliation, in an interview with Barbara Walters he even had to admit to wearing women's underwear. At least she didn't ask him about his toupée.

Seema Gangatirkar

Stand By Your Man: Every year, some celebrity male has an affair, the press finds out about it, and the wife/girlfriend smiles bravely and sticks by her man. Past recipients of the award include Hillary Clinton and Elizabeth Hurley. This year, the award passes to Kathie Lee Gifford, who stuck by her man, even after the Enquirer published steamy pictures of Frank Gifford and his paramour. Give Kathie Lee credit — after learning of the affair, she was at a loss for words for all of 10 minutes.

Father of the Year: Michael Jackson was in the running for this one before Ted Turner fired his son at a gala dinner, while announcing the merger of Time Warner. The words "You're toast" really warm the heart, don't they? And this is the guy who gave the United Nations $1 billion to heal the world's ills. My advice? Start closer to home.

Must Not See Television: What was NBC thinking when they gave Jenny McCarthy her own show? Contorting faces into hideous expressions and being generally inane does not equal a hit comedy.

At least NBC is smart enough to acknowledge its disasters and has pulled "Ienny" off the air. Now, if only the network could do something about "The Naked Truth," "Profiler," "Fired Up," "Union Square" and "Players."

Tuning the Organ: Remember John Wayne Bobbitt? This notable character (whose claim to fame is the dismemberment of his penis by former wife Lorena Bobbitt) dabbled for a while in the porno industry (with his big hit Uncut), settled a paternity suit and now has found his place as a minister in the Universal Life Church. Now, would you really want to be blessed by this man?

Tuning the Organ II: While on the subject, we cannot ignore the 14–inch prosthetic attached to Mark Wahlberg's groin for the film Boogie Nights.

Me Too: This one goes to Bill Clinton. Most presidents before Clinton have had their little battles. Reagan bombed the heck out of Libya, Bush had the Gulf War, Johnson took on Vietnam while Truman and Eisenhower sent troops into Korea. Not to be left out of the presidency's tradition of bopping countries over the head, Clinton jumped at the chance to send some pretty big boats into the Persian Gulf, in an attempt to scare the pants off of Saddam Hussein. Hussein backed off, which is a good move, because as Air Force One showed us this summer — we like our presidents tough.

Unhappily Ever After: Will the Donald ever find happiness in marriage? Apparently not. Donald Trump and wife Marla Maples split after three years of marriage. You have to give Trump credit — he got out just before their marriage contract would've forced him to pay the former model a hefty sum for any breakup. Maybe he can buy a new supermodel with his savings.

Want A Life: Eddie Murphy has all the good intentions at heart — he's really a nice guy. So what was he doing at 3 in the morning, driving a transsexual prostitute around? He claims he was just being a nice guy, giving a prostitute a ride home. Whatever. I suppose in L.A., it's common sense that most happily married men hit downtown in the wee morning hours to drive prostitutes home — a public service of some kind.

At least we have a nominee for next year's "Stand By Your Man" award: Murphy's wife, Nicole. And she doesn't have to worry about how to handle the stress of such an honor. She can always ask Kathie Lee for pointers.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.
Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words long, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes.
They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by email to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545–1592.
The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity and style.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Yo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

A capella group harmonized the FAC

By Robert Skrinyaz
Collegian Correspondent

TAKE 6
Fine Arts Center
Dec. 6

The Fine Arts Center Concert Hall housed a spectacular display of vocal prowess, musicianship and six great entertainers as Take 6 performed last Saturday night. Opening the show with a pseudo–radio promo, the group was in fine form as they delivered a healthy balance from several of their albums.

Consisting of (from highest to lowest) Claude McKnight, Mark Kibble, David Thomas, Joey Kibble, Cedric Dent and Alvin Chea, Take 6's sound is derived by melding gospel, pop and jazz — the latter they acknowledged by their a capella rendition of Miles Davis's "All Blues."

COURTESY EMPIRE STUDIO

The well dressed men from Take 6 combine their voice talents to create a truly enticing musical experience.

Midway through the performance, they sang a four song Christmas set, beginning with "Oh! He is Christmas" from the album of the same name, a stunning arrangement of "Little Drummer Boy," "Hark the Herald Angels Sing" and "Oh Come All Ye Faithful."

The enthusiastic audience seemed disappointed at the brevity of the Christmas portion of the show, but the group soon made up for that by racing through their "So Much 2 Say," with breakneck tempos and angular harmonies — not a piece for the faint of heart.

Soon afterward, Take 6 brought the house down with the track from their first album, David and Goliath, that originally sparked the interest of Warner Brothers Records. The song depicts a narrative tale about the redemption of a rough boy and a mean old giant that exclaims "Boy, I'm gonna give you a spankin'!" A cover of Ambrosia's "You're the Biggest Part of Me" set a slower mood, as did their own "Milky-White Way."

One of the highlights of the show was near the end, with a humorous, soulful and explosive duel between Cedric Dent and Mark Kibble, on "Mary Don't You Weep, Martha Don't You Moan." With a part–specific sing–a–long at the end, this concert, which is dedicated to the retiring Frederick Tillis, professor of music and Fine Arts Center director, and whose photo retrospective can be seen in the Concert Hall Lobby, came to a smashing end.

While there were some minor flaws in the performance, they are more than forgivable when one realizes that none of the members have perfect pitch. Take 6 had a personable interplay with the audience, but at times their preaching, positive as it was, took away from the momentum of the show. A devoutly Christian group, Claude McKnight had this to say in 1990: "We want to reach people, but human nature says that if you hit me over the head with something, I don't care how good it is, more than likely I'm not going to want to hear it."

For more about the group, check out Take 6 central at http://people.unt.edu/~ddas/take6.html.

Hallraker shines as Valley's best HC

COURTESY VICTORY RECORDS

Warzone member Raybeez proved that the spirit of Hard Core still thrives, and as a result, he will be surely missed.

Adam Dlugacz

It's the end of another semester and I only got one letter. It seems that all of you backpack wearing vegan warriors are slacking. I saw Hallraker in Burlington, Vt., this weekend and they played one of the most intense sets I have ever seen. We really don't appreciate how special it is that we can see a band like Hallraker every weekend. I'd like to take a moment here to wish Bev good luck on the West Coast. Hallraker's playing a bunch of shows before the end of the month and I highly recommend you check them out. I saw the band, Saves The Day, in Vermont. They're new, featuring ex–members of Mouthpiece; they're on EVR, and if you miss Lifetime, you'll love these guys.

I saw Holdstrong, Cause For Alarm and One King Down at Pearl Street last Thursday. I missed Hallraker because the show actually started on time. What's that about? Everyone knows it's not a hardcore show if it doesn't start over an hour late and the headlining band doesn't play until after midnight when half the crowd has left. It was nice to see a lot of young kids at the show. On the other hand, it was depressing if this is the future of hardcore. First of all, Cause For Alarm is hardcore and One King Down and Holdstrong are metal. Second of all, kicking over your head, punching the air in a circular pattern, covering your face and throwing haymakers and dancing one at a time is idiocy, not hardcore. And someone once told me that metal has no negative impact on the scene.

Now for some reflections on the year. Lifetime and CR broke up leaving two glaring holes in the scene. However newer bands like By The Grace of God, In My Eyes, Union 13, Get Up Kids, as well as Saves The Day are looking to fill those holes. On another positive note we saw bands like H2O, Ensign, Shutdown, Rain On The Parade, Ten Yard Fight, Hands Tied, Kill Your Idols, Floorpunch and Rancor raise a big middle finger to metal and bring real hardcore back. We also saw bands like Sick Of It All and Killing Time return to their roots with brilliant albums.

In local news, Hallraker finally released their debut CD. If you don't have it you just don't know. Just About Done released a 7" that is sure to have you shaking your booty. Just About Done also set a record for most consecutive shows played in Van Meter or Greenough. Tipping Canoe and Monster Squad have emerged as two newer bands in the area. The Marshes released their second full length on Dr. Strange Records — unfortunately, it didn't get in time to be reviewed.

One of the best new labels to emerge this year was Exit out of Long Island. Exit released amazing albums by Silent Majority, Indecision, Tripface, Sons of Abraham, Millhouse and Motive. Victory was also busy releasing albums by Snapcase, Strife, Integrity, By The Grace of God, Cast Iron Hike and Hatebreed.

The saddest event of the year was the death of Warzone frontman Raybeez. Raybeez will always be remembered as the one person who tried to keep the hardcore flame alive by singing in the pit and always helping out the kids. Although I'm sure Raybeez is looking down on the scene from up above.

Turn to ADAM, page 6

Tonight LIVE MUSIC with DANGEROUS PAPERS
–5 Member Band w/ Brass Section–
Drink Specials
22 oz. Rolling Rock Bottle $2.99
Seabreeze $2.00
20 oz. Miller Lite Draft $1.99
NO COVER CHARGE
Tuesday's Treat THE PUB
1/2 Price Appetizers 'til 10:30 p.m.

MINI MALL '97
ONE-STOP SHOPPING EXTRAVAGANZA!
TUESDAY, DEC. 9 THRU THURSDAY, DEC. 11
10AM-5PM
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
This Week!
FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 549-1710

SPRING BREAK
BEST PARTIES CANCUN JAMAICA FLORIDA BEST PRICE
Call today! Space is limited
1 800 648-4849
On campus call Amanda Brisco @413-548-3147

Weddings Proms
Glazier Limousine Service
77 Beech Street
Greenfield, MA 01301
For All Occasions, Your Chanot Awaits
Greenfield: (413) 774-7171
Northampton: 1-800-974-7171

THE MOLSON SUN & SNOW FEST! IN CANADA
5 DAY SKI & SNOWBOARD LIFT TICKET
5 NIGHTS LODGING, LUXURY CONDO, FULLY EQUIP.
5 DAYS & NIGHTS OF COLLEGIATE PARTIES, CONTESTS ETC.
Students from over 150 U.S. Colleges
Group Leader & Campus Rep Discounts
Only $239
Please note: The legal age to consume alcohol in Canada is 18
Call or E-Mail for a free color brochure
www.skitravel.com
1-800-999-SKI-9
SKI TRAVEL UNLIMITED
MORE SPACE JUST ADDED FOR WHITTEMORE (JANUARY) & SPRINGBREAK

LOSE WEIGHT NOW!
Our products are:
• Doctor Recommended
• 100% Natural
• Guaranteed
You will:
• Feel more energy
• Lose up to 30 LBS In 30 days
• Have more willpower
FREE SAMPLES
CALL: (413) 259-1922

OOPS!
• Free Estimates
• Lifetime Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center (On bus route - one mile from UMass)
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880

KAI CHI
10¢ WINGS
WEDNESDAY NIGHTS
8:30 - CLOSE

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Potato Skins Supreme 7.50 3.75
Nachos 5.95 2.98
Gorgonzola Buffalo Potatoes 7.25 3.63
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's DOWNTOWN AMHERST
51 N. Pleasant Street 253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

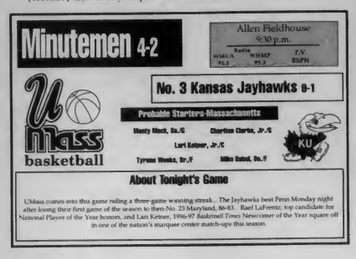
amc
Hampshire 8 •584-7550 Hampshire Mall
Mt. Farms 4 •584-9153 Mt. Farms Mall
Jackal (R) Today at (5:40), 8:30
Starship Troopers (R) Today at (5:40), 8:30
Rainmaker (PG13) Today at (5:00), 8:20
Alien: Resurrection (R) Today at (5:50), 8:40
Bean (PG 13) Today at (5:50), 8:40
Anastasia (G) Today at (5:40), 8:40
Flubber (R) Today at (5:30), 8:30
Midnight In the Garden of Good and Evil (R) Today at (5:10), 8:20
Mortal Combat 2: Annihilation (PG 13) Today at (5:30), 8:30
Boogie Nights (R) Today at (5:10), 8:20

WEDNESDAY NITE IS...
MIKES NITE
BEER OF THE WEEK: RED DOG $1.50
DRINK OF THE WEEK: LIQUOR 43 & COKE $2.00
Mikes Mad Money and Tee Shirts
DON'T FORGET THURSDAY NITE...
FREE SNACK BASKETS 9-12

■ UMass

continued from page 10

points and 1.3 assists per game thus far.



Tonight, though, the marquee matchup won't be in the backcourt, but rather under the boards.

LaFrentz and Pierce will do battle with the UMass tandem of junior Lari Ketner and senior Tyrone Weeks. The Minuteman pair is averaging 31.0 points, 18.8 rebounds and 3.8 blocks per game while the Kansas combo is averaging 41.0 points, 20.2 rebounds and 3.7 blocks per contest.

Even though the Jayhawks have played teams the caliber of Arizona, Florida State and Maryland (their only loss, 86–83), they have yet to match up against a team with the combination of talent and size that UMass has in the paint.

"[Ketner] has really improved defensively. He's getting a lot better position and blocking shots," Flint said. "[Weeks] is my steady. I get 12–15 points and 10–12 rebounds — that's what he's doing every night."

Minuteman Notes: The last time these two squads met, at the John Wooden Classic in 1994, Kansas won, 81–75, despite Lou Roe's 33 points and 10 rebounds for then–No. 1 UMass... LaFrentz, then a freshman for the No. 7 Jayhawks, started at power forward and scored 18 points while grabbing nine rebounds... Four current NBA players were involved in that game: Vaughn (14 points, 11 assists); Greg Ostertag (9 points, 5 rebounds); Scot Pollard (12 points, 5 rebounds); Marcus Camby (2 points, 5 rebounds).

JORMA KANVANEN/COLLEGIAN

Get your hands in the air...

Sophomore Mandy Mosby will look to build off her stellar freshman season for the Minutewomen this year. UMass will start their season over intersession on Jan. 17.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

weekend, I stood there staring at the Daily Hampshire Gazette article chronicling the upset of then–No. 1 Maine on Jan. 28, 1995 in the training room.

That was a real good day — but as far from the here and now as humanly possible.

Names like Bonneau, Norris and Manganaro began to come to mind (with the impact those kind of players made on the squad), and mingled with names like Lovell, and both a theory and a dream team sort of emerged.

Just imagine the story it would make...

Sal, Rob, Warren and Tim come to the Pioneer Valley.

You see, only three seasons separate the intangible offensive impact of Manganaro, last season's wonder duo of Bonneau and Norris and the natural goal scoring ability of one–half of the current co–captaincy in Lovell.

Just imagine the team they would have made...

All are great players, with Manganaro (Providence Bruins), Bonneau (Portland Pirates) and Norris (St. John's Maple Leafs) all logging time in the American Hockey League right now, while Lovell will be doing so after his impending graduation. The first three players took the ice together in the 1994–95 season, with Manganaro leading the team in scoring with 46 points (23 goals, 23 assists).

But Sal's stay here was shortened by sitting out one year due to his transfer from Boston College, which forced him to only play two seasons with UMass, while one of those was snapped in half with a broken knee cap suffered in the opener of the 1993–94 season. His offensive effect was real, but not tangible, because what he brought to the ice was something you can not put in a can — dedication, and a penchant for the crazy side of the game.

The final verdict of both Bonneau and Norris' careers for the Minutemen speak for themselves: second and third respectively on the career assists and scoring lists, and Norris just outpaces Bonneau by one goal for second place on the career goals list with 73.

Lovell, a star transfer from Maine, has been hard–pressed to extract himself from the jersey of the opponent's top checker this season, due to the fact that he is the top scoring threat for the team. With that lack of team–wide offensive diversity, Mallen has been forced to flip–flop his line pairings more than a full night's stage diving in an attempt to find that right combination.

Only a few breaks, and years, separate the possibility of having one of the most potent scoring attacks in the country. Just imagine Bonneau and Norris finally having the natural goal scorer to pair up with them in Lovell, and Manganaro anchoring a line with current Minutemen like Steve MacKinnon and Jeff Blanchard.

But that kind of stuff is for dreamers. Instead of thinking of the past, the reality is each Minuteman needs to find inside of them those aspects of the game; especially if the team is going to move ahead. After four years working with this team, and witnessing wins over Maine, I know it is not in the realm of dreams. Koo–koo–ka–choo...

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Sal Manganaro

■ Hurlbrink

continued from page 10

The gold glove center fielder agreed to a five–year contract worth $31 million, opting for the fifth year guaranteed with the Orioles and less money than he was originally looking for.

• Anderson's former teammate, Ben McDonald was involved in a whirlwind day on Monday in the race for next summer's American League pennant.

McDonald was acquired by the defending pennant winners, the Indians, for Marquis Grissom and well–travelled anomaly Jeff Juden. The Indians also got UMass alum Ron Villone and Mike Fetters, a pair of quality setup men.

Fetters was immediately traded to Oakland for pitcher Steve (I used to be a top prospect) Karsay.

Also, at the same press conference, Cleveland G.M. John Hart announced that the Indians had signed Dwight Gooden to a two–year deal.

Oh yeah, the Tribe re–signed Kenny Lofton too.

What does it all mean, you ask?

Well...

With McDonald and Gooden (if healthy) joining at least Jaret Wright and Charles Nagy in the rotation and Lofton jump starting a line up with Jim Thome, David Justice, Manny Ramirez, Travis Fryman and Sandy Alomar, the Indians should be okay for next season.

Yeah, they'll be alright.

• The Blue Jays apparently didn't learn from last season's debacle and are continuing to sign old, old players who are on their last leg.

Toronto agreed to terms with 34–year–old Mike Stanley and 35–year–old former Jay Tony Fernandez. The Blue Jays committed $9 million to a catcher whose back is so bad he's now a DH with a bad back and an over–the–hill shortstop who now has to play second base.

But, Tim Johnson is poised to become one of the majors' top managers, so the Blue Jays did something right.

• The Red Sox are enhancing their present by investing in the future and returning to their past.

The Boston Globe reported Monday that the Sox were close to closing a deal with ace Pedro Martinez worth $50 million over five years. G.M. Dan Duquette is finally starting to piece together his puzzle and is not about to let one of the league's dynamic arms to slip away.

Also joining the 1998 Red Sox will be former Boston ace Dennis Eckersley. The 43–year–old closer was dealt from Boston to the Chicago Cubs in 1980 for Bill Buckner (he played first base, or something — I forget). He rejoins Boston to serve as part–time closer and part–time tutor for Tom Gordon who looks to continue his assimilation.

Maybe more importantly than these moves in themselves is the impact they will have on Danny Boy's chances of re– signing Mo Vaughn.

All Mo wants is to be assured that the Sox are committed to winning.

It certainly looks like they are.

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

■ Adam

continued from page 5

The Hardcore Awards Of The Year

Best Album: Life Of A Spectator — Silent Majority

Worst Album: Watch It Burn — Cast Iron Hike

Best New Band: The Get Up Kids

Best Comeback: Killing Time (even if it was only for a while) tied with Revelation Records who released killer albums by Kiss It Goodbye, Ignite and Better Than A Thousand and who just singed In My Eyes, Battery and Elliot.

Best Local Band: Hallraker (like there was even a question about this one).

Best Rumor: That Gorilla Biscuits were back and had signed to Atlantic Records.

Best Show: Sick Of It All and H2O at Pearl Street.

Worst Show: 311 at the Mullins Center. So it has nothing to do with hardcore, but it was still one of the worst shows I have ever seen.

Best Reissue: Omega Sessions — Bad Brains

Least Anticipated Comeback: Burn, come on Chaka, Orange 9mm not paying the bills?

Band That Should Break Up: Earth Crisis (they still suck) and any band that sounds like Earth Crisis (One King Down for example).

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist.

EARN $2,000 - $3,000
$7.50 - $8.00 / hour
Work Local to Your Home
Mornings, Evenings, and Weekends
Taking Inventory
Paid Training
Advancement Potential
Call our Jobline 24 hours a day
1-888-242-RGIS
Equal Opportunity Employer
Interview with RGIS Inventory Specialists on the Campus Center Concourse
December 10th, & 11th
9:00am to 3:30pm

Holly Days
WIN TICKETS!
TO THE 3RD ANNUAL COMMONWEALTH CLASSIC
UMASS MINUTEMEN vs. BOSTON COLLEGE
DEC. 14, 1997 AT THE FLEET CENTER
UStore staff and families not eligible.
Register in the University Store to win between now and Dec. 10, 1997.
The drawing for two (2) tickets to the Commonwealth Classic will be held at 4:30pm on Weds. Dec. 10 in the University Store. You need not be present to win.
Entry Form must be completely filled out. One entry per customer please. No Purchase Necessary.
We accept AMEX, Discover, MC, VISA, and the UCard!
University Ustore
University Store In the UMass Campus Center
Hours: M-F 9 to 5 Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545-2619

WEATHERVANE
SPECTACULAR SWEATER SALE!
WEATHER VANE
Happy Holidays from WEATHERVANE!
For a store location near you call 1-800-888-6462
visit our new website: www.wvane.com

REDUCE REUSE RECYCLE

CAMPUS CENTER:
1ST FLOOR - ROOM 162

Friday, December 12	9 AM - 5 PM
Monday, December 15	9 AM - 5 PM
Tuesday, December 16	9 AM - 5 PM
Wednesday, December 17	9 AM - 5 PM
Thursday, December 18	9 AM - 6 PM
Friday, December 19	9 AM - 6 PM
Saturday, December 20	10 AM - 5 PM

TEXTBOOK ANNEX

Friday, December 12	9 AM - 4 PM
Monday, December 15	9 AM - 4 PM
Tuesday, December 16	9 AM - 4 PM
Wednesday, December 17	9 AM - 4 PM
Thursday, December 18	9 AM - 4 PM
Friday, December 19	9 AM - 4 PM
Monday, December 22	9 AM - 4 PM
Tuesday, December 23	9 AM - 4 PM

HAMPDEN IN SOUTHWEST

Wednesday, December 17	10 AM - 5 PM
Thursday, December 18	10 AM - 6 PM
Friday, December 19	10 AM - 6 PM
Saturday, December 20	10 AM - 4 PM

Textbook Buyback

UNIVERSITY STORE'S Textbook Annex UMASS AMHERST

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

SORORITY RUSH
Feb. 5th- 9th
Registration
12/8- 12/1
in the Campus
Center Concourse
Come see what we're
about!
For more info
call
@ 549-8025

February Auditions- "The Tribe" Student Film Comedy Script Available Only: royr@student.umass.edu

TALKING ACROSS DIFFERENCES: EXPLORING COMMON GROUND & CONFLICT (2 Credits, Spring Semester) Your experience is needed! Participate in a 10 week Intergroup Dialogue course. Sections offered: 1) WHITE WOMEN & WOMEN OF COLOR, 2) PEOPLE OF COLOR & WHITE PEOPLE, 3) PEOPLE OF LATINO HERITAGE & PEOPLE OF AFRICAN HERITAGE. Issues discussed: Race relations on college campuses; Race & culture, Interracial dating, Affirmative Action, Immigration etc. Enroll now at the Residential Academic Program Office, 5th floor- JQA or 159 Hills South

APARTMENT FOR RENT

One Bedroom Brandywine Apartment Available January-August Call 549-7330

Take Over Lease Feb 1st 2 bedroom apartment at The Boulders. $725, heat/hot water included. On bus line. 256-1415

2 bedroom apartment- The Boulders $695 Free heat Call Jesse 253-9188

1 bedroom apartment available 1/98. Close to campus. Mark 549-5326

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom- Mill Hollow $540. Jan 1. Call Tracy 549-3759

One bedroom apartments available Jan-Feb 1st. Please contact the Brandywine Office at 549-0600.

1 bedroom at Puffton Village $545 Includes heat! Available 1/1/98. Please call 549-9221

Take Over My Lease One bedroom apartment $500/month inclusive Call Tariq Odeh 665-5599

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Call The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

82 Honda Civic $250. Reliable, runs fine, but needs new clutch. 253-6585

Geo Prizm 1990 155,000. Very reliable. Well maintained (records). Blue Book says $2800. Asking $2000. 256-1845

89 Nissan 240SX Excellent condition. All extras. New, muffler, clutch, tires, brakes $4400 or B/O. 549-6926

Wantad: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

CHILDCARE

Occasional childcare needed for 14 year old boy for evenings and overnight when both parents are working. Need someone willing to commit for Spring Semester. Call Fred or Carie 548-8057

COMPUTERS

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Earn $75-$100 Untrained males needed for Exc. Sci Study over Wintersession. Call Steve @ 253-4952

EMPLOYMENT

Winter Session & Immediate Openings

Hadley office has 30 openings for the winter session. Office Hours: 10 AM to 2 PM & 4 PM to 9 PM. Saturdays & Sundays also available.

- Fun Atmosphere
- No Experience Required
- On Bus Line
- Flexible Schedule
- Only Minutes From Campus

Call 584-0215 for Interview

Accounting Position- Spring Semester Flexible hours, fun environment. Generate reports, date entry. Call Ryan or Maureen at 5-3500. Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement

Winter Break Employment $7.50/hr. Amherst New England Call Center. 253-0583

Put A Border Around The Adl!! Drivers Wanted Spring Semester. No classes before 10am. Must be hard working and have reliable transportation. $10/hour. 6-8 hrs/week. Contact Ryan or Lyle at The Collegian 545-3500 or come to the Campus Center Basement.

Day Care Lunch Cook & Shopper, 17 hrs per week, $7 per hour Classroom Subs. Variable Schedules $6.25 per hour. Route 63, Leverett. Call Susan 548-9674

Apply now to be a Tour Guide, Summer Counselor, Student Admissions Representative. Applications available on the concourse.

YOU WANT CASH MONEY??!! Do you know how to drink warm soda and eat a pound of lima beans?!!! Be a part of the naw comedy tape "AMERICA'S GREATEST BELCHES & FARTS." Send your best burps and farts on tape (audio, video, micro) to us. CASH paid if you make the cut! Maniac Marketing. 357 Cherokee St. Merriette, GA 30060 Need more info? Call the GAS LINE (770)590-5233

New Students Program Summer Positions Seeking active extraverts with 2.5+ GPA. May 27 to July 18, 1998 Salary plus, room, board & health coverage. Applications at Admissions Center.

Apply now to be a Tour Guide, Summer Counselor, Student Admissions Representative. Applications available on the concourse.

Aerobics Instructor January and Second Semester. Some mornings. Hampshire Fitness Club. 256-6446

Part-time change over crew and post-event cleaners needed at the Mullins Center. Must be available nights and weekends and willing to work. Apply in person Mullins Center 2nd floor. 8:30-5:30pm.

Janitor Tuesday and Thursday mornings beginning Jan. Hampshire Fitness Club $7/hr plus membership. Call 256-6446

Januery Jobs Use your winter break to make money. 2-4 week fun promotions around country. Great for the resume. Outgoing and independent people call (800)783-4237 Attn: Joe. Collegiate Advantage

Summer Management Opportunities Open across Mass. for the Summer of 1998. Earn $600-$800 per week. For more info please call College Pro Painters at (888)277-7962

FOR SALE

Versace Jeans Brand new with all tags. Size 28, stona denim, $175 original, $99 or B/O. Perfect gift 546-0947

FOR SALE

CP Compo Drum $90. 16" Zildjian Thin Crash $80. Pearl Cymbal Stand $30. Excellent condition. Melissa 665-7353

For Sale- Two pairs of skis K2 and Setomom. Almost brand new. $200 each or B/O. Call 546-6152

Willpower in A Bottle Lose Weight Doctor Recommended 100% Natural Moneyback Guarantee (413)259-1927

FURNITURE

Need to sell 3 month old full size bed at the end of Dec for $90 or best offer. Call Marc at 253-9220

HOUSE FOR RENT

4 BEO HOUSE Good location, Northampton. For Jan. $925 plus utilities. Skibski Realtors 584-3428

JEWELRY

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engegements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

LOST & FOUND

LOST. Black Fresh Water Pearl Brecelet lost Friday 12/5. Call 253-8967

LOST- Black Velcro Wellet in Newman Ctr on Dec 4th by the phones. If found please call Erin at 253-1529

MISCELLANEOUS

WINTER HEAT TIPS! Don't turn your thermostat below 60 during winter break or you risk broken water pipes for which you are responsible (not the landlord!) This is an expense you do not want. If you are going away for only a few days ask your landlord to check the house. If you have questions or want more information call Commuter Services at 545-0865 or come to 428 Student Union.

MUSICIANS

Marshall Speaker For Sale 4x12 Cab. LOUD! Great condition. MUST SELL! $500 or best offer. Call Mike at 546-0955

ROOM FOR RENT

1 room in 4 bedroom apt in Northampton Jan to Aug. $300 a month. Call 585-5851

Room Available 12/22 Great location on Lincoln Avenue $750 includes utilities. Call 549-1910

Quiet room, downtown Amherst Available end of December. Lease 253-4236 9am-9pm

Room available in Main St apartment. Parking and heat included. Call Paul or Miki 253-1450

Bedroom Available Two bedroom apt. $716/month. On bus route. Call 665-8894 Ask for Scott

Looking for male to share large room in 3 bedroom apartment. Great location uptown $250/month. Ask for Fitz 253-9359

Large bedroom in renovated 3 bedroom Puffton apartment Available Jan 1 $375/month. 549-6957

1 room in 2 bedroom apartment. Available Jan. End. Call 549-6082 ASAP

1 Room in renovated 3 bedroom Puffton Apartment. Avail Jan 1st. $260/ mo Call Dan 549-7054

UPTOWN Room for rent in house for 1 or 2 persons. $210/month. Available 12/22. 549-9275

Bedroom Available Jan 1 $342.50/month. Includes heat/hot water. Contact Kelly 253-1899

Furnished room available in a 4 bedroom Amherst house. $300/month. Near bus route. For more details call Tina 253-6428

ROOM FOR RENT

Cheap rooms for Wintersession Live closa to campus. Only $150. Includes heat/hot water Call Jason 549-0958

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted Own bedroom. $300/month. On bus line Call Jen 259-7995

Bedroom available in Sugarloaf $333 monthly. Call 665-3558

Prefer female non-smoker to share house in Belchertown. Call 323-9268

Apartmantmate Wantad: $220 plus 1/2 electricity. Right on bus line. Female, non-smoker. Call 253-4982 Available Jan 1, 1998

Looking for 1 person to share large room in two bedroom apt Starts Jan 1. Call Brad or Mike 549-3992

Female roommate/s wanted to share a 2 bedroom- Boulders Apts. Amherst. On bus line. Available Jan 1st or sooner 259-2995

Roommate Wanted Jan 1 Behind Victory Market 4 bedrooms, W/D $300+ 549-9130

Roommate Wanted- 6 bedroom house, Amherst $710/month. Own room (spacious), wood heated, pool table. Call 549-7177

SERVICES

Decorator Service Beautify your home- wallpaper, painting, staining. Expert work. 20 years exp. Free estimates Call (413)533-6213 South Hadley

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Spring Sublet Starting on Jan - May Or Jan. - Aug. Two bedroom at Sugarloaf Semifurnished. Rent $960 but I will pay 100/ mo. Free heat. call 665-9101

TO SUBLET

Take over our 2 bedroom Apt. Cliffside in Sunderland. $680 / mo. All utilities. On bus line. 665-0235.

TRAVEL

RELIABLE SPRING BREAK TOURS Bahamas, Cancun & Ski Trips! FREE FOOD & FREE DRINKS!! Sign up before Nov 30. Organize a group- travel free Call for details and free brochure. Call (888)SPRING BREAK TODAY!

SPRING BREAK TRAVEL

Spring Break

Ask about our legendary Free Party Packages

★Jamaica
★Cancun
The best Meal Plan in the business!
★Daytona ★Panama City
CALL FOR FREE INFO PACK
Sun Splash Tours
1-800-426-7710

LOOKING FOR A DEAL ?
Sell your books through TheClassifieds.
It's EASY & CHEAP!
ONLY 10c / word

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulatory personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELERY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND
(3 DAYS FREE)
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR RENT
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP.
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED FUNERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 10

Blood Drive — American Red Cross, Hampshire County chapter blood drive from 10:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 165.

Entertainment — Not Ready For Bedtime Players will perform at 8 p.m. in the Pierpont Lounge.

Film — Italian club film night at 6:30 p.m. in classroom 2 of the Foreign Language Resource Center in the basement of Herter Hall Annex. Caro Diario will be shown in Italian with English subtitles.

THURSDAY, DEC. 11

Comedy — UMass's This Side Up comedy improvisation troupe at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163, hosted by MISSION IMPROVable.

Lecture — Christian McEwen presents a lecture on "A Celebration of Tomboys" at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803 as part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series and is co-sponsored by Food for Thought Books. The Stonewall Center, GLBTSO, Women's Studies and the Chancellor's Task Force on GLBT Matters. For more information, please contact the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Slide–lecture — Kim Tripp, director of the Smith College Botanic Garden, will describe a recent plant–collecting trip during a slide–lecture, titled "A China Expedition" at 4:30 p.m. in the Neilson Library Browsing Room at Smith College.

FRIDAY, DEC. 12

Comedy — Montclair State's Possible Side Effects comedy improvisation troupe at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163, hosted by MISSION IMPROVable.

Concert — The Hampshire College Chorus will perform Mozart's Missa Brevis K. 275, and Lou Harrison's Mass to St. Anthony at 8 p.m. at Grace Church on the Amherst Town Common.

Service — Shabbat Service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House.

NOTICES

Applications — The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team is accepting applications for its training this January 12–16. Applications are available for any UMass student at 222 Hampshire House, Legal Studies. For more information, contact Leah at 545–5882.

Art Exhibition — An exhibition of more than 30 one–of–a– kind artist books and scrolls by William Drendel will be on view from Nov. 11–Jan. 25 at the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum. Museum hours are Tuesday–Friday, 11 a.m.–5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday, 1–5 p.m. and is closed on academic holidays from Wednesday, Nov. 26 through Monday, Dec. 1 and from Tuesday, Dec. 16 through Monday, Jan. 6. For more information, call 538–2245 or fax 538–2144.

Art Exhibition — Works by 13 members of the Williams College art faculty will be featured in Artist/Teacher: Group Faculty Exhibition, opening Dec. 6 at the Williams College Museum of Art, and continuing through March 1. Museum hours are Tues.–Sat. 10 a.m.–5 p.m. and Sun. 1–5 p.m.

Club — The UMass Amateur Radio Club Station WIPUO is returning and looking for people to join in Ham radio. Anyone interested in radio/electronics and a desire to learn and communicate are welcome. The club will sponsor FCC approved volunteer examination sessions for all license levels. For more information, contact Richard Strycharz N1MFT at 549–6000 ext. 6000 or leave a message at facility services.

Exhibit — Orchids and Works of Sculpture at the Durfee Conservatory opening Dec. 5 from noon– 6 p.m. and continuing through Dec. 10. conservatory hours are Mon–Fri. 8:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m. Sponsored by the Amherst Orchid Society and Sculpture Department of UMass.

Internships — Environmental and Hunger Internships available for credit. Opportunities include helping to organize a Five College Earthday, protecting Endangered Species and organizing the Spring Hunger Clean–up. For more information, call Robyn at 545–0199.

Notice — Spectrum Magazine is taking submission for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office at 545–2240 or come by in the Student Union, room 406E.

Notice — The UMass Arts Council's next deadline for Single Project/Event grants is on Wednesday, Feb. 4 at 5 p.m. for art events occurring after Feb. 24. Guidelines for application forms are available at the Campus Activities Office, 416 Student Union or at the Arts Council offices, Hasbrouck 101–103 or on computer disc at PC Software Support, Lederle low rise, room A118. Please call the Arts Council at 545–0202 for help with applying for a grant or to discuss your ideas.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3 Hartford
4	CBS/4 Boston
5	ABC/5 Boston
6	PBS/57 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20 Hartford
8	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30 New Britain
11	Fox/61 Hartford
12	PBS/24 Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
15	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40 Springfield
22	NBC/22 Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN SI
25	Headline News
28	UCTV
27	TBS
28	BET
29	TV Land
30	Univision
31	Comedy Central
32	Cartoon
33	Much Music

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 10, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Engelbert Humperdinck – Love Unchained (In Stereo)				Andrea Bocelli: Romanza in Concert (R)			Paul Stanley's
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Nanny	Murphy Brown	Public Eye (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Nanny	Murphy Brown	Public Eye (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Spin City	Dharma-Greg	Drew Carey	Ellen (R)	Primetime Live	News	Nightline
WLVI		Full House	Boy-World	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Sister, Sister	Smart Guy	Wayans Bros.	Steve Harvey	News	Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH		News		NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	3rd Rock-Sun	Tony Danza	3rd Rock-Sun	Working	Law & Order "Burned"	News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Cheers		Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Star Trek: Voyager "The Gift"		Sentinel "Three Point Shot"	News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	10	News		NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	3rd Rock-Sun	Tony Danza	3rd Rock-Sun	Working	Law & Order "Burned"	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five "Summerhill Life"		News	Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News		NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	★★½ "Pete's Dragon" (1977, Fantasy) Mickey Rooney,			Law & Order "Burned"	News		Tonight Show
WGBY	8	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Andrea Bocelli: Romanza in Concert				Great Performances: San Francisco Opera Gala	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	26	News		ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Spin City	Dharma-Greg	Drew Carey	Ellen (R)	Primetime Live	News	Nightline
WSBK		Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	Star Trek: Voyager "The Gift"		Sentinel "Three Point Shot"		News	M*A*S*H	Seinfeld	Real TV
WTBS		Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	NBA Basketball: Los Angeles Lakers at Golden State Warriors. (Live)					Inside-NBA	"You Only Live Twice" (1967)
A&E		Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Benevolence"		Biography: Charles Kuralt		American Justice (R)		20th Century (R)		Law & Order "Vengeance"
CNN	33	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	26	A Unit (R)	Meke-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★★ "E.A. Story" (1991, Comedy)		Steve Martin, Victoria Tennant,		South Park (R)	Viva Variety	Daily Show
DISC		Wings "At Combat Today" (R)		Gimme Shelter (R)		Titanic: Untold Stories		Titanic: Anatomy of a Disaster (R)				Justice Files "Unlikely Villains"
ESPN		Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball:	Villanova at Duke (Live)				College Basketball: Massachusetts at Kansas. (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE		Supernanny	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Undersea Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "Ebbie" (1995, Drama) Susan Lucci, Taran Noah Smith. (R)				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV		MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		Daria (R)	Beevis-Butt.	MTV Live (R) (In Stereo)		Real World	24/7 (In Stereo)	Loveline (R) (In Stereo)
NICK		Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Heppy Days	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Love Lucy	M.T. Moore	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI		Twilight Zone	Twilight Zone	Scream2	Masters	Seaquest DSV "Abalon"		★★½ "Zardoz" (1974, Science Fiction) Sean Connery,				Scream2	Masters
TLC	28	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Trauma-ER	Trauma-ER	Rescue Squad "Heroes" (R)		Houston – Emergency		Trauma-ER	Trauma-ER
TNT		Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		Gift of Song (In Stereo Live)				Gift of Song (R) (In Stereo)
USA		Baywatch (R) (In Stereo)		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		"Mr. Scrooge" (1997, Fantasy) Cicely Tyson. (In Stereo)				Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo)
HBO		★★½ "The Cable Guy" (1996, Comedy) Jim Carrey. "PG-13"				★★★ "Fin Cup" (1996, Comedy-Drama) Kevin Costner. "R"				Titanic: First Look (In Stereo)		"Redline" (1997) "R"
MAX		(4:50)	★★½ "Can't Buy Me Love" (1987) "PG-13"			★★★ "Michael Collins" (1996, Drama) Liam Neeson. "R"				"Pyrenne Unknown" (1996, Drama) Joe Mantegna. "NR"
SHOW		★★★ "Top Gun" (1986, Drama) Tom Cruise. (In Stereo) "PG"				★★½ "Kingpin" (1996, Comedy) Woody Harrelson. "PG-13"				Dead Man's	Fast Track "Combustion" (R)	★ "Sci-Fighters"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Loser Crew Comics By Alan DeMonde

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Sven By Steven Higgins

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You may be fighting against a sudden onset of fatigue today. You can get things done, but you're going to have to pace yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Like your Sagittarius neighbor, you may find your energy waxing and waning in an inconsistent fashion throughout the day.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20.–Feb. 18) — You may have to bend the truth slightly today in order to ensure the success of a new plan. Take care that you don't stoop to falsehood

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may encounter an unexpected obstacle later in the day. Fortunately, you are well prepared to take any necessary evasive action.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — This is a good day to pursue any kind of money–making opportunity. You can't have too much cash available to you at this time.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You will be relying on others quite heavily at this time. Be prepared to give careful instructions more than once whenever necessary.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You may be called upon to relieve someone who is unable to complete a task. Take care that you don't take on more than you can handle.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — It is important that you consolidate your efforts today in order to maximize efficiency. You can make a tough schedule work for you.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Others may be waiting for you to make a tough decision of some kind today — while you are waiting for them to come up with options. Communicate!

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You will need more information today before starting a small money–making project. Your schedule demands that you get it right the first time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Others are likely to gravitate to you all day long once they get wind of your new idea that may positively affect their earnings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You may have to say "no" to someone who comes to you with an offer of extra work today. The fact is, you're ready for more advanced endeavors.

Quote of the Day

"The right to be heard does not automatically include the right to be taken seriously."

–Hubert Humphery

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Chicken Breast Sandwich
Sloppy Joe
Ravioli Alfredo

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Broccoli & Cauliflower Casserole
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich

Worcester
LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Homemade Chicken Pot Pie
Rotini/Tomato Meat Sauce
Rotini/Tomato Lentil Sauce

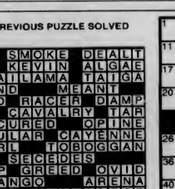
DINNER
Roast Turkey
Cauliflower Eggplant Casserole
Pastabilities
Cheese Lasagna

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Barbecued Pork on a Bun
Grilled Cheese Sandwich

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Fried Shrimp Dinner

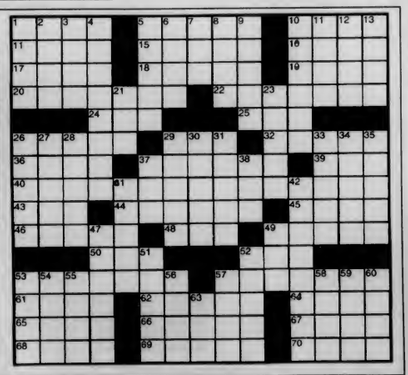
Berkshire
LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Rotini/Tomato Lentil Sauce

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Handcut Cod Sub
Penne w/ Tomatoes & Spinach
Pastabilities



Collegian Staff Roles

Night Reindeer	Seema "Comet" Gangotirkar
Photo Reindeer	Kenneth "Dancer" McDonald
Copy Reindeer	Lorraine "Blitzen" Kennedy
Production Super Reindeer	Joylyn "Vixen" Lombard
Production Under Reindeer	Mark "Olive*" McGrath *Olive, the other reindeer



ACROSS
1 Designer Cassini
5 Musician Hayes
10 Stork's cousin
14 Autobahn car
15 Tanker problem
16 Created
17 Obstacle
18 Insect stage
19 Conspiracy
20 Mexican-menu items
22 Attacks
24 — King Cole
25 Key letter
26 Glasgow natives
29 Wane
32 Clean the slate
36 South of France
37 Without ethics
39 Gangster's rod
40 Photographer's device
43 Illuminated
44 Certify
45 French river
46 Chores
48 Alas, native
49 Upholstery material
50 Colorado Indian
52 Soak, as flax
53 Pollen producer
57 Formal attire
61 — Fria: Arizona
62 Speedy
64 By — learning method
65 18-wheeler
66 Nonsensical
67 Writer Wiesel
68 Nuisance
69 Cafe customer
70 Office fixture

DOWN
1 Place to dry hops
2 Moon goddess
3 Wax-coated cheese
4 Huge
5 Speck in the ocean
6 Health resorts
7 Ambiance
8 Part of T.A.E.
9 Jewelry fastener
10 Damage
11 Java's neighbor
12 Statue of a god
13 Match parts
21 — Palmas
23 Place for books
26 Refine ore
27 Eyelashes
28 Playwright Clifford
29 Overact
30 Skeletal parts
31 Lively
33 One more time
34 Impudent
35 Ms. Merman
37 Talent
38 Feign
41 Preference
42 Dawdled
47 Persian Gulf nation
49 Irritate
51 Unearthly
52 Less polite
53 File
54 "The African Queen" scriptwriter
55 Periodontist's concerns
56 Actress Delany
57 Prong
58 Mete (out)
59 Elevator name
60 Hunt
63 Boone or Sajak

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

12-10-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

SPORTS

Minutemen take on Jayhawks at Allen Fieldhouse

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

After six games last season, the Massachusetts basketball team was floundering below sea-level with a 2–4 record (one of those wins coming against Division II Chaminade).

This season the Minutemen have reversed their fortunes and started off the campaign 4–2. Despite the records though, the biggest difference between these two seasons is undoubtedly the seventh game.

Last season, the UMass contingent had the luxury of regrouping in its seventh game. After a sound thumping at the hands of Fresno State at home, the Minutemen played host to Drexel and slayed the Dragons handily, 69–48.

There will be no such luxury this year after six games as the Minutemen head out to Lawrence, Kansas and hallowed Allen Fieldhouse to take on the powerful No. 3 Jayhawks of said state university tonight.

The game can be seen on ESPN. Tip-off is scheduled for 9:30 p.m.

"From what I hear [Allen Fieldhouse] is a crazy place to play," UMass coach Bruiser Flint said. "They're the third ranked team in the country, but we're going to go out there and try to do the things we do."

The Jayhawks, under the steady guidance of coach Roy Williams, are constant national title contenders. Led by a pair of probable NBA lottery picks in senior Raef LaFrentz and junior Paul Pierce, and with two blue-chip recruits (Eric Chenowith and Kenny Gregory) already making an impact, Kansas is off to a 9–1 start.

LaFrentz was the preseason front-runner for National Player of the Year honors and has done nothing to hurt his chances of grabbing that hardware.

The 6-foot-11 senior center is averaging 21.9 points and 10.9 rebounds per game so far. His top performance came against Arizona when he scored 32 points in a 90–87 win over the defending national champs.

With Pierce, they form the most dynamic frontcourt combo in the nation.

Pierce, a junior, is averaging 19.1 points, 9.3 rebounds and 3.0 assists for KU, and had his best outing in an overtime win over Arizona State when he scored 28 points and grabbed nine rebounds along with two steals and two blocks.

Either LaFrentz or Pierce has been the Jayhawks' leading scorer in each of the team's first 10 contests.

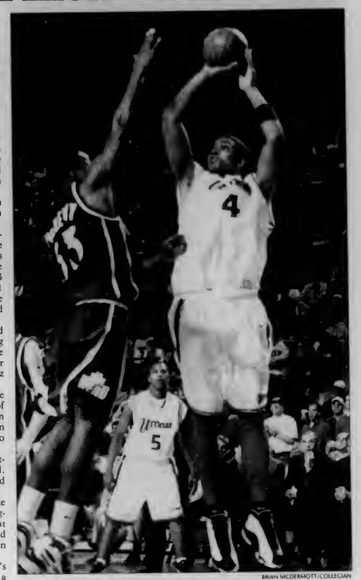
Chenowith and Gregory compliment the starting five well and can be lethal off the bench. Gregory backs up both guard positions and is the team's fourth-leading scorer at 10.3 ppg. Chenowith is averaging 8.1 points and 6.0 rebounds per game and leads Kansas with 23 blocked shots.

Ryan Robertson, Billy Thomas and T.J. Pugh round out Williams starting five — Robertson taking over the point guard position that for four years was run by current Utah Jazz guard Jacque Vaughn.

The point guard position is where the Minutemen are having most of their troubles with junior Charlton Clarke out of position, and freshman Jonathan DePina not quite ready to take over.

"DePina and [Rafael] Cruz are getting better everyday," Flint said. "DePina has been a little up and down."

Clarke played well overall at the Great Alaska Shootout but has struggled in the last two games, both at home. He scored 11 points and had three assists in a pair of Minuteman wins.



DePina has yet to prove that he's comfortable running the show on a consistent basis. He's averaging 2.2

Turn to UMASS, page 6

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/COLLEGIAN

Mike Babul, Lari Ketner and Charlton Clarke will face the imposing atmosphere of Allen Fieldhouse and the No. 3 Jayhawks tonight at 9:30 p.m.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/COLLEGIAN

Alongside senior Tyrone Weeks, junior Lari Ketner will duel with Kansas' forward tandem of Raef Lafrentz and Paul Pierce for domination in the paint.

Skiing heads into winter with high hopes

MacConnell has Holden and Muliero leading the men's and women's squads

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore Tom Holden will be the No. 1 man for the Minutemen as they head into the winter season..

By Aaron M. Soykin
Collegian Staff

Embarking upon the 38th year in his tenure with the Massachusetts skiing program, 78-year-old coach Bill MacConnell is extremely optimistic about the chances of both the men's and women's squads in 1998.

After posting a second-place finish in the Eastern College Ski Conference last winter, the Minutemen look to ascend to the top of their league on the coat-tails of highly-talented junior All-American Thomas Holden.

"He's a very impressive person," MacConnell said of the Lincoln native, who is also an academic All-American. "He is a talented skier and a very good student."

As the top male skier on the Minutemen squad, Holden will occupy the No. 1 spot on the roster. The No. 1 spot will bring the attention of all his opponents and teammates, especially after bursting into the spotlight his sophomore season when he first earned All-American recognition.

Behind Holden will be freshman and Michigan native Jordan Kingdon, who opted to attend a distant UMass instead of schools from his area. Following the promising Kingdom in the line-up will be junior Todd Fowler, who doubled as the goalie for the men's soccer team in the fall.

Senior co-captains Eric McCormack and Jason Cranston, and senior Justin Rouleau are expected to occupy the fourth, fifth, and sixth positions on the team.

Having returned the heart of their roster from last season, expectation may be high for the men's squad, which MacConnell feels will be in contention for the top spot in their league.

"We are fielding a stronger team, and it's going to be exciting for us this year," MacConnell said, who has also been a Forestry and Wildlife Management professor at UMass for nearly the past 50 years. "I would be amazed if we do not make it to the regionals."

The women's squad will also feature a premier performer this winter, and senior captain Leah Muliero will attempt to regain her previous NCAA qualifying form after a serious knee injury which occurred last February — midway through the season. As the most talented skier on the Minutewomen roster, MacConnell feels that Muliero is "a solid racer, who will give us some good leadership."

Skiing behind Muliero will be junior Katie Keane, who will attempt to improve upon what MacConnell called "an outstanding performance" last winter. Sophomore Heather Shea, freshman Margaret LaBombard, and Maryann Shirley will round out the top five for the women's team.

In addition to Eastern College Ski Conference powerhouses such as Plymouth State College and Boston College, the Minutemen and Minutewomen will have to contend with two new additions to the conference.

MacConnell feels that new arrivals Colby Sawyer College and New England College may provide a hurdle in both of their path to the championship.

"We have strong teams returning, and we have picked up some good transfers," MacConnell said. "But, there are two new colleges in the league, and that may make things more difficult."

After a training-camp program spanning from Dec. 26 until their first meet on Jan. 17, MacConnell's squads will open their season as host to the UMass Tournament held on the friendly slopes of Berkshire East, and will feature each member of the Eastern College Conference.

Lonely eyes turn to past; Where have they gone?

Where have you gone, Sal Manganaro? Our campus turns its lonely eyes to you... and with that said, how about Warren Norris, or maybe even Rob Bonneau?

The times have been lean as of late for the Massachusetts hockey team, mirroring the 2–10–1 record (0–8–1 in Hockey East) they've compiled up to this point of the season.

Jorma Kansanen

Yes, it's as bad as it looks.

But, in an effort to dissuade some of the dissatisfaction felt after a hard 5–1 loss to Northeastern last Saturday night, I lapsed into humming a Simon and Garfunkel classic, and my thoughts ushered in a Field of Dreams kind of mindset.

As I stood outside the locker room waiting for UMass coach Joe Mallen to make his appearance before the media, I reminisced with a longtime hockey volunteer upon the players and occurrences of my four-year Minuteman hockey journey. With the recent offensive woes for UMass being never better documented than in two one-goal games over the

Turn to HOCKEY, page 6

JORMA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN

Former Minuteman forward Warren Norris now suits up for the St. John's Maple Leafs of the AHL.

Winter is here, and hot stove baseball is getting warmer and warmer

The Hot Stove has been burning up lately. Here's a look.

• Darryl Kile is a real good quality pitcher, but apparently he's not that bright of a guy.

Arguably the biggest free agent this off-season, Kile signed a hefty three-year contract this past week with the Colorado Rockies. Now, he'll be making half his starts in Coors Field where curveball pitchers go to die.

Kile posted a career year in 1997 with the Houston Astros, pitching half his games in the Astrodome where long fly balls go to die.

The Astrodome is one of the most pitcher-friendly stadiums in the majors. With the dome, there's no wind to push the ball out, and curveball pitchers — like Kile — can be confident with their best pitch and worry little about deep flies carrying out of the park.

Not in Coors.

Vinny Castilla is proof that the rarified air in the Rockies makes average hitters into monsters. If Castilla played half his games in the Astrodome, he'd hit maybe five, six home runs a season.

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
on

Kile is no average pitcher, though. He ravaged the NL this season with a steady diet of benders and garnered Cy Young consideration for his breakout campaign. But, taking his show to Coors Field might signal the end of his short-lived All-Star career.

With the Rockies, Kile will try to do what Greg Harris and Bill Swift before him could not do.

Harris and Swift both signed with the Rockies after having career years, bolting San Diego and San Francisco respectively for the cooler, thinner, richer air of Colorado.

Swift has suffered a deluge of injuries, but neither pitcher was able to come close to duplicating the performances that earned them those lucrative contracts with the Rockies.

Kile is by far the most talented and proven of these three hurlers, but his decision to bolt Houston for the money in Colorado might just have cost him a career.

• Brady Anderson has finalized a deal with the Baltimore Orioles that will likely keep him patrolling Camden Yards for the duration of his career.

Turn to HURLBRINK, page 6

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVII Issue 67 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, December 11, 1997

The year in review

As 1997 draws to a close, check out what the Arts & Living staff thought was the best and worst of the year (see Arts & Living, page 5).

UMass Storrs up for Husky battle

Tez Kraft and the UMass women's basketball team takes on Connecticut at 7 p.m. at the Mullins Center. (See SPORTS, page 14.)

WORLD

U.N. team to start field work in Congo today

KINSHASA, Congo (AP) — U.N. investigators finally got the go-ahead to begin interviewing residents today in a town where President Laurent Kabila's forces allegedly slaughtered Rwandan refugees, often in full view of townspeople.

Team members met with Congo officials yesterday in the northwestern town of Mbandaka, and the officials pledged to assist the probe, team leader Jose Diaz said.

Seventeen U.N. investigators and 10 local workers have set up camp in Mbandaka, a remote town with no electricity or clean water. In addition to interviewing residents, the investigators will do visual surveys of sites where bodies are allegedly buried. The investigation has been stalled repeatedly since July over differences between the U.N. team and Congolese officials. Last month, U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan threatened to pull the investigators out unless Kabila allowed them to visit alleged massacre sites.

Rwandan Tutsis who fought for Kabila are accused of massacring the Rwandan Hutus in retaliation for the 1994 genocide of more than 500,000 Tutsis by Hutu extremists. The refugees had fled their homeland to escape punishment for the Hutu-orchestrated slaughter there.

NATION

Judge orders shooting suspect tried as adult

PADUCAH, Ky. (AP) — A judge had little choice yesterday but to order that a teen-ager be tried as an adult on charges of gunning down three fellow classmates in a school lobby, lawyers said. Under Kentucky law, anyone at least 14 years old who commits a serious felony using a firearm is considered an adult.

Michael Carneal is 14 and used a handgun in the killing of three students Dec. 1, police allege.

Carneal appeared before Judge Donna Dixon at a short hearing yesterday that was closed to the public and the media.

Dixon ruled that her decision would not be made public, saying it was confidential under the state's juvenile laws. She also ordered lawyers on both sides not to discuss the case.

But legal experts said the judge had only two choices: order that Carneal be tried as an adult or set him free for lack of probable cause.

Carneal was not set free. After the hearing he was returned to the unidentified juvenile detention center in another part of Kentucky where he has been held since the shootings.

"Judge Dixon's made a very cautious, safe ruling that no one needs to talk about," said Charlotte Scott, a former prosecutor and public defender now in private practice.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 35 LOW: 22	HIGH: 37 LOW: 19	HIGH: 36 LOW: 16

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics.....page 13
Crossword .....page 13
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 12
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 14

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

GEO vows to continue grade–in; moves to avoid violation of code

By Tamar Carroll & Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts teaching assistants brought their work to Chancellor David K. Scott's office for the second day in a row yesterday.

Yesterday, however, the graduate students stayed outside the office foyer in order to comply with the University's Picket Code and a request from Scott.

After the first day of the grade–in held by the teaching assistants, which began at 9 a.m. Tuesday, Scott declared the protestors in violation of the Picket Code, claiming they were disrupting the normal activities of his office.

"While the stated intent of the job action may have been dissent, in fact, it was disruptive," Scott said in a press release.

The teaching assistants graded papers and exams, read, held office hours and talked in the foyer of Scott's office in the Whitmore Administration Building from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday.

Scott felt that these actions, intended to gain visibility for the Graduate Employee Organization (GEO) and to pressure the administration to settle the 22–month long graduate student contract negotiations, prevented his staff from completing their normal work.

"For Scott to say that we're violating the code so suddenly is absurd ... We challenge the administration to find one item of violation."
GEO member Jon Zerolnick

"Therefore, I am telling students who plan to take part in this job action, that they must move and vacate the space where my staff work," Scott said.

If the students didn't move, Scott said, he would institute disciplinary hearings against them, in accordance with the Picket Code.

GEO leaders and teaching assistants disagreed with Scott's charges that their actions were disruptive.

James Shaw, a teaching assistant in the Sociology Department who participated in the grade–in both days, said the TAs did not stop Scott's staff from getting their work done.

"I think it is a bogus claim," Shaw said. "We didn't disrupt any University business."

"We were very careful to ensure that the picket code was not violated by the grade–in," said GEO member Dickie Wallace.

"For Scott to say that we're violating the code so suddenly is absurd," said labor center and GEO member Jon Zerolnick. "We challenge the administration to find one item of violation."

However, GEO decided to move the grade–in to the hallway outside of Scott's office yesterday in order to comply with his instructions.

"Scott had to do something so people in Boston don't

Turn to GEO, page 2

LAUREN ROSATI/COLLEGIAN

Makin' Copies!

Douglas Thornton Jr., Account Representative and Gary Lawrence demonstrate the abilities of a Canon copier at the Canon Product Show in the Campus Center yesterday.

Student Senate speaks with Housing Director Gilbert about 3.5 percent fee hike

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Last night's meeting of the Student Government Association (SGA) Undergraduate Student Senate began with a presentation by Michael Gilbert, Director of Housing at the University of Massachusetts.

Starting this spring semester, buildings in both Orchard Hill and Southwest Residential Areas will be locked for 24 hours a day. Gilbert spoke to the senators about this pilot program and addressed concerns that they had.

"One of the things we focus on is the needs of the full community. With that in mind we've made some changes to enhance security... We are asking residents to live with this new system for a semester while we study it," Gilbert said.

Depending on the outcome of the pilot program, buildings in Central Residential Area may be included later in the spring semester, followed by Northeast and Sylvan Residential Areas the following fall semester.

Gilbert also presented the senate with the Housing Services budget for the 1999 fiscal year. Housing costs will be increased by 3.5 percent for students who live on campus in a double room, or by about $86.

Reasons for the fee increase include residence life enhancements, enhanced security and increased stipends for Residential Assistants.

"We had two choices— pass additional fees onto students or reallocate money within our budget. If we reallocated, we would be looking at less services and activities... we are asking students to tighten their belts because we are in budget straits," Gilbert said.

Later in the meeting a motion was passed to create a schedule for representatives from University Productions and Concerts (UPC) to report to the SGA on progress toward its annual Spring Concert.

"This isn't a hostile motion against UPC, it's just asking them to come and tell us what's going on. It's a proactive thing," said Senator Brian McManus (Southwest Area) who presented the motion.

Another motion written by McManus also passed on the Senate floor. It concerned University Health Services (UHS) and their cancellation of the annual holiday party, the implementation of a policy which forbids the display of holiday decorations anywhere on the premises and the cancellation of a charity fund–raiser for the Women, Infant and Children's Foundation.

The purpose of the motion was to support the staff of UHS and "their desire to celebrate the holiday season".

"The Undergraduate Senate of the University of Massachusetts believes that diversity and multiculturalism should be celebrated, not suppressed," McManus wrote.

Passed unanimously also last night was a motion to add a referendum

Turn to SGA, page 2

Timeline set for installing 24–hour card entry systems

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Beginning next semester, all residence halls in Southwest and Orchard Hill Residential Areas will be on 24–hour card access.

Currently, residence halls with or without card access are open Monday through Friday until 8 p.m. and locked all day on weekends. However, the purpose of this security measure is to stop people from wandering in residence halls where they do not belong.

"With card access, we can grant people appropriate access 24 hours a day," said Michael Gilbert, Director of Housing.

"We don't have the capability of putting this type of security in place with keys," he said.

While some students may see 24–hour card access as inconvenient, Housing services and Public Safety are hoping that many students will realize the importance of safety in residence halls.

"People have to change their patterns of behavior in order to make places on this campus safer," Gilbert said.

"This system will minimize the opportunity for individuals to wander around residence halls for the purpose of stealing, soliciting and peeping," said UMass Chief of Police John Luippold. "If it stops one thief or one individual from being hurt, then I think it is well worth it."

Despite card access, Luippold said that students should always take pro–active measures in keeping their belongings safe, which means having their rooms locked at all times.

However, upgrading security isn't cheap.

According to Gilbert, Housing fees will increase 3.5 percent or $86 per student next fall.

In addition to residents who live in the buildings, many residence halls in Southwest and Orchard Hill also have classrooms to which students need access.

Students are taking classes in the residence hall class rooms will be granted access to those halls but

Turn to LOCKS, page 2

Miller, 61, dies after long illness

Gertrude Miller, 61, of Turners Falls, died Sunday, Dec. 7 after a long illness.

She was employed by the University of Massachusetts for 15 years. She worked at the Mather Career Center until 1988, when she transferred to the Public Safety Department, where she worked as a secretary to the Chief of Police for the past eight years.

Miller is survived by her son Michael Miller of Texas.

Funeral services will be held Dec. 10 at 11 a.m. at McCarthy Funeral Home on Prospect Street in Turners Falls. Call hours begin at 10 a.m.

Sculpture stolen Saturday

Amherst Brewing Company offers reward

Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

A sculpture was stolen from the Amherst Brewing Company last Saturday night and the management is offering a $100 reward for its return.

The plaster sculpture of a woman was stolen off of a wall while the restaurant was open, between approximately 12:30 and 1:30 a.m., according to Stephen Oates, general manager.

"It's funny that they got her out, but at the same time it's part of the atmosphere... She was here since day one and was part of the family. Now she's missing," Oates said.

Oates also wanted to stress that charges will not be pressed if the sculpture is returned and is surprised that someone was able to steal it off the wall with staff and patrons nearby.

"We're amazed that someone did it. Congratulations on their ability, but we would just like to have her back," Oates said.

The sculpture is approximately two feet long by two feet wide, and is light brown in color. Anyone with any information should contact Amherst Brewing Company at 253–4400 and ask for Steve or John.

Clashes drag out treaty discussion

By Charles J. Hanley
Associated Press

KYOTO, Japan — The world's nations bickered into the final hours last Thursday as they considered a historic agreement to reduce fuel emissions of industrial countries in the 21st century to guard against global warming.

If approved, the Kyoto Protocol will set an energy course for much of the world for decades to come.

"The eyes of the world are upon us now," chief U.S. negotiator Stuart Eizenstat declared in a contentious post-midnight session of the Kyoto climate conference. "We have an opportunity to do really something good."

On a final day that stretched into the next morning, the future of the carbon-loaded atmosphere hung on the calm click of calculators as negotiators in conference back rooms set budget periods, apportioned quotas and toted up emissions of the "greenhouse" gases linked to global warming.

Eventually, U.S. officials said, a grand European-U.S.-Japanese compromise took shape: The European Union would reduce its greenhouse emissions by 8 percent below 1990 levels, the United States by 7 percent, and Japan by 6 percent.

Twenty-one other industrialized countries would meet similar binding targets, and the reductions would be achieved between 2008 and 2012. All are committed to cut even deeper after that. But an underpinning of the reduction scheme —

Turn to KYOTO, page 2

NAACP calls vote on member's admitted crime

By Paul Shepard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — NAACP board members have called a Dec. 20 meeting in Chicago to decide whether an influential colleague can keep her post after admitting she took more than $13,000 from a leukemia-stricken associate.

Several board members suggested the vote on Hazel Dukes could go a long way in determining if the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the nation's oldest and largest civil rights group, can improve a reputation tarnished in recent years by fiscal improprieties, leadership battles and muted civil rights advocacy.

"All of this weakens and hurts the organization," said Julian Bond, a former Georgia lawmaker and an NAACP board member. "There is no justification for what she said she did. There is no rationale."

Bond has joined a growing chorus of critics on the 64-member board who want Dukes to follow the wishes of the group's executive committee and resign.

"It would be in her best interests and the best interests of the organization for her to leave," said Leon Russell, a board member from Florida. "This issue goes to our credibility as a group, and if we are supposed to represent people across the nation on civil rights matters, we should try to avoid ethical problems on our side."

GEO

CONTINUED FROM PAGE

get worried," Zerolnick said.

"This is why we are out in the hallway today," Shaw said.

Shaw estimated there were between 10 and 15 TAs in the hallway at any one time, with a total of around 50 participating in the grade-in through out the day.

Although the TAs were forced to move into the hallway, Shaw felt they were still able to accomplish their purpose.

"We are trying to be less confrontational," Shaw said. "We can be just as visible in the hallway. We have in no way disappeared."

GEO plans to continue the grade-in daily until the last day of finals. They hope to impress the campus community with the amount of work they do.

"Instead of doing our work in our offices, where nobody sees us, we're bringing it here, to let people know how much work we do in educating the undergraduate student body," Shaw said.

They also hope that by exerting pressure on the administration, a final agreement on the contract may be reached.

"Through this action, the administration is saying that they are not interested in free expression," Zerolnick said. "We didn't know what it will take for them to realize the severity of the situation."

"It is all toward getting support for our contract," Shaw said. "We are not going away until we get a new contract."

SGA

CONTINUED FROM PAGE

question to the spring election ballot for the purpose of gathering student input on the number of student general admission tickets to UMass basketball games which has declined with the new reserved seating system.

"This bill creates a referendum question... I just think students should have a say about how student tickets are distributed," said Sen. Michael Rossette (Southwest Area)

locks

CONTINUED FROM PAGE

only during class times.

According to Assistant Director of Housing Services Sharon Shevlin, during add/drop period next semester while students are planning their schedules, changes to students ID cards will be processed every day.

"Students who will be adding a class in a residence hall will need to add that class before 4 p.m. the day before the class meets in order to have access to the building," Shevlin explained.

By Spring of 1999, Housing Services plans on having all five residential areas on 24-hour card access.

The plan is for Central Residential Area to have limited card access next semester, where doors will lock at 8 p.m. Monday through Friday and will be locked all day on the weekends. Next Fall, Central will go to 24-hour card access and Northeast and Sylvan Residential Areas will have card access systems installed. Northeast and Sylvan will become 24-hour card access in the Spring of 1999.

Following Northeast and Sylvan, plans will be discussed to install card access boxes at the doors which lead to the hall rooms.

Currently, Thoreau and Cance Residence Halls in Southwest are on a pilot program that grants residents access through the second door.

Misunderstanding halts progress in negotiations

By Victoria Graves
Collegian Staff

A scheduled meeting between the Goodell student negotiators and the administration did not take place last Thursday night due to what seems to be a misunderstanding.

There was a farewell dinner for Fred Tillis, Associate Chancellor for Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity, scheduled on the same night as the negotiator meeting which may have explained the lack of administrator turnout at the meeting.

"We waited for 45 minutes hoping that they would come a little late. But nothing like that happened," said Deepika Marya, Graduate Student Senate (GSS) President.

Members of the administration insist that there was an agreement that there would be no meeting on Dec. 4 due to the retirement dinner.

"We didn't have a meeting... one thing I think has happened is that there has not been consistently the same set of students at these meetings. That may have been one of the reasons [for the confusion]," said Marcellette Williams, Deputy Chancellor.

Some student negotiators believe that this miscommunication shows a lack of commitment by the administration to follow through with the Goodell agreements.

"Their attitude as of late at the [bargaining] table has been less than productive... there's a lot of work left to be done. If the administration is serious, they will take the time to include students in the decision-making process," said Tom Taaffe, a graduate students in anthropology.

Marya does admit to being disappointed but also hopes this incident does not set back the progress of the negotiations.

"When something like this happens it's just disappointing. I'm not saying this is a huge grave error... in the last couple of meetings the negotiations did not go well at all from the students' perspective, and something like this just exacerbates the problem," Marya said.

Both Williams and Thomas Robinson, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs agree that on several occasions it was discussed with student negotiators that there would be no meeting.

"It's unfortunate that it has been reported that the administration chose not to show up at the meeting. I'm sure if you ask, someone has to 'fess up to knowing about this mutually agreed upon decision," Williams said.

"We had discussed [the meeting cancellation] no less than five or six times... I'm terribly sorry for the confusion. There was no intent to blow anyone off. Obviously there was a misunderstanding," Robinson said.

The Goodell Takeover which occurred last March was a protest in response to the administration's refusal to comply with the ALANA agreements of 1992. Issues ranged from child care to minority enrollment at the University of Massachusetts.

Kyoto

CONTINUED FROM PAGE

the trading of "emissions quotas" — came under Third World attack in the final debate in the main committee, delaying formal conference approval. Some consider trading to be a loophole that allows the United States and others to avoid full cutbacks.

Argentine diplomat Raul Estrada, chairman of the main talks, warned the developing countries that their last-minute objections threatened to "blow up" the agreement.

The Kyoto document would represent an unprecedented international effort to control energy use for the common good. One leading U.S. environmentalist, John Adams of the Natural Resources Defense Council, hailed it as "immensely important," although the green movement generally wished the targets were more ambitious. Unhappy business leaders, meanwhile, particularly from the U.S. coal and oil industry, said the energy restraints could only cause economic distress.

But a key judgment — from the U.S. Senate — was yet to come. Because the Kyoto outline did not mandate reductions by developing countries, it was expected to face an uphill struggle for ratification in Washington. Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott said the body "will not ratify a flawed treaty."

The key Kyoto compromise came Monday after the White House freed the U.S. negotiators' hand to move off a less bold plan. And the talks got a later boost when Ryutaro Hashimoto, prime minister of Japan, telephoned President Clinton and European leaders in search of more last-minute flexibility.

Clinton had originally proposed that emissions be cut only to, not below, 1990 levels between 2008 and 2012. The European Union had favored a more ambitious plan: cutting emissions by 15 percent below 1990 levels by 2010.

The final plan is a complex, highly technical document whose many variable features gave negotiators leeway to find middle ground in many areas:

REDUCTIONS

The cuts cover carbon dioxide and nitrous oxide, products of fossil fuel combustion; methane, emitted by organic waste; and three "halocarbons," substitutes for banned ozone-damaging substances. The targets range from the minus-8 percent level for Europe to a 10 percent increase allowed Iceland because it has an aluminum smelter coming on line.

ALL OF US HERE AT THE COLLEGIAN KNOW THAT YOU WILL MISS US OVER THE BREAK. SO, WE JUST WANT TO REMIND YOU THAT WHEN YOU GET THAT COLLEGIAN CRAVING CHECK OUT YOUR FAVORITE BACK ISSUES ON-LINE AT WWW.UMASS.EDU/RSO/COLLEGIAN.

Photo Savvy?

The Collegian Photo Department is now accepting applications for next semester.

Interested photographers should stop by 113 Campus Center with a portfolio and fill out an application, or call 545-1701 and talk to Lauren.

THE MOLSON SUN & SNOW FEST! IN CANADA
5 DAY SKI & SNOWBOARD LIFT TICKET
5 NIGHTS LODGING, LUXURY CONDO, FULLY EQUIP.
5 DAYS & NIGHTS OF COLLEGIATE PARTIES, CONTESTS ETC.
Students from over 150 U.S. Colleges
Group Leader & Campus Rep Discounts
$239
Please note: The legal age to consume alcohol in Canada is 19
Call or E-Mail for a free color brochure
www.skitravel.com
1-800-999-SKI-9

The Collegian–
it's hip
it's rad
it's where it's at so don't miss the semesters last issue ...
Tommorow.

Campus Activities presents
SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY

"Scared Scriptless"
Comedy Improv
"Scared Scriptless" High Energy, Quick Wit, and ability to wring Humor from the most incongruous of situations makes the group a HIGH POINT of the New York comedy scene!" -Ma... BACKSTAGE
- Student opener: Chris Walsh -
Campus Cente...
8:...
Friday, Dec...
Movie: "EVENT HORIZON" to ...
"Event Horizon" featuring: Lawrenc... ay,
December 14 at 8 & 10PM ...
Visit us on the Web
http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calander.htm
Sponsored by Campus Activities through a grant from the Umass Auxiliary Services and the Vice-Chancelor for Student Affairs
The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

COME SUPPORT THE UMASS MINUTEWOMEN AS THEY TAKE ON THE CONNECTICUT HUSKIES THIS THURSDAY, DEC. 11TH AT 7:00PM IN THE MULLINS CENTER!
All Students who attend will be eligible to win one of two chances to shoot for $10,000 towards tuition in the Phoenix Halftime Shootout!
UMass basketball

STUDENT TICKETS ARE FREE, SO PICK THEM UP AT THE TICKET OFFICE IN CURRY HICKS CAGE TODAY!

UM expands Math faculty

By Ron Ventresca
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts department of mathematics and statistics has added three new faculty members this semester. The Retirement Incentive Succession Planning Program (RISPP), has cleared the path within the department for hiring younger professors.

The three new associate professors, David Horntrop, John Tsimikas and Rinat Kedem, are currently teaching introductory courses within the department.

Horntrop said, "Within the mathematics department, a student can make very good choices among the classes offered." Horntrop, who is teaching Calculus 131, has an extensive background in problem solving through computer simulation.

Despite his adeptness with computers, he warns students, "It's a common misconception that machines cannot make errors. A machine can never replace a thinking person, though it certainly can enhance that person's understanding."

Tsimikas has spent the past three years doing post-doctoral work at Harvard University. His primary focus is bio- statistical research, which has included analyzing the statistics on cancer research, magnetic resonance, ultrasound and CT imaging. He teaches introductory statistics for business majors, but hopes to receive a grant for work in the New England Journal of Medicine.

"A good deal of statistical research involves putting some structure on your intuition," Tsimikas said. "If someone is nervous about a certain mathematical formula it's usually because they can't see the big picture."

Right now, Tsimikas is concerned with preparing his students for what's out there, always emphasizing that the work they are doing in school has practical applications that they will need to use in the years ahead.

Kedem has spent recent years doing post-doctoral research at Kyoto University in Japan and the University of California at Berkeley. She also teaches Calculus 131, with a class of about 25 students, and is positive that students will be able to get more out of calculus than in the large auditoriums with hundreds of students. Kedem, being mainly interested in physics and inter-global systems, encourages students to take the same approach to mathematics.

"Physicists want to answer a specific question and will use any mathematical method to help find it, whereas mathematicians tend to study structures within a particular sub-field," she said. "If you move into a field from a different point of view, you're likely to ask questions that have never been asked before, you have a different perspective and different source of answers."

These bright and innovative young professors have taken tenure track positions, or more simply, plan to spend a great deal of time at UMass. The content of the courses they are teaching now may not have changed much in the past 30 years, but given time and freshness of approach, they are confident they will make a difference.

"We in the department of mathematics and statistics are exceedingly delighted to have three new, young, vibrant faculty members," said department chair Donald St. Mary. "The department is currently in the midst of a major rejuvenation of the faculty ranks and the focus of the process is on junior level appointments. We are extremely pleased to have brought to the University three such promising individuals who work on the cutting edge of modern mathematical science."

Korea, China, United States launch talks

By Alexander G. Higgins
Associated Press

GENEVA — North and South Korea, brought to the negotiating table by the United States and China, declared yesterday they had "successfully inaugurated" talks for a permanent peace agreement 44 years after the end of the Korean War.

Chinese Vice Foreign Minister Tang Jiaxuan said the historic opening two-day session "marks a very good beginning."

Stanley Roth, U.S. assistant secretary of state, said the four-nation talks were "cordial and productive."

But expectations were low for the first meeting, which mainly was a get-acquainted session that allowed each side to state its main demands and then discuss how to proceed.

Just the fact that South and North Korean diplomats faced each other in the talks — and mingled at two cocktail parties — was regarded as a breakthrough.

The North Koreans stressed that they want the United States to withdraw its 37,000 troops from the South on the grounds that they are causing the tension on the Korean Peninsula.

The U.S. delegation responded that the tension resulted from the communist North's "excessive reliance" on the military.

A U.S. official, who briefed reporters on condition of anonymity, said the idea of considering troop reductions was "way ahead of the process" and said there would be no talk about troop reductions in the four-party talks.

The U.S. delegation, which includes military officers, was disappointed that the North Koreans omitted the military from its team at the talks, said the official.

The next session lasting "some days" will be held in Geneva on March 16, said Roth, who chaired the first round. Lower-level officials will meet in Beijing in February to work on the agenda. "We now can begin to raise our expectations," said the U.S. official, but he added the talks may last for years.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

'Tis the treeson

A plentiful variety of Christmas trees at the Amherst/Pelham Boy Scout Christmas tree Sale in Amherst yesterday afternoon.

U.S., seven other countries to fight high–tech cyber–crimes together

By Cassandra Burrell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States and seven other industrial nations agreed yesterday to work more closely to catch high-tech criminals who lie, cheat, steal by computer.

Attorney General Janet Reno and 15 counterparts from Canada, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Russia and the United Kingdom met in Washington for the first time to build the international relationships they hope will give them an edge in matching wits with slippery computer criminals.

"Twenty-first century technologies are going to change how we live, and make many things easier," Reno said. "But computers and networks are also opening up a new frontier of crime."

National boundaries no longer restrict criminals, Reno said. "For instance, we know now that a criminal can sit in one country and disrupt a computer system in another country thousands of miles away," she said. "If we are to keep up with cybercrime, we must work together as never before."

The group of justice and interior ministers agreed on a general plan including more computer training for law enforcement personnel in each country and the establishment of high-tech contacts who will be available to officials in each country on a 24-hour basis. "Each nation has committed to develop faster ways to trace attacks coming through computer networks so that we can quickly identify the hacker or criminal who is responsible," Reno said. Each nation also has agreed to devote more time and resources to crimes committed by international criminals who escape extradition. "Those of us that conduct domestic prosecution of our nationals in lieu of extradition agree to pursue such prosecutions with the same commitment of time, personnel and financial resources as are devoted to the prosecution of serious crimes committed within our own territory," said a seven-page communique the officials released yesterday.

"Too often, a criminal will flee a country and return to his or her own homeland, hoping to escape justice if extradition is not possible," Reno said. "Now, that will change. What's more significant is that this agreement applies not just to computer crimes, but to all types of otherwise extraditable crimes." Computer criminals are hard to track because global computer networks allow anyone to communicate with others around the world inexpensively and often anonymously, said Scott Charney, chief of the Justice Department's computer crime and intellectual property section.

"As a result, people who are interested in doing criminal things can attack computer systems from anywhere in the world and use computer systems to facilitate traditional offenses, like distribution of copyrighted material or child pornography," he said.

The countries also agreed to:

-Take steps to preserve important information on computer networks. "In taking this step, information will be less likely to be tampered with by criminals or erased by routine system update procedures," Reno said.

-Review their legal systems and update laws to make sure they address electronic crime adequately.

THE AMHERST DELICATESSEN
MEMBER O.C.M.P.
WE ACCEPT ALL MAJOR CREDIT CARDS.
Can We Build One For You?
Serving Sandwiches, Bagels & Lox, Fresh Soups & Salads, Take Out.
★ DELIVERIES CALL 549-6314 ★
★ OPEN UNTIL 9p.m. ★

Great Gifts
Bags Stocking Stuffers Hats
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Earrings Rings Bracelets Chains Sweaters Toys India Print Bedspreads Candles
Gloves Mugs Merry X'mas Cards Socks Leather Sole Chinese Shoes Dresses
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The Mercantile
Weeknights 9PM Dec. 4-22
Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St. Amherst-Carriage Shops

GRANDSTANDS
THURSDAY & FRIDAY
KARAOKE
W/ DIVA PRODUCTIONS BY LAURIE
SAT. DEC. 13
LOVE BOMB
SUN. DEC. 14
The Mitchells
King Radio
UPCOMING SHOWS
Dec. 20 Carrol Hahn
Dec. 21 Smolenski
Steve Kimball & the Steel Band
Dec. 24 Big Bad Bollocks
Northampton (Exit 18 off I-91)
584-4830

PANDA EAST
CHINESE RESTAURANT & SUSHI BAR
Best! 1997
"We bring Chinatown to you"
BEST CHINESE RESTAURANT IN THE VALLEY SINCE 1987
LUNCH SPECIALS
STARTING AT $3.95
7 DAYS A WEEK
FULL MENU
FOR SUSHI, SASHIMI AND TERIYAKI IS AVAILABLE
TELEPHONE: (413) 256-8923 / 256-8924 FAX: 253-1173
103 North Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002
Delivery Express: 549-0077

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
AMHERST
Office of the Chancellor
374 Whitmore Administration Building
Box 38370
Amherst, MA 01003-8370
(413) 545-2211

December 9, 1997

To the Campus Community

In response to inquires about religious holiday displays on campus, I wish to bring to the attention of the community our current guidelines concerning displays on University property. These guidelines have been issued before, and we continue to welcome feedback and suggestions in order to improve them in the future.

David K. Scott

David K. Scott
Chancellor

Guidelines Regarding Religious Symbols, Decorations and Displays

The First Amendment protects the rights of individuals to freedom of religion and the right to freely express their religious beliefs through speech and symbols. However, the First Amendment also prohibits public institutions like state universities from endorsing religion, or non-religion, or favoring one religion over another.

As a result the University should protect the right of individuals to celebrate religious holidays by decorating their personal space (e.g., residence hall rooms, desk tops), but the University should not promote religious observance or encourage official use of public property to promote religious displays -- except for educational purposes. In some cases a personal space may be a desk in a public space, but we should realize that space as personal space. Religious displays in a public space outside or inside campus buildings should be sponsored by groups or individuals rather than the University. Moreover, the University will set aside appropriate areas for any group to erect private displays of religious symbols for a limited time during religious holidays. Such displays should identify the sponsor, explain the purpose and meaning of the display, and note that the display is not sponsored by the University.

Any individual or organization wishing to place a private religious display in a public space on the grounds of the campus should make their request to the Physical Plant Customer Service Department at 545-0600. The Customer Service Department considers proposals for such displays on criteria unrelated to content such as the location of other displays and events, availability of electrical power, public safety concerns and so on.

Those responsible for implementing these guidelines should exercise sensitivity and care in interpreting them and in distinguishing between private expression and University sponsorship.

The University of Massachusetts is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Institution

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Spotlight exposed

Brian Schwartzman

A new store has arrived in Amherst's Marketplace of ideas, and, according to libertarian theory, any voice adds depth and meaning to the marketplace and strengthens our democratic society. The question in any society that claims freedom of the press/speech is, what happens to the marketplace when an idea appears contrary to all that is socially responsible?

A newspaper, The Spotlight, which is being sold through vending machines in Amherst and on campus has brought this question to our community. An article which appeared in last Friday's Daily Hampshire Gazette reported that in a somewhat ironic twist, the vending machine (located in front of Classe Cafe) was defaced with a Star of David — a Jewish symbol. What in the newspaper could possibly evoke a response typically ascribed to neo-Nazis?

Lauren Levin, who works for the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) was quoted in The Gazette as saying "It's probably the most widely read extremist publication in America today... What I'm curious about is why they have suddenly cropped up in Amherst?"

According to information provided by the ADL, The Spotlight, founded in 1975, is the mouthpiece of the Liberty Lobby and its founder Willis A. Carto. "Since its founding in 1955, the Washington, D.C.-based Liberty Lobby has gradually grown to become the most influential and active anti-Semitic propaganda organization in the United States," according to literature distributed by the ADL.

Willis A. Carto has been an activist for extremist conservatism since the 1950s. He founded the Populist Party, which in 1988 ran David Duke, former Ku Klux Klan Grand Wizard, for President. In 1979, Carto founded the Institute for Historical Review, the leading proponent of Holocaust revisionist material.

The paper contends that Jews fabricated their own genocide to gain world support, and that Israel is plotting to conquer the entire Middle East. The paper has also called into question the notion of hate crimes, and referred to homosexuals as "misfits."

"We're not shy about pointing out the undue influence the Israeli lobby has on Congress," said Spotlight spokesman Michael Piper in the Gazette.

So what is this publication of bigoted and distorted ideology doing on our campus, and what should we as concerned citizens do about it? Well, for one thing, it's well disguised. The tabloid contains articles that address similar topics as many well respected advocacy journals.

"The [information] is more subtle, it works with people's prejudices and could increase them," said Lisa Lipshire, of Northampton, a clerk at the Jones Library.

When Lipshire discovered the newspaper and was informed of its content, she was so upset she contacted the Gazette, the Collegian, and attended Tuesday night's Amherst Civil Rights Review commission, where the topic was addressed.

Larry Goldbaum, director of the Office of Jewish Affairs, presented information about the paper and Liberty Lobby to the commission. The commission discussed the complex issue but has not decided if it can or should take action. Currently a permit is not required to install a vending machine as long as it does not interfere with pedestrians or traffic. As a journalist I hate to say it, but maybe this policy should be reconsidered.

Goldbaum said he is not advocating censorship but he would like people to be informed about where The Spotlight is coming from.

Members of the University community need to make it clear that racist material does not have a place here. If you don't take my word for it (and I always encourage one to question what they read) go to Haigis mall, buy a copy, and see for yourself. Otherwise, don't waste 50 cents in supporting this cause; instead, write letters to the newspaper and voice disapproval. It's OK to legitimately challenge a publication, but it's not OK to vandalize its boxes or harass its supporters.

Every voice, opinion and perspective deserves to be heard in the marketplace. Well, The Spotlight has had its opportunity, so let's collectively scrutinize these ideas — and show the Liberty Lobby that its rotten apples will not sell in this market.

Bryan Schwartzman is a Collegian Columnist.

We're not in Kansas

Dahlia DeSimone

We're supposed to be in Kansas.

But we're not.

Somebody in this vast University forgot to fill out a form in time. We, (being Fred and I) had no plane tickets. Hard to go to Kansas without plane tickets.

But hey, I'm not bitter.

This was supposed to be a trip to remember. Funny stories about underage Fred sneaking into bars, nick-nace with flyhawks on them, hotel towels stolen. Oh what a trip it would have been.

And oh, I think we're in "List Land."

Where this trip would have ranked on this list is under debate. Fred just may have puked on Lari Ketner's sneakers at the game, which would have made it a bad trip. Fred may also have been arrested outside the Holiday Inn in Lawrence, Kan. yelling "Where are my pants!?" while holding a Natty Light in one hand and a Jayhawk cheerleader in another. Then it would have been a good trip.

Luke Meredith

Highly unlikely, but nonetheless good.

I figured I'd end the semester the way it began. With stories about my life. Though it may seem I talk about them every week, I really do try to talk about other stuff. It just never works that way.

Besides, what would you do if I started writing things like, "Taft's greatest contribution to 19th-century America was his ability to balance Victorian values with his flippant sense of jingoistic urgency."

Ponder that one while we spend January apart. Oh, I'm not doing much during break, just taking a French class and chilling really. I promise to take some of that time to think of more columns without stories of my life.

Until then, though, you'll just have to deal.

"Of WaffleHouses," April 1988

When I was 13, we (being the Meredith family) drove to Florida from Methuen (oh, what a drive). We went to Disneyland, Wet and Wild and this warehouse in Tallahasee where I got my Florida Gators t-shirt. We ate at a WaffleHouse in rural Georgia.

Quite a trip, a trip we won by filling out a form at Romano's, the pizza place down the street. Highlights included eating at the WaffleHouse. Big waffles, kid. Big waffles.

"Rainy Days and Mondays," April 1995

When I was 20, we (being the future Mill Valley family) went to Plymouth State for the weekend. It rained, and we got really drunk and rolled around in the mud at a party that featured keg-tossing. Big guys, throwing kegs and beating each other up.

Afterwards, my friends went to the Laundromat while I fell asleep watching a Braves–Phillies game. The Braves lost.

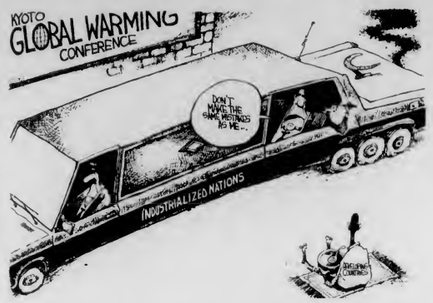
Oh, and there were no Mondays involved, but it's always good to include a Carpenters reference when possible.

"Chumbawumba Dreaming," October 1997

Highlighted by hearing the song currently gripping the nation three times, along with an interview with the band. (Do you know they're like 40?). This trip, which I wrote a preview for (newspaper talk), included me getting kicked out of a bar for passing out on a bar stool.

Quote to take from the famed Lowell trip: The bartender told Walshie (my friend), "Your friend's gonna have to leave." Whereupon Walshie responds, "Why? He's just sleeping."

Some people just don't get it. Rock on, Walshie, and thanks for everything.



"City of Steel," April 1987

Easter 1987 was spent at Uncle Chuckie's house. Me, my brother Mike and cousin Chuckie spent our days pretending we were in Bon Jovi (I was Jon, of course) and drinking up to a case of Coke apiece. Highlights include family videotape of me yelling at team members in a wiffleball game we did not win, followed by me puking up said case of Coke on the road to Amish country the next day. Possibly the best trip ever.

And if Fred and I were in Kansas, we may have been puking up a case of something, probably not Coke. Whether that would have been a better way to spend our time is still up for debate.

Lord knows we never would have been able to score a wiffleball game in Lawrence.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian

Urgent information

Dahlia DeSimone

Since there is nothing better to do in the next week but study and absorb nights full of reading and listening to classical music, I have decided to give you a spectacular look into things you would probably not think of because of being flustered by responsibility and deadlines.

A good song to listen to while contemplating sexual activity, or actually having it, is "World In My Eyes" by Depeche Mode. The lyrics, let alone the seductive and almost slothfully slivering music, are intense. "Let me take you on a trip, around the world and back, and you won't have to move — you just sit still. Now let my body do the moving, let my hands do the soothing, let me show you the world in my eyes. Let me take you on a ship, on a long, long trip — your lips close to my lips. All the Islands in the ocean, all the heavens in motion, let me show you the world in my eyes."

Good colors to wear in contrast to snow: Orange, blue, yellow and red.

Good music to listen to during the winter: Opera in the morning and classical music in the evenings. (Luciano Pavaroti in "Nessun Dorma" and Bach with "Air".)

Good things to think about: What you will be doing next summer, how many Frappuccino (mmm–creamy blend of coffee and milk) drinks you should have available, and what CDs you would get if you had $1000 and an open door to the Wiz.

Good things to worry about: Nothing

Good things to do with friends in the limited time you have to spend with them: Hook up, cuddle up, make creative art pieces; get into an argument and stop being friends; don't feel alone and get stoned; or drink white wine and smoke cigarettes until you laugh at everything you say.

Good things to feel: Calm, prepared and "fine!" (Wait, how are you?)

Good things to say to people you won't see until next semester, next year, or in another lifetime: "I guess I'll see you next lifetime," "Nice seeing you (yeah, whatever)," "Eat your heart out son," "You never was a friend of me," "Have a repairing or restoring break, "However far away, I will always love you." Or ask, "Do you want to hang out the night before you leave and get intoxicated?" and "Can we be friends forever?"

Good things to notice: Ani DiFranco changes the color of her hair frequently but she always looks good anyway: my teachers and I have formed some sort of relationship; literature offers more than a little and the pathetic fact that UMass students rallied for beer this year rather than equality, an end to racism or sexism and/or a better education. (Doesn't that say something to you? It should.)

Good things to do with a lover: Be naked all the time; laugh and smile and know; undress them by unbuttoning their shirt with your teeth; take a bath together (or shower); smoke cigars and read the Wall Street Journal; nibble on your lover's ear while they are trying to read.

Good things to dream about at night (because the days are filled with traumatic stress and anxiety): Floating on a ship through clouds of peace; sitting on an empty beach with a crushed ice cocktail and a colorful magazine; or making love to the Method Man or that woman from ER.

Good things to forget: Where the party is; how much a bag costs; how many drinks it takes you to start spilling them and 'getting to know you' conversations over the telephone.

Good things to remember: Where and when your tests are; appointments you should make with teachers; time allotment for meals (and a half-hour more to relax after them); how long it will take you to pack your stuff and go home and feasible study schedules (and a cheat sheet — just joking).

Good things to say to yourself when you think you will fail a final: "I don't care;" "Like one test can matter in the grand scheme of things;" "A racist and sexist institution could never have the pleasure of measuring my wisdom correctly," (I personally enjoy the "I don't care, I don't care" suggestion.)

Good things to say to yourself when you know you are going to ace a final: "I should smoke a big phat blunt;" "I should do nothing for 12 hours but lie in bed and repeat to myself (like a lunatic) 'I made it, I made it, I made it!!!;" "I should drive through campus with my windows down and my sun-roof open (even though it's winter) and blast "No Sleep 'Til Brooklyn" until the cops pull me over for lunacy.

Good things to do if you don't like this article: don't find it humorous in a beneficial way: Stick it, forget about it in general, denounce the writer and move on, or write your own f'ing article and see how it goes.

Good luck, good break, and remember happiness, freedom, and the ability to do nothing — and indulge in every moment of it — lies one short week away.

Dahlia DeSimone is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

CAMERA responds to Ibish editorials

To the Editor:

When Collegian readers open the newspaper and find an article by graduate student Hussein Ibish, they probably know by now that it will be replete with distortions.

Consider Ibish's Dec. 2 reference to Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's "opening [of] a tunnel under the al-Aska mosque" in Sept. 1996. While many initial reports made this erroneous claim, virtually all mainstream publications now concede that the tunnel does not go under al-Aska mosque, nor under the Temple Mount on which the mosque lies. In fact, after visiting the site Taleb a-Sanaa, an Arab member of Israel's Knesset, stated "I did not see excavations under Al-Aska. The tunnel goes under the wall [in the direction of the Temple Mount], but it is impossible to pass there because of the water that has accumulated," (Jerusalem Post International Edition, Feb. 8, 1997).

Presenting selective information is nothing new to Ibish. On Oct. 14, he refers to the assassination of Dr. Fathi Shiqaqi, whom he describes as simply a "Palestinian leader." He does not tell readers that Shiqaqi was head of the Islamic Jihad terrorist organization responsible for multiple suicide bombings and other attacks against Israelis. (Compare this with Ibish's Nov. 11 description of Netanyahu as an "extremist.")

In the same Oct. 14 article, Ibish claims he was "excoriated" by CAMERA (Committee for Accuracy in Middle East Reporting in America), among others, for his 1995 article "demonstrating" that the Zionist movement has "consistently relied upon assassination" to achieve its political goals. Not true — CAMERA "excoriated" Ibish because we wanted Collegian readers to know the truth about his writings.

Given his past record of deception, and in light of his current writings, there is no reason to believe that Ibish's future work will be any more accurate or responsible. The Collegian would rightly not provide a forum for slander against gays and lesbians. It would rightly not allow slanders against African–Americans or any other minority. Why then the double standard in continuing to offer Hussein Ibish a forum to slander Israel and the Jewish people?

Joshua Chadajo
Research Coordinator
CAMERA

UHS is the Grinch

To the Editor:

A horrible disease has been growing for some time. Political correctness, what a horrible sickness. PC seems based upon politeness, which is great, but it has fostered. In my opinion, being too civil is rude and idiotic. As I read the front page of the Dec. 5 Collegian, I saw that UHS was, and continues to be, plagued with this illness during the holiday season.

Three years ago, Bernadette Melby was hired as the director for UHS. In an attempt not to offend people from other countries who do not celebrate the predominant holidays, she created a policy that bans holiday decorations during the winter holiday season.

This is one of those cases where something starts off with the best of intentions and ends up in discontent. Staff at UHS are disallowed from even hanging cards up in their offices. A mitten tree was planned on being set up to collect mittens for the needy, even this was disallowed. See the connection?

Now, I will be quite frank. Not allowing the staff of UHS to give the building a little holiday character is absurd. I feel that hospitals in general appear rather bleak. This season gives workers a chance to brighten the place and spread a little holiday cheer. I do not think decorations for the holidays of this season offend many people. Some may be religiously significant, but in general, decorations are simply put up because they make people happy.

All across the world this is the season of cheer, giving, peace on earth, and so on; except at UHS that is. I sympathize with the staff and patients. As a lover of this season, I encourage others to voice their opinions concerning the Grinch-like spirit that infests UHS. Have a safe and happy holiday season.

Adam Bossi
Southwest

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words long and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes.

They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by e–mail to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545–1592.

The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity, and style.

Doonesbury BY GARY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangasirkar Arts & Living Editor
Hunyjeen Lyew III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor

Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prester Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the Collegian Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1958. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

YEAR IN REVIEW

ARTIST OF THE YEAR — SARAH MACLACHLAN

Collegian artist of the year

CASEY KANE

With this summer's Lilith Fair music festival, female artists were brought to the forefront of the music industry. With the spotlight squarely on the women's shoulders, one person in particular emerged as a spokeswoman of sorts — Sarah McLachlan.

Lilith Fair was McLachlan's brain child, a vision she dreamed of making a reality. The reality couldn't have been a bigger success.

Named after the first wife of Adam in Jewish mythology, Lilith was designed to showcase the strength, versatility and universal appeal of female artists. McLachlan did not have to work hard to sell the idea to her colleagues. Jewel, The Indigo Girls, Sheryl Crow, Joan Osborne, Fiona Apple, Paula Cole, Lisa Loeb, Emmylou Harris and MacLachlan herself were among the featured performers.

Playing 30 cities in 40 days, Lilith Fair packed audiences into venues across the nation. And the message McLachlan intended to send to the public — recognizing the power, strength and beauty of women — was well received.

There were critics of McLachlan's idea before it even came to fruition. People want Lollapalooza and H.O.R.D.E. and the other men-dominated summer tours, they said. People won't pay to see a bunch of women musicians, they said, and the snide jeers began. Producers of Lilith Fair said they heard the tour called everything, including Breast Fest and Est Fest.

But the idea and the eventual product was a success. And it rocketed McLachlan into the public's eye. Her latest album, Surfacing, became an instant success behind both Lilith and the album's first single, "Building a Mystery."

McLachlan's previous album, Fumbling Towards Ecstasy, brought the Canadian native attention with such songs as "Possession" and "Hold on." Her other albums include Touch, Solace and her acoustic set, The Freedom Sessions.

With her newfound success, McLachlan found herself at the center of a media blitz. Over the summer countless magazines featured the singer on their covers, heralding the fresh emergence of the women's rock movement.

And in the middle of all that has happened to her over the past year, McLachlan found time to marry her boyfriend and drummer.

Though she is not the first person to promote women in the music industry, Sarah McLachlan is a pioneer. She took the vision of a celebration of women and music and made it a reality, capturing the hearts of fans across the nation.

Sarah McLachlan is the 1997 Collegian Arts & Living Artist of the Year.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

1997's finest in the world of music

Marty Keane — Music Editor

TOP 10 ALBUMS:

1.) Radiohead — OK Computer
Destined to be one of the three or four most important albums of the decade, anyone who professes to be even a casual fan of music who does not own this masterpiece should be ashamed. What makes OK Computer the finest release of the year (by a country mile) are serpentine arrangements, psychedelic orchestrations and pretty melodies underscored by the most inventive guitar work since My Bloody Valentine's landmark Loveless album in 1991. Throw in Thom Yorke's anguished lyrical psyche that bares all, and you've got something special.

2.) Daft Punk — Homework
A club–oriented blend of progressive techno, house and funk with bits of hip–hop–styled breakbeats thrown over chunky, rolling rhythms, this French DJ duo created what was perhaps the most thoroughly enjoyable (and instantly addictive) album of '97.

3.) The London Suede — Coming Up / Sci–Fi Lullabies
Taken together, both these albums brilliantly showcase why The London Suede — and Brett Anderson in particular — are the most consistently compelling pure guitar pop band around. Forget about Third Eye Blind and Matchbox 20; if you want to hear truly enthralling three–minute singles and equally strong b–sides, listen to these two releases.

4.) Guided By Voices — Mag Earwhig!
With the recruitment of glamsters Cobra Verde, Robert Pollard's idiosyncratic songs have a tougher backbone, with louder guitars and pummelling drums. It also sees GBV encapsulating its past while reflecting on the future, as on the bittersweet "I Am Produced."

5.) Spiritualized — Ladies and Gentlemen We Are Floating In Space
Another aptly titled release from Jason Pierce's seminal space rock ambassadors, Ladies and Gentlemen... boldly stakes out new territory somewhere in between lush symphonics and astute minimalism.

6.) Pavement — Brighten The Corners
Since the demise of Kurt Cobain, Pavement has pretty much become the only American band with any witty social commentary to contribute to the music scene. On their fifth full length, Stephen Malkmus explores laid–back sarcasm in his wise–assed lyrical abstractions while his bandmates compensate for a lack of noise with nifty tempo changes.

7.) The Verve — Urban Hymns
Coming back after an 18–month absence, The Verve returned in triumph with a collection of reflective songs wrapped in almost trance–inducing melodies. Having the killer single "Bitter Sweet Symphony" as the album's backbone helped.

8.) Mouse On Mars — Audiodtacker
Playing a type of music that can loosely be called "techno- pop," Mouse On Mars prove that electronic music doesn't need to be played through expensive gadgetry — a simple sense of imagination can sometimes be just as interesting. Like their neighbors Kraftwerk and Can, experimental progressivism is king for this Cologne duo.

9.) Roni Size/Reprazent — New Forms
Will this be the breakthrough drum 'n bass album here? Probably not, but with Roni Size's cut–and–splice composing abilities, New Forms succeeds with its linky textures and bubbling polyrhythms, anchored by fat, upright bass and diverse vocals.

10.) Elliott Smith — Either/Or
An achingly beautiful, often brutally honest assessment of life, Elliott Smith showed us there exists a poignancy in simplicity.

TOP 10 SINGLES:

1.) "Bitter Sweet Symphony" — The Verve
2.) "Song 2" — Blur
3.) "Hypnotize" — Notorious B.I.G.
4.) "Insomnia" — Faithless
5.) "Da Funk" — Daft Punk
6.) "Wannabe" — Spice Girls

Turn to ALBUMS, page 10

The Best and Worst Films

By Adam Levine (Film Editor)

This was, honestly, one of the most disappointing displays of what the film industry, both independent and corporate, had to offer this entire decade. The year isn't over yet, and maybe within the next few weeks a small amount of redemption could occur with new releases such as Amistad, Deconstructing Henry, The Big Lebowski and perhaps even Sevens. No one knows what the Christmas–time rush has in store for us–quite yet, but for now I can't even think of that many films worthy of an Oscar nomination.

The following list demonstrates what I believed to be relatively the best and worst of the lot, and even a few which I didn't dare to see.

And the winners were:

1. Donnie Brasco– Praise is deserved to Mike Newell for his first attempt at the gangster genre and his amazing insight to the other side of the mafia. the one we were never before allowed to see. Al Pacino gave one of the best performances of his entire career as Lefty Ruggiero, a dehumanized foot soldier for a New York mob family. Johnny Depp was at his–usual brilliance as an FBI agent so deep undercover that his own identity became a mystery to even himself.

2. Dream with the Fishes—The directorial debut by Finn Taylor contained the most intriguing narrative structure seen in years. This homage to the freedom that independent film can offer starred David Arquette as a suicidal voyeur whose life becomes intertwined with a terminally ill man facing his own untimely death.

3. The Fifth Element– A dazzling display of color and light, this film moves at an explosive speed, where every breathtaking moment is a bewilderment of the human eye.

4. Hey's Gold– Peter Fonda resurrected his career with this bittersweet tale of a man's last chance to save his family, as well as himself, from a haunting past. Set in the back woods of Florida, Fonda portrays Uke, a humble beekeeper struggling to reconcile his son's misfortunes and rekindle any sense of meaning from his withdrawn life.

5. The Full Monty—Not in a long time has a comedy been so fresh, so intelligent, and so hilarious as this British export about a forgotten industrial town and its inhabitants. When the mill shuts down, a group of its former employees decide they can make money by showing it all off. (I'm assuming you all know what I mean).

Runners Up: L.A. Confidential, Gross Pointe Blank, The Game and the soon to be released Wag the Dog.

The bottom of the barrel:

1. Batman & Robin– Does this one even need an explanation? This once promising franchise has just gotten worse and worse with every new addition, and Joel Schumacher taking over Tim Burton's position should have been Warner Bros. most fatal mistake ever.

2. Lost World– The first Jurassic Park was a highlight of the summer of '93, but Spielberg's latest sequel proves that when you make a copy from the original you always lose a degree of quality. In this case the degree of quality could have been measured in miles, as this darker, more irritating conclusion, based on Michael Crichton's best selling novel, should have remained on that forbidden island.

3. Kiss the Girls– Although it contained some interesting camera work, this cliche mystery thriller had one of the weakest plots of the year. The talented Morgan Freeman should have thought twice before deceding to replay his role from Seven.

4. Suburbia—A bunch of pretentious, drunk, wanna–be–artist type high school grads living around the Circle K, talking about how dissatisfied they are with their pathetic lives. Another example of just One–Is garbage.

5. The Saint—Hands down, the worst movie of the decade! This film had no direction, no premise and lifeless performances by Elizabeth Shue and Val Kilmer. Watching this movie, one would think it was never even edited, but rather the finished product was from Tilm Tonod in a camera which had been left on in a closet.

Runner up: Spawn

Here's a list of the top five movies I didn't see.

1. Kull the Conqueror—TV stud muffin Kevin Sorbo made the move to the silver screen with this brainless, middle age action flick. Battling a dead corpse that can change into a sexy princess, Sorbo must have had the adventure of his life.

2. Hubber—Another release of a classic movie about a dumb scientist, as if The Nutty Professor wasn't enough. The special effects looked kinda cool, but then again they were all about some gooey, brainy thing.

3. (tie) Leave it to Beaver, McHale's Navy—Hollywood has sunken to a whole new low when they have not one, but two adaptations (three if you count the Brady Bunch sequel) of Nick at Night shows.

4. A Thousand Acres—Shakespeare in the main fields, sounds like a thrilling combination.

5. Mortal Kombat: Annihilation—Somehow or other this one made it to the number one spot in terms of box office revenue. Granted, the first one was fun, but why make a sequel based on a video fighting game.

Layout & Design by Josh Sylvester

REDUCE REUSE RECYCLE

CAMPUS CENTER:
1ST FLOOR - ROOM 162

Friday, December 12	9 AM - 5 PM
Monday, December 15	9 AM - 5 PM
Tuesday, December 16	9 AM - 5 PM
Wednesday, December 17	9 AM - 5 PM
Thursday, December 18	9 AM - 6 PM
Friday, December 19	9 AM - 6 PM
Saturday, December 20	10 AM - 5 PM

TEXTBOOK ANNEX

Friday, December 12	9 AM - 4 PM
Monday, December 15	9 AM - 4 PM
Tuesday, December 16	9 AM - 4 PM
Wednesday, December 17	9 AM - 4 PM
Thursday, December 18	9 AM - 4 PM
Friday, December 19	9 AM - 4 PM
Monday, December 22	9 AM - 4 PM
Tuesday, December 23	9 AM - 4 PM

HAMPDEN IN SOUTHWEST

Wednesday, December 17	10 AM - 5 PM
Thursday, December 18	10 AM - 6 PM
Friday, December 19	10 AM - 6 PM
Saturday, December 20	10 AM - 4 PM

Textbook Buyback

UNIVERSITY STORE'S Textbook Annex UMASS AMHERST

GLBT Issues

Thursday, December 11, 1997

Honesty is a responsibility

Daniel Bodah

I came out by mistake a couple of times this past year. I say "by mistake" not because I was trying not to come out, by because I never really thought that it would make any difference if my friends knew I was bisexual and the topic just hadn't come up.

It seems like you have to be hiding your sexuality as a precondition to revealing it, and I never tried to hide. As it happens, though, no one really wonders whether a man in a long-term heterosexual relationship is "straight" or not.

I was at work one day and a supervisor was listing all the different diversity categories represented by our staff. I mentioned that yes, we did have a bi staffer, namely me. My co-workers were all really cool and affirming and all that, but they were also really surprised. It was their surprise that got me thinking...

The same basic scenario happened a while later when I was painting with some friends. I was talking about a zany hitchhiking adventure I had in my friend Chris' hometown in which a guy who gave me a ride was really after something else. One of my friends asked, "Why didn't you just tell him you weren't gay?" Well... that wouldn't really have been true, and I said so.

Again, my friends were surprised, but very accepting. (Bless them.) And again, it was their surprise that got me thinking.

Why is it that my being a bisexual doesn't seem extraordinary to me, but is obviously a very notable fact for my friends? What does that say about the sorts of assumptions people make about another's sexual orientation? Do I have a responsibility to make my own orientation known to others?

I guess living in a town in Ohio where it seemed like everyone was queer (What? In Ohio? Yes, it's true.) made it seem normal to me. People there generally abided by the saying "don't assume I'm queer, don't assume I'm not." Northampton has a similar atmosphere.

It's really great to be somewhere that has gotten over this obsession with judging people's sexuality and making it a big deal. Isn't that what we all want to achieve anyway?

But that isn't the case at UMass, it isn't the case in my hometown, it isn't the case almost anywhere. I'm realizing that the vast majority of the time, sexual orientation is political, and grounds for making "deviants" from the norm feel marginalized.

I do have a responsibility to be firm and open about my own orientation, and an obligation to resist any oppression it brings my way. Not only that, but I think letting people know goes a long way toward changing their attitudes and assumptions about homosexuality.

Tons of people have queer friends and just don't know it. If someone is prejudiced against queer folk, when they find out their own friends are queer, they'll have to think again about their biases. Knowing a friend is gay will probably make someone question their prejudices more than any amount of statistics, newspaper articles, rational arguments, or education.

Another issue here is that, because I haven't had a relationship with a guy in a couple of years, it's very easy for people to assume I'm hetero. Bisexuality is easier to hide than being gay because you have a pretty big chance of being able to have a relationship that no one questions.

This, I think, makes my responsibility to be open even greater. Since sexual orientation is political, I need to be clear about which side I'm on. I owe it to all of my queer brothers and sisters, I owe it to all the homophobes of the world, and I owe it to myself.

Like the bumper sticker says, we are everywhere. Sexual preferences are very personal — although they clearly have political implications — and it's stupid to assume anything from outside appearances.

Daniel Bodah is a Collegian columnist.

TVONNE TANG/COLLEGIAN

World AIDS day candlelight vigil

Students walk with lit candles in remembrance of others last Friday night in front of the student union.

Liberty and justice for all?

Ron Lenker

The Declaration of Independence reads, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness." The "Pledge of Allegiance" ends with the words "with liberty and justice for all." From "The Gettysburg Address": "Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent, a new nation, conceived in Liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal."

You know, it really isn't about "gay rights" at all. Any thinking person already knows this. However, due to some leaders in the gay community claiming to want "gay rights," and thanks to the media's portrayal of the quest for equality as a "gay rights" issue, they have poisoned the water, so to speak. (Besides..."gay rights" makes for a much more volatile headline.) There are 1000 different "rights" that straight people take for granted. These very same rights, some of them promised by the Constitution, are not available to people who cannot marry the person they happen to love.

Gays have served in the armed forces ever since their conception. Therefore, the "don't ask, don't tell" rhetoric is bogus. Of course, some people in control of the armed forces would have you believe that gays are not present in the armed forces. These same people would have you believe that gay people cannot be leaders and that their presence would cause the members to not perform as a cohesive unit. Again, not true. One of the greatest military leaders of all time, Alexander the Great, had quite a cohesive unit. I wonder if he was forced to "not tell."

Jennifer Bottoms, who hails from Virginia, no longer has the custody of her child. This came about due to the fact that she is a lesbian. There are those who think she is "unfit" due to this. I am unaware of anyone who has lost the custody of their child because they were seen as "unfit" for being a "heterosexual."

Many gay and lesbian people are not given the right to attend the needs of their loved ones in a hospital once the "family" has stated that they do not want anyone present who is not family. Often the significant other is kept out of the decision making process due to interfering family members. My advice to those of you in a committed relationship who do not have wills, living wills, medical powers of attorney and durable powers of attorney is to get it done today. These documents may not solve all your problems, but they can sure go a long way in establishing the pecking order when your loved one isn't capable of indicating it.

The family of a friend of mine who was lying in the hospital dying of AIDS complications managed to keep me away. I was the closest person to Mike. These same people were the ones that would not help him brush his teeth, the same ones who would not hold his hand or give him the human touch. Not even so much as a hug, let alone a kiss. They would not even brush his hair for him or put salve on his chapped lips.

How about the "right" to add your spouse or the child of your spouse to your health insurance plan at work. Straight? Not a problem. You just have to pay a little extra in a premium. Gay or Lesbian? In most cases, forget it. No matter how much you plan to pay.

Many people still think that AIDS is a gay disease. If someone finds out you are gay, even today, they may still assume that you are infected with HIV. One of the fastest growing groups of new HIV infection is college-aged individuals between the ages of 18 and 25. Now I know that last statement hit a little too close to home for some people. Anyone who believes that the irresponsible behavior which leads to HIV infection is not happening on this campus just needs to eat lunch at a dining hall and keep their ears open.

I had donated over a gallon of blood before the AIDS pandemic. I haven't been infected with the HIV virus, and I don't intend to. Had I continued to donate at the rate I was donating, I would have contributed over 20 gallons of life- giving blood to help someone in need. However, as an honest individual, I cannot donate blood while people who are members of one of the fastest growing groups of HIV infection can donate. I realize that all of the donations are screened, and look how many more people could be helped if all could give.

In closing, until everyone in this country gets the same rights, perhaps we should change the words: all men are not created equal; Life, Liberty, but not the pursuit of Happiness; and with liberty and justice for some.

As I leave you with these thoughts, may your winter break find you surrounded by those you love and those that love you.

Ron Lenker is a UMass student.

Little Buttons

You have always had a fascination with little buttons rows of tiny fasteners carving between my breasts so I wear my little white shirt with the little plastic buttons and you lick your teeth with expectant salivation my sister's teeth shined like that once when she made six ripe peaches disappear with slippery swallows until she was nauseous you're like that will you eat my ripe skin so fast you'll get allergic and then what will you do on a wet and moonless night when my juices are sticky like summer sex like the August I lost my virginity in those purple panties with the big white dots stealing around my ankles, every bite then was like swallowing pieces of summer itself, now I'm just a halo of tiny hairs in a little white shirt begging you to suckle my circumference, as I watch you through aureloe irises all i can taste is the smell of me in your morning breath kisses makes me push my nose into your mouth like a cat sniffing runafish exhales the scent peels my peachfuzz skin cleaving my seed like you used a watermelon knife i am anxious– and you know exactly how to push.

Danielle Carriveau is a UMass graduate student.

Questions she asked her psychiatrist, answers he never gave her

Why do I say the opposite of what I feel?
Because Your tongue always slips
on its own fast sweat and your mind
is on course like sandpaper.

How does my son make me feel?
Like your arms are two sticks protruding from an ancient tree trunk,
and your eyes on fire
are filling his room with smoke.

Why can't I see myself?
The mirrors on your walls whisper lies behind your back you quickly turn to catch them in the act but they always see you coming.

Why do I feel like a child?
Because you came silently sliding
out of your own body, seconds
after your son's birth.

Why do I hate to be given a flower?
Wordsworth picked the last
true flowers,
you have no vase
for the old poet's crimes.

Will I ever write a great poem?
Yes, you are the pope of your poetry
your mind is the Vatican just go in and close its golden doors
heavy behind you.

Sarah Crozier is a UMass student.

http:// www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

The e-home for the Daily Collegian. Updated daily for your surfing pleasure. Archived editions dating back to October, 1996

The position of Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Issues Editor will be open next semester. Anyone who might be interested, applications are available at the Collegian newsroom. The page needs you and does the community's experience is necessary. Contact Rachel at 545–1561 for more information.

TEGLY peer leader tries to educate fellow students

Dylan Larke

After seeing many of my fellow gay friends chain smoke excessively, I knew that it was necessary for me to take a stand against the harmful and overpriced products. I often find myself resentful whenever seeing other gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered (GLBT) individuals use tobacco products. I strongly feel that GLBT smokers are just adding to the high statistic of the numbers of people who smoke. This is why I became a tobacco peer leader for a youth tobacco awareness program located in Boston. It is the Tobacco Education for Gay and Lesbian Youth (TEGLY).

TEGLY has actually made me more of an advocate for a smoke–free environment. As a peer leader, I educate others about the scheme of the tobacco advertisement companies. My goal is to make the GLBT community aware that we are specifically being targeted because we are perceived as a group that has low self–esteem and is more likely to start smoking than most other groups in society.

The cigarette industry seems not to worry about hiding the blatant fact that It does not care one way or another if we grow deathly ill from the use of their products. The money–driven corporations will do anything to sell us their products. This is exactly why images of the ideal man and woman cover billboards on buses and sports arenas around the world. In fact, there is an average of five to six nicotine advertisements within a gay magazine as opposed to an average of two to three in a magazine geared towards heterosexuals. The Industry has succeeded in raking in multi–million dollars annually . Many of us, as a whole, have been proven gullible by the inconsiderate, uncaring, money–hungry business whenever we purchase their products.

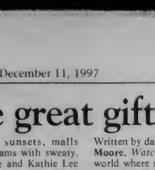
Cigarettes kill more Americans than AIDS, alcohol, car accidents, fires, illegal drugs, murders and suicides combined. Smoking cigarettes annihilates a total of 420,000 individuals annually! New individuals who are just starting to smoke provide direct proof that cigarette advertisements are succeeding in their goal. The goal is to get new people to start buying and using their products as others are dying from it. Once a smoker dies, the cigarette companies loose a percent of their profit. Money–thriving industries are obviously not going to put up with a loss of business when their customers pass away. Therefore, they target a younger, newer audience. More specifically, a young, gay audience. One main reason why young GLBT individuals buy their products is because we statistically are more destructive to our bodies than heterosexuals due to the intense homophobia we are so commonly subjected to.

They don't care how long their customers live, if you haven't already noticed. It appears that they care even less about the well–being of the GLBT community. To the cigarette industry, we are just another minority that has fallen into their trap. In the opinion of the tobacco business executives, gays are targeted because we have little awareness and are so insecure in ourselves that we get hooked on such a poisonous and addictive chemical as nicotine. The government, Catholic church and media have discriminated against the gay community, hence making us feel unequal to heterosexuals and not as good as them. As a result, many people believe that members of the GLBT community feel a greater need to fit in and be viewed as ordinary everyday people.

When members of the gay community glance at the advertisements showing the strong, attractive men as well as the stick–thin, fashionable and beautiful women smoking or chewing tobacco, we begin to idealize the unrealistic portrayals of the cigarette models. The industry puts forth a great deal of effort in choosing these models. It knows that society tends to favor desirable and idealistic bodies of both genders. The companies are also well aware that society tends to accept with open arms men who play aggressive roles and women who play dependent roles. Therefore, the money–driven company hand–selects models of both genders to fit these roles.

Cigarettes and chewing tobacco are two products that the gay community has turned to with the hope that a cancer–causing cigarette in our hand will make the GLBT individuals who smoke feel and appear less different in society. Many of us believe that cigarette products allow the gay population to feel more self–assured and fell like they have more control over their lives. How long do you think it will take us to realize that tobacco will cause more harm than good? How long will it be before the cigarette industry has secretly chosen us as one of their main targets when advertising? Haven't we come to terms with the fact that the state legislatures enforce even more laws that further restrict our rights with the money spent purchasing tobacco? We are giving our hard earned money to the cigarette industry who gives a portion of their profit from the sales tax to the government who then creates even more homophobic policies that restrict the rights of our community. While the white, heterosexual, middle–aged businessmen are gaining from the profits, countless numbers of us within the gay community are being killed by the deadly mixture of cancer– causing chemicals.

The message that we all need to become more aware of is that the tobacco industry is no joke. They should not be taken lightly because they really do mean business. I strongly feel that the corporate executives of the companies have lost all their sense of humanity. To them, attaining wealth is far more important than being concerned for the individuals who are sick and dying from nicotine use.



Although tobacco has been in existence and commonly smoked or chewed long before the pilgrims settled In America, it is hazardous to your health. A warning to all smokers, particularly to those in the GLBT community: the tobacco advertisement industry is in the process of outsmarting the smokers and taking advantage of us all. We cannot continue to be outsmarted by them. We have to take a stand against hazardous products. Be aware of their secret plots and do not fall for their falsifying and deceiving advertisements.

Cigarettes will not turn you into a professional athlete or a supermodel, nor will it prevent you from sticking out in a crowd, despite what the tobacco ads are mistakenly attempting to indicate. Cigarettes will, however, cause various forms of death–causing cancers and force you to spend great sums of money supporting the addiction. In the long run, quitting the use of your nicotine products will not only be beneficial to you, but to the rest of the GLBT community as well.

Dylan Larke is a UMass student.

Some great gift ideas for comic book lovers

Ahh... 4 p.m. sunsets, malls bursting to the seams with sweaty, disgruntled people and Kathie Lee Gifford with her arm around Kenny G butchering "Silent Night" on national television. Yes, Christmas is indeed here once again boys and girls, and Lord knows it's tough to find suitable gifts for that special comic geek on your holiday list. Well, fear not loyal readers, I'm here to save your collective butts and offer up some suggestions, so pay attention. Trade paperbacks and graphic novels are a quick, easy Christmas gift, and there's a wealth of outstanding material out there to choose from. Best of all, graphic novels and TPB's offer a complete story for one price, ranging from $10-30. Here's a list of five of the best, so just pick one, plop down the cash, wrap it, and relax for the "Peanuts" holiday special.

5) Kingdom Come (DC, $14.95) This fully-painted story by Mark Waid and Alex Ross chronicles the adventures of Superman, Batman, and other DC heroes 20 years into the future as they struggle to prevent Armageddon.

4) The Watchmen (DC, $19.95) Written by dark English scribe Alan Moore, Watchmen depicts a bleak world where superheroes have been abolished, but are forced to come out of retirement to prevent World War III. It is a disturbing and highly realistic commentary about psychological and physical effects on superheroes and the world they protect.

3) Squadron Supreme (Marvel, $24.95) What happens when a bunch of superheroes decide it would be best if they ruled the world and made all of the important decisions? Find out in this ground-breaking story that pre-dated even The Watchmen. Written by the late Mark Gruenwald, this story is available in TPB form for the first time ever, and the ink even includes Gruenwald's cremated ashes. (Man, that's just creepy).

2) Sin City (Dark Horse, $10-20) Whether it's A Dame to Kill For, That Yellow Bastard, or even the self-titled original, Frank Miller's Sin City always delivers a hard- hitting, fast-paced, sexy crime noir thriller in stark black and white. You can't lose with any of them.

1) Batman:The Dark Knight Returns (DC, $12.95)Arguably the single greatest comic story ever written, Dark Knight takes us to a dark dystopian future Gotham City wherea middle-aged Bruce Wayne is forced to come out of retirement and become Batman once again to combat the forces of evil that plague his city and his mind. Truly a revolutionary work, Miller forever changed the way comics were perceived and helped to spawn the "grim and gritty" craze that swept through comics in the 1980's. This is just a small sampling of what's out there, and there's lots of other great stuff to choose from such as Fax From Sarajevo, Preacher:Gone to Texas,Grendel:War Child, Marvels, Death:The High Cost of Living, and countless others. Get out there and get shopping!

Review: Spider-Man / Kingpin: To the Death (Marvel, $5.99) Writer: Stan Lee Artist: John Romita Let's see here, how would Stan Lee describe this comic? Probably like this: "A magnificent, mirthful, menagerie of morality and malice manufactured in the Mighty Marvel Manner!'Ol' Stan sure loved his alliteration. But you know something? As corny as that above statement sounds, he's right on the money. This comic perfectly captured the spirit and essence of the late '60s early '70s when Stan and "Jazzy" John had their memorable run on Amazing Spider-Man. It's a simple, straightforward tale with bold, dynamic artwork by the man who many feel is the "definitive" Spider-Man artist. The only bad thing I can find to say about Spider-man / Kingpin is the $6 cover price. Too bad they couldn't lower the price to reflect the era, but for Stan "The Man" Lee and "Jazzy" John Romita, six bucks is a steal. B+

The Rumor Mill: (Hey kids, a new section!)

• Wolverine may get his adamantium skeleton and claws back just in time for the 1998 summer crossover

• Sandman writer Neil Gaiman may be coming to Marvel in 1998 to write an all-new Dr. Strange title.

• Joe Quesada and Jimmy Palimotti's Event Comics could become partners with Marvel in 1998, moving their studios into the 13th floor of Marvel's Manhattan office building.

• Look for a three-way crossover involving Batman, Starman, and Hellboy in the summer of 1998 with art by Hellboy creator Mike Mignola and a script by Starman writer James Robinson

Jeff Carter is a Collegian columnist.

A look back on music's most notable moments in '97

BEST LIVE PERFORMANCE:
David Bowie at Boston's Orpheum Theatre, Sept. 30 Performing a selection of songs equally represented between lost gems ("Panic In Detroit," "Quicksand"), old favorites ("Fashion," "Scary Monsters") and newer material ("Dead Man Walking," "Hallo Spaceboy" i the Thin White Duke pleased everyone as he re-invented his impressive catalog of art–rock tunes. Oh, and to top it off he threw in a couple of Velvet Underground covers for good measure.

At 50 years young, Bowie is clearly a man on top of the world. His exuberance and vigor put men half his age to shame and considering that he's married to a supermodel, lives in the Swiss Alps and is worth just over $900 million dollars, it's even more apparent that his one true joy in life is music, and what a joy his music Is.

Honorable mention to The Jesus Lizard, simply the finest live rock 'n roll band on the planet.

BEST TREND:
More concertgoers wearing ear protection

The recent marked increase in concert attendees wearing ear protection is good news, especially considering the decibel levels achieved inside concert halls. Considering that the loudness is on par with that of an airplane during take- off (and the ground crews all wear industrial–sized noise mufflers) it can't hurt to protect something that can't be replaced when it's gone. And for the skeptics, yes, you can hear just fine, often more clearer.

WORST TREND:
The decline of American rock music

The continued lack of any excitement to be generated from any newly emerging American rock band is especially disheartening considering the demise of Nirvana and Bill Berry's recent departure from R.E.M., two torchbearers of the genre. While artists across the Atlantic continue to move ahead and experiment with new sounds (the grating Chumbawamba and Bush excepted), America offers us such alternative luminaries as Sugar Ray, Third Eye Blind and Smash Mouth. While imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, the degree of recycling is getting a bit ridiculous. With the exception of Beck, I challenge anyone to name a viable presence in American music within the mainstream that has created a memorable release in the past year that even merits a second listen. There simply is nothing around that reaches a mass audience that has anything worth a damn to say.

BIGGEST DISAPPOINTMENT:
Oasis — Be Here Now
After threatening to take over the world (a feat they accomplished in large measure overseas), Oasis returned with their third, and weakest album to–date. Thus far, the album has been met with a barely lukewarm reception in record stores, possibly due to the fact that Noel Gallagher's once concise pop songs have suddenly mutated into five–, six–, and even nine–minute dirges of repetitive choruses and empty melodies. Who says change is always for the better?

BEST LIVE ALBUM:
Ani DiFranco — Living In Clip

BEST ALBUM COVER ART:
Bjork — Homogenic

MOST OVERLOOKED:
The Bells — The Ultimate Seaside Companion
Built To Spill — Perfect From Now On
Hooverphonic — A New Stereophonic Sound Spectacular
Beth Orton — Trailer Park
Eric Matthews — The Lateness of the Hour

STILL WAITING:
Liz Phair...Nine Inch Nails...Hole...My Bloody Valentine...

NOT GONE BUT FORGOTTEN:
Weezer...Candlebox...The Presidents of the United States...Chumbawamba (almost)

A review of some of the events of '97

January

• O.J. Simpson wins custody of his children, Sydney, age 11, and Justin, age 8.

• Former Beatle, Paul MaCartney, 54, is awarded a knighthood by Queen Elizabeth II.

• Bryant Gumble, 48, leaves NBC's "Today" show.

• Eileen McGann, 48, bids adieu to toe–sucking hubby and former Clinton political advisor, Dick Morris, 48.

• Sandman writer Neil Gaiman may be coming to Marvel in 1998 to write an all–new Dr. Strange title.

• Joe Quesada and Jimmy Palimotti's Event Comics could become partners with Marvel in 1998, moving their studios into the 13th floor of Marvel's Manhattan office building.

• Look for a three–way crossover involving Batman, Starman, and Hellboy in the summer of 1998 with art by Hellboy creator Mike Mignola and a script by Starman writer James Robinson

Jeff Carter is a Collegian columnist.

February

• Bill Cosby admits to affair with Shawn Thompson 23 years ago. Thompson's daughter, Autumn Jackson, was convicted of an extortion attempt against Cosby.

• Civil judgement passed against O.J. Simpson.

• Madeline Albright named Secretary of State.

• Deng Xiaoping, Chinese premiere, passes away.

• Baby boy born to Michael Jackson and his wife, Deborah Rowe.

March

• Dolly, the sheep, is first mammal ever cloned from a single adult cell.

• Hale–Bopp Comet, last seen 4,200 years ago, makes an appearance in the skies.

• Civil unrest erupts in Albania.

• Dalai Lama visits Taiwan, upsetting Chinese leaders.

• Heaven's Gate Cult commits mass suicide in California.

• Princess Diana puts evening gowns on the auction block.

• Joanna Pacitti, 12, fired from Broadway's Annie, in favor of Brittny Kissinger, 8. Pacitti sues to get her job back.

April

• Dexter King, 36, tells 69–year–old James Earl Ray that he believes Ray is innocent in the shooting death of Martin Luther King Jr.

• George Bush, 72, parachutes out of a plane.

• AIDS epidemic grows out of control in Russia and the Ukraine.

• Allen Ginsberg passes away.

• Ellen DeGeneres "comes out" in life and on television.

• Colin Powell heads the non–partisan "Presidents Summit for America's Future."

• Tony Blair is elected Prime Minister of the United Kingdom.

• Tiger Woods becomes the youngest winner of a Masters competition and the first African–American to win any of golf's four major tournaments.

• Tara Lipinski, 14, becomes the youngest figure skating world champion since Sonja Henie.

May

• Peruvian hostage crisis ends after 126 days.

• 63–year–old woman gives birth to healthy baby girl, setting a Guiness World Book record.

• Brooke Shields, 31, marries Andre Agassi, 26.

• Martina Hingis becomes the youngest ever number one tennis player.

• Michael Kennedy accused of affair with 15–year–old baby sitter.

• Mike Royko passes away.

• Donald Trump and Marla Maples Trump split.

• Deep Blue (computer by IBM) defeats chess champion Gary Kasparov.

June

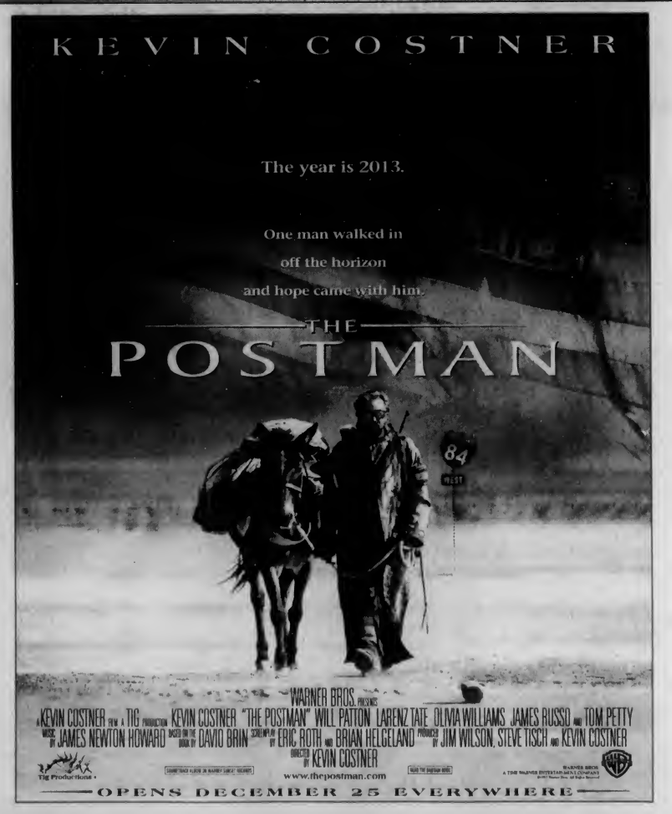
• Lt. Kelly Flinn, first and only female B–52 pilot, discharged from Air Force over affair.

• Mattel introduces "Becky," a wheelchair bound friend of Barbie.

• Supreme Court gives go–ahead to Paula Jones to sue Bill Clinton for sexual harassment.

• Aluminum cars hit the market with models from Audi and Plymouth.

• Bob Dylan, 58, hospitalized with heart condition.



• Gigapets, more annoying than the real thing, are introduced.

• The Bible Code claims to predict the future.

• Timothy McVeigh convicted

Turn to YEAR, page 10

http:// www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Even though the semester is almost over the Arts & Living desk is looking for people to write for next semester. So call the Collegian and ask for Seema at 545-1361.

Students at these colleges came back from the holidays more gifted. So can you! | Dean's 3-Week Winter Session

Earn three college credits in just three weeks over the winter holidays, at Dean's unique Accelerated Winter Session. Bring your degree closer. Improve a grade. Satisfy course distribution requirements. If you need transferable credits fast, Dean Continuing Education makes it easy. Flexible course schedules, including days and evenings. Learning is focused, intense and rewarding. Choose from Business, Marketing, Computers, English, Math, Social Studies. Classes begin December 29, end January 16.

Register now by mail, phone, fax or walk-in. Free parking and ♿-accessible. For more information, call 800-870-6369 or 508-541-1629.

Registration Is On-going
Monday - Thursday 8:30 a.m. - 6:30 p.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.
NEW Saturdays Dec.13, 20, 27 9:00 a.m.-noon

Dean COLLEGE
A private two-year college
FRANKLIN, MA

~ IN MEMORY ~

As 1998 approaches, the Collegian pays tribute to some of the notable figures who left us this year.

Diana Princess of Wales
Thousands of mourners surrounded the royal palaces during the month of September patiently waiting to pay their respects to their beloved "English Rose." Diana, the Princess of Wales, was killed last August along with her boyfriend Dodi Fayed and their driver.

Given the title "Queen of Hearts," Diana was more than just the mother of the future King of England. The huge display of affection shown by people over the world was a demonstration of the legacy that Diana left behind. She was famous for who she was, not what she was.

Called the "Princess of the People" by the Prime Minister Tony Blair, Rev. Dr. Wesley Carr in his opening remarks said of Diana at her funeral at Westminster Abbey, "Diana profoundly influenced the world, she was someone for whom, from afar, we dared to feel affection."

Over 1,900 mourners gathered in and outside of Westminster Abbey, as well as two billion television viewers around the world who watched her funeral on the morning of Sept. 6 to say goodbye to the beloved princess.

A vocal activist for many charities world–wide, Diana was the spokesperson spawned organization to ban landmines, as well as a friend and activist to those inflicted with and dying from the AIDS virus. It has been said by many that Diana found meaning in her life by helping others.

While the media–frenzy surrounding the death of Princess Diana has almost died down, her memory will live on through $395 plate sets, 12–inch porcelain figurines and commemorative stamps. (Emily Trask)

Mother Teresa
The tiny woman who took up the burden of the world's poor and downtrodden, 87 year old, Mother Teresa, died almost one week after the death of Princess Diana. She was admired for her endless work with the poor, sick and the dying, and she was even called a living saint. Despite her worldly fame, Mother Teresa was modest and resistant to publicity. She retained her simplicity and humility throughout her life. (Emily Trask)

Gianni Versace
Called "the Medici of the nineties," by the New Yorker, Gianni Versace, world renowned fashion designer, died in July of this year. Known for his extravagant lifestyle and clothing designs that were anything but boring, Versace has been said to have been instrumental in joining the rock industry and the fashion industry. His designs have been popular with famous musicians such as David Bowie, Tina Turner and Courtney Love (Emily Trask).

Michael Hutchence
In the dawn of the MTV generation, Australian rock 'n roll band INXS became a household name.

Fronted by Michael Hutchence, INXS had spawned countless hit songs with their sixth album Kick. Some of those hits included "Need You Tonight" and "Devil Inside." Hutchence passed away on Nov 22 in Double Bay, Australia at the Ritz–Carlton, in an apparent suicide. Coroners believed Hutchence hung himself, although there are conflicting reports of a drug overdose. Family and friends were shocked by Hutchence's actions, reporting that Hutchence had been happy over the last few months.

Hutchence gained the reputation of a party animal, by admitting his drug abuse and his penchant for beautiful women. Often compared to Mick Jagger and Jim Morrison, Hutchence molded a sultry singing style, which attracted the attention of the media.

Hutchence is survived by his daughter, Heavenly Hiranni Tiger Lily, and his girlfriend Paula Yates.

Hutchence, who would have been 38 on Jan. 22, will be greatly missed by millions all over the world who were touched by his talent. (Steven Trachtenbroit)

Allen Ginsberg
The famed Beat Generation poet Allen Ginsberg died in April of 1997 at the age of 70. Rising to prominence in the 1950s, Ginsberg revolutionized the role of poetry in the United States with the straightforwardness of his expressions (Emily Trask).

Notorious B.I.G.
Once Brooklyn drug–dealer turned Gangsta Rapper, Chris Wallace, was assassinated in March. His ironically titled album Life after Death sold 689,000 copies in the first week of release. The Faith Evans/ Puff Daddy single of which was dedicated to Notorious B.I.G. also achieved great prominence. (Emily Trask)

John Denver
As a folk singer, John Denver won hearts with his hits like "Annie's Song" and "Rocky Mountain Heart." An activist for the environment, Denver also enjoyed adventure and flying. (Seema Gangatirkar)

Respect & truth in the Zone

By Josh Sylvester
Collegian Staff

"You gotta give respect just to earn respect."

Respect. The motto behind the music of Shootyz Groove. With Steve and Season on lyrics, Dose on the drums, Donny on the guitar, and Paul "freaklove" on the bass, Shootyz brings their dedication to hip–hop, visceral guitars and funky rhythms together in harmony, making more than just music.

They attempt to bring their feelings, emotions and mottos to the listener. They bring visions of respect, truth, justice and freedom into their music, and create a rhythm that is addicting.

From their first album until now, Shootyz Groove has gained an unusual following. Setting off the band's career was the raucous Respect EP, a no–holds–barred live recording from Queens, N.Y. This was the band at their rawest and most primal state.

Following closely behind was the band's first full–length release J.I.V.E. (Jamming In Vicious Environments) which showcased more of the unique style.

Combining musical tastes from many backgrounds, such as rock, rap, reggae, jazz and metal, Shootyz creates their own style of music. This style breaks them apart from the rest, and gains a following from all over the world.

"As a band we listen to every kind of music there is," Sense boasts. "Basically it all comes to the table when we record and write."

After the release Respect, the band began touring with the likes of The Mighty Mighty Bosstones and 311. Shootyz began making quite a name for themselves. During this time, they kept the creativity flowing, writing and recording. They released Live J.I.V.E., a compilation of live recording of their hits from J.I.V.E..

After a long touring stint, the band hit the studios again, and recorded Hipnosis, which would showcase more of the band's talents, giving more diversity to their music.

Shootyz Groove will be "in the zone" at 7 p.m. tonight at Pearl St. in Northampton. The show is all ages, tickets are available at the door, or by calling (413)584–7771.

UVC television debuts new comedy show

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

"Union Square" may be facing some competition from the University of Massachusetts' UVC–Channel 19 in the form of a new sketch comedy, "Mass Hysteria," which airs in the 8:30 p.m. spot opposite NBC's sitcom.

The show debuted on UVC in the middle of October and according to the producer of the show, Josh Splansky, its format is similar to network sketch comedy shows like "Saturday Night Live" and "Mad TV."

"It was my idea," Splansky said. "I wanted to do the show."

Splansky advertised for writers in April and then cast the show in September and early October. The first episode of "Mass Hysteria" was taped Oct. 19 and aired less than a week later on Oct. 23.

"We've done a fictional documentary of 'South Park'," Splansky said of the work done to date. "We've had one about a date where the guy showed up in a dress."

The "guy in the dress" is sophomore theater major Jason Shomer.

Shomer said he gets recognized for that particular role a lot.

"It's great," Shomer said.

Working on the show entails a lot of work. According to Shomer, the cast usually receives the script on Wednesdays.

"I sometimes take the script to class," Shomer said.

The cast and crew then spend up to seven hours taping two episodes every other Sunday afternoon.

Shomer, who is also a member of the Mission: IMPROVable troupe, said, "I have no weekend, but I love every minute of it."

The show also provides a way for students to get hands–on training in the making of a show. Splansky, a junior communications major, handles most of the directing, editing and some of the writing. But "the point is everyone gets to try what they want to do," Splansky said. "[People] can look over shoulders and when they [feel] comfortable, they can try it."

"Mass Hysteria" airs on UVC television on Thursdays at 8:30 p.m. Reruns are aired on Tuesday. This Monday, the station will air a "Mass Hysteria" marathon, including a "Best Of" episode.

Some of best jazz found on reissues

I weep, I sob. I am going to miss this column quite a bit. Over the last year, I hope that my mission to inform you, the reading public, on as many diverse forms of two of the oldest categories of music in this land, jazz and blues, and to let you know what is available in stores to hear, was fulfilled. That would make me feel quite satisfied.

It seems to me that despite some contemporary jazz being completely amazing in its sparks of innovation and texture, a lot of the best jazz is still found on re–issues. Fantasy, Inc., a company stemming from Berkeley, Calif., which is in charge of the catalogs of many old jazz and blues labels, both large and small, independent. Prestige was one of the larger imprints from the '50s through the '70s. Innovative sax player Gene Ammons' 1970 album The Black Cat and his '71 effort with fellow tenorman Sonny Stitt on You Talk That Talk have been compiled on one compilation in Fantasy, Inc.'s series Legends Of Acid Jazz.

On both these albums, Ammons was helped by the often– rocking, always–soulful guitarist George Freeman, whose contributions always win the listener over on a given tune. "The Black Cat," the opener of this compilation is a shuffling soul–blues, and it is placed amongst ballads with strings, funky jazz, and even Ammons' romantic re–casing (with strings again) of George Harrison's "Something." Yeah, you get quite a mix. The tunes with Stitt are mostly organ–jazz, with fine contributions there by Leon Spencer. On the fat, driving number, "The People's Choice," Ammons shows his skills with the baritone — electric tenor sax. One can hear, clear as day, Ammons' contributions to the trip– and hip–hop sampling catalogs of today.

The great composer/arranger Benny Golson's Summer of 1964 trip to Swedcn yielded Stockholm Sojourn, with Golson's and others' music played by the International Jazz Orchestra (a sort of misnomer, whereas it's basically just Swedes and Americans in the lincup). This was released originally by Prestige, but is now a part of the Limited Edition segment of Fantasy, Inc.'s highly successful Original Jazz Classics series. The music on here, with lilting woodwinds. and strong brasses over jazz rhythms, is perfect in its arrangement and voicings. The haunting, sad alto flutes on "I Remember Clifford" are brought to cathartic grief, reminiscent of opera, by the brass section. Do check it out.

Other recent releases on the Original Jazz Classics strain, are Please Send Me Someone To Love, a 1969 date by the late, great pianist Phineas Newborn, Jr., and Woody Shaw's 1972 effort Song Of Songs. Not only do these two albums illustrate the breadth of variety within this series (which encapsulates well over 500 jazz discs on the market today), but they were also originally released on Contemporary Records, and were both produced by Lester Koenig (with help from brother John on Song Of Songs).

The Koenigs' production on both is superb, especially in the way Lester laid down the already power-

Turn to JAZZ, page 10

Johnny Depp stars as FBI agent Joe Piston, alias Donnie Brasco, who infiltrates the notorious Bonnanno mob family.

Marshall Steinbeck
Complete Auto Collision & Painting Service
(413) 256-8157
53 So. Prospect St. Amherst, Mass. 01002
STATE REG. RS #1212 MA LIC. #1398

IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL
20 Center St Northampton
ALL AGES
ALL THE TIME
friday, december 12, 10 pm
2 Skinnee J's
hip-hop astroboogie, $6 adv
saturday, december 13, 7 pm
Ellis Paul
plus Peter Mulvey
gorgeous, poetic folk songs, $8 adv
saturday, december 13, 10 pm
Abdul Baki & New Roots
Studio One-style reggae, $6 adv.
sunday, december 14, 7pm
Richard Shindell
great guitarist and songwriter, $10 adv
monday, december 15, 7 pm
Nightnoise
Celtic meets jazz and classical, $17.50 adv.
tuesday, december 16, 8:30 pm
Hospital
plus David Poe
alternasoft rock, $5 at the door
friday, december 19, 7 & 9:30 pm
Tommy Makem
Irish singer WWUA presents, $15 adv
sunday, december 21, 7 pm
Dave Mallett
plus Dana Robinson, $14 adv
DEC. 26 - Jan. 2: NINE NIGHTS OF FIRST NIGHT
TICKETS: For the Record, at the Northampton Box Office or call 586-8686.
24-HOUR CONCERT INFO: 413.584.0610

Have a happy and safe holiday from the Arts & Living staff!

SPORTS CHANNEL, ESPN, ESPN2, NESN
Under New Management
Seven O's
Sunderland's Sports Bar for Live Music
Live Music by the
"Catamount Band"
Friday & Saturday
Drink Specials
Bud, Bud Light, Michelobe Light
32oz $1.25 / 60oz $4.50
Never a Cover • SEVEN O'S • 665-8788
Route 116 IN SUNDERLAND (5 miles N of UMass exit)

MUSIC MALL
SHOPPES UNDER THE ROOF
A Division of Faletti Music
HOLIDAY SAVINGS SPECTACULAR!
over 18,000 sq. feet
1551 Boston RD. Springfield, MA 413-543-1002
KEYBOARD SHOP
Over 50 Keyboards!
YAMAHA
PSR-530 PORTABLE ONLY $599
• General MIDI XG compatible
• Host port for computer sequencing
• Larger LCD Display
Full line of Yamaha Portables starting at $149
All Yamaha portables includes 2 Free lessons
Discounted Lessons, ValuPak, 2 Year Guarantee
Labor & Parts 100 % Trade to within 1 year
SOUND SHOP
Sound Reinforcement Recording
4 TRACK RECORDER
for all your recording needs including thE YAMAHA MT-50
$399
DRUM SHOP
LUDWIG 5 PIECE DRUM SET ONLY $579 includes hardware
Snare Drum Package only $129
Large selection of drumsets, cymbols, hardware, & Latin Percussion
GUITAR SHOP
ACOUSTIC GUITAR PACKAGES $249.99
Takamine Ibanez
Each pakage includes, strap & bag or case, strings ,picks, video, and tuner
ELECTRIC GUITAR PACKAGES
Peavy Guitar, 15 watt amp, bag, cable, video $299.99
Ibanez Guitar, 15 watt amp, bag, cable, video $299.99
HAMER Guitar, travel amp, bag, cable, video $199.99
• 2 FREE LESSONS With Any Package
MUSIC SHOP
• QUICK TIME METRONOME ONLY $19.99
• OVER 2,000 POPULAR SHEETS & BOOKS
• FOLDING MUSIC STAND ONLY $11.95
PICK UP OUR 16 PAGE SALES CATALOG!!!
1-413-538-7978 LOOK FOR US IN THE BELL ATLANTIC YELLOW PAGES albums

continued from page 5

7.) "Not If You Were The Last Junkie On Earth" — The Dandy Warhols
8.) "You're Gorgeous" — Babybird
9.) "Breathe" — Prodigy
10.) "Autumn Sweater" — Yo La Tengo

Kevin Monahan — Arts & Living Staff

TOP 10 ALBUMS:

1.) Portishead — Portishead
Portishead's style of trip-hop is both innovative and addictive. Beth Gibbons' vocals propel this album to greatness.

2.) Bjork — Homogenic
Bjork's latest lives up to the high expectations given by its predecessors. Fans will not be disappointed.

3.) White Town — Women in Technology
Synth sounds direct from the '80s given a '90s techno treatment. Lots of fun.

4.) Blur — blur
Blur kicks Oasis' ass. Despite the drastic departure from their usual style, their latest release grows on you.

5.) David Bowie — Earthling
Changing styles and genres is one of Bowie's trademarks. Taking Outside one step further, Bowie integrates electronic beats into his industrial flavored music.

6.) Various Artists — Lost Highway Soundtrack
Ignore the cheesy Nine Inch Nails song. The other tracks from David Bowie, Lou Reed, and German heavy metal band Rammstein make Trent Reznor's second attempt at producing a soundtrack one of the year's best. The Smashing Pumpkins' "Eye" is one of Billy Corgan's finest achievements.

7.) Radiohead — OK Computer
The impeccably layered guitars drive this album to the overdub hall of fame.

8.) Sunshine Blind — Liquid
The best goth-rock album of the year. Check out their cover of Flock of Seagulls' "I Ran."

9.) The Cure — Galore
The best greatest hits collection of the year. The fact that it consists of old material almost kept it off the list. But the 18 songs on Galore follow each other in perfect order.

10.) Morrissey — Maladjusted
The poster boy for Prozac's latest is not his best, but keeps up the gloominess one would expect from him since his days in The Smiths.

Adam Dlugacz — Arts & Living Staff

TOP 10 ALBUMS:

1.) Silent Majority — Life of a Spectator
You know how certain songs give you chills every time you hear them? Well, I've played this album to death and it still gives me chills. Albums like this make me proud to be into hardcore.

2.) Kiss It Goodbye — She Loves Me, She Loves Me Not...
This album is brutal and emotional. It destroyed me. This is heavy hardcore the way the gods intended to have it played.

3.) Lifetime — Jersey's Best Dancers
Well it's their last album but it is pretty close to emotional punk perfection. Lifetime has a way of putting all those feelings you have into words and letting you know that someone out there does understand.

4.) Sick Of It All — Built To Last
The title says it all. The kings of hardcore came back and reclaimed their throne with this album.

5.) Hallraker — The Method Of
They combined the best of Black Flag, Swiz, Bad Brains and, of course, the Descendents. This album was like a baseball bat upside the head reminding us of what hardcore is supposed to sound like, fresh, innovative and pissed off.

6.) Common — Someday It Will All Make Sense
He changed his name and added a whole lot of jazz to his style and he still released the hip-hop album of the year. This is an intelligent album, something that hip-hop was in desperate need of.

7.) H2O — Thicker Than Water
I love this band and everything they do. These guys really broke out on this album and established themselves at the top of the melodic hardcore genre.

8.) Radiohead — OK Computer
An emotionally haunting album. Radiohead have released a challenging, beautiful album. Not bad for a bunch of Britpop dorks.

9.) Blur — blur
These guys have so much attitude you have to love them. Plus, "Song 2" is easily the catchiest and best pop song I've heard in a while.

10.) The Wu-Tang Clan — Wu-Tang Forever
Maybe a double disc was a bit excessive, then again when you consider the wealth of talent in the Clan it makes sense. No, this wasn't the classic their first album was, but Wu- Tang continues to define a genre and set the standard for modern day hip-hop. The world is theirs.

year

continued from page 8

of Oklahoma Bombing and sentenced to death.
• Brad Pitt and Gwyneth Paltrow break off engagement.

July

• Space Station Mir undergoes massive repairs to fix a hole in the station's hull.
• Supreme Court reports that online speech, sexually explicit or not, is protected.
• Hong Kong returned to China.
• Princess Diana's gowns raise $3.2 million for charity.
• Jacques Cousteau passes away.
• Pathfinder lands on Mars and sends home picture of the red planet.
• Mike Tyson bites off Evander Holyfield's ear.
• Diet pills linked to rare heart disorder.
• Gianni Versace murdered by Andrew Cunnan.

August

• Cambodian leader Pol Pot brought to trial.
• Congress balances the budget.
• Bill Cosby agrees to blood test to determine paternity of Autumn Jackson.
• Suicide bombers kill 13 and wound 170 in attack on a Jerusalem market.
• Novelist Janet Dailey accused of plagiarizing fellow author, Nora Roberts.
• Jim Carey and Lauren Holly separate.
• Apple Computer signs deal with Microsoft.
• Princess Diana killed in car accident.
• Lilith Fair tour kicks off.

September

• Mother Teresa passes away.
• William Weld denied ambassadorship to Mexico.

October

• Clinton signs rent subsidy legislation.
• Bob Dole offers to testify in Senate hearings to respond to suggestions of campaign finance impropriety during 1996 election bid.
• John Denver killed in airplane accident.
• Author James Michner passes away.

November

• British au pair Louise Woodward, 18, set free after convicted of murdering 8-month-old Matthew Eappen.
• Million Woman March takes place in Philadelphia.
• Saddam kicks United Nations inspectors out of Iraq.

December

• Anti-obesity drug approved by FDA.
• TWA Flight 800 investigation closed.

— Compiled by Seema Gangatirkar

jazz

continued from page 9

ful piano style of Newborn. Newborn is a mix of Ellington, Tatum and, well, himself all through the disc, and his lines are tremendous. Ray Brown on bass and Elvin Jones on drums lend support.

Song Of Songs is a heavenly effort with progressive jazz all over. The bass lines sing, the instrumentation with two saxophones, flutes, and Shaw's bold trumpet is all nicely stated, and instead of things going the "theme->solo chords" way of boring, standard jazz, melodies space themselves over the forty-odd minutes, allowing a more attentive listen.

Well, now that I've just put down the "theme->solo chords" type of jazz, it will be hard for me to defend the hard-bop of Blue Note's latest series of re-issues. The latest run moves through a concept of covers of pop songs. Grant Green's I Want To Hold Your Hand, Hank Mobley's Reach Out! (I'll Be There), and Donald Byrd's Mustang all take on the songs that create the titles for these albums.

Green puts a bossa nova twist on his cover of Lennon / McCartney's big '63 hit; Mobley (with amazing contributions all through the disc from guitarist George Benson) gives a drive to the Four Tops' oldie, and... well, Byrd and songwriter Sonny Red were hoping that Red's "Mustang" would become a jazz hit. All three of these discs have a smoky feel about them. Great names like McCoy Tyner, Elvin Jones, Woody Shaw, and Jimmy Heath are splattered like billboards throughout the playing credits. A fine batch by one of jazz's greatest labels.

Well, there you all have it. I hope that there is someone out there who will carry the "Jazz/Blues Weekly" torch. Feel free to come to the Collegian and talk to someone. I thank you all for reading, and I also thank the helpful folks at For The Record in Amherst for their info on new releases.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN WRITING A COLUMN FOR THE ARTS & LIVING SECTION NEXT SEMESTER?

WE'RE LOOKING FOR WRITERS WHO ARE WILLING TO WRITE A MUSIC COLUMN ON A SPECIFIC GENRE ONCE A MONTH.

WE ARE ALSO LOOKING FOR PEOPLE TO COVER TELEVISION, VIDEOS, BOOKS AND MORE.

IF YOU'RE INTERESTED, STOP BY THE COLLEGIAN OR CALL 545-1361 AND ASK TO SPEAK TO SEEMA.

WE HAVE PLENTY OF GIFT IDEAS FOR THE HOLIDAYS!
Open SUNDAYS
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive

LITE & LITE ICE 12 PACK CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $14.49 + DEP.
KEYSTONE LIGHT CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS SALE $9.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -4.00 FINAL COST $5.99 + DEP. 12 PACK
ICEHOUSE & RED DOG CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $11.99 + DEP. 12 PACK
MICHELOB, & MICHELOB, Light 18 PACK 18-12 OZ. CANS $9.49 + DEP.
SAM ADAMS WINTER LAGER & LAGER 12 PK. BOTTLE $8.99 + DEP.
CORONA EXTRA 12 PK. BOTTLES $8.49 + DEP.
CATAMOUNT ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP.
CIDER JACK ALL FLAVORS (EXCLUDING SPICE) 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99
ROLLING ROCK CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $12.99 + DEP.
ROLLING ROCK ½ KEGS $32.99 + DEP.
½ KEGS BUD, BUD LT., BUD ICE, MICH., MICH. LT., MICH. AMBER ROCK, LITE, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG $39.99 + DEP.

WINE OF THE MONTH
Meridian CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750ML $7.99
Almaden Mirassou CHABLIS, BLUSH, GOLDEN, WHITE GRENACHE, RHINE 5 LT. BAG-IN-A-BOX SALE $7.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -1.50 FINAL COST $5.99
RENE JUNOT RED & WHITE 1.5LT $5.99
CORBETT CANYON WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5LT $4.99
GEORGES DUBOEUF 1997 BEAUJOLAIS-VILLAGES NOUVEAU 750ML $5.99
JEKEL CHARDONNAY 750ML $8.49
FETZER EAGLE PEAK MERLOT 750ML $7.49
SUTTER HOME CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON & MERLOT 1.5LT $8.99
HARVEYS. BRISTOL CREAM. 750ML $9.49
FREIXENET CORDON NEGRO BRUT 750ML $5.99
MARTINI & ROSSI ASTI SPUMANTE 750ML SALE $7.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00 FINAL COST $5.99
MOET & CHANDON WHITE STAR CHAMPAGNE 750ML $21.99

SMIRNOFF VODKA 1.75L $14.49
BACARDI RUM LIGHT & DARK 1.75L SALE $14.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00 FINAL COST $12.99
Canadian Club 1.75L SALE $16.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -4.00 FINAL COST $12.49
Crown Royal 750ML $14.99
AMARETTO DI SARONNO 750ML $14.49
KAHLÚA COFFEE LIQUEUR 750ML $12.99
DEWARS WHITE LABEL SCOTCH 1.75L $28.49
BAILEYS IRISH CREAM 750ML $14.49
COURVOISIER V.S. COGNAC 750ML $18.99
CANADIAN MIST 1.75L SALE $11.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $8.49
SEAGRAM'S 7 BLENDED WHISKEY 1.75L SALE $12.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $9.99
SOUTHERN COMFORT 1.75 $15.49
E & J BRANDY 750ML $7.49
The GLENLIVET SINGLE MALT SCOTCH 750ML $21.49
CHIVAS REGAL SCOTCH 750ML $20.99

We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 12.11.97 THRU WEDS. 12.17.97
WE RESERVE THE RIGHT TO CORRECT TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

JOB FAIR JOB FAIR JOB FAIR
WHAT ARE YOU DOING THIS BREAK?
Mount Snow
JOB FAIR
DECEMBER 13
(call if you can make it or apply on-line)
On-The-Spot Interviews with Department Supervisors for Ticket Sellers, Child Care, Food & Beverage Staff, Custodial, Parking Attendants, Housekeepers, Ski Patrol, Ski & Snowboard Professionals, and much more!
Main Base Lodge
10 am - 2 pm
Work Hard. Play Harder.
If you cannot attend, please Contact: The Human Resources Department, Mount Snow Resort, West Dover VT 05356 (802) 464-3333, or apply on line at www.mountsnow.com

presents

continued from page 14

Ralph back for the night.
• I'd get Barry Switzer something to do during Dallas Cowboys games. Couldn't help but notice his role in Monday night's home loss to Carolina. Every shot of him, he's sitting there on the sidelines with the headset on, arms folded, not saying a word. He doesn't carry any notes. He just sits there and watches the game, like the rest of us for the most part, which is something that disturbs me because how hard is it to coach the Cowboys anyway?
"Uh, Michael you go deep and Troy's going to throw it to you, O.K.? Yeah, that's right, on two Nate."
The only time Switzer's mouth opens on the sidelines is when he's saying something that prompts John Madden to chime in with a "don't read lips." Maybe that's why Jerry Jones insists on a sideline seat, so Barry's got someone to talk to. Even Mark Fidrych used to talk to the ball. Silence isn't always golden.
• Now that the New York Jets have lost two in a row and handed first place in the division over the home town team, I'd get all the guys you've been seeing around campus lately with their shiny new Jets hats their old brown paper bags back. Now, I do know some legitimate Jet fans on this campus and I have an awful lot of respect for them having suffered through some lean years in Foxboro and being a Red Sox fan.
However, there are a lot of shiny new Jet hats on this campus being worn by random people for some reason. It would be one thing if it were a cool logo you're sporting (like the recent influx of Marlin stuff) but it's green. The Barenaked Ladies wouldn't even buy you a real green dress — that's cruel.
The only thing that's green and gets distributed to the masses around here either have shamrocks on them or come from the DC.
• Well, that's another semester of somewhat entertaining and free space filler on a weekly basis. Next week, whether you're off to San Juan, San Diego, Schenectady or Schnecksville, happy trails to you until we meet again.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

men's hoop

continued from page 14

UMass in a big game.
The junior guard answered the pressure and dropped a clutch 22 points on Kansas. He emerged from the doldrums of two poor showings on his home court. He ran rampant over the Jayhawks backcourt.
He became Mike Williams with his 30-foot bank shot against Temple or any number of other heroic efforts. He became Lou Roy or Jim McCoy against Syracuse in the 1992 tournament.
He truly became a part of what basketball here has been all about since John Calipari gave birth to "UMass basketball."
Clarke and his teammates proved they were still UMass and gave notice that UMass basketball was still in the ring.

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

gymnastics

continued from page 14

good on the bars and Jill should contribute on the floor, vault and beam."
However, like all teams in the long run, the important thing is for the team to work cohesively and apply their skill. The goals of this year's Minutewomen gymnastics team is like every year, the Big show... Nationals.
Compared to last season's schedule this year's has many new teams added to it. Schools such as Army, SUNY Cortland, Ithaca, Arizona, N.C. State and Northeastern will be uncharted territory for Coach Kuzara's gymnasts.

Cornhuskers coach Osborne calls it a career

By Tom Kurte
Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Tom Osborne retired as football coach at Nebraska yesterday, ending an era at the school in which he became one of the game's most successful coaches and the Cornhuskers ruled the sport.
He will coach the No. 2 Cornhuskers against No. 3 Tennessee in the Orange Bowl on Jan. 2 and said he may stay on until February if he can be of help to the team. Assistant coach Frank Solich will succeed Osborne.
The announcement came came one day after the 60-year-old coach laughed when asked when he plans to retire. "I don't know," he said Tuesday at his weekly news conference. "It could happen anytime."
But Osborne had admitted that he doesn't see himself hanging on forever." I don't think I can do that until I'm 70," he said. The coach, who had been diagnosed with an irregular heart beat, weathered criticism in recent years over his decisions to allow players facing criminal charges to stay on the field.
He came under sharp criticism in 1995 for his decision to reinstate star tailback Lawrence Phillips to the team even after Phillips pleaded no contest to charges of assaulting a former girlfriend.
For a quarter-century, Osborne and Nebraska have been perennial powerhouses, winning consecutive national titles in 1994 and 1995 while compiling a 254-49-3 mark with 24 straight bowl appearances. "Tom Osborne was one of the great coaches in college football for all time," Miami Dolphins coach Jimmy Johnson said. "He has a tremendous amount of class and respect from all of his peers." The Cornhuskers (12-0) may have a shot at a third national title in four years — if they win the Orange Bowl and top-ranked Michigan loses to Washington State in the Rose Bowl.
Osborne retires as the sixth winningest coach in Division I-A history, behind Bear Bryant, Pop Warner, Amos Alonzo Stagg, Joe Paterno and Bobby Bowden.
Osborne's decision follows the recent retirements of two of the most prominent coaches in college sports — Eddie Robinson of Grambling, the winningest coach in college football; and Dean Smith of North Carolina, the winningest coach in college basketball. Osborne, who has spent 25 seasons as head coach at Nebraska, reached his 250th career victory on Nov. 1 with a 69-7 defeat of Oklahoma. He leaves at the top of his game. The Cornhuskers are 59-3 over the past five years with five straight 11-win seasons, an NCAA best.
Osborne was an assistant coach to Bob Devaney's team that won titles in 1970 and 1971. Devaney picked Osborne as his successor in 1973.
In 1984, Osborne underwent bypass heart surgery. After Nebraska's 77-14 win over Iowa State on Nov. 15, he was hospitalized overnight for tests for an irregular heartbeat. He said he was diagnosed with atrial fibrillation, a varied heart beat that can cause strokes or heart attacks.
But Osborne, who had high cholesterol before his heart surgery 13 years ago, has insisted that he feels fine although he has changed his diet.
He said he still works out — running or lifting weights — about 30 minutes daily. A few weeks ago, he even jokingly challenged reporters to a three-mile run.
Osborne grew up in Hastings, the son of a minister. He showed athletic in a number of sports — football, basketball and track. After his 1959 graduation from Hastings College in 1959, he played three seasons in the NFL — two with the Washington Redskins and one with the San Francisco 49ers — as a wide receiver.

Ouch!!!
Women's basketball Kelly Van Huisen is out for the season with a torn ACL which she injured in the closing moments of Sunday's game win over Holy Cross

HUI GAO / COLLEGIAN

Martinez Price Tag: $75 Million

By Enrique Rojas
Associated Press

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Pedro Martinez said yesterday he had agreed to a record-setting $75 million, six-year contract with the Boston Red Sox.
Martinez said Boston has two option years that could raise the total amount of the contract to $92 million over eight years. There was no immediate word from the team, Jim Bronner, the pitcher's agent, declined comment.
"I'm a little ashamed to say how much I signed for," Martinez, the 1997 National League Cy Young Award winner, told Radio Universal.
Earlier reports had said Martinez was close to signing a $50 million, five-year deal with the team.
The total dollars and the average salary of $12.5 million would be a baseball record. The largest package to date is Gary Sheffield's $61 million, six-year contract with Florida that starts next season. The highest average salary is the $11.5 million Greg Maddux will get in his $57.5 million, five-year contract that starts with Atlanta next season.
Martinez was acquired by the Red Sox from Montreal on Nov. 18 after going 17-8 with a major-league leading 1.90 ERA. He had 305 strikeouts, second in the majors behind Curt Schilling.
Martinez made $3,615,000 last season and was eligible for salary arbitration this winter and free agency after next season. "I thank God that I was chosen to show the people that with effort they can do anything," Martinez said. "I come from a world of much poverty and, thanks to God, I've been able to get to where I am today."

We're worker-owned. We do it all, we do it cheap... 7 days a week.
CollectiveCopies
[illegible] Pleasant, Amherst (413) 256-6425

ERASER
SCHOOL SUPPLIES
A terrific selection of magazines, binders, notebooks, pens, pencils, paper clips, printer cartridges, T-shirts, art supplies, calendars, candy, toys, stationary & the best card shop in the Valley!
A·J·Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer
"Conveniently located in the center of Amherst"
45 South Pleasant St. • 253-2540
OPEN: Weekdays 5 a.m. to 9 p.m.
Sundays 5 a.m. to 9 p.m.

KAI CHI
WE DELIVER
586-2774
Sun -Weds noon-midnight Thurs-Sat noon-2am

Eating Disorder Programs
Fall 1997
Sponsored by University Health Services
Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For Individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Tuesdays or Fridays
Confidentiality Assured.
Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2
Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2.
Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bullimia, or compulsive overeating. Wednesday 4:30 -6 pm, at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator. Confidentiality Assured.
Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2.
Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders, yourself or someone you know. Call 577-5168.

R&P Liquors
•Weekly Specials on Regular Beers •Fine Wines•
Largest Selection of Micro-Brews in S. Amherst
• Fridge Rentals

Spirit Haus
YOU HAVE TO SEE IT TO BELIEVE IT!
LIQUOR SPECIALS
Glenmorangie 750 ml $23.99
Kahlua 750 ml $15.99
Bobmay Saphire 750 ml $15.99
Absolut 750 ml $12.99
Captain Morgan Spiced Rum 750 ml $9.99
MICRO BREWS
Wachusett 12 pack Bottles + dep $9.99
Magic Hat 6 pack Bottles + dep $5.99
Longtrail 6 pack Bottles + dep $5.49
BEER SPECIALS
Heineken & Amstel 12 packs + dep $9.99
Bud & Bud Lite 12 pack cans + dep $7.99
Lite & Lite Ice 30-packs $14.99
Micro Kegs In Stock
DISCOVER, VISA, MASTERCARD ACCEPTED - OPEN 9am to 11pm
RT. 9 EAST / 338 COLLEGE ST (413)253-5384 / TAKE I-91 TO EXIT 19 / RT. 9 east
Full Redemption Center

amc
Hampshire 6 • 584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Bean (PG 13)
Today at (5:50), 8:40
Anastasia (G)
Today at (5:40), 8:40
Flubber (R)
Today at (5:30), 8:30
Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil (R)
Today at (5:10), 8:20
Mortal Combat 2- Annihulation (PG 13)
Today at (5:30), 8:30
Boogie Nights (R)
Today at (5:10), 8:20
Mt. Farms 4 • 584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Jackal (R)
Today at (5:40), 8:30
Starship Troopers (R)
Today at (5:40), 8:30
Rainmaker (PG13)
Today at (5:00), 8:20
Alien: Resurrection (R)
Today at (5:50), 8:40

8 [illegible]'s BILLARDS 9
10A BELCHERTOWN ROAD AMHERST, MA 01002 256-8284
LIVE MUSIC
Friday: LiveMusic! Open Christmas! Saturday 9:45pm: Soledad

Holly Days
Sale runs Dec. 15- Dec. 20.
EXAM WEEK SPECIAL
UMASS COTTON TEES
FROM TLC SPORTSWEAR
INTRODUCTORY LOW PRICE $8.99!
REGULARLY $12.99
ASSORTED STYLES
JUST IN TIME FOR THE HOLIDAYS!
HURRY IN FOR BEST SELECTION
University Store
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
UNIVERSITY STORE
IN THE CAMPUS CENTER
We accept AMEX, Discover, MC, Visa, and the UCard!

Pearl Street Nightclub
Live Music & Dance Club
EVERY THURSDAY • 9-2am
THE RIVER'S BIGGEST
HIGH ENERGY
18+ Dance Party
PROPER DRESS & ID REQUIRED
FREE $1.25 Every Friday • 9pm-2am 18+
ANIMAL HOUSE COLLEGE NIGHT
$3 FOR 18-21 Party Mix Music
DEC. 28 & 30 • 7:30-11:30
TEEN NIGHT
Ages 15-19 Proper ID & Dress
NEW YEAR'S EVE... DOWNSTAIRS 18+
STASH
UPSTAIRS 18+ NEW YEAR'S DANCE PARTY
LIVE MUSIC
THURS. DEC. 11 • 7:00 PM
SHOOTYZ GROOVE
Restraint/Hypnotic Kick Imbalance/Burnside
FRI. DEC. 12 • 7:00 PM 21+
1st Annual River Holiday Hooha with Paul Cebar & the Lonesome Brothers
FREE Admission
Downstairs 9:00pm 18+
MILL RIVER BAND
Brotherman
SAT. DEC. 13 • 8:30 PM 18+
MAX CREEK
SUN. DEC. 14 • 7:00 PM
CANDERIA
Pushbutton Warefare/Catch 13/Stigmata Dead Eyes Under/Crossthread
THURS. DEC. 18 • 7:00 PM
CONVERGE/BRUTAL TRUTH
Cave In/Scattered Remnants/Evilution
FRI. DEC. 19 • 9:00 PM 21+
MARK HERSCHLER & ZORKESTRA
CD Release Party
SAT. DEC. 20 • 8:00 PM
BLACK REBELS
FRI. DEC. 26 • 9:00 PM 18+
LOBSTERZ FROM MARZ
SAT. JAN. 3 18+
TRAILER PARK
Propellers
UPCOMING
THU. JAN. 16 RKS RECORDS PARTY All Ages
SUN. JAN. 19 THE PALMS All Ages
Advance tickets available at the Northampton Box office, 586-8686, 1-800-THE TICK, Strawberries in Amherst, Downs, For The Record in Amherst, Record Mart in Greenfield, Tic Unlimited at Music Plus in Westfield, Main Outlet in Easthampton, 538 Main St. in Northampton, 586-9336
THE-TICK
586-8686
9898-9855
10 PEARL STREET, NORTHAMPTON
http://www.virtual-valley.com/pearl-street
413-584-7771

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Collegian Staff: Have a great break! See you next semester. If you are graduating- Best of luck in the future! Happy Holidays!

February Auditions- "The Tribe" Student Film Comedy Script Available Only royn@student.umass.edu

SORORITY RUSH
Feb. 5th- 9th
Registration!
12-8 12-12
in the Campus Center Concourse
Come see what we're about
For more info call Lisa @ 549-8025

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Large 2 bedroom next to bus stop. Heat/Hot Water included. Call 259-1860

One Bedroom Brandywine Apartment Available January/ August Call 549-7330

2 bedroom apartment- The Boulders $695. Free heat. Call Jesse 259-9188

1 bedroom apartment available 1/98. Close to campus. Mark 549-5326

2 bedroom- Mill Hollow $540 Jan 1. Call Tracy 549-3759

One bedroom apartments available Jan-Feb 1st. Please contact the Brandywine Office at 549-0600.

1 bedroom at Puffton Villaga $545. Includes heat. Available 1/1/98! Please call 549-9221

Take Over My Lease One bedroom apartment. $500/month inclusive. Call Tariq Odeh 625-5589

AUTO FOR SALE

82 Honda Civic $250. Reliable, runs fine, but needs new clutch. 253-8585

Geo Prizm 1990 155,000. Very reliable. Well maintained (records). Blue Book says $2800 Asking $2000 256-1845

89 Nissan 240SX Excellent condition All extras New: muffler, clutch, tires, brakes. $4400 or B/O. 549-6926

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday 1-800-649-4795

COMPUTERS

Leptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call DPC (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Unemployed Over Winter Break? Work for The Sierra Club to protect our endangered species. Positions available here in Amherst and across the country. Great pay, excellent experience. Call Mery at 256-6434

HELP WANTED!
Winter Session & Immediate Openings

Hadley office has 30 openings for the winter session.
Office Hours: 10 AM to 2 PM & 4 PM to 9 PM. Saturdays & Sundays also available.

- Fun Atmosphere
- No Experience Required
- On Bus Line
- Flexible Schedule
- Only Minutes From Campus

Call 584-0215 For Interview

EMPLOYMENT

WINTER BREAK JOBS
Abt Associates has openings available over the Winter Break for a few reliable people with good communication and computer skills who are available to work a minimum of 20 hours per week, including 1 weekend shift. Evening and weekend assignments are currently available. We offer flexible scheduling options, access to health and dental plans and paid training. The starting wage is $5.75/hour with regular merit increases. Free transportation from PVTA Bus Line is provided. For more information or to arrange a personal interview call (413)587-1607
An Equal Opportunity Employer

Earn $75-$100
Untrained males needed for Exc Sci. Study over Wintersession. Call Steve @ 253-4952

Accounting Position- Spring Semester
Flexible hours, fun environment. Generate reports, data entry. Call Ryan or Maureen at 5-3500. Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement

Winter Break Employment
$7.50/hr. Amherst, New England Call Center. 253-0583

Drivers Wanted Spring Semester. No classes before 10am. Must be hard working and have reliable transportation. $10/hour 8-8 hrs/week. Contact Ryan or Lyle at The Collegian 545-3500 or come to the Campus Center Basement

Day Care Lunch Cook & Shopper, 17 hrs per week, $7 per hour. Classroom Subs. Variable Schedules, $6.25 per hour. Route 63, Leverett. Call Susan 548-9674

YOU WANT CASH MONEY??!! Do you know how to drink warm sode and eat a pound of lima beans??!! Be a part of the new comedy tape "AMERICA'S GREATEST BELCHES & FARTS." Send your best burps and farts on tape (audio, video, micro) to us. CASH bad if you make the cut! Maniac Marketing, 257 Cherokee St. Marietta, GA 30060 Need more info? Call the GAS LINE (770)980-5233

EMPLOYMENT

New Students Program Summer Positions
Seeking extraverts with a 2.5+ GPA. May 27 to July 18, 1998. Salary plus, room, board & health coverage. Applications at Admissions Center.

Apply now to be a Tour Guide, Summer Counselor, Student Admissions Representative. Applications available on the course

Aerobics Instructor
January and Second Semester. Some mornings Hampshire Fitness Club. 256-6446

Part-time change over crew and post-event cleaners needed at the Mullins Center. Must be available nights and weekends and willing to work. Apply in person. Mullins Center 2nd floor. 8:30-5:30pm.

January Jobs Use your winter break to make money. 2-4 week fun promotions around country. Great for the resume. Outgoing and independent people call (800)783-4237 Attn. Joe. Collegiate Advantage

Summer Management Opportunities
Open across Mass. for the Summer of 1998. Earn $600-$800 per week. For more info please call College Pro Painters at (888)277-7962.

FOR SALE

Dynostar V9 190cm Quick Turning Mogul Ski & Binding. Used 10 days. $180. Call Dan (978)249-7441

Fridge, Call Phone, Peger, Sub Woofer, Car CD, Bike and Tables. Call (413)546-2716

Versace Jeans Brand new with all the tags. Size 29, stone denim, $175 original, $99 or B/O. Call 546-0947

For Sale- Two pairs of skis K2 and Salomon. Almost brand new $200 each or B/O. Call 546-6152

Willpower In A Bottle
Lose Weight
Doctor Recommended
100% Natural
Moneyback Guarantee
(413)259-1922

FURNITURE

Need to sell 3 month old full size bed at the end of Dec for $90 or best offer. Call Marc at 253-9220

HOUSE FOR RENT

4 BED HOUSE Good location, Northampton. For Jan $925 plus utilities. Skibiski Realtors 584-3428

JEWELRY

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 284 N Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

LOST

Watch lost Sat Night Tigger Watch with green band. Reward. 546-6822

Lost: Black Velcro Wallet in Newmen Center on Dec 4th by the phone. If found please call Erin at 253-1529

MISCELLANEOUS

WINTER HEAT TIPS! Don't turn your thermostat below 60 during winter break or you risk broken water pipes for which you are responsible (not the landlord). This is an expense you do not want. If you are going away for only a few days ask your landlord to check the house. If you have questions or want more information call Commuter Services at 545-0865 or come to 428 Student Union.

PERSONALS

HAPPY GRADUATION JIZMIII CONGRATULATIONS and we love you!! Seaver, Ralfs, Manero and the rest of the EX-DONS

ROOM FOR RENT

Wintersession Rooms- Singles or doubles available. Fraternity, close to campus. $200. Call Bob 549-6143

One room in renovated three bedroom Puffton apartment. Available Jan 1. $260/month. Dan (413)549-7059

ROOM FOR RENT

1 room in 4 bedroom apt in Northampton. Jan to Aug. $300 a month. Call 585-5851

Room Available 12/22 Great location on Lincoln Avenue. $250 includes utilities. Call 549-1910

Quiet room, downtown Amherst Available end of December. Lease 253-4236. 8am-9pm

Room available in Main St apartment. Parking and heat included. Call Paul or Mike 253-1450

Bedroom Available Two bedroom apt. $216/month. On bus route. Call 665-8894. Ask for Scott.

Looking for male to share large room in 3 bedroom apartment. Great location uptown. $250/month. Ask for Fitz 253-9359

Large bedroom in renovated 3 bedroom Puffton apartment. Available Jan 1. $375/month. 549-6857

1 room in 2 bedroom apartment. Available Jan. End. Call 549-6082 ASAP

UPTOWN
Room for rent in house for 1 or 2 persons.
$210/month. Available 12/22.
549-9275

Furnished room available in a 4 bedroom Amherst house $300/month. Near bus route. For more details call Tina 253-9428

Cheap rooms for Wintersession Live close to campus. Only $150. Includes heat/hot water. Call Jason 549-0958

ROOMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted Own bedroom. $300/month. On bus line. Call Jen 256-2995

Bedroom available in Sugarloaf $333 monthly. Call 665-3568

Prefer female non-smoker to share house in Belchertown. Call 323-9268

ROOMATE WANTED

Apartmentmate Wanted: $220 plus 1/2 electricity. Right on bus line. Female, non-smoker. Call 253-4982. Available Jan 1, 1998

Looking for 1 person to share large room in two bedroom apt. Starts Jan 1. Call Brad or Mike 549-3992

Female roommate/s wanted to share a 2 bedroom- Boulders Apts. Amherst. On bus line. Available Jan 1st or sooner. 259-2995

SERVICES

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning lease? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

DECORATOR SERVICE
Beautify your home- wallpaper, painting, staning. Expert work- 20 years exp. Free estimates. Call (413)533-6213 South Hadley

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Spring Sublet starting on Jan-May or Jan-Aug. 2 bedroom at Sugarloaf. Semi-furnished. Rent $660 but I will pay $100/month. Free heat. Call 665-9101

Take over our 2 bedroom apartment! Cliffside in Sunderland $660/month. All utilities. On bus line. 665-0235

TRAVEL

Spring Break 98
Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399! Organize a small group- travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK
Cancun From $599
Jamaica From $679
Best Bahamas From $629
Florida From $99
NOW HIRING REPS!
1-800-234-7007
http://www.endlesssummertours.com

RELIABLE SPRING BREAK TOURS
Bahamas, Cancun & Ski Trips! FREE FOOD & FREE DRINKS! Sign up before Dec 20. Organize a group- travel free. Call for details and free brochure. Call (888)SPRING BREAK Today!

SPRING BREAK TRAVEL

Spring Break
Ask about our legendary Free Party Packages
★Jamaica ★Cancun
The best Meal Plan in the business!
★Daytona ★Panama City
CALL FOR FREE INFO PACK
Sun Splash Tours
1-800-426-7710

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number as filled in on the insertion order. Use of false identification and misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELERY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND
MAKE FRIENDS
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
NON-UMASS FORMAT
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOMS WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP.
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, DEC. 11

Thursday, Dec. 11

Comedy — UMass's This Side Up comedy improvisation troupe at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center (room 163)— hosted by MISSION IMPROVable.

Lecture — Christian McEwen presents a lecture on "A Celebration of Tomboys" at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center (room 803) as part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series and is co-sponsored by Food for Thought Books, The Stonewall Center, GLB GSO, Women's Studies and the Chancellor's Task Force on GLBT Matters. For more information, please contact the Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

Slide-lecture — Kim Tripp, director of the Smith College Botanic Garden, will describe a recent plant-collecting trip during a slide-lecture titled "A China Expedition" at 4:30 p.m. in the Neilson Library Browsing Room at Smith College.

FRIDAY, DEC. 12

Comedy — Montclair State's Possible Side Effects comedy improvisation troupe at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center (room 163) hosted by MISSION IMPROVable.

Concert — The Hampshire College Chorus will perform Mozart's Missa Brevis, K. 275, and Lou Harrison's Mass to St. Anthony at 8 p.m. at Grace Church on the Amherst Town Common.

Meeting — The Tibetan Students Association is having a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center (room 165-69).

Service — Shabbat Service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House.

SATURDAY, DEC. 13

Comedy — Tuft's Cheap Sox comedy improvisation troupe at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163, hosted by MISSION IMPROVable.

Party — Pre-Chanukah party at 8 p.m. at the Hillel House.

NOTICES

Applications — The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team is accepting applications for its training this January 12-16. Applications are available for any UMass student at 222 Hampshire House, Legal Studies. For more information, contact Leah at 545-5882.

Art Exhibition — An exhibition of more than 30 one-of-a- kind artist books and scrolls by William Schade will be on view from Nov. 11 through Jan. 25 at the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum. Museum hours are Tuesday – Friday, 11 a.m.–5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday, 1–5 p.m. and is closed on academic holidays from Wednesday, Nov. 26 through Monday, Dec. 1 and from Tuesday, Dec. 16 through Monday, Jan. 6. For more information, call 538-2245 or fax 538-2144.

Art Exhibition — Works by 13 members of the Williams College art faculty will be featured in "Artist/Teacher: Group Faculty Exhibition," opening Dec. 6 at the Williams College Museum of Art, and continuing through March 1. Museum hours are Tues.–Sat. 10a.m.–5 p.m. and Sun. 1–5 p.m.

Club — The UMass Amateur Radio Club Station WIPUO is returning and looking for people to join in Ham radio. Anyone interested in radio/electronics with a desire to learn and communicate is welcome. The club will sponsor FCC– approved volunteer examination sessions for all license levels. For more information, contact Richard Strycharz N1MFT at 549–6000 ext. 6000 or leave a message at facility services.

Internships — Environmental and Hunger Internships available for credit. Opportunities include helping to organize a Five College Earthday, protecting Endangered Species and organizing the Spring Hunger Clean–up. For more information, call Robyn at 545–0199.

Notice — Spectrum Magazine is taking submission for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office at 545–2240 or come by in the Student Union, room 406E.

Notice — The UMass Arts Council's next deadline for Single Project/Event grants is on Wednesday, Feb. 4 at 5 p.m. for art events occurring after Feb. 24. Guidelines for application forms are available at the Campus Activities Office, 416 Student Union or at the Arts Council offices, Hasbrouck 101–103 or on computer disk at PC Software Support, Lederle low rise, room A118. Please call the Arts Council at 545–0202 for help with applying for a grant or to discuss your ideas.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	17 HSCN Programming
3	CBS/3 Hartford	18 TV–19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20 ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	22 NBC/22 Springfield
6	PBS/57 Springfield	23 CNN
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	24 CNN SI
8	UPN/20 Hartford	25 Headline News
9	Weather Channel	26 UCTV
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27 TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28 BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	28 TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30 Univision
14	International	31 Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32 Cartoon
		33 Much Music

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 11, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Women's College Basketball: Connecticut at Massachusetts. (Live)				Fleetwood Mac (In Stereo)		Keeping Up		This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Reel TV	Promised Land (In Stereo)	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Dellaventura "Dreamers"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Promised Land (In Stereo)	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Dellaventura "Dreamers"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Nothing Sacred (In Stereo)	Cracker "An American Dream"		20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	56		Full House	Boy-World	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★½ "White Hunter, Black Heart" (1990, Drama) Clint Eastwood.			News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Union Square	Seinfeld	Veronica's Cl.	ER "Obstruction of Justice"	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		4	Cheers	Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Money, I Shrunk the Kids		Fame L.A. "Christmas Episode"		News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Friends	Union Square	Seinfeld	Veronica's Cl.	ER "Obstruction of Justice"	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Living Single	Between Bros.	413 Hope St. (In Stereo)		News	Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Union Square	Seinfeld	Veronica's Cl.	ER "Obstruction of Justice"	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	8	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Mystery! "Poirot" "Hercule Poirot's Christmas" (In Stereo)				Keeping Up Appearances
WGGB	57	29	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Nothing Sacred (In Stereo)	Cracker "An American Dream"		20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	★★½ "Volunteers" (1965, Comedy) Tom Hanks, John Candy.			News	M*A*S*H	Frasier	Reel TV
WTBS	49		Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	★★★ "For Your Eyes Only" (1981, Adventure) Roger Moore, Carole Bouquet.					★★★ "Live and Let Die" (1973)
A&E	51		Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Apocrypha"		Biography: Winchell-Voice		See Teles "Battleship Potemkin"		Unexplained "The Mars Rock"	Law & Order "Star Struck"
CNN	40	23	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today	Moneyline	Sports Bus.
COM	39	35	Premium	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)		★★ "Zorro, the Gay Blade" (1981, Comedy) George Hamilton,		Offsides	Premium	Town Hall
DISC	42		Wings "Top Guns" (R)		Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery: Yellowstone	Slave Ship			Battleship (Part 1 of 2)	Justice Files (R)
ESPN	43		Up Close	Sportscenter		Pro Bowl Selection Show		College Football Awards (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	47		Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait: "Debbie Allen"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)	★★½ "I'll Be Home for Christmas" (1988, Drama) Hal Holbrook.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	53		MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		Daria (R)	Beavis-Butt.	Real World Reunion (R) (In Stereo)		Real World	Scream 3 Video (R) (In Stereo)
NICK	45		Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	I Love Lucy	M.Y. Moore	Taxi
SCIFI	46		Screamz	Twilight Zone	Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)		Seaquest DSV (In Stereo)	★★ "Quintet" (1979, Science Fiction) Paul Newman, Bibi Andersson.					Time Trax
TLC	52	28	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Secrets Revealed (Part 1 of 2)	Secrets Revealed		Bermuda Triangle		Secrets Revealed (Part 1 of 2)
TNT	48		Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Supermen		★★★ "Cocoon" (1985, Science Fiction) Don Ameche, Wilford Brimley.				Rough Cut	★★★ "Cocoon" (1985)
USA	59		Baywatch "Face of Fate" (R)		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★½ "The Babe" (1992, Biography) John Goodman. (In Stereo)			Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo)
HBO	69		★★ "Dear God" (1996, Comedy) Greg Kinnear. (In Stereo) 'PG'				★★ "Soo" (1996) Mario Van Peebles. 'PG-13'	Boxing (In Stereo)				Inside the NFL (In Stereo)
MAX	70		★★ "Three Wishes" (1995, Drama) Patrick Swayze. 'PG'				★★★ "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice" (1969) Natalie Wood. 'R'				★★ "Cheech & Chong's Nice Dreams" (1981) 'R'	Heat! (1995)
SHOW	68		★★ "Summer School" (1987, Comedy) Mark Harmon. 'PG-13'				★★ "High School High" (1996) Jon Lovitz. 'PG-13'		★★ "Demolition High" (1996) Corey Haim. 'R'			"Bastard out of Carolina" (1996)

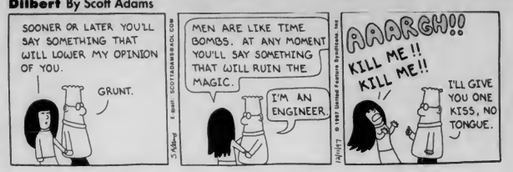
Bruno By C. Baldwin

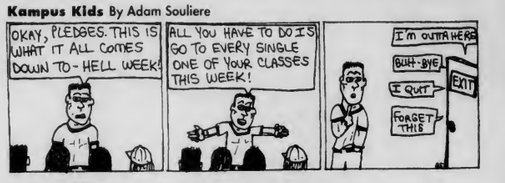
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Sven By Steve Higgins

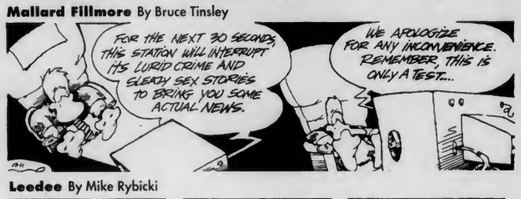
Non Sequitor By Wiley



Thatch By Jeff Shesol



Robotman By Jim Meddick



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You may not be able to take on a full-time project right now, but you should be able to lend a hand to those who seek your counsel today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You can anticipate coming events with a good deal of confidence at this time. Do not try to second–guess others; concentrate on yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20.–Feb. 18) — Now is no time to make decisions which could have a long–term effect on a key relationship. Let things develop as a matter of course.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Concentrate on matters of independence and self–esteem today. What you most want to do will offer unbelievable benefits; give it a try.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Time will be on your side for the most part today, but you mustn't take for granted your good fortune in this regard.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Be sure to offer suggestions whenever called upon today. There may be a time when you will want to take your own good advice.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — The differences between what you are doing now and what you were doing even as much as a year ago may not be as dramatic as you expected.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You can take full advantage of personal contacts today and make them work for you in the professional arena.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You should be ready for the next step a little bit ahead of schedule today. Those in charge are sure to be impressed.

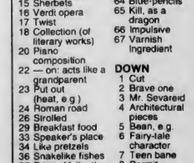
VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Preparation is the key to success at this time. Take care that you schedule your time in such a way that you are free to make spot decisions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Someone may be waiting for you to come through with an answer to a key question regarding future possibilities at the workplace.

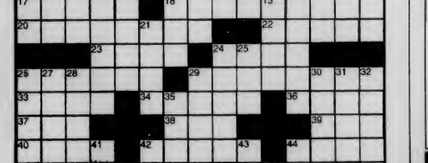
LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Someone may be waiting for you to come through with an answer to a key question regarding future possibilities at the workplace.

Quote of the Day

"Sex is hereditary. If your parents never had it, chances are you won't either."
–Joseph Fischer



Close to Home By John McPherson



ACROSS
1 Type of game
6 Party
10 Ship's personnel
14 Cliffside nest
15 Sherbets
16 Verdi opera
17 Twist
18 Collection (of literary works)
20 Piano composition
22 — on: acts like a grandparent
23 Put out (heat, e.g.)
24 Roman road
26 Strolled
29 Breakfast food
33 Speaker's place
34 Like pretzels
36 Snakelike fishes
37 Prince Valiant's son
38 Mermaid's home
39 Healthy
40 Hogs
42 Twitch
44 Grant, as land
45 Feet
47 Worships
49 Business-letter abbr.
50 Celt
51 — Mountains in Tibet
58 Alternative to paint
61 Increases
62 Be fond of 63 Confined
64 Blue-pencils
65 Kill, as a dragon
66 Impulsive
67 Varnish ingredient

DOWN
1 Cut
2 Brave one
3 Mr. Sevareid
4 Architectural pieces
5 Bean, e.g.
6 Fairy-tale character
7 Teen bane
8 Permit
9 Fire residue
10 Dieter's measure
11 Brawl
12 Boundary
13 No two — about it
19 Polish-German river
21 Disincumbers
24 Tiny amounts
25 Strive
26 Get used to
27 Novelist Puzo
28 Gambling game
29 Entreaties
30 Postpone
31 Skate
32 — Park, Colorado
35 Poplar
41 Director Kubrick
42 Use a chair
43 Sir's companion
44 Clash
46 Quit
48 Costing more
50 Circumference
51 Leather-working tools
52 Post
53 Actress Chase
54 Egg producers
55 Sale words
56 Big Foot's cousin
57 Soc.
59 IRS month
60 Green shade

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

12-11-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Burger on a Roll
Broccoli Joyale
Veal Parm

DINNER
Szechuan Beef and Broccoli
Baked Ziti
Grilled Sneeze

Worcester
LUNCH
Chicken Puck
Bow Ties/ Italian Suasage Sauce
Light Burger
Scrod

DINNER
Szechuan Beef and Broccoli
Cod Sub
Szechuan Tofu and Broccoli
Chicken Cacciatore

Hampshire
LUNCH
Burger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwhich
Veal Parm
Scrod

DINNER
Szechuan Beef and Broccoli
Baked Ziti
Rachel's Birthday Cake (ok just kidding)

Berkshire
LUNCH
Worcester Breakfast Sandwhich
Burger on a Roll
Ziti/Tomatoe Sauce
Lightburger

DINNER
Szechuan Beef and Broccoli
Szechuan Tofu and Broccoli
Chicken Cacciatore
Pastabilities

Night Editor — Mark "mackerel" McGrath
Photo Technician — Lauren "flounder" Koshy
Copy Editor — Melissa "trout" Tauber
Production Supervisor — Sam "scrod" Smullin
Production Staff — Angie "guppy" Annese, Jennie "sardine" Huong

Minutemen drop thriller to Kansas

Despite leading most of game, Massachusetts falls short at buzzer

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's basketball team came inches away from pulling off one of it's biggest upsets ever last night, and proved to a national ESPN audience that UMass basketball Is indeed alive and well.

Given no chance by naysayers who rated No. 3 Kansas as much as a 17–point favorite, UMass (4–3) scratched, clawed and hung with the Jayhawks. But pre–season Player of the Year Raef LaFrentz's tip–in with 20.2 seconds on the clock gave the Jayhawks (10–1) a thrilling 73–71 win at Phog Allen Fieldhouse in Lawrence, Kan. last night.

UMass, who has struggled from the field so far this season, shot 55 percent from the field and 78 percent from three–point range.

The Minutemen answered every challenge from the Jayhawks, but KU responded like the great team they are, pulling out a win in what goes down as one of the best games of the early 1997–98 college basketball season.

Both teams battled in the game's waning moments, matching each other clutch shot for clutch shot. Charlton Clarke, who scored 22 points, hit a three– pointer with 43.3 seconds left to tie the game at 71–71. LaFrentz followed with a tip–in on the other end, and UMass was left with 16 seconds to answer.

Kansas	73
Massachusetts	71

Monty Mack, who scored 19 points, had the ball stripped away, but Clarke stole the ball back in transition. Clarke threw up a runner with two seconds on the clock, and the ball hit the side of the rim. Lari Ketner grabbed the rebound, but his put–back fell short. Despite UMass coach Bruiser Flint's fervent pleas for a foul, Kansas survived for it's 50th straight home win.

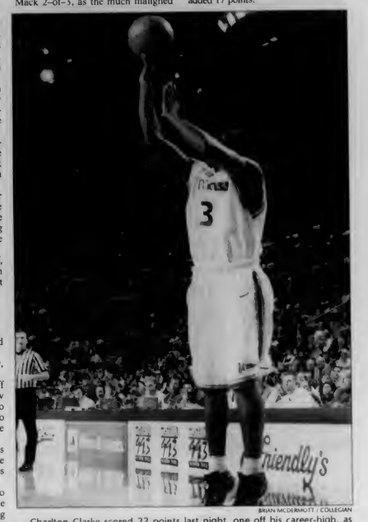
"Not to take anything away from our effort, but we can't be satisfied by coming to Kansas and almost winning," Flint said. "This is a game we could have won."

The second half was a see–saw battle, but UMass held the lead until the 6:20 mark, when Billy Thomas's dunk off a KU steal gave the Jayhawks a 56–55 lead.

After matching buckets for four minutes, Mack responded with the biggest basket of his seven–game career with 2:08 to go, coldly knocking down a three–pointer to tie the game at 68–68.

UMass dominated in the first half, despite 11 turnovers. Led by Charlton Clarke's 11 points, including a perfect three–for–three from behind the arc, the Minutemen held a capacity crowd of 16,300 inside Allen Fieldhouse quiet much of the first 20 minutes.

The Minutemen's young backcourt, which had played poorly in Saturday's narrow win over Marshall, grew up in a hurry in one of the nation's toughest arenas. Clarke hit 5–of– 6 three pointers, Mack 2–of–3, as the much maligned backcourt combined for 45 points.



Ketner scored 14 points, and Tyrone Weeks added eight points and eight rebounds, but both battled foul trouble in the second half. Weeks picked up his fourth foul at the 13:48 mark of the second half, Ketner with 7:47 to go.

LaFrentz scored 16 points and picked up 13 rebounds, and Pierce added 17 points.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Lari Ketner and the Minutemen traveled to Allen Fieldhouse last night to face the Jayhawks of Kansas.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Charlton Clarke scored 22 points last night, one off his career-high, as he and Monty Mack combined for 41 points.

Turn to MEN'S HOOP, page 11

Clarke and Minutemen let nation know 'UMass basketball' still in ring

Massachusetts basketball fans have seen this before, time and time again. But, it never gets old.

A match–up of hoop heavyweights of which only ESPN is worthy. A game with superstars and super–hype that meant something grand to both programs.

One team still slightly in shock from their first loss of the season, the other still trying to prove they belong in the center ring.

By all rights the Minutemen had no reason to expect to come away with a win against the No. 3 Kansas Jayhawks. Not in Lawrence, Kan. Not in hallowed Phog Allen Fieldhouse. Not on James Naismith Court.

Not a chance.

UMass flew out to Kansas on the coattails of an abysmal second–half performance against the sacrificial Marshall Thundering Herd, whom the Minutemen only beat 61–59.

The Jayhawks don't lose at home. They had won 49 straight games before this in front of the "Rock–Jock–Jayhawk"–screaming, rabid Kansas fans.

UMass was on the wrong end of a 17–point spread and just at the beginning of a gauntlet through which only the Minutemen would try to pass (consecutive road games against Kansas, BC, Colorado, UConn and Cincinnati). They were overmatched in a hostile environment and optimism was anything but plentiful.

Not a chance. Not on this night.

But, this was UMass basketball again, and as the contest wore on, and the grinding Minuteman defense and opportune offense wore down and frustrated the Jayhawks, there was a chance.

The Minutemen wouldn't have it any other way.

Monty Mack and Charlton Clarke were out of their minds — out of their bodies for that matter. Lari Ketner played head–to–head and shot–for–shot with Raef LaFrentz, who in all probability will be the consensus National Player of the Year when all is said and done.

And the UMass basketball team was inches away, seconds away from beating the mighty Jayhawks.

Clarke's runner with two ticks left went hard off the glass, sliding off the front rim and Ketner's follow was impeded by LaFrentz's desperate attempt to swat the rebound away. Ketner and the ball fell to the hardwood on Naismith court along with the chances for a UMass conquest.

Clarke, on this night, without a doubt stamped his imprint on UMass basketball with a performance that would only ever be witnessed in a game of this magnitude.

His Minutemen had every opportunity to die, to relent under the pressure of Kansas' greatness, the pressure of the Jayhawk fans, the pressure of being

Present for Sox fans, so we give too

Christmas, Hanukkah, Kwannza (whatever you observe) reportedly came early for Sox fans yesterday as Amherst College's own Dan Duquette finally saw the reason in opening his checkbook, inking Pedro Martinez to a massive contract, six years for $75 million, making him the highest paid player in baseball.

In an effort to make those foolish enough not to root for the Red Sox gleeful today, I think I'll give out some Christmas presents of my own. I don't exactly get paid by the hour at work so if you don't get one, tough sh. That's what you get for not dropping off that $200 check last week like I said to.

Leigh Torbin

• Wouldn't it be something if Tom Osborne's resignation yesterday was tendered because he's going to take the vacant UMass job? Ooooh, it feels nicer out there already. Suppose Ditka's recent tirade was for the same reason... Amherst Ambitions. There, the gift of pleasant thoughts. Enjoy, but now for some more tangible gifts.

• I'd get some sunscreen for the hockey team. Yup folks, they're off to Princeton tomorrow which is a "good" trip in a certain way. Princeton's the southernmost point on the eastern college hockey road map. Oooh, New Jersey in December, makes you want to break out those Buffett CDs, Coronas and lawn chairs, doesn't it?

Also, I'd get one of my favorite teams on campus the resiliency of Kenny from South Park. This kid dies every week, often in a gruesome manner, but next Wednesday night he's back good as new and on top of the world like nothing ever happened. That sliding down the flag pole or microwave thing was all just a bad dream or something. He gets knocked down, but he gets up again. You're never going to keep Kenny down.

The team could take something from the kid who makes Bob Dylan's diction seem like James Earl Jones.

• I'd give Joanie O'Brien the greatest gift of all, a healthy Kelly Van Huisen for UConn tonight. Of course, fair is fair though, so I'd have to reciprocate by giving Geno Shea

Turn to PRESENTS, page 11

No. 3 Huskies come to Mullins in regional rivalry

Minutewomen without leading scorer; Van Huisen done for season with ACL tear

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Tonight the Massachusetts women's basketball team will play one of its most important games of the season, and the Minutewomen will be without one of their most important players.

Sophomore guard Kelly Van Huisen, UMass' leading scorer, is out for the rest of the year — starting with tonight's 7 p.m. contest against No. 3 Connecticut at the William D. Mullins Center — after tearing the ACL in her left knee late in the game against Holy Cross. She will apply for a medical red–shirt.

Van Huisen suffered the injury with 11 seconds to go in Sunday's game against the Crusaders after taking the ball on an inbounds pass.

Women's Basketball
Massachusetts
vs.
#2 Connecticut
Tonight, 7pm

"Kelly's not just a good player, she's a leader," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "She makes everyone around her better. It hurts us not to have her."

Even with Van Huisen, the Minutewomen (4–2) would have to play at their top level against the Huskies, one of the toughest women's teams in the nation.

"Can we beat them? We'll be a long shot, just like anyone else. But we are capable," O'Brien said.

The Minutewomen are no strangers to tough games, including those in which UMass is a heavy underdog. Two years ago at the Mullins Center, perennial Final Four contender Stanford came to town and walked away with a loss at the hands of the Minutewomen.

But only a few players who were in that game remain on the UMass roster. Still, according to O'Brien, there is a similar feeling of anticipation surrounding tonight's game.

"There is a lot of anticipation," she said. "We've still got some of the kids who were in that game. They remember the feeling. They also remember the feeling of going to the NCAAs that year and the intensity surrounding that game.

"This will be a lot like those games. There will be a crowd here like we haven't seen in quite a while. The key is to follow our game plan, to control what we can and play our game," O'Brien said.

The game UMass has played over the course of the young season has been a successful one. In six games, the Minutewomen have had four different high scorers and four different top rebounders. This spreading of the wealth will have to continue now that Van Huisen will be on the bench.

"That changes things because it hurts our numbers and rotation," said O'Brien of Van Huisen's absence. "She was our leading scorer and that's a void we have to fill. People like Tez Kraft and Kara Tudman are going to have to step up and help us offensively."

The step up should not be a difficult one for Kraft, who is directly behind Van Huisen on the scoring chart. In fact, the junior forward's 14.7 points per game is just slightly behind Van Huisen's 15.2, and her 6.0 rebounds per game ranks second on the squad.

But the attention of the opponents' guards will now sit squarely on Sabriya Mitchell's shoulders. The fifth–year senior point guard Is averaging 7.0 ppg, but her mark does not always necessarily come in the scoring department.

Mitchell has dished out 46 assists already this season.

"Sabriya is a person who's going to have to control things, against UConn and the rest of the season," O'Brien said. "When she feels good and confident everyone tends to feel that way too."

The Huskies come into the matchup with a perfect 8–0 record, four players averaging in double figures in scoring and one of the nation's top players in Nykesha Sales.

Sales, who leads the team with 17.9 ppg, recently dominated in UConn's game at Notre Dame, going 10–for– 10 from the floor and finishing with 21 points.

"She's one of the most complete players in the country. We're going to have to try to keep a body on her and not let her get the big numbers," O'Brien said.

O'Brien, however, is not as concerned with the individual matchups as she is with her own team's focus.

"We need to slow them down, press them," O'Brien said. "We'll try some matchup zone and try to make them think more about us than about themselves.

"They're a great team," she said. "If only one person steps up we could be in for a long night."

HUI CAO / COLLEGIAN

Massachusetts' Sabriya Mitchell lead the Minutewomen in the much anticipated New England matchup of UMass and UConn at the William D. Mullins Center tonight.

Women's gym looks toward stellar season

By Justin Rudd
Collegian Staff

The 1997–1998 gymnastics season is upon us. On Jan. 17, 1998, the Massachusetts women's team will bring in the new year when they open up their season in Springfield taking on Ithaca College and SUNY Cortland.

UMass comes into their season opener carrying tons of confidence. The team is coming off of arguably it's best season ever. Going undefeated at home, they competed in the Mullins Center for the first time, closing out the season with an impressive 14–4 record. The Minutewomen also captured their second straight A–10 championship followed by a finale of taking a respectable fourth place finish in the NCAA Northeast regionals.

Looking on to the upcoming season, the women's gymnastics team has suffered a substantial loss in the graduation of co–captains Tara Swartz and Lianne Laing.

"We are losing two great all–arounders (all–eventers), which equals eight events total, but we now have five new faces on the squad which equal 12–14 events we are gaining," said assistant coach Mae–Mae Leung. "The loss of Tara and Lianne will hurt but now we have more depth than we ever had."

Over the past few seasons, the gymnasts have matured and learned, growing into a strong team with inspiring leaders. With the graduation of the two senior captains, Laing and Swartz, there are a few new names to keep an eye on. The 1997–1998 UMass women's gymnastics team will be led by senior co–captains Penny LeBeau and Karen Maurer.

This year's new additions are four freshman and one junior transfer from LSU. Fans should keep an exclusive eye on returning sophomore Mandy Mosby and freshmen top recruits Jill Flsher and Mary Moore.

"Mandy is really coming into her own right now and she is a great all–arounder," Leung said. "As for Jill and Mary, both are very strong competitors. Mary is especially

Turn to GYMNASTICS, page 11

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 68 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, December 12, 1997

Devilishly spicy

Mel B and her Girl Power comrades return on the disappointing Spiceworld (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Left by the Rayside

Despite 10 points and seven boards from Yolanda Rayside, the Minutewomen fell to No. 3 Connecticut, 63–44, in front of a record 6,005 at Mullins (see Sports, page 10).

UMass police search for Cage peeping tom

The University of Massachusetts Police are searching for a peeping tom who was seen Tuesday, Dec. 9, in the Curry Hicks Cage.

According to Wednesday's police department press release, "a man was in the women's locker room watching a woman take a shower."

The female, who has not been identified, told police she spotted the perpetrator looking over the shower stall.

She was able to give Campus police a description of the male.

According to a composite released by UMass police, the suspect is described as a "white male, 5–foot–8 to 6–feet tall, 18–21 years old, with short, wavy, light to dark brown hair, dark brown eyes, clean shaven, slender build and face."

He was wearing a "blue Henley type shirt and light– colored blue jeans."

If anyone has information regarding this incident or suspect, call Public Safety at 545–2121.

— Leigh Faulkner

Statue stolen from Durfee Conservatory

After spending all semester on a class project, freshman Michelina Solitro and senior Ryan Lambert were shocked to discover that their 4–foot 6–inch wood sculpture had been stolen from Durfee Conservatory.

The ash wood chiseled sculpture of a naked woman standing with her arms reached above her, is 9 inches wide and weighs 70 pounds.

It was discovered missing at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday and was last seen at approximately 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday evening, according to University of Massachusetts Police Officer David Black who filed the larceny report from Solitro and Lambert.

The sculpture was on exhibit in the Durfee Conservatory garden was part of a class project for Art 261: "Subtractive Woods Culture."

Based on the description of the sculpture given by the two students, Officer Black suspects that one or two people were involved in the larceny, but police have no leads.

The sculpture is worth $500 not including time for labor, according to police.

If anyone has any information on the disappearance of this sculpture, call Public Safety at 545–2121.

— Leigh Faulkner

Classe Cafe closing after 15 yrs.

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — The Classe Cafe, an institution in Amherst for the past 15 years, will close by Dec. 31 to make way for the expansion of neighboring Bruegger's Bagels, Cafe owner Christine Lau announced last week.

Robert L. Shumway (RLS) Properties, owners of the building that houses both the Cafe and Bruegger's, did not offer Lau a chance to renew the Cafe's lease which lapsed last December, Lau said.

Many citizens and business owners who are upset that the Cafe is closing down, who view the Cafe a forced closing by a larger and more powerful corporation, have organized a rally in support of the Cafe on Saturday at 8 a.m.

Yet Robert Shumway of RLS said that while Cafe patrons don't want Lau shut down, Lau hasn't contacted RLS about the matter.

Shumway said Lau had not told him that she wanted to stay, and added that the Cafe would not have closed down if Lau had taken steps to prevent it.

"Had [attempts to save the Cafe] occured 60 or 90 days ago we could've done something," Shumway said. "Now we might be too late."

Shumway also said that allegations that RLS asked for the Cafe to pay for expensive renovations it couldn't afford were a clear exaggeration.

Lau said the Cafe will close down permanently at the end of the month, despite friends' efforts to find another location for the Cafe, because relocating would be too expensive.

"I could take out a huge bank loan, but that's not really an option," Lau

Turn to CAFE, page 2

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Effective Dec. 31, Classe Cafe will be shut down.

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Up, up and away

This red–tailed hawk was spotted Wednesday looking for a snack high atop a utility pole.

GEO continues to pressure administration on contract

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Yesterday, in the third day of their grade–in, the Graduate Student Employee Organization (GEO) at the University of Massachusetts continued to challenge Chancellor David K. Scott's interpretation of the University Picket Code.

For the third day in a row, Teaching Assistants brought their work to the Whitmore Administration Building to urge the University administration to accept their demands for child care, dental coverage and other benefits and bring their 22–month long contract negotiations to a close.

The Teaching Assistants began yesterday's protest at 9 a.m. in the hallway outside Scott's office. On Tuesday, the first day of the grade–in, the teaching assistants had sat inside the foyer of Scott's office, grading papers and exams and talking to each other.

Tuesday night, however, Scott declared that the graduate students were disrupting the normal activities of his office and were therefore in violation of the Picket Code.

Scott requested that the students move outside of his office and said he would institute disciplinary actions against them, under the Code, if they did not leave.

On Wednesday, the TA's complied with Scott's instructions and moved their grade–in to the hallway outside his office, although they disputed his claim that they had been disruptive.

Yesterday, GEO decided to once again send TA's into the foyer of Scott's office.

"We sent three people into the Chancellor's office suite, sitting on the couches," GEO Vice President Jennifer Fasulo said.

Fasulo said GEO took this action because they disagreed with Scott's judgement that the TA's were disruptive and because they were told by Vice Chancellor for Graduate Studies Charlena Seymour that their actions were legal under the Code.

"It was our understanding from Charlena Seymour that we could do this," Fasulo said.

Kim Marcello, a Teaching Assistant

Turn to GEO, page 3

Religious terrorism condemned at summit

TERHAN, Iran (AP) — Closing a three-day summit, leaders of the world's Muslim nations strongly condemned religious-inspired terrorism yesterday declaring that "the killing of innocent people is forbidden in Islam."

But the joint declaration of the 55-member Organization of the Islamic Conference made no mention of the Middle East peace process or sanctions against Iraq, underscoring differences among nations bound by faith but divided by politics.

The statement followed divisive debate by delegates who differed widely on issues that ranged from the faltering peace process to relations with the United States and policies toward Iraq. In a sign of the disagreements, the peace process was not specifically mentioned. But the declaration sharply criticized Israel for what it described as "state terrorism."

It called for the creation of a Palestinian state with Jerusalem as its capital and demanded that Israel stop building settlements in "occupied" Arab land.

"Dialoque is a key to peace, coexistence and building mutual confidence," Iran's President Mohammad Khatami said inw closing speech.

Judge cracks down on Microsoft practices

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge yesterday ordered Microsoft Corp. to quit a controversial practice of requiring computer makers to distribute its Internet-browsing program.

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson, however, rejected a Justice Department request to fine the software giant $1 million a day for what the government claims were violations of a 1995 court order.

Jackson issued the decision in response to a Justice Department lawsuit aimed at blocking what government antitrust officials said were anti-competitive practices by Microsoft.

Jackson referred the dispute to a court official, known as a special master, to rule on the legal issues raised in the case. The judge ruled that part of the 1995 court order "does reach Microsoft's controversial licensing practices in some respect" but said the ultimate question of whether Microsoft was violating the agreement "remains to be decided."

"Without the benefit of further evidence in the record, an attempt to answer that question would be premature," Jackson said. In the interim, he said Microsoft "shall cease and desist... from the practice of licensing the use of any Microsoft personal computer operating software... on the condition, express or implied, that the licensee also license and preinstall any Microsoft Internet browser software."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 38 LOW: 21	HIGH: 36 LOW: 16	HIGH: 28 LOW: 9

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 8

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Iraqi group says 800 were killed

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Saddam Hussein's Iraqi government has executed more than 800 prisoners in the last two weeks, an Iraqi opposition group claimed yesterday.

The Iraqi Broadcasting Corp., the information wing of Iraqi dissident groups in exile, claimed the executions were linked to the recent crisis over U.N. weapons inspectors in Iraq.

"The death toll is expected to increase as the executions are still continuing," the group said in a statement faxed to The Associated Press in Cairo.

The executions were ordered by Qusai, the younger son of Saddam and the head of Iraq's security apparatus, the group said. The claims could not be independently verified. The Iraqi government tightly controls news and does not comment on claims by dissident groups.

The exiled group, which operates from London and an autonomous Kurdish area in northern Iraq, did not say how it obtained its information. It gave no information on the alleged victims. The first word on the reported executions came Tuesday when another dissident group based in Iran said 450 detainees had been recently hanged or executed by firing squads.

Yesterday's statement said the executions were carried out by firing squads and electrocutions in the Abu Ghraib and Radwanlyah prisons. It said some bodies have been returned to families with signs of torture.

Qusai, 31, has been viewed as Saddam's heir apparent since his elder brother, Odai, was seriously wounded in an assassination attempt on Dec. 12, 1996.

Israel to withdraw troops

By Dan Perry
Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — After weeks of foot-dragging, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is ready to agree to a more significant pullout from the West Bank in response to U.S. pressure, Israeli media reported yesterday.

Although officials are not publicly confirming specifics, the Maariv daily reported that Israel will propose withdrawing troops from at least 10 percent of the West Bank.

However, Netanyahu adviser David Bar-Illan said it was unclear whether a detailed proposal for a troop redeployment could be put together by Wednesday, when Netanyahu is to meet in Paris with U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright.

Albright has said she expects to hear details then on a significant pullback offer. The Americans expect Israel to hand over at least 12 percent of the West Bank in the next pullback — one of three promised by mid-1998, according to media reports. Bar-Illan denied reports that Albright was increasingly impatient with the Israeli government. "The Americans understand that this is a difficult political maneuver for Netanyahu,

Turn to ISRAEL, page 3

AIDS awareness at UM

By Paul Teves
Collegian Correspondent

University of Massachusetts students have taken it upon themselves to get involved in the fight on AIDS.

The Southwest Residential Area Community Development Assistants put together a program surrounding World AIDS Day on Saturday, Dec. 6. The program targeted Southwest Area residents.

The purpose of the event was to raise AIDS awareness amongst Southwest Area Residents and raise funds for a Pediatric AIDS foundation.

"The goal was to bring AIDS awareness to campus, and we also made some money to contribute to the Pediatric AIDS foundation," event coordinator Vicky Milo said. "We will also send the remaining paper prayers to a local hospital, as an upbeat get well symbol."

The Center for Diversity and Development provided each building in Southwest with bulletin board material to help raise campus awareness.

On Dec. 1, area residents got together to make paper prayers, which are a Japanese tradition, given to people when they are sick. The paper prayers were made as an act of healing for those afflicted with the AIDS virus.

In Conjunction with this event, the Residential Assistants gave the residents an opportunity to make a

Turn to AIDS, page 3

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Kiss the pig

Watch a faculty member kiss a pig for charity, today at noon in Holdsworth Hall. Pucker up!

■ cafe

continued from page 1

said.

Shumway said he had reason to believe that Lau no longer wanted to continue as owner of the Cafe, which Lau denies.

"I we'uld have liked to have kept [the Cafe] for a couple of more years, and then to have sold it to some nice couple who could have kept [the Cafe] alive," Lau said.

According to Shumway, he and Lau had been discussing the matter for two to three years, which he considered more than enough time to make a decision.

Bruegger's representatives expressed an interest in expanding into the Cafe's space for the past three years, Shumway said.

The Bruegger's in Amherst, which has a seating capacity of about 20, is the smallest Bruegger's in the area and is in need of expansion, Bruegger's employees said.

Gary Coriarty, Bruegger's regional manager, was away on business and could not be reached for comment.

Community response

The closing of the Cafe has surprised and saddened many members of the Amherst community.

"It's gonna be a sad day in Amherst when [the Cafe] goes," said Rich Micelotta, daily mail carrier to the Cafe.

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Pioneer Valley Coffee Company is closing down at the end of this month.

Andrea Kosewski, a waitress at the Cafe, said that it's a shame it has to close because it's a landmark.

"There really isn't anything comparable to it in Amherst," Kosewski said.

Paul Borgeois and Tom Schicker, both graduate students in physics at the University of Massachusetts, had developed a ritual of going to the Cafe at least once a week during this semester.

Borgeois, who also attended UMass as an undergraduate, said he's disappointed that the Cafe is closing, because it's a good place with good food.

"I just started coming here this year, and I like to go to local establishments, and make it a point to frequent local places," Schicker said. "I think you get better quality in a place like this."

Nicole Nemec, a graduate student in the MFA/English program at UMass, said she first went into the Cafe because of its large pink and blue neon clock.

"It epitomizes this places style," Nemec said. "[The Cafe] seems like a landmark, it has the attitude of a landmark."

Cynthia Kennison has come to Amherst once a week for 10 years, and has frequented the Classe Cafe for much of that time.

"I'm very sorry it's closing," Kennison said, "it's one of the neat places to eat."

Kennison also appreciates the changes in artwork provided by local artists which adorns the Cafe's walls.

"A number of people who come here every day are losing their home," Classe employee Jessica Nemore said.

Bruegger's employees said some Classe supporters have gone into Bruegger's and complained.

The Bruegger's employees, who normally make around $5 an hour and have nothing to do with the decision of expanding the business, are the recipients of some criticism for the fate of the Cafe.

"I've worked in a number of other Bruegger's, and the customers a here are normally the most friendly," one Bruegger's employee said, "but they're taking it out on us."

I Used to Be a Tree owner Donna Bartell, who believes it's wrong to expand at the expense of another business, said she is not necessarily against Bruegger's.

"Bruegger's has been in Amherst for 11 years and has been a good neighbor," Bartell said. "Truth is, if Bruegger's was being forced out of town, we'd rally in support of them."

Bartell said that a problem is that some landlords set rents at a rate which can only be met by national corporations, but Shumway responds that they have done nothing wrong here and should not be put in the position of the "bad guy."

Protestors of the closing of Classe are gathering signatures in addition to the planned protest, and Bartell had already collected 73 signatures over the past couple of days.

Businesses also displayed flyers to advertise the rally, with one notable exception being Lau herself.

Yet even if Lau does not endorse the rally, Bartell said that the rally is also in support of Amherst small businesses in general.

Small business concerns

In addition to the Classe Cafe, the Pioneer Valley Coffee Company (PVCC) is also pouring its last cup this month after operating for seven years in downtown a Amherst.

"We appreciate our customer loyalty, we've had people come in here since day one," PVCC owner Art Nunes said.

The loss of PVCC and the Cafe, compounded by the loss of Kinko's this summer, has Amherst small business owners concerned.

Larry Purner, owner of Valley Books, said that as a small business owner what happened to the Cafe made him angry.

"I've lost my lease before, and I know what it feels like," Purner said. "Bruegger's knew they were getting a lease, they had the means to renew it."

The closing of the cafe is seen by many as another concession to big business in Amherst.

"It's too bad, the Cafe was one of the few original businesses we got going," Ren's Mobil employee Bertram Stewart said, "everything else is all chains, commercialized."

Schicker said that he noticed that on North Pleasant street, especially in the SIS building, there are mostly chain stores, including Pizza Hut and Mystery Train Used Records.

"How many chains can you pack onto one street?" Schicker asked, "I don't even see Al-Bums [used records] anymore."

Nemec said that she found small stores to be part of Amherst's charm.

Campus Police Log

Accident—Personal Injury
Dec. 10
A witness reported seeing a vehicle hit a pedestrian on North Pleasant Street. The victim was not injured, and Amherst Police was notified.

Accident—Property Damage
Dec. 8
A two-vehicle accident occurred on Clark Hill Road. No injuries were reported.
Dec. 9
A two-vehicle accident occurred in parking lot 71 on Massachusetts Avenue.
An unattended vehicle struck a second vehicle pushing it into a third vehicle on Physical Service Plant Road.
Dec. 10
A vehicle backing up struck a parked vehicle on Franklin Dining Common Service Road.
Vehicle backed into a parked vehicle on Hicks Way.

Alarm—Fire
Dec. 9
A trash can was on fire near a bus shelter on North Pleasant Street.

Larceny
Dec. 8
An individual from John Adams Residence Hall reported property stolen from his room.
Dec. 10
An antenna was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 22 on University Drive.
A wood sculpture was stolen from Durfee Range. Estimated value $500.
An individual from MacKimmie Residence Hall reported cash stolen form his room.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Dec. 9
A man was in the women's locker room watching a woman talking a shower in Curry Hicks Cage.

Vandalism
Dec. 8
Curbing was thrown through a window and door at Clark Greenhouse.
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 33 on University Drive.
Dec. 9
A window on the 6th floor of Grayson Residence Hall was smashed. Falling glass nearly hit tow individuals walking by.
Papers were set on fire in Brown Residence Hall.
A mirror was broken on a vehicle in parking lot 22 on University Drive.
A vending machine was damaged in Knowlton Residence Hall.
Dec. 10
Flyers were affixed desks throughout Machmer Hall.

Warrant Service
Dec. 11
Joshua J. Menke, 19, of 8 Emilio Dr., Franklin, and Russell Leete, 19, of 6 Park View Cir., Westford, were arrested in John Adams Residence Hall for distributing a Class D drug.

Want to stay out of the police logs? Better write for the Collegian!

Collegian! Better write for the police logs! Now is the time to join the

HAPPY HOLIDAYS
GOOD LUCK ON EXAMS
From all of us at
UMass Woman's Tennis
And Coach
JAYSON, sorry we
"Doug" out the wrong facts!

KAI CHI 586-2774
WE DELIVER
Sun -Weds Thurs-Sat
noon-midnight noon-2am

come join the fun at:
REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS
253-9526

UMass Best! 1997
BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10. always
25 n pleasant st amherst 256 0733
145 main st northampton 586 0155

Campus Activities presents
SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
"Seared Scriptless"
Comedy Improv
"Scared Scriptless" High Energy, Quick Wit, and ability to wring Humor from the most incongruous of situations makes the group a HIGH POINT of the New York comedy scene!" -Ma... BACKSTAGE
- Student opener: Chris Walsh -
Campus Cent...
8:...
Friday, Dec...
Movie: "EVENT HORIZON" to ...
"Event Horizon" featuring: Law... ...y,
December 14 at 8 & 10PM ...
Visit us on the Web:
http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calender.htm
Sponsored by Campus Activities through a grant from the Umass Auxiliary Services and the Vice-Chancelor for Student Affairs
The Massachusetts DAILY COL...
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

Wanted
Professionals
...am of PC Experts
• C/C++PROGRAMMERS
• PC TECHNICIANS
• NETWORK ENGINEERS
• SALES
• Serving New England Since 1979
• Three Locations: Southwick, Worcester and Milford, MA
• 70+ Full Time Employees visit our website @
http://www.wca.com
Please Fax or Mail Your Resume to:
Whalley Computer Associates, Inc.
Attn: Personnel - Service Dept.
549 College Highway
Southwick, MA 01077
fax# 413-569-4320

■ AIDS

continued from page 1

quilt square, which was incorporated into the AIDS quilt in Washington, D.C.

On Saturday, Dec. 6 the paper prayers were on display in the Southside Room of the Hampden Dining Commons. They were available to be purchased for a small donation to the Pediatric AIDS foundation.

The event was carefully organized by Milo, CDA in Kennedy Residence Hall, along with the other Southwest Residential Area Community Development Assistants. The CDAs also worked with Health services on this event.

Milo said the CDAs hope to repeat the event next year.

"It's something we would like to continue in the future and we would also like to work with Health Services more next year to see if we can draw more publicity," Milo said. "We would have liked to have done better, but we did accomplish some of our goals."

■ Israel

continued from page 1

and that we are discussing the future of Israel," he told The Associated Press.

The initial plan floated by Israeli officials last month said Israel would hand over only 6 percent to 8 percent of the West Bank to the Palestinians in the upcoming pullback.

The Palestinians, who now have full or partial autonomy in 27 percent of the West Bank, expect much more — and it was not certain that even the improved offer would be accepted. A first pullout offered in March was rejected by the Palestinians as too skimpy, and never implemented. The Palestinians also expect to be in control of 90 percent of the West Bank after the third pullback.

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

B–i–g Tu–bba

David Brien plays his tuba along with other musicians on the concourse yesterday.

■ GEO

continued from page 1

in the Freshmen Writing Program, was one of the three TA's who brought their work into the office in hopes of encouraging the administration to agree to a contract.

"After we looked into it, it seemed like it was not a violation [of the Picket Code], as long as we were quiet," Marcello said. "So we sat in there very quietly."

The students had been in his office for about half an hour, when Scott again declared them in violation of the Picket Code and threatened to begin disciplinary hearings against them if they did not leave.

Fasulo said the three students choose to leave the office foyer and move back into the hallway because GEO has a bargaining session with the administration tomorrow.

"At that point, we decided that because we have a bargaining session tomorrow, we will wait to see what kind of movement they will make," Fasulo said. "They are presenting us with a counter-proposal tomorrow. If we don't see significant movement, we will make a determination about whether to challenge the enforcement of the Picket Code."

Kay Scanlan, spokesperson for the University, said Scott will undertake disciplinary actions against any students who continue to stay in his office.

"The Chancellor remains firm that the graduate students' presence in his inner office is disruptive and he will not allow it," Scanlan said. "He is prepared to start identifying and disciplining any students that are disruptive."

A group of seven undergraduate students from the Undergraduate Student Employee Organization and Race Talks marched into Scott's office and presented Associate Chancellor Susan Pearson with a letter declaring their support for GEO and their disapproval of Scott's invocation of the Picket Code.

"We as concerned undergraduates are outraged that the administration has used the guidelines to the picketing code to censor GEO's undisruptive presence at the office of the Chancellor," the letter read.

Nikki Morse, a senior Social Thought and Political Economy (STPEC) major, said the administration was wrong in using the Picket Code for this protest.

"As undergraduates, we are concerned about the way the administration has been stalling on the contract and especially by the way the Picket Code has been used during this action," Morse said.

"GEO has waged a completely fair contract campaign," added Linda Vannoni, a senior STPEC major. "The administration should deal with them in a fair manner."

GEO President Mahmood Ketabchi said GEO the grade–in has been useful in bringing the campus' attention to the contract negotiations, and so will it will be continued until Friday, Dec. 19.

"It has been effective," Ketabchi said. "It got our message out that we are still trying to get our contract."

Scott and Vice Chancellor Charlena Seymour were unavailable for comment.

Comp. sci. professor's textbook rated No. 1

By Jason Brightman
Collegian Correspondent

A University of Massachusetts professor's computer science textbook ranks as the country's best selling text in its field.

Associate computer science professor Dr. Charles "Chip" Weems co–authored the top ranked book Programming and Problem Solving with C++. The text instructs computer science students how to program computers using the C++ language.

"We believe our books are popular because we design them entirely with the needs of the students in mind," Weems said. "We regularly hear from students who have bought our books because they are much more helpful than other assigned texts."

Weems co–wrote the book with Nell Dale of the University of Texas and Mark Headington of the University of Wisconsin. The book, published by Jones and Bartlett, outsells every other college computer science textbook in the country, according to a study done by the publisher.

Weems also directs the University's specialized parallel architectures research group, which has developed a heterogeneous parallel processor to support real–time, knowledge–based computer vision. The goal of the group is to build a computer which would enable robots to use vision to guide their interactions with their surroundings.

Before arriving at UMass, Weems attended Oregon State University where he earned his B.S. and M.A. degrees in computer science. Weems earned his Ph.D. in computer science from UMass in 1984.

Weems began teaching at UMass in 1979 as a teaching assistant and he currently teaches two courses in computer architecture. He has written or co–authored eight other textbooks for introductory programming courses involving languages such as Pascal and Ada.

In addition to writing computer science textbooks and conducting architecture research, Weems gives public astronomy presentations at Amherst College's Bassett Planetarium through the Amherst Area Astronomy Club.

Of his interest in astronomy Weems said, "When you deal all day in things that are measured in nanoseconds and microns, its refreshing to step back and think about a subject involving eons and light years."

THE MOLSON SUN & SNOW FEST! IN CANADA
5 DAY SKI & SNOWBOARD LIFT TICKET
5 NIGHTS LODGING, LUXURY CONDO, FULLY EQUIP.
5 DAYS & NIGHTS OF COLLEGIATE PARTIES, CONTESTS ETC.
Students from over 150 U.S. Colleges
Group Leader & Campus Rep Discounts
Only $239
Please note: The legal age to consume alcohol in Canada is 18
SKI TRAVEL UNLIMITED
Call or E-Mail for a free color brochure
www.skitravel.com
1-800-999-SKI-9
MORE SPACE JUST ADDED FOR WINTERBREAK (JANUARY) & SPRINGBREAK

jingle bells!!! Happy Holidays!!! jingle bells!!! Happy Holidays!!! jingle bells!!! Happy Holidays!!!

EDITORIAL / OPINION

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

A Christmas wish list

Albertina Fernandes

The following is a list of Christmas wishes I have this holiday season:

1. No more naked woman on the front cover of magazines. I would like for once to see women with clothing since it is winter time, on the front pages of magazines. If you walk in to the University Store, you are attacked — not that it is their fault — by the selling of skin. I think that women can sell magazines without selling ourselves in the process. I would for once like to see a half clothed woman with some interesting topics in the magazines they are on the cover off.

2. An in-depth coverage of what kind of life O.J. Simpson has now since the Goldmans came into his life. The Inquirer every now and then has a story of where O.J. Simpson is going golfing when the poor man has nothing left but his kids. They could have left him with him with some dignity like maybe his trophies but no — he had to go and mess with that Nicole Brown-Simpson which serves him right. O.J., you had it all once but now you have definitely lost it. The press can cruel be at times. Would you like your leg back?

3. See Martin taken off of television and replaced with the Simpsons. Martin is the most idiotic show that has ever crossed the path of television. His show was funny at first, but his humor slowly played out when he started acting like himself. The story lines started getting repetitive and everything else became predictable. Maybe he should get some pointers from Matt Groening. The Simpsons make Martin look like Michael Jackson on crack.

4. Will Smith in a movie that has no one-liners, a full sentence would be nice every once in a while. I have no words for this wanna-be rapper and actor. You suck at both, the only thing you have left is stand-up comedy. Maybe that crowd of people will lack the common sense to not know better than be there listening to you.

5. For President Clinton to personally ban "The Jerry Springer Show," "The Ricki Lake Show," "The Maury Povich Show" and "Jenny Jones" from national television. These shows are part of the problems in American society — not the solutions. They perpetuate the dysfunctional families and people syndrome and make them instant stars. Hey Mr. President, do something besides getting your knees scraped.

6. For the sitcom "Seinfeld" and "Frasier" to be on every channel, every hour of the day. I must admit that anyone with a sense of humor knows these two shows deserve constant air time. I'm always rolling on the ground when these two shows come on T.V.. The producers of these shows are truly geniuses of their times.

7. For the soap operas to actually have a virgin in their new cast of characters to come to the shows. If everyone sleeps with everyone then it takes the fun out of watching someone lose their virginity on the show. I don't think anyone can name one virgin on any of these shows except for the toddlers.

8. Give Mariah Carey some dancing lessons so the next video she does with Puff Daddy, she's actually moving in one direction or another. Maybe there is hope for her dancing abilities.

9. Put Sinbad on Seinfeld as Kramer's lover. This combination of humor and foolishness would be a sight for sore eyes.

10. For David Letterman's Top Ten to be about Marv Albert. No one deserves public humiliation unless you give the public something to humiliate you with. Make him weep and wish he had never done that, Dave.

11. Somebody call the hair police on Janet Jackson's new 'do. I know that she wants to be accepted by black people, that's a little on the extreme side. Maybe a wash, dry and a set would do you her some justice.

12. The final thing that I want to for Christmas is to see Dennis Rodman play NBA basketball in a dress. He doesn't have to iron the dress but maybe he'll have to a get it a few sizes smaller so that he won't trip over the tresses while he is rebounding.

Albertina Fernandes is a Collegian staff member.

It's in the air

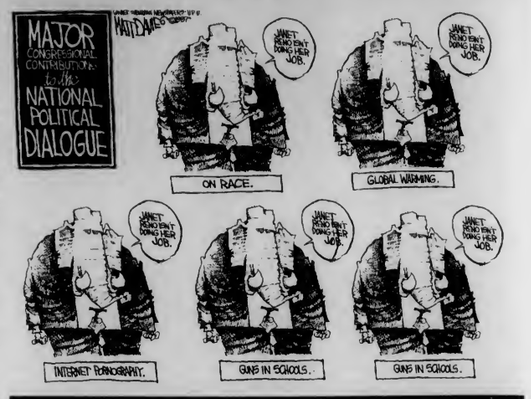
Julee Galitsky

It's the holiday season, it's in the air. The crowded malls and the waiting in lines, screaming children posing on "Santa's" lap, overpriced fruit baskets, and the strain of pulling that Christmas tree from the attic so that the kids can help decorate it. It's calling that friend or relative who got on your nerves three years ago to say "Merry Christmas," and to wish their family well.

It's balancing and re-balancing that checkbook, and spending way too much over budget because it's the "gift of the year" ("Tickle me Elmo" for example.) It's making two lists, one filled with gifts to buy, the other filled with gifts you hope to get yourself. The mad rush for sale items and dealing with nasty sales people behind the registers. The attempt to spruce up last year's Christmas party outfit to save you the humiliation of buying a new one. It's hearing those Christmas carols one too many times while you shop, drive your car, and then try to go to sleep at night. It's all of these things and so much more.

It's December, and the holiday season, for some people, starts at the end of the summer. For others, it becomes more official the day after Thanksgiving, or better known as the "biggest shopping day ever." Yes, it may be all of the things mentioned above, but the seasons come and go so fast that we hardly take the time to realize what the holidays are about.

For me, the holiday season is a time of recollection. A time to give thanks, and to think back throughout the year of my accomplishments, failures, my friends, family, and me. How did I grow as a person? What have I learned and what have I been able to teach? What did I like best? Least? Where am I heading in life, and am I happy?



Today, it's hard to determine what the holidays really mean to people. Some people are dedicated and committed to the religious aspects of the holidays, while others are hung up on what they want and what they'll buy.

Most years, I have been very satisfied with my yearly results, and they continue to be successful as I recall 1997 and prepare for 1998. A lot has occurred in the past 12 months, like seeing my brother for the first time in six years. The overall feeling of completing another year is positive. Why? The holiday season is a very magical time of the year, where we can take a brief look back into the past and take a brighter step into the future. It's accepting who we are, taking care of our health, and loving the fact that we are alive to take it all in and appreciate it. It isn't about spending lots of money, it's about spending lots of thoughts, and sharing lots of love.

Today, it's hard to determine what the holidays really mean to people. Some people are dedicated and committed to the religious aspects of the holidays, while others are hung up on what they want and what they'll buy. It seems a little lost, but the spirit is still within all of us. When this time of year rolls around, it's hard not to get some sort of happy feeling inside our hearts about the warmth, the joy, and the magic of the holidays.

And when the paper from those delicately wrapped presents is everywhere in the house, and the cat has eaten the tinsel again for the third year, and you haven't kissed anyone under that mistletoe, and you have three cents in your checkbook, while the guy on the highway cuts you off in the traffic to the crowded mall, you actually make amends with that friend or relative, receive one more fruit basket too many, you'll smile... and realize that it's all worth it, because it's only one day out of the year. So, make it worth your while and avoid pulling out any hair, and enjoy it while it lasts, because it's the holiday season and it's the right thing to do, because... it's in the air.

Julee Galitsky is a UMass undergraduate.

Letters to the Editor

Basketball support disappointing

To the Editor:

The other night I made a long trip to Amherst to attend the men's college basketball game between UMass and the College of Charleston at the Mullins Center, and I must say that I was appalled at the lack of support shown the Minutemen by the student population. The student sections were half empty, resulting in the smallest crowd ever for a regular season men's basketball game in the new building. And they were quiet, rarely standing or cheering (I do acknowledge, however, that it was far from an exhilarating contest.)

Often one hears the complaint that the University is not treated with the proper respect that it deserves. One measure of that respect is support for a major college athletic program. In my mind, there is no excuse for any 19 or 20- year-olds to not take a couple of hours out of a school night a few times a year to support their basketball team. Most of the home games are weekend afternoons — I expect sellouts for those games. But the three other weeknight home games also deserve sellout crowds.

I implore the many undergraduates on campus who have even the slightest interest in college basketball and want to see your university represented by a team that you can be proud of, to attend all remaining home games and scream your lungs out! A raucous full house can be exactly the extra edge a team needs to win a close game, and it's something UMass will need against schools like Rhode Island, hated Temple, and even more hated George Washington. I will be driving an hour and 40 minutes each way to support Coach Flint and the players, many more students than showed up last night should be able to walk however long it may take them to the Mullins Center and cheer this team on, too.

Steve Nazarro
UMass class of 1971
Dracut, MA

Undergraduates supporting GEO

To the Editor:

We as concerned undergraduates are outraged that the administration has used the guidelines to the picketing code to censor GEO's undisruptive presence at the office of the Chancellor. By sitting and reading in the Chancellor's office on Tuesday, Dec. 9, the GEO members and supporters were not in violation of the picketing code. Regardless of how the administration perceives its offices, they are public spaces and by law should be open to students, employees and concerned citizens. We do not agree with the issuing of this summer's "Guidelines to the Picketing Code," the clear threat which was intended by it, and the manner in which you are now employing it.

GEO's respectful and well organized contract campaign this fall has been broadly supported, not only by a well informed majority of its membership, but by a growing number of organized undergraduate, Amherst and Pioneer Valley residents and community organizations. We demand that as a representative of the administration, Chancellor Scott deal respectfully and fairly with GEO. Not only has their current grade — In action not warranted the harsh and irrational response it has received, but the administration is showing its disrespect for GEO members, all students and campus employees by not honoring their lawful right to protest and express concern regarding their just contract campaign.

We are not interested in escalating this matter, It is neither in our interest, nor in the interest of the GEO contract campaign which we endorse. We are here to demand that you permit them to respectfully continue their two week grade-in. We are also present to let you know we, as undergraduates, the Pioneer Valley organizations and the undergraduate RSO's we are a part of are watching the UMass, Amherst administration and the responsibility Chancellor Scott has in dealing with this matter fairly.

Linda Vannon
Nicole Morse
UMass Undergraduates

Senate funding wasn't patronage

To the Editor:

As a proud member of the UMass Republican Club and a SGA Senator, I was outraged to read the article by Virapanh Douangmany on Dec. 9, in the Multicultural Affairs page, in which the Republican Club was unfoundedly slandered at the close of the article. However, the article may be a mixed blessing, as it gives me the opportunity to dispel many of the myths surrounding the Republican Club and the Senate.

It is true that a number of members of the UMass Republican Club were also elected to serve in Senate. It was not part of some plan for world domination. Members of the Republican Club logically are interested in politics. They were elected because people liked what they had to say. Perhaps they do not have the same political ideology as Douangmany, but that does not make them sinister, corrupt, evil, mean, horrible people that Douangmany stereotyped them as. Members of the Republican Club who are also members of Senate are not forced by anyone to vote one way or the other. They are answerable to their constituents, not the club.

More than two-thirds of the motions that go through Senate are not political party issues. The two motions Douangmany criticizes, the allocation of money to Zeta Psi and the Men's Crew Club, were non-political issues. The money allocated to Zeta Psi was not merely to help them make repairs to their house. The brothers were going to be evicted if the fire system was not brought up to code. I, as a senator, was not about to throw a house full of people onto the street to try to find housing mid-semester (which would also put a long standing, hard working RSO into a tailspin.) The Republican Club had absolutely nothing to gain by this motion and it wasn't a patronage issue. In fact, some senators who are involved with the Republican Club voted the motion down. The sentiment of the Senate, however, overwhelmingly felt this was an emergency issue that required emergency funding.

Douangmany's second criticism, funding the Men's Crew Club asked for funding not to spend some leisurely vacation at the beach, but because crew is an incredibly expensive sport. The Men's Crew Club does an incredible amount of fund raising and has a member participation in those fund raisers that would make any club envious. The Crew Club already trains during the year early in the morning when the rest of campus is snug in their beds. They needed the money so they can train in Tampa over winter break. Members already spend a huge amount of money out of their own pockets so they can participate. Unexpected costs came up and the balance would be too much for many to cover. Again, the Republican Club had nothing to gain and this was not a patronage issue. Again, the senate overwhelmingly supported the Crew Club. In closing, the next time Douangmany decides to trash a group because they have a different political ideology, I hope the facts, not the bias are presented.

Amy Pellegrino
Grayson

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.
Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words long, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes.
They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by email to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545-1592.
The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity, and style.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor-in-Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangadirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor

Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

You know where great ideas come from. It's where you take them, however, that can really make a difference.

Innovators like Claude Shannon, Ron Graham, Elaine Weyuker and

Bjarne Stroustrup have taken their ideas to AT&T Labs, where groundbreaking work pushes the limits of communications, computing and information sciences.

It's all within your reach. AT&T

Send your resume and references via e-mail to: recruiting@research.att.com; or mail your resume and references to:
Recruiting, Room C103, AT&T Labs, 180 Park Ave, PO Box 971, Florham Park, NJ 07932-0971

©1997 AT&T

ARTS & LIVING

Spice Girls go global; No Doubting new video; Trainspotting returns

COURTESY SPICE GIRLS LIMITED

England's Spice Girls truly have the world in their hands... Or do they?

SPICEWORLD
Spice Girls
Virgin

The ultramegahuge entity that is the Spice Girls has run into a few speed-bumps lately. After banning photographers from shooting their performance at a Spanish awards show and subsequently being booed off the stage, they have recently fired their management and, more importantly, the songwriting team that penned such teen anthems as "Wannabe," "2 Become 1" and "Say You'll Be There." There are stories abound in the tabloids of a sordid affair between Baby Spice and lead manager Simon Fuller. Is the facade beginning to crumble? After listening to the follow-up to the multi-platinum Spice, the answer is unfortunately yes.

Spiceworld (Virgin) does have its moments, as on the salsa-tinged rhythms of the first single "Spice Up Your Life" and the irresistible, although hokey, pop pleasures of "Never Give Up On the Good Times." In the end though, it falls short of their debut in terms of the sheer quality of the material. Whereas Spice had at least five legitimate singles, the new effort (serving as the soundtrack to their upcoming film) lacks its immediate catchiness and charisma.

There are several bright spots however, and in truth, all the Girls have to do well is to look good and execute the songs well. Still though, the only Girl with any discernable qualitative (i.e.: talent not based purely on looks and sex appeal) is Melanie C — a.k.a. Sporty Spice. Hers is the sole distinctive voice of the lot and she carries much of the singing duties on her own.

Clearly though, something is lacking. Perhaps its just overexposure, but Spiceworld ultimately rings hollow. C+ (Marty Keane)

SHOULD GOD FORGET: A RETROSPECTIVE
The Psychedelic Furs
Columbia/Legacy

In the liner notes of this comprehensive new career spanning compilation, Scott Schinder describes "the Psychedelic Furs as the missing link between the Sex Pistols and Nirvana." This unfortunate understatement of one of the most influential post new wave bands, nonetheless, proves the tremendous impact in which the Furs have had on contemporary music.

In 1980, The Psychedelic Furs released a brilliantly innovative debut, which served as Britain's long awaited answer to The Velvet Underground and placed frontman Richard Butler among the most eccentric of rock's creative geniuses. Throughout their career, the Furs solidly contained the position of cult status, perhaps luckily never quite breaking their way to mainstream success, except of course for the single "Pretty in Pink."

Should God Forget is an essential collection spanning through the best moments of their seven studio albums, going far more in depth than their previous greatest hits effort All of This and Nothing. In addition to all of their more notable examples of song writing brilliance, such as haunting earlier works like "Imitation of Christ" and "Sister Europe" this album contains each of their singles, additional highlights, and previously unreleased live songs, including a surprise version of "Dumb Waiters." Also included is "Blacks/Radio" which could only previously be heard on the UK single.

This comp may not be necessary for those who already possess all the Furs material, but for the newer fan this is a crucial introduction. This retrospective should keep the memory of The Psychedelic Furs alive and continue to allow their music the recognition it has always deserved. A (Adam Levine)

LIVE ON LETTERMAN
Various Artists
Reprise

The new Live on Letterman (Reprise) CD is a eclectic mix to say the least. Integrating various styles of music and genres may have sounded like a good idea on paper, but the songs on the compilation — for the most part — stand well on their own, but not as a collection.

Lou Reed's version of his Velvet Underground classic "Sweet Jane" is arguably the best track on the collection, only rivaled by R.E.M.'s "Crush With Eyeliner." The other performances on the album vary from coming close to excellence (Patti Smith, Aretha Franklin), to faring reasonably well (Jewel with Flea), to not worth mentioning.

A simple look at the artist and song lineup should alert people that this CD is not worth buying, since only one or two songs will be desired by any given person. Since so many artists appear on "The Late Show," maybe it would make sense to have a target audience in mind. A video also would have been a better idea. C (Kevin Monahan)

LIVE IN THE TRAGIC KINGDOM
No Doubt
Interscope Home Video

Now the music and antics of No Doubt can be experienced in the privacy of one's own home with the recent release of the group's first home video, Live In The Tragic Kingdom (Interscope Home Video). This live document is 92 minutes of non-stop movement, mid-drifts, spitting, swearing and sweating, as well as the occasional ass (drummer Adrian Young moons the audience just before an encore of "Spiderwebs").

The four member band give their hometown fans in Anaheim, CA a semi-entertaining show, performing all their popular songs, from "Don't Speak" and "Sunday Morning" to "Excuse Me Mr.," as well as several audience favorites. The highlight of the show is when lead singer Gwen Stefani gets all the men in the crowd to sing along the refrain in "Just A Girl." Clearly, this is reason alone to watch this video.

The show ends with a two-song encore, including "Spiderwebs" and a cover of The Beatles' "Ob-La-Di, Ob-La-Da." Members from Goldfinger and Gwen's older brother Eric join in on the festivities.

Besides being fun, Live In The Tragic Kingdom reveals No Doubt to be a band that has become successful not because of sheer luck, but rather because they are musically competent. They are as good live as on record, and that says a lot. B (Christina Morais)

ONE DAY IT'LL ALL MAKE SENSE
Common
Relativity

Either way when the final roll is called Rakim will be somewhere near the top of the list of MC's.

Well It's been quite a while since Rakim has done anything new, but he's back without Eric B. You may be glad to know that he has not gone the gangster route and that producers Pete Rock and Premier have filled Eric B's Timberlands rather nicely. The problem with Rakim's return is that this is an uneven album with too much filler for such a legend.

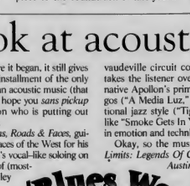
Tracks like "The 18th Letter," "It's Been A Long Time," and "Guess Who's Back" are Rakim in classic form featuring that slow intense flow that made him famous. Even the radio friendly "Remember That" in which he reminisces over the good old days will get your head noddin.

Unfortunately tracks like "Show Me Love" and "Stay A While" are love ballads that only serve to show that you will never confuse Rakim for LL Cool J. The "It's Been A Long Time" and "Guess Who's Back" remixes only serve to ensure that you'll stop the CD before they get on.

The crown jewel of this album is "New York (Ya Out There)". The song, which is a magnificent tribute to New York, shows how Rakim can make his words and images jump out of the speakers. Needless to say the song is destined to be a classic.

The 18th Letter (Universal) is a good album no doubt, it's just that maybe we expected too much from Rakim's return. It seems that Rakim is trying to feel his way back into the game and in that case this release is fine. Then again Rakim practically invented this game and you'd think his return would be more triumphant. B (A.D.)

TRAINSPOTTING #2
Various Artists
Capitol/Premier



From just a glance at the companion piece to the soundtrack of last year's Trainspotting, one's first thought would have to be: Why?

The original was one of the best film soundtracks of 1996, selling more than 500,000 copies in the U.S. The recently released Trainspotting: Music From the Motion Picture, Volume #2 (Capitol/Premier) is a blatant attempt to cash in on the success of the original soundtrack. As a result, the second installment is not nearly as much fun as the original.

The reason for Trainspotting #2's inferiority is due to the overwhelming amount of filler. Although they are good songs in their own right, many of the songs on the album did not appear in the film. Tracks like David Bowie's "Golden Years" and Joy Division's "Atmosphere" are included here, justified in the liner notes as not making the original cut, or "wanted to use it in the film but couldn't find the right spot."

An unnecessary companion piece to the excellent original, the album is not all that bad, but... Why? C+ (K.M.)

A last look at acoustic music

Although it seems like it's over before it began, it still gives me great pleasure to present my final installment of the only column in the Collegian about American acoustic music (that narrows it down pretty well, I'd say). I hope you sans pickup pluckers out there get some insight on who is putting out some fine albums in this wide category.

On his new Sharuachie album, Seasons, Roads & Faces, guitarist Rich O'Brien chooses the open spaces of the West for his inspiration. This album features O'Brien's vocal-like soloing on both guitar and mandolin in a long line of (mostly) instrumentals from the Tin Pan Alley jazz, Tex- Mex, and bluegrass idioms. You've got to love the two-step feel of the traditional "There's An Old Spinning Wheel" and the South of The Border cronorings by guitar, dobro, fiddle, and other stringed instruments on "Santa Rosa Serenade" and "Swing 42." There's not much to dislike on this disc full of short jams which should bring a smile to flatpickers everywhere.

Besides the guitar, the mandolin has probably had the most effect on acoustic music in this century. Kenneth "Jethro" Burns, a virtuoso mandolinist was one half of the old-time duo Homer and Jethro, and was recorded for the last time in 1987 and 1988, with rhythm guitar help from his student Don Stiernberg on Bye Bye Blues (Acoustic Disc). This disc is grounded in a bit of repetition, but Burns' timing and picking are aspects to behold. Running through both traditional tunes like "Jeanine, I Dream Of Lilac Time," as well as jazz standards like Duke Ellington's "Mood Indigo," and "California Here I Come," the disc is a good introduction to acoustic string-instrument jazz.

A more varying and comprehensive collection is that of Dave Apollon's The Man With The Mandolin (Acoustic Disc). With a fine biography in the liner notes, and production both by David Grisman, this celebrity on the '30s-'40s vaudeville circuit comes to life. The two discs of music takes the listener over the 25 years (1930-56) of Russian native Apollon's prime. Whether it was true European tangos ("A Media Luz," "You, The Night, The Music"), traditional jazz style ("Tiger Rag," "Shine"), or pop standards like "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes," Apollon was able to adapt in emotion and technique to any style he was faced with.

Okay, so the music on this year's Best Of Austin City Limits: Legends Of Country Music and last year's Best Of Austin City Limits: Country Music's Finest Hour isn't overflowing with strictly acoustic performance, nevertheless, country always seems to be associated with acoustic guitars, and often songs originate in that medium. Even on the more electric performances like Loretta Lynn's "You Ain't Woman Enough," or Roy Clark's ripping instrumental "Under The Double Eagle," you can just imagine how close the relationship is to old-time bluegrass music on both.

For true and clear acts in the acoustic realm, check out Alison Krauss & Union Station's cover of the Motown hit "Baby, Now That I've Found You" on the Country Music's Finest Hour volume, and Doc & Merle Watson's "Way Downtown" on Legends Of Country Music.

Both of these discs are well worth looking into, despite a large lack of true acoustic performance, as they are graced with k.d. lang's emotional vocals on "Three Cigarettes In An Ashtray," Roger Miller's own "King Of The Road," and Patty Loveless' rocker "The Blue Side Of Town."

So, boys and girls, that does it for me. Time to close up shop here, pick up my Ibanez Performance and walk on down the road, stopping to pick a sweet tune now and again. Happy Holidays to you and yours.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

Trax On Trax Off

Besides Lauryn Hill, there are guest appearances by De La Soul, Cee-Lo, Black Thought, and Canibus. The De La track "Gettin Down at the Amphitheater" shows the crew kicking back with Common and dropping some hilarious verses. Cee-Lo gets serious on "G.O.D." as him and Common contemplate good and evil and whose to blame for the troubles in the world. Canibus, fresh off of album stealing moments on The Firm and Lost Boys, provides a nice hard contrast to Common's laid back flow.

Finally one of the most touching tracks is the last one "Pop's Rap Part 2" where Common father Lonnie Lynn speaks on the responsibilities of being a father and a man, something we all need to hear. This album shows remarkable growth and maturity on Common's part and in a time when too many MC's are rapping about Mafioso fantasies, a process more of us should go through. A (Adam Dlugacz)

GOODBYE
Dubstar
Polygram

One listen to Dubstar's wispy pop and you're smiling like you just kissed for the first time, thinking that life really is like a teen magazine. The breaking up is hard to do lyrics might have been torn from a girl's diary. But poor Sarah Blackwood sings with such a lovely, candy-coated voice that you can't quite take her seriously, even with lyrics like "I'm the knee in your groin."

The songs all sound the same and the techno break-down at the end of the album is a little bit forced. Nothing revolutionary, but it tastes sweet nonetheless. B- (M.K.)

THE 18TH LETTER
Rakim
Universal

Some may remember Rakim as the man who dropped the hip-hop classic "Eric B for President." Some may remember him as the first MC to effectively bring consciousness to the microphone. Or some may remember him as the illest MC who could end anyone's hip-hop aspirations with one verse.

Minutemen have full plate on break

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

Midway through its season, having earned just one point in Hockey East, the Massachusetts hockey team has struggled to put together consecutive strong efforts. Last Friday, the Minutemen (2–10–1) played their best 60 minutes of hockey in a 1–1 tie at Northeastern, before getting crushed by the Huskies, 5–1, the following night.

Approaching a three–week respite over the holidays, UMass needs not only a positive showing this weekend but a pair of wins against two non–conference opponents. Tonight the Minutemen travel to Ivy League country where they'll take on the Princeton Tigers at Hobey Baker Memorial Rink at 7 p.m. They return home Sunday for an afternoon affair against Dartmouth College at 2 p.m.

Since the reinstatement of its program, UMass has had little success against the Tigers. Princeton — a member of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference (ECAC) — blew out UMass, 8–1, in 1994 followed by a 4–0 blanking of the Minutemen in 1995. UMass stole a win in 1996, 3–1, before getting trounced, 7–2, last season.

The Big Green of Dartmouth have yet to find an identity in the ECAC. Posting an overall 2–3–1 record, 1–3–1 ECAC, Dartmouth has been on the winning end of two blowouts and on the losing end of three before tying Vermont on Nov. 22. UMass will be just their second non–conference opponent of the season and their first opponent in three weeks.

UMass will look for revenge against Dartmouth after dropping a heartbreaker last season in Hanover, 6–5. Then– senior Warren Norris scored a goal with 33 seconds left in the third period. However, the rally was cut short and UMass lost the second of three games in a mid–season stretch.

The Minutemen will depend on senior co–captain Tim Lovell to harbor the storm and help lift UMass from its current six–game winless streak. Over this stretch, the Minutemen have received considerable contributions from their freshmen corps. Forward R.J. Gates has tallied four goals so far this season, ahead of defenseman Matt Smith with three goals and forward Kris Wallis with two.

After the Dartmouth game this year, UMass will take off for a three–week vacation before returning to action Jan. 3, 1998 at Army.

A two–game set at Air Force, Jan. 9–10, is followed by a home–and–home set against HE rival Merrimack College, Jan. 16–17.

The next weekend, Jan. 23–24, the Minutemen will host the front end of a home–and–home series with Boston College. The Minutemen dropped their first meeting of the season with the Eagles, a 3–1 home loss on Nov. 2.

UMass opens up the spring semester with a home date against Providence on Jan. 30. The Minutemen dropped a pair of identical decisions to the Friars, 5–3, on Nov. 21–22.

Men's swimming on hot start

By Jamie Jee
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team continued its great start this season when they finished second in the Penn State Invitational last weekend.

The team effort was propelled by some outstanding individual performances, most notably by standout freshman Billy Brown.

At State College, Pa. it was Brown, who hails from sunny Fullerton, Ca., who grabbed the reins early and never looked back. Brown won his event, the 200 breast stroke, in a time of 2:03.20 and set the school record in the process. Brown doubled up by winning the 100 breast and finished third with a 58.13.

Fellow freshman Matt Andrews also had a great race and grabbed second place in the 200 fly with a time of 1:52.67 moving him into second on the UMass all–time list for the event.

For senior Sean Anderson, the return trip to his former college went well as he placed third in the 50 free, swimming a 20.84.

Junior Brian Wisniewski continued the run on thirds taking one in the 200 free, coming in at 1:40.84. Also pitching in was junior B.J. Brannan who also took third, this time in the 500 free with a 4:36.74 clip. Finishing up in the top three grouping was freshman Chris Arsenault competing in the 200 back and placing with a 1:52.74.

The team will have plenty of time to do some further fine tuning as they have until Jan. 3 until their next meet. The team will travel to West Palm Beach, Fla. to take part in the Lake Worth Invitational.

The Minutemen, under reigning A–10 Coach of the Year Russ Yarworth, are looking to win their third A–10 title in a row this season.

BC

continued from page 10

beating.

Defending National champion Arizona beat the Eagles by 30 points, 99–69, at the Maui Invitational. The next day, BC was soundly beaten by Atlantic 10 member George Washington, 76–64.

The Eagles' only win in Hawaii came against Division II host Chaminade. Led by Antonio Granger's 17 points and 13 rebounds, BC came away with an 81–72 victory.

The other loss on the Eagles' docket came last Thursday as Syracuse disposed of them, 70–52.

Wednesday night, the Eagles hosted ever–dangerous Fairfield and in front of 3,216 at the Conte Forum won a 77–65 decision.

Granger leads the young Eagles in scoring with 16.3 points per game. He also averages 6.4 rebounds per game and leads the team with 21 3–point-memories

continued from page 10

that I could do more than "write," then that was your choice. I hope you sleep well tonight. And now for my last musical reference in a column space forever...

Its all over now, Baby Blue. Peace.

Kathleen Ralls — Congrats Marc! My friends call me The Rock (they really do) for my lack of sentimentalism and "mushiness" but I do have the capacity to look back fondly... at the intramural field hockey success (it was a conspiracy) and good times of Sweet Caroline w/Allison/Casey/Tamar/Kara — remember our motivation — "She's ugly (or she's my ass), so we have to win!" We, the Ex–Cons, (AEPI, Mike D., D & Molly), it's our last chance, spring softball '98! Iorma — sitting on the grassy knoll, watching our second–half comeback kids (women's soccer) make us proud, was a blast! Court — "Hey Fat Boy!" The Cool Crew, I knew someone would want to be my friend down here sooner or later! Fred, thank you (really), Chelmsford girls represent, Love Star Driver. Marty — keep the door open, thanks for you–know–what night. It was a Collegian event! Hey Stamm, "Nice bum, where ya from?" Garv... we've been through a lot. ChelMelrose — CDDL — "Hmmh, surprised you didn't know that!" Luke (aka Running Man), 2–3, high game — check for bruises! You're no Tommy Ralls but yeah, we would have hung out. Stick by your "wingspan" theory, maybe someday you will make the squad!

Coaching Staff

Jackie Leroux — All in all, it's been a pretty happy semester, so I can't really say there's anything that makes me cry, just memories I look back on with a smile. I spent the fall covering men's soccer, and even though they didn't quite compare with the women, (okay, they weren't close, given a head–to–head matchup, the women would probably kick the mens' butts), I still had a great time. I'm still in awe of Mike Butler and his incredible scoring touch. He is "Da Man" when it comes to soccer. (I even have the cover of my media guide with his picture on it hanging on the wall in my dorm room!) I also have to give thanks and props to Kobylanski for stepping in and helping me out.

After soccer I finally got the chance to cover my favorite sport when I was assigned women's basketball. Casey, it's been great so far, and there's more to come! Of course, I'll also never forget "gettin' my groove on" with Casey at Bruddy's, and Kobylanski too... "I'm starting to feel nice, and that was two beers ago!"

Jonathan M. Place — No. 1 memory was watching football coach Mike Hodges dethrone himself after a 2–9 season. He was a great guy and to see him leave the team he loved for over 20 years was a sad thing. However, the football season did bring some great memories to me and my beat partner, Mr. Goodman... the Maine Game. Losing 49–6 in the pouring rain, getting our broadcast shut off because the great Maine facilities put us outside of the pressbox instead in it. Lightning doesn't really hurt. Riding home with Scott McConnell after Texas lost to UCLA 66–3 on the same weekend. (Scott, it really is a good world)... the Buffalo Game. Crossing an eight–lane highway to get to the game. No problemo. The Gin and Steak Restaurant — no windows, just two really big brown doors with cow horns sticking off them. Needless to say, we didn't go in... the Villanova Game — going to Philly, I recommend Jim's Steaks on the corner of South and 4th... making it to the UMass @ BU hockey game during the national anthem because I had to fix Corey's car window — Bean's Window Repair, just ask for Mark. Bob Ryan was a great half–time guest. Gerry Callahan was too good for us. I guess I know who's getting a Christmas card. Ohio on Thanksgiving. Missy Coyner Rules! When Jeanie says 9:30, she means 9:15. If you're in Ohio and in need of a tie, stop by the Men's Warehouse and ask for LJ. He may not know anything about ties, but he knows his high school basketball.

Corey Peter Goodman — There are, of course, a few pleasant memories sandwiched around that miserable, depressing football season. Not formally meeting Bob Ryan and Gerry Callahan because Place was scared they'd like me better... Learning that the highways of Amherst, N.Y. are not safe to walk on at night... Coffee and politics in a Buffalo cafe... McConnell's favorite expression. Tiny red hot dogs, a Black Bear specialty... Two–tooth Bertha, not very attractive but, man can she make a mean meatball sub... Place obsessed with crushing a UMass hockey defensemen's testicles... my debut on the radio. Raw talent, I know.

And finally to Iorma. It's been short and unpleasant. But I promise if you stay we'll see a UMass hockey victory next semester. Scouts honor.

Casey Kane — There are only about 25 or so people on this campus who can truly understand what the field hockey team has been through in the past three years. There have been three different coaches, crazy schedules, players who didn't return, injuries, etc. Yet despite all this the Minutewomen captured their second consecutive Atlantic 10 tournament title this fall (their first under coach Patty Shea). They fought through some rough spots in their schedule and never gave up. Unfortunately, there are never as many people as there should be at those games. These women are amazing and deserve all the recognition they get (and more).

Of course, so does another bunch of talented field hockey women — the members of Sweet Caroline. My first ever intramural experience was great, thanks in large part to my wonderful team. I had never played goal before, but I'll be back there next year if you'll have me. Thanks guys.

Leigh Torbin — My Dita/USA Misty–Eyed Memory didn't come easy this semester. There were no triple overtime own goals in NCAA games, no trips to Oklahoma, no hockey wins over Maine and, amidst heavy classload and an unexpectedly high workload at my other job, absolutely no sleep. I'll take only that the fall was the semester to say that you never know what's coming up around the bend. One day you're set with working with one team, but then its a different one the next day and another the next. I forget the exact number but I think I did something for something like seven separate teams one weekend this fall. There just isn't one vivid memory that stands out but the whole unfortunate Hodges situation comes closest. He really is the man.

Whether it was a great steak dinner with a couple of friends or numerous plates of Ground Round wings, the memories of this fall seem to run away from those who run except right to the dinner table. Besides I worked with so many teams this fall I feel I couldn't pick a favorite because I'd just be pissing a lot of people off if I mentioned something from one team and not theirs. So, with the lack of material I welcomed my first title sponsor as I gear up already for a May senior column that's already half written and I promise will make you laugh and cry. You'll love it. But for now, remember: Dita, we speak field hockey.

Hot Dog Vendors

Aaron M. Saykin — Although most of you recognize me as the field hockey writer, I actually began the fall season covering the men's tennis squad. The more troublesome at first, as I began to enjoy my visits to the team's practices (Mostly because the women's squad practiced alongside them). Well, anyway, one afternoon I dropped in to find both teams practicing (as if they wouldn't be), and this bright–eyed female came jogging towards me with her tennis racquet, hospitably inquiring as to whether or not she could be of any assistance. Instead of dropping an opportunistic pick–up line on her, I settled for the whereabouts of coach Dixon (turned out to be a major faux pas because all the guys at the paper rave about this anonymous athlete). Before I had the chance to return to tennis practice in my journalistic bravado, I was transferred to field hockey. My old Latin teacher used to tell me "carpe diem" — should have listened! Anyhow, my transfer was good. Coach Shea's field hockey team won the A–10 title, I got to work with newly–elected sports editor and fellow Holyoker Casey Kane, and Anne Milmoe of Media Relations hooked me up with a ton of stats and free food and soda in the press box.

Justin Rudd — Yes, it is true I am just a freshman but I come with experience. Hey Iorma, remember when I came down here, a lonely lost high school senior with tons of ambition? Thanks for the assistance and grand tour of Collegian Sports. I'll never forget my first beat, negotiating with Luke in the Campus Center; "What do you want? Women's Tennis you got it!" "Oh, O.K., I guess." Switching off with Kobo, then deserted by my partner. Next up... the infamous NBA column. Cas where are ya' bud. How about my Nets, and Colts. Oh did I forget Jim's Steaks a great place for a true Philly cheesesteak... average digestion time one minute 45 seconds. To Scanzani, thanks for the guidance and please send my best to Boggs and the boys. Lets not forget my recent Colts victory over former Patriots coach Bill Parcels and the Jets. Hey, Mike thanks for showing me the true way to interview, I never knew how to put on Tinactan. All joking aside I'm just a freshman but I have heard stories and met the man. Let's hand it to the dedicated and hard–working Mike Hodges. I'll close with my first day here, Luke taught me how to type UMass... Casey says BIG UM, little ass.

Seth Koenig — My first semester here at UMass hasn't produced any misty eyes for me. Yeah, I get pretty worked up every week when the Patriots squander a 20–point lead with a minute and a half to go, but I usually resort to swearing and throwing things instead of getting misty eyed... Perhaps the most memorable event I had the pleasure of writing about here with the Collegian was Rebecca Donaghue's second consecutive individual Atlantic 10 victory for the Massachusetts women's cross country team. There is no doubt in my mind that she is one of the greatest athletes that UMass ever produced. The story she told me about the team dancing in the rain before the meet will forever be etched in my mind.

Jamie Jee — Um, yeah, memories. Let's see, let's see, where to begin. Well, chronologically is always a safe bet. I was assigned to cover women's volleyball at the beginning of the semester by the "management" and basically hoped that I wouldn't embarrass myself after my first article. I was able to talk to one of the most successful coaches here at UMass in head coach Bonnie Kenny and cover a great team (not to mention getting to eat with them a few times). I just want to wish seniors Lesley Nolan and Michelle Packorek good luck after they leave school. They were both awesome and I'm sure they're not done with volleyball yet. Thanks to the girls I did features on, Kari Hogancamp and Jill Meyers, for having the patience to listen to a few questions that probably seemed a little dumb. Thanks to the whole team for bearing with me on those Thursday morning practices when I may have pulled you aside for some "insight." Things have gone fairly smooth so far and, no Laura I don't hate you. It was fun talking to the basketball players on media day and watching a few practices that have just a little more dunking in them than high school ones. Now its time to move on to the winter season though. The NFL is coming to a close as well, but the best games are still ahead of course. It's hard to say how vulnerable Denver is. Most teams are if Kordell Stewart's on in the second half (and he usually is). We'll see though. Oh yes. Kudos to the Pats (for winning) and the Jets (for losing).

Things can only get more interesting from here.

Michael Kobylanski — Fred says that I can't have memories because I'm only a freshman, but I'm going to prove him wrong. I can't forget game number one, UMass– Michigan women's soccer, the heartbreaking loss to UConn a month later, watching Mike Butler become the new all–time leading scorer in mens' soccer history, and best of all, getting my horn taken away from me at Midnight Madness. Between women's tennis, men's soccer, and women's swimming it's been fun so far... Now all that I have to do is get my car so that I can go on road trips and convince everyone in the department that I am a legend... Oh, and Fred, I had about as much of a chance of catching the salt shaker as Bill Buckner did of fielding that ground ball.

We're all Collegian legends.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS
UMASS
Courtesy of Mass Daily Collegian
Staff

side

continued from page 10

Macfarland had a strong performance in the run for the Minutewomen, taking over Van Huisen's starting position.

"Alison was playing great ball until she picked up that third foul," O'Brien said. "That hurt us when she had to come out."

Junior center Yolanda Rayside, who has been playing well as of late, had a team–high 10 points, as well as a team–high seven rebounds. The Minutewomen were able to out–rebound the Huskies 37–33.

Senior guard Sabriya Mitchell also did her part, chipping in seven points, five assists and two steals. This is the kind of play UMass is going to require if they are going to effectively overcome Van Huisen's absence.

"Coming in, I thought [UMass] was going to play hard," UConn coach Geno Auriemma said. "And they did. I thought their defense was going to be great, and it was. That's why they're a good team, year–in and year–out."

In front of a record crowd of 6,005, the Minutewomen, for a while at least, looked as though they might have been in the midst of pulling off an upset. The William D. Mullins center was the loudest it has been all season. The UMass fans were pumped up feeding off of the play of the Minutewomen.

"It's a great place to play," Auriemma said. "A great atmosphere."

Overall, the Minutewomen are not too concerned with last night's game. They are more concerned with the team, and moving on with the rest of the season.

"We weren't that worried about Connecticut," O'Brien said. "We're more worried about ourselves and taking care of this team first."

women's hoop

continued from page 10

From there, the Huskies never looked back. They finished the half on a 12–7 run for a 30–25 advantage at the break.

"I know we're going to go through lulls where we're not going to score," UConn coach Geno Auriemma said. "It never really worried me because our defense was good. Offensively, it was just a matter of establishing some sort of low–post game."

That was exactly what the Huskies did. Center Paige Sauer, who couldn't buy a basket in the first half, found her touch after intermission and finished with eight points.

"[In the first half] my shot wasn't hitting and I wasn't being aggressive enough," Sauer said. "At halftime we talked about establishing in the paint."

UConn also put together a more–than–effective press. In the second half alone, the Huskies caused 14 UMass turnovers.

"We didn't do a good job breaking the press," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "Obviously one of the keys to the game was turnovers."

Which is exactly what Auriemma wanted.

"We wanted to pressure and turn the game into a full court game. UMass uses their pressure to slow you down, we wanted to use pressure to speed up the game," he said. "At halftime I said, 'Guys, I forgot to tell you. In order for us to get in our pressure we have to score.'"

UConn followed the game plan, allowing the Minutewomen scant looks at the basket in the second half's first 10 minutes. By then, foul shots had taken their toll.

In less than a two minute span, UConn sank six of eight free throws to increase its lead to 50–31 with 11:27 remaining. The Huskies finished 15–of–25 at the line.

UMass was not so lucky at the charity stripe. The Minutewomen struggled to hit their free throws, finishing 10–of–22 at the line.

"We did a horrendous job at the free throw line," O'Brien said. "We had a lot of people on the line tonight. If we made our free throws the game tightens up a little bit."

Two bright spots for the Minutewomen were Yolanda Rayside, who led the team in scoring (10) and rebounding (7), and Alison MacFarland (six points, three boards), who opened the scoring in both halves.

"Alison MacFarland was playing excellent basketball, when she picked up that third foul it turned the tide for us," O'Brien said.

amc
There is a Difference!
Silence is Golden. No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm.
Mt. Farms 8 •584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Jackal (R)
• Today at (5:00), 7:50, 10:30 • Sat at 1:50, (5:00), 7:50, 10:30 • Sun at 1:50, (5:40), 8:30
For Richer For Poorer (PG 13)
• Today at (5:10), 8:00, 10:40 • Sat at 2:00, (5:10), 8:00, 10:40 • Sun at 2:00, (5:50), 8:40
Rainmaker (PG13)
• Today at (4:50), 7:40, 10:30 • Sat at 1:40, (4:50), 10:30 • Sun at 1:40, (5:30), 8:20
Alien: Resurrection (R)
• Today at (5:00), 8:00, 10:40 • Sat at 2:00, (5:00), 8:00, 10:40 • Sun at 2:00, (5:50), 8:40
As Good As It Gets (PG 13)
Special Sneak Preview
"Sat only at 7:40 Stay over and see "Rainmaker" free !
Hampshire 6 •584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Scream 2 (R)
• Today at (4:50), (5:30), 7:30, 8:10, 10:00, 10:50, 12:15am • Sat at 1:40, 2:10, (4:50), (5:30), 7:30, 8:10, 10:00, 10:50, 12:15am • Sun at 1:40, 2:10, (5:00), (5:30), 8:30, 8:40
Anastasia (G)
• Today at (5:20), 8:00, 10:10 • Sat at 2:00, (5:20), 8:00, 10:10 • Sun at 2:00, (5:20), 8:40
Flubber (G)
• Today at (5:20), 7:50, 10:10 • Sat at 2:00, (5:20), 7:50, 10:10 • Sun at 2:00, (5:20), 8:40
Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil (R)
• Today at (5:00), 8:00, 10:50 • Sat at 1:30, (5:00), 8:00, 10:50 • Sun at 1:30, (4:40), 8:20
Home Alone 3 (PG)
• Today at (5:10), 7:40, 10:20 • Sat at 1:50, (5:10), 7:40, 10:20 • Sun at 1:50, (5:10), 8:30

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
922 Campus Center
545-1995 Call Today!

Great Gifts
Bags Stocking Stuffers Hats
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Earrings Rings Bracelets Chains Sweaters Toys India Print Bedspreads
Candles
Gloves Mugs
Merry X'mas Socks Leather Sole Cards
Chinese Shoes Dresses
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The Mercantile
Weeknights 9PM Dec. 4-22
Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St. Amherst-Carriage Shops

Holly Days
BOOK SIGNING
THE UNIVERSITY STORE BRINGS YOU THE AUTHOR OF THIS NOTEWORTHY SPORTS BOOK. THE SIGNING WILL TAKE PLACE ON THE CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE ACROSS FROM THE UNIVERSITY STORE.
BOB RYAN
AUTHOR OF THE FOUR SEASONS
WEDS. DEC. 17 - ABOUT 1PM
AFTER THE SPORTS LUNCHEON
WE ACCEPT AMEX, DISCOVER, MC, VISA, AND THE UCARD!
Ustore
UNIVERSITY STORE IN THE UMASS CAMPUS CENTER
HOURS: M-F 9 TO 5 SAT. 11 TO 4
(413) 545-2619

WHAT ARE YOU DOING THIS BREAK?
JOB FAIR JOB FAIR JOB FAIR
Mount Snow
JOB FAIR
DECEMBER 13
(call if you can make it or apply on-line)
On-The-Spot Interviews with Department Supervisors for Ticket Sellers, Child Care, Food & Beverage Staff, Custodial, Parking Attendants, Housekeepers, Ski Patrol, Ski & Snowboard Professionals, and much more!
Main Base Lodge
10 am - 2 pm
Work Hard. Play Harder.
If you cannot attend, please Contact The Human Resources Department, Mount Snow Resort, West Dover VT 05356 (802) 464-3333, or apply on line at www.mountsnow.com

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENT

SORORITY RUSH
Feb. 5th- 9th
Registration
Begins
in the Campus Center
Come see what Sorority
Rush is all about!

Collegian Staff: Have a great break! See you next semester. If you are graduating- Best of luck in the future! Happy Holidays!

APARTMENT FOR RENT

1 or 2 people to take over Puffton lease. $615 a month starting 1/98 Call Brian 549-4913

1 bedroom apartment 1st floor with parking. $570/month, heat included. Large living, bath. Mein St. Bus route/no pets. Bryen 256-6737 or Harlow Properties 256-3442

Large 2 bedroom next to bus stop. Heat/Hot Water included. Call 259-1860

One Bedroom Breadywine Apartment Available January-August. Call 549-7330

1 bedroom apartment available 1/98 Close to campus. Mark 549-5326

2 bedroom- Mill Hollow $540 Jan 1. Call Tracy 549-3759

One bedroom apartments available Jan-Feb 1st. Please contact the Brandywine Office at 549-0600

1 bedroom at Puffton Village $545 Includes heat Available 1/1/98 Please call 549-9221

Take Over My Lease One bedroom apartment. $500/month inclusive. Call Tariq Odeh 665-5599

AUTO FOR SALE

87 Toyota Tercel Wagon 143,000 highway miles. $1500/BO. No rust! Call Laura 582-3852

Geo Prizm 1990 155,000 Very reliable Well maintained (records) Blue Book says $2800 Asking $2000. 256-1845

89 Nissan 240SX Excellent condition. All extras. New muffler, clutch, tires, brakes $4400 or B/O. 549-6826

Looking for an inexpensive, yet reliable car? Selling Nissan Sentra. Call 256-6189.

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-549-4795

COMPUTERS

286 Computer- White screen, no mouse, $150 386 Computer- Color screen, $290. All in good shape. Good for writing papers. Call Dan 253-5978

Laptop Notebook Works good $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great! Call CPC (413)584-8857

Last chance to apply for Tour Guide, Summer Counselor, and Student Admissions Representative Jobs

EMPLOYMENT

Deadline is today!

Unemployed Over Winter Break? Work for The Sierra Club to protect our endangered species. Positions available here in Amherst and across the country. Great pay, excellent experience. Call Mary at 256-6434

Earn $75-$100 Untrained males needed for Exc. Sci. Study over Winterssession. Call Steve @ 253-4952

Accounting Position- Spring Semester
Flexible hours, fun environment. Generate reports, data entry. Call Ryen or Maureen at 5-3500. Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement

Day Care Lunch Cook & Shopper. 17 hrs per week. $7 per hour Classroom Subs, Variable Schedules. $6.25 per hour Route 63, Leverett. Call Susan 548-9674

EMPLOYMENT

Winter Session & Immediate Openings

Hadley office has 30 openings for the winter session.
Office Hours: 10 AM to 2 PM & 4 PM to 9 PM, Saturdays & Sundays also available.

- Fun Atmosphere
- No Experience Required
- On Bus Line
- Flexible Schedule
- Only Minutes From Campus

Call 584-6015
Free Information

Drivers Wanted Spring Semester. No classes before 10am. Must be hard working and have reliable transportation. $10/hour 6-8 hrs/week. Contact Ryen or Lyle at The Collegian 545-3500 or come to the Campus Center Basement

YOU WANT CASH MONEY??!! Do you know how to drink warm soda and eat a pound of lima beans?!!! Be a part of the new comedy tape "AMERICA'S GREATEST BELCHES & FARTS." Send your best burps and farts on tape (audio, video, micro) to us. CASH paid if you make the cut! Maniac Marketing 357 Cherokee St. Marietta, GA 30060. Need more info? Call the GAS LINE (770)590-5233

Summer Management Opportunities
Open across Mass for the Summer of 1998 Earn $600-$800 per week For more info please call College Pro Painters at (888)277-7962.

FOR RENT

Looking for 1 female starting 2/98 to share house. Call Mel 549-5506

Cornwood For Sale $125 Cord. Call 549-5456.

FOR SALE

Gyneator VS 190cm Quick turning Mogul Ski & Binding. Used 10 days $180. Call Dan (978)649-7441

One rose of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian. Call Pam @ 546-2812

Fridge. Call Phone. Pager. Sub Woofer. Car CD. Bike and Tables. Call (413)546-2716

Free Motorella Pagers
Limited Supply
Great x-mas Gift
1-800-784-6452 ext. 624421

Willpower Is A Bottle
Lose Weight
Doctor Recommended
100% Natural
Moneyback Guarantee
(413)259-1922

FURNITURE

Need to sell 3 month old full size bed at the end of Dec. for $80 or best offer Call Merc at 253-9220

GREEK ANNOUNCEMENT

Sigma Delta Tau would like to congratulate their new sisters- Amy, Sam, Zelia, Emily, Lesley & Karen

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday, LEEA!

"Happy Birthday Jet!"
Hope your day is a special one! Thanks for being such a wonderful person and friend! Love, Michael

HOUSE FOR RENT

4 BED HOUSE Good location. Northampton. For Jan. $925 plus utilities. Skibski Realtors 584-3428

JEWELRY

Watch batteries, eye piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3204 Open Daily

Black Wallet 12/10 between Machmer and the Campus Center. If found call Diana at 546-0742

LOST & FOUND

Watch lost Sat Night Tigger Watch with green band Reward. 546-6622

Lost: Cellular Phone in Bluewelt or Bartlett. Reward for return (508)862-1147 or see Barbara or Norm in Journ.

Lost: Black Velcro Wallet in Newman Center on Dec. 4th by the phone. If found please call Erin at 253-1529

MISCELLANEOUS

WINTER HEAT TIPS! Don't turn your thermostat below 60 during winter break or you risk broken water pipes for which you are responsible (not the landlord). This is an expense you do not want. If you are going away for only a few days ask your landlord to check the house. If you have questions or want more information call Commuter Services at 545-0865 or come to 428 Student Union.

PERSONALS

Single Red-head seaking 5'5" girl with brown hair, brown eyes that works in the business dept. @ the Collegian. Must be silly and fun-loving Name rhymes with Oy. Contact Dave ASAP.

Suog- You are my ambassador of Korn -Mert

To the ladies of 7th floor field: I can still smell the lawn clippings I will remember you forever. Beautiful lawnmovers of my soul

To all my friends in the Hill, at the Collegian, in my classes, and anyone else I know: Good luck with finals and have a great Winter Break! Luv, Pam 21 JQA and honorary members- I love you all. Have a great Break and Happy Holidays I'll miss ya ell -little d

ROOM FOR RENT

One large room available in Puffton Private bath. $200, all inclusive for two, or $330 all inclusive for one Available immediately 549-6102 Jessica, Brian, or Bill.

Wintersession Rooms- Singles or doubles available. Fraternity, close to campus. $200. Call Bob 549-6143

ROOM FOR RENT

One room in renovated three bedroom Puffton apartment. Available Jan 1. $280/month. Dan (413)548-7059

1 room in 4 bedroom apt in Northampton. Jan to Aug. $300 a month. Call 585-5851

Room Available 12/22 Great location on Lincoln Avenue. $250 includes utilities. Call 549-1910

Quiet room, downtowne Amherst Available end of December. Lease. 253-4236. 9am-9pm

One Large Room Available in Puffton Private Bath. $200 All inclusive for 2 or $330 for one all inclusive. Available Immediately 549-6102 Jessica, Brian or Bill

Room available in Mein St apartment. Parking and heat included. Call Paul or Miki 253-1450

Bedroom Available Two bedroom apt. $216/month. On bus route. Call 665-8894. Ask for Scott.

Looking for male to share large room in 3 bedroom apartment. Great location uptown. $250/month. Ask for Fitz 253-9359

Large bedroom in renovated 3 bedroom Puffton apartment. Available Jan 1. $375/month. 549-9857

1 room in 2 bedroom apartment. Available Jan. End. Call 549-8082 ASAP

UPTOWN
Room for rent in house
for 1 or 2 persons
$210/month. Available 12/22.
549-9275

Furnished room available in a 4 bedroom Amherst house. $300/month. Near bus route. For more details call Tina 253-6428

Cheap rooms for Wintersession Live close to campus. Only $150. Includes heat/hot water. Call Jason 549-0950

For Puffton Apts Includes heat and water. $300 plus utilities. Starting 1/98. Call Brian 549-4913

ROOM FOR RENT

1-2 Housemates Wanted to share 5 bedroom house. Spacious farmhouse 5 minutes from campus. $235+ utilities. Call 549-8869

1 or 2 bedroom available in 4 bedroom apartment. $300/month plus elect. Close to bus/town/UMass. Call Now 259-1140

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted Own bedroom. $300/month. On bus line. Call Jen 259-2995

Bedroom available in Sugarloaf. $333 monthly. Call 665-3558

Looking for 1 person to share large room in two bedroom apt. Starts Jan 1. Call Brad or Mike 549-3992

Female roommate/s wanted to share a 2 bedroom- Boulders Apts. Amherst. On bus line. Available Jan 1st or sooner. 259-2995

SERVICES

Decorators Beautify your home- wallpaper, painting, staining. Expert work- 20 years exp. Free estimates. Call (413)533-6213 South Hadley

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Spring Sublet starting on Jan-May or Jan-Aug. 2 bedroom at Sugarloaf. Semi-furnished. Rent $660 but I will pay $100/month. Free heat. Call 665-9101

Take over our 2 bedroom apartment! Cliffside in Sunderland. $660/month. All utilities. On bus line. 665-0235

TRAVEL

"SPRING BREAK CRUISE"
Soak up the sun
Play in the sand
Dance in the moonlight
And, oh yeah... PARTY!!!
Don't be left at the dock
Book your cabin now
The price is right
Call 1(888)411-7447

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK TRAVEL

Spring Break

Ask about our legendary Free Party Packages

★Jamaica
★Cancun

The best Meal Plan in the business!
★Bayamo ★Panama City
CALL FOR FREE INFO PACK
Sun Splash Tours
1-800-426-7710

Looking for a Deal?

Sell your Books in the Classifieds.

It's EASY and CHEAP.

Only 10¢ /word.

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards, in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELRY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND
(3 DAYS FREE)
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR RENT
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP.
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO BURLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, DEC. 12

Comedy — Montclair State's Possible Side Effects comedy improvisation troupe at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163, hosted by MISSION IMPROVable.

Concert — The Hampshire College Chorus will perform Mozart's Missa Brevis, K. 275, and Lou Harrison's Mass to St. Anthony at 8 p.m. at Grace Church on the Amherst Town Common.

Meeting — The Tibetan Students Association is having a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 165-69.

Service — Shabbat Service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House.

SATURDAY, DEC. 13

Comedy — Tuft's Cheap Sox comedy improvisation troupe at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163, hosted by MISSION IMPROVable.

NOTICES

Applications — The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team is accepting applications for its training this January 12–16. Applications are available for any UMass student at 222 Hampshire House, Legal Studies. For more information, contact Leah at 545–5882.

Art exhibition — An exhibition of more than 30 one–of–a– kind artist books and scrolls by William Schade will be on view through Jan. 25 at the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum. Museum hours are Tuesday – Friday, 11 a.m.–5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday, 1–5 p.m. and is closed on academic holidays from Wednesday, Nov. 26 through Monday, Dec. 1 and from Tuesday, Dec. 16 through Monday, Jan. 6. For more information, call 538–2245 or fax 538–2144.

Art Exhibition — Works by 13 members of the Williams College art faculty will be featured in "Artist/Teacher: Group Faculty Exhibition," opening Dec. 6 at the Williams College Museum of Art, and continuing through March 1. Museum hours are Tues.–Sat. 10 a.m.–5 p.m. and Sun. 1–5 p.m.

Club — The UMass Amateur Radio Club Station W1PUO is returning and looking for people to join in Ham radio. Anyone interested in radio/electronics and a desire to learn and communicate are welcome. The club will sponsor FCC approved volunteer examination sessions for all license levels. For more information, contact Richard Strycharz N1MFT at 549–6000 ext. 6000 or leave a message at facility services.

Internships — Environmental and Hunger Internships available for credit. Opportunities include helping to organize a Five College Earthday, protecting Endangered Species and organizing the Spring Hunger Clean–up. For more information, call Robyn at 545–0199.

Notice — Spectrum Magazine is taking submission for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office at 545–2240 or come by in the Student Union, room 406E.

Notice — The UMass Arts Council's next deadline for Single Project/Event grants is on Wednesday, Feb. 4 at 5 p.m. for art events occurring after Feb. 24. Guidelines for application forms are available at the Campus Activities Office, 416 Student Union or at the Arts Council offices, Hasbrouck 101–103 or on computer disk at PC Software Support, Lederle low rise, room A118. Please call the Arts Council at 545–0202 for help with applying for a grant or to discuss your ideas.

Guess What! FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day. Happy Holidays!

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 International
15 UMass Academic TV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN SI
25 Headline News
26 UCTV
27 TBS
28 BET
29 TV Land
30 Univision
31 Comedy Central
32 Cartoon
33 Much Music

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 12, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Colours of Infinity (In Stereo)		Creation of the Universe (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	ABC Basketball: Columbus Quest at New England (Tentative) (Live)				Story of Santa Claus (R)		Kathie Lee-Christmas		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra		Ent. Tonight	Frosty	Frosty		Story of Santa Claus (R)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Patriots	Sabrina-Witch	Boy World	Sabrina-Witch	Healthbeat	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Full House	Boy-World	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★½ "The Bird" (1988, Drama) Jack Wallace, Cybelly Kairys.		News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Players "Three of a Con"		Detective (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Cheers	Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	★★½ "Volunteers" (1985, Comedy) Tom Hanks, John Candy.				News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Players "Three of a Con"		Detective (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Traitor "Pilot" (R) (In Stereo)		Millennium "Beware of the Dog"		News	Seinfeld	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Players "Three of a Con"		Detective (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Great Moments in Opera			Andrea Bocelli: Romanza In Concert (R)			Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Sabrina-Witch	Boy World	Sabrina-Witch	Teen Angel	10/30		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	★★½ "We're No Angels" (1989, Comedy) Robert De Niro.				News	M*A*S*H	M*A*S*H	Reel TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	★★★ "Licence to Kill" (1989, Adventure) Timothy Dalton, Carey Lowell.							"From Russia With Love" (1963)
A&E	69	Northern Exposure	"Duets"	Law & Order "Helpless"		Biography: Roy Rogers		Story of Magic: "Centuries of Deception" (R)				Law & Order
CNN	29	World View		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	38	Comic Cabana	Make-Laugh	★½ "Once Upon a Crime" (1992, Comedy) John Candy.				★★ "Johnny Dangerously" (1984, Comedy) Michael Keaton.				Police Squad!	Police Squad!
DISC	67	Wings "Eagles of the Crown"		Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery: Serpent		News	Storm	Battleship (Part 2 of 2)		Justice Files	"Child Stalkers"
ESPN	63	Up Close	Sportscenter		Heisman Prev.	Peyton Manning: All Access		Boxing: John Lowry vs. Erik Morales. (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	68	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait "Janet Leigh"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★ "A Home of Our Own" (1993, Drama) Kathy Bates.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	65	MTV Live (In Stereo)		Year in Rock (In Stereo)		Daria (R)	Beavis-Butt.	Yo! (In Stereo)		Unfiltered (R)	Brick Awards	Loveline (R) (In Stereo)
NICK	64	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Kablam!	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Love Lucy	M.T. Moore	Test	Newhart
SCIFI	66	Screem2	Swamp Thing	Night Stalker		★½ "Friday the 13th Part VIII: Jason Takes Manhattan" (1989)				Friday the 13th: The Series		Night Stalker
TLC	24	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Solar Empire "A Star is Born"		Solar Empire "Alien Neighbors"		Solar Empire "Space Trek" (R)		Solar Empire "A Star Is Born"
TNT	62	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		NBA Basketball: Miami Heat at Indiana Pacers. (In Stereo Live)				Inside-NBA		★★ "The Glory Guys" (1965)
USA	70	Baywatch (R) (In Stereo)		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger "Hookie"		Figure Skating: Skating Romance				"California Hell" (1965)
HBO	91	(5:00) "One Fine Day" (1996)		Inside the NFL (In Stereo)		★★ "Passenger 57" (1992) Wesley Snipes. (R)		"The Peacekeeper" (1997) Dolph Lundgren. (R)				Tenacious D	Chris Rock
MAX	93	(5:00)		★★ "Carpool" (1996, Comedy) Tom Arnold. (PG)		★★ "I'm Not Rappaport" (1996, Comedy-Drama) Walter Matthau. (PG-13)						★★★ "The Ghost and the Darkness" (1996) (R)
SHOW	94	★★½ "Sunchaser's Moon" (1996)		Larce Henriksen. (PG-13)		★★★ "Swingers" (1996) Jon Favreau. (R)			On the Set	Stargate SG-1	The Nox (R)	Hunger (R)	"Big Night" (R)

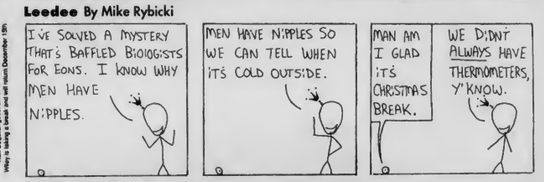
Bruno By C. Baldwin

Dilbert By Scott Adams

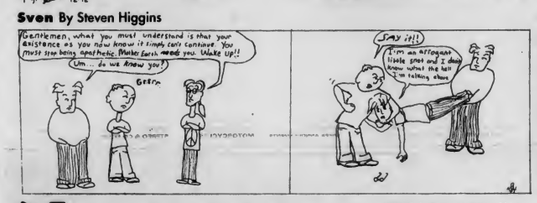
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

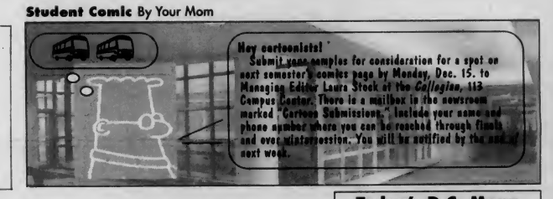
Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley



Robotman By Jim Meddick



Non Sequitor By Wiley



Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Sven By Steven Higgins

Student Comic By Your Mom

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Practice doesn't make perfect all the time. Today, you may be trying to do something for which you were not suited — which explains the difficulty.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You can go about your preliminary business by rote today, but once things get complicated you must pay keen attention to all details.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20.–Feb. 18) — It may be difficult for you to make a quick start today, but later on you may have reason to make a quick getaway.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Take care that you're not being judgmental of someone in charge, in lieu of doing your own job as well as possible. Stick to business.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — There are times when it is more than appropriate to share your every thought and feeling with someone else — but today is not that time.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You can prove yourself today simply by doing what you have been asked to do, and then some. You will be trusted with more responsibility.

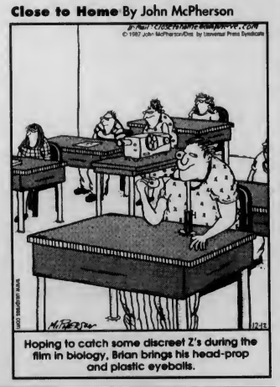
GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — The creative spark which got you started down your current path can benefit you today in a manner which you had not expected.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Some people are better than others at taking on more than one responsibility at a time — and today you can prove that you're certainly one of them!

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You can play a role of benefactor in some way today, and the recipients of your thoughts and actions will be grateful for sure.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Not every message you receive today will be of marked importance; some, indeed, will prove to be nothing but routine. Pay attention anyway.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You can be more creative today with endeavors that otherwise would be routine in the extreme. Others are likely to follow your lead.



SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You are going to need the help of many today in order to get a new project off the ground. A decision to postpone will be understood.

Quote of the Day

"I get knocked down, but I get up again..."

–Chumbawamba

Close to Home By John McPherson

Hoping to catch some discreet Z's during the film in biology, Brian brings his head-prop and plastic eyeballs.

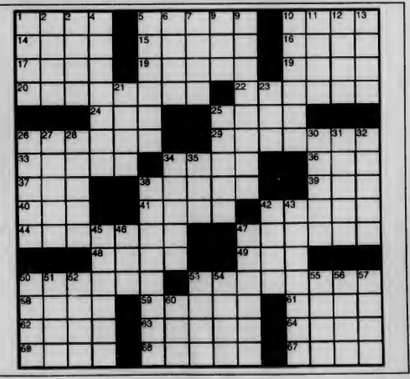
Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Chicken Puks
Tuna Noodle, rhymes with Strudel, Casserole
Pizza with Cheese and Sauce on Dough
Franklin's Fabulous Friday Lunch Surprize
DINNER
Chicken Fajita
Spaghetti/Tomato Sauce
Tofu Fajita
Pastabilities: Italian Sweet Sausage/Roll

Worcester
LUNCH
(grilled) Cheese Deluxe
Sloppy Joe or Vegan Sloppy Joe
Spaghetti/Tomato Sauce
Grilled Cheese on Whole Wheat
DINNER
Chicken Fajita
3 Cheese Macaroni w/ about 3 Cheeses
Tri-Bean Casserole w/ √9 Beans
Pasta: Italian Sweet Sausage Grinder

Hampshire
LUNCH
Beefcake Burger
Chicken Puks
Handcut Cod Sub w/ Handcut Fish
Grilled Cheese w/ nothing, but in a sandwich
DINNER
Chicken Fajita with... nothing!
Baked Fish with Herb Stuffing
Baked Fish with Stuff Stuffing
Baked Stuff in Fish Stuffed with Stuff Stuffing

Berkshire
LUNCH
Cheese Deluxe w/ Grilled Cheese
Pizza or Chef's Pizza – you decide!
Sloppy Joe – how sloppy? you decide!
Sloppy Joe – vegan style
DINNER
"don't fake the funk on a..." Chicken Fajita
Duchess Meat Pie aka. Beefcake?
Tri Bean Casserole
Italian Sweet Sausage Grinder



ACROSS
1 Stair
5 Contended successfully
10 "— Cheatin' Heart"
14 Dry watercourse
15 Complexion color
16 To boot
17 Actor Baldwin
18 Sons
19 Chirp
20 Handy tool
22 Reveal
24 Dry, as wine
25 Soft cheese
26 Nudges
29 Obvious
33 Claims on property
34 Field mouse
36 — Izu
37 Coffee container
38 Buckets
39 Cover
40 Pop
41 Nothing but
42 Fear
44 Core
47 Sidecar ingredient
48 Laughs, slangily
49 Nutritious grain
50 Actress Dahl
53 Narrow passages
58 Part of a bride's attire
59 Train
61 Singer Turner
62 Woodwind
63 Malok happy
64 Run — go wild
65 Desire
66 Cafe
67 Type of bag

DOWN
1 Trade
2 Legend
3 Perfect spot
4 Acts like an older sibling?
5 Funnies
6 King of Norway
7 Heap
8 Resident of 3-Down
9 Merits
10 Barked
11 Bread spread
12 Employs
13 Cowboy's gear
21 Current events
23 Roman dozen
25 Type of dance
26 Avoid adroitly
27 Italian coins
28 Curves
30 Actress Barkin
31 River nymph
32 Hot drink
34 Weather indicators
35 Grease
38 Stole
42 Sketch
43 Drumming sound
45 Tiny opening
46 Sister
47 Annoy
50 Declare
51 McEntire of country music
52 Mighty predator
53 "Rollerball" star
54 Entr'—; intermission
55 Luxury car
56 Granny —
57 Art for art's —
60 Yale alumnus

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

SHELL GALA CREW
AERIE IGES AIDA
WRING ANTHOLOGY
NOCTURNE DOTES
EMIT ITER
AMBLED PORRIDGE
OATS SALTY EELS
ARN SEA FIT
PIGS SPASM CEDE
TOOTSIES ADORES
AITIN GAEL
AMINO HIMALAYA
WALLPAPER RISES
LIKE PENT EDITS
SLAY RASH RESIN

12-12-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

Night Editor — Laura Stock
Photo Technician — Kenneth W. P. Scott
Copy Editor — Luke Meredith
Production Supervisor — Leon Latino
Production Staff — Teresa Rodrigues, Keren Charles

SPORTS

One more time around the horn

In the midst of the winter weather trying to emerge and the fall semester winding down, sports have done nothing but create a furious whirlwind that has whipped up New England fans and dropped them on their collective backsides.

• Pedro Martinez is now major league baseball's highest paid player. He's a Cy Young award winner. He's a member of the Boston Red Sox.

It doesn't seem to all fit.

The Sox have been a team with little apparent direction in the past couple years, not to mention little apparent profit to spend on high-priced players. All of a sudden the Red Sox Trust has an unlimited account and money to burn.

Fred Herlbrink, Jr
Around the Horn

Don't get me wrong, Pedro's dough is money well spent, but where did all Harrington's millions come from? Probably from the exorbitant amount stamped on the tickets at Fenway.

The Sox now are a team that has reason to believe they can compete with the heavyweights in the American League. With Pedro in tow for six years and Nomar Garciaparra an emerging MVP candidate, Mo Vaughn is happy and that's the biggest reason why the Sox should be optimistic.

When Big Mo is happy, everybody's happy. When he's not, the Boston Globe writes a story about it.

Vaughn will soon be secured in the fold with a three or four year mega-deal and the Red Sox will be a legitimate contender for the 1998 pennant.

It doesn't seem real, does it?

• More appalling than his recent actions may be that Latrell Sprewell hired Johnnie Cochran as his lawyer.

"If he has a fit, you must acquit?"

• The Heisman Trophy awards ceremony is not far off, but for Peyton Manning it can't come soon enough.

He says he's sick of hearing about being a candidate. It must be tough. Being an idol, a state icon. It's a rough life when everybody loves you, when nobody can get enough.

Manning will have to deal for at least one more day; I hope he can hold himself together until he is annointed the best college football player in America.

It's a rough life.

What's even more rough is that he doesn't even deserve the award. Charles Woodson of Michigan has been invaluable to the Wolverines' national title run. As a premier cover corner and a dangerous wide receiver, Woodson can dominate games for 60 full minutes.

Heisman voters don't like defensive players. Well, that's good, because Woodson is a football player — the best one still playing on Saturdays.

• Our old buddy Wilfredo Cordero keeps solidifying his place in the Scumbag Hall of Fame. Heck, by the time he's done, he might just get his own wing.

The former Red Sox outfielder has been issued a restraining order by a judge in Puerto Rico. Apparently, he had been threatening his wife Ana.

Just as shameful as Cordero's actions are his wife's, though. She has been in complete support of her husband, and denied that he ever beat her in the first place. She didn't want to press charges, she didn't want to stand up for herself.

It was just as important for her to stand up against her husband as it was for the Red Sox to let him go. And we all know how much grief the Sox took before they finally did what they had to do.

• Tom Osborne's retirement brought about mixed emotions in many circles.

As Nebraska's football coach for 25 seasons, Osborne lost less than two games per season. But his reign as the head man of a college football dynasty was not unblemished.

Marked by controversies like all the Lawrence Phillips' years and the Christian Peter abuse accusations, some thought Osborne's tenure lasted too long, that he was too soft on his players.

All he did was win, and that's all the Nebraska boosters wanted from him. Nebraska football is an institution and Osborne is a huge part.

Osborne deserves better than to retire amid scandal. He should go out being remembered as what he truly is — a winner. He won 254 games and enhanced Nebraska football to a level to which few programs have ascended.

He's a legend and he should be acknowledged that way.

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

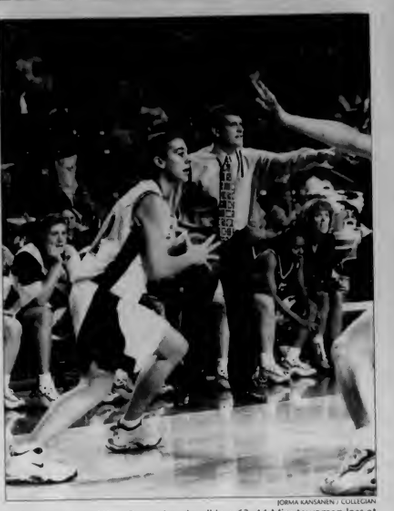
JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore forward Alison MacFarland started at guard for the injured Kelly Van Huisen and scored six points in last night's loss.

Huskies overwhelm Minutewomen

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

There was a point in last night's women's basketball game when Massachusetts held an 11-point lead over the No. 3 Connecticut Huskies. Unfortunately for the Minutewomen, that point came with eight minutes remaining in the first half.



Connecticut	63
Massachusetts	44

UConn came out firing in the second half and went on to show why it is one of the top teams in the country, as the Huskies beat UMass, 63–44.

The Minutewomen were able to control the first 12 minutes of the game with a tough zone defense which denied UConn any shooting opportunities. With 12 minutes remaining in the opening frame, only two Husky players had hit shots from the floor.

Connecticut, however, was finally able to find its rhythm, when Nykesha Sales found the basket. Sales, a National Player of the Year candidate, connected on three shots — including a 3-pointer — in a 2:30 period to tie the game at 18.

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOP, page 6

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Freshman guard Kara Trent played well in a 63–44 Minutewoman loss at the hands of Geno Auriemma's Huskies.

Without Van Huisen, Minutewomen play well

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

From the time the Connecticut game was placed on the Massachusetts women's basketball team's season schedule, it was pretty much assumed UMass would lose last night. This is UConn, a perennial powerhouse, 1995 National Champions, alma mater of Rebecca Lobo herself.

Granted there is always a chance that an underdog will pull an upset. UConn may be ranked No. 3 in the nation, and have the talents of senior Nykesha Sales, among others. But UMass has young phenom Kelly Van Huisen — or they did.

In the waning seconds of a close game against Holy Cross, the sophomore guard, UMass' biggest offensive threat, slipped on an inbounds pass, and tore her right ACL.

It was an incredible blow to UMass. A great game from Van Huisen was one of the keys for the Minutewomen to a victory over UConn. With the injury Van Huisen is out for the season, and is currently applying for a medical redshirt. Once Van Huisen was officially deemed unable to play, the assumptions were only strengthened.

The assumptions came true. UMass was beaten solidly by UConn 63–44. But the score does not tell the whole story. Despite the fact that they were without their top player, the Minutewomen put up a strong fight. They had a few flashes of brilliance, indications that perhaps they can survive without Van Huisen. Indications that they can still play against top teams.

"We're not going to make a whole lot of changes without Kelly," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "It's just a matter now of people taking advantage of this opportunity and stepping up and making the plays. Everyone was feeling sorry for themselves, and I told them to stop and think about how Kelly feels."

The Minutewomen came out with a terrific amount of energy to start the game, and put up a 6–0 run. From there the Minutewomen held on their lead right up to the 2:14 mark in the first half. At one point they had increased it to as much as 11, leading 18–7 with 7:49 to go. Then the Huskies took over. They put together a 23–7 run and pulled ahead, 30–25 at halftime.

UMass had their game together, and played as a team, with everyone contributing. Sophomore forward/guard Alison

Turn to SIDE page 6

KEN W P. MCDONALD / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore guard Monty Mack, who scored 19 points against Kansas, will go back ot his old stomping grounds in Boston this weekend.

UMass looks to shoot down BC

Minutemen in midst of treacherous road stretch

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

After nearly defeating the No. 3 Kansas Jayhawks Wednesday night, the Massachusetts basketball team will continue its fowl shooting Sunday at the FleetCenter when the Minutemen (4–3) take on the Boston College Eagles in the third annual Commonwealth Classic.

Game time is scheduled for 1 p.m.

The Minutemen went to Kansas and gave the Jayhawks a run for their money, holding the lead for most of the contest before Raef LaFrentz tipped in the winning bucket with 20 seconds left.

Charlton Clarke lit up Allen Fieldhouse for 22 points while playing most of the game at shooting guard. UMass coach Bruiser Flint went to the three-guard offense frequently as freshman point guard Jonathan DePina controlled the tempo throughout the contest.

The South Boston native, who was shunned by BC admissions, handed out a career high eight assists in the loss.

DePina, along with current Miami (Fla.) freshman forward Elton Tyler, was recruited by former Eagles' coach Jim O'Brien but after clearing NCAA requirements was rejected by the BC admissions staff.

Blue chip recruit Mike Bradley of Worcester, who was a teammate of both DePina and Tyler on an AAU team, followed these actions by ripping up his letter of intent and negating his verbal commitment to the Heights.

Bradley now plays for Kentucky.

The scandal prompted O'Brien to resign from his post at BC. He quickly found a job at Ohio State, and standout guard Scoonie Penn soon followed him.

Under new coach and UMass alum Al Skinner, the Eagles are off to a 6–3 start in what is more a regrouping year than a rebuilding year for basketball on Chestnut Hill.

The Eagles three losses are against teams that they had little chance of

Turn to BC, page 6

Also Today

• Hockey looks to tame Tigers... page 6
• Men's swimming wrap up fall semester... page 6

Misty-eyed Memories

As another fall semester comes to a close, the Collegian Sports staff would like to wish all its readers a safe and happy holiday season. As our gift, we offer our most precious thoughts and reflections. From the newest writers to the oldest, we give you the traditional, the ever-enchanting, the mystifying Misty-eyed memories. Try to hold it together, will ya'?

President & C.E.O.

Luke Meredith — What super-secret elevator shaft corporation funded by Charley Steiner's Christmas bonuses?

That's where they're hiding Keith Olbermann's old ties, you know. Well, and old issues of the Collegian.

I'll never forget Coach Hodges' final farewell. He may not have won many football games this year, but I'm proud to have known him.

Okay, now for the cheesy references none of you out there will get.

To the whiners out there, I can only say get a life. If you have to call me five times a week to re-affirm your existence, then you're probably not newsworthy.

To Fred, I still can't believe they let us into an NBA game as press. Gee, bright move on their part. You and I know kids from UConn are pansies, and if they want to bring the noise, they can bring it.

I remember Kansas flights missed, and the month of October. I remember not getting to the Delaware game until halftime, and wishing I had never made it at all. I'll miss McGuirk hot dogs when I'm gone, politics that really shouldn't matter, and the final Schwag.

To Slump (A), Dave (B) and Jeff (C), well you really didn't do anything concerning Collegian sports, but I love you anyways.

To #9, you know it's only because of the "Wingspan Theory", and even then I'm 2-0. Oh yeah, 95-83, and all the crazy characters I now know. The SSC, D.E.B, C.C. Central— (quite a place). Hey, you know what they say about girls from... okay, it is an old joke. But dammit, it's still funny.

General Managers

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. — I don't get misty (as far as you know) but there are plenty of memories that will join the cluttered abyss after this semester... the football team made me misty — or maybe that was all the rain and snow that came down in the last four games. No, it was the team. But that BU game was something else; I'm kind of glad we lost that one, those BU kids deserved that... I still owe Place and Spankee and Dookie lunch for pushing my car from the off- ramp to safety. Also from that Bristol trip: Otis elevator testing facility and cruisin' the strip; UConn sports writers are tools... I was two feet away from Isiah Thomas and didn't get his autograph... "Who's going to write Around the Horn?"... El Acuña, El Acuña, the Sox got Pedro Martinez... Kobo should have caught my last shaker of salt... having the Punk back for a couple days was cool... Ralls: you tried to cram half of Chelmsford into my Buick, but you're still part of the "Cool Crew"... Martin J. Keane comma Junior period... From the Collegian party: Lorraine you're my favorite Collegian person!... to Jorma and Torbin and the rest of you basement monkies: you don't know what it meant to me to come back and be the Mayor again... To Luke (Dookie, Pimp Daddy, Booty Schwag, whatever) "Hey, that's Bill Cartwright." "Yeah, I know — it's the NBA."; Chimelis blowin' up! Oh, and Luke: "You're fired!"

Jorma Kansanen — Very simply said, I got real misty at the A-10 women's soccer banquet in Cincinnati this season, but in a good way. I might sound like a chauvinist here, and truthfully, I'm not, so you have to work with me for a minute. As I walked into the banquet hall, me and a grand total of about a dozen men were in the midst of over 90 women from the age of 18 to 23.

It was amazing. It was one of the experiences of my life that truly made me feel like a man. And to top it off, I looked good — wearing my silk waistcoat from Covent Garden in London, with the eyes of dozens before me. Nice.

But my top misty-eyed memory was not just an event, but a person. She's going to kill (and disembowel) me for this, but as the years go by, I'll always get misty when I think of a person I feel honored to call a friend — Erica Iverson. She was a monster on the pitch for UMass, but off the pitch, I was able to catch glimpses of the special person she is.

One example was after scoring the game-tying and setting up the game-winning goals against Harvard in the NCAAs last year, one of the first things she did was go to one of the coach's disabled friends to see how he was doing, and thank him for coming to the game. Class, class, class.

I never wrote a feature on her because she didn't want the spotlight, so now here she is, people — and I'm dead.

And yeah, the rest of the seniors were cool, too.

But, most of all, my misty-eyed memory is four years of writing for Collegian Sports will come to an end with the hockey season. For the people who believed in my writing ability, and my belief to move beyond normal styles of rhetoric, thanks are not enough. For those who never gave me a chance, even when I proved beyond a shadow of doubt

Turn to MEMERIES, page 6

KENNETH W P. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

Don't say we never got you anything...

Happy Holidays on behalf of the entire Collegian from the Sports editorial staff (l-r): Jorma Kansanen, Fred Hurlbrink, Jr., Sports Editor Luke Meredith and Kathleen Ralls.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVIII Issue 1 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Wednesday, January 28, 1998

Briefs

New faculty

New University of Massachusetts Arabic studies professor Tayeb El-Hibri is one of the leaders of an expanded Five College cooperative program in Middle Eastern Studies. As both head of the Middle Eastern studies program at UMass and director of the Five College Arabic program, he is also helping to expand the definition of Middle Eastern studies to fit the demands of a changing world. As part of the Five College program, the UMass Middle Eastern studies program now offers a unique blend of course in the history politics, art and culture of region.

Grants and awards

The University of Massachusetts department of Germanic languages and literatures has received a $160,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH). The grant will help to fund a four-week summer program at the University in which 25 high school teachers and administrators from across the country will explore the changing cultural landscape of unified Germany. The grant is among the largest ever received from the NEH by the University and will allow the department to continue outreach efforts to secondary schools which it began last year.

Douglas W. Howie Jr., a first-year graduate student in the polymer science and engineering department at the University of Massachusetts, has received a $10,000 fellowship from Amoco Polymers Inc., of Alpharetta, Ga. The grant was awarded earlier this month my Michael Michno and Glenn Desio of Amoco. Richard J. Farris, head of the polymer science and engineering department, made the announcement. Howie, a native of Terrell, Texas , earned his bachelor's and master's degrees at MIT. His research interest is in the design and application of polymer gels. In addition to supporting graduate students through fellowships, Amoco Polymers also sponsors research projects within the polymer science and engineering department.

On Friday, Jan. 16, community groups and labor leaders presented an award to Congressman John Olver at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst in recognition of his opposition to Fast Track. The award was presented by Michael Wolff, of the Pioneer Valley Alliance for Democracy, Richard Brown, from the AFL-CIO and president of the Pioneer Valley Central Labor Council, Alice Swift from CPPAX (Citizens for Participation in Political Action), Marla-Cristina Cuerda of Western Mass. jobs with Justice, Greg Speeter of the National Priorities Project, and Elissa Braunstein from the Center for Popular Economics at UMass.

George A. Marston, the first dean of the College of Engineering at the University of Massachusetts, has received the Chancellor's Medal, the highest honor given by the campus in recognition of service to the University. Marston, 89, was cited for his devotion, loyalty, and exceptional service to UMass as well as for his "statesman like demeanor."

The Harvard Foundation for Intercultural and Race Relations has honored Charlena M Seymour, Dean of the University of Massachusetts Graduate School and President of the AMerican Speech-Language-Hearing Association (ASHA) for her notable contribution and leadership in the field of communication disorders. Dr. Seymour was presented with a medallion in a ceremony at the Harvard Faculty Club in Cambridge by S. Allen Counter, Director of the Harvard Foundation.

J. Kevin Nugent has been awarded honorary membership status in Sigma Theta Tau International Honor Society Nursing. Nugent was presented with the award at the 34th Biennial Conventions in Indianapolis, In. on Dec. 3.

Turn to BRIEFS, page 8

INSIDE
News .....page 1
Arts & Living .....section A
Editorial .....page 4
Sports .....section 5

ON THE INTERNET
www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Recent proposal asks professor evaluations be available to students

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

Students who want to know about a professor's teaching style before registering for a class may soon be able to do so if junior Eleanor Court, student representative to the Board of Higher Education, is successful in her campaign.

On behalf of all students attending public universities in Massachusetts, Court proposed on Jan. 13 that state colleges and universities create standardized student-written evaluations of professors and make them available to the student body.

We are "doing this to give students background on a professor to help them make better choices," Court said.

The proposed evaluations, according to Court, would be made public at the end of each semester and would supplement the current evaluations that each department develops independently.

The new evaluations would not replace the current ones which are confidential due to a 1983 court decision in Hampshire County which ruled that professor evaluations could not be made public because they are part of personnel files.

Since the proposed evaluations would be separate, it would not violate the 1983 ruling, Court said.

However, Stephen Gorrie, president of the Massachusetts Teachers Association, the union representing professors at public universities, feels it could inadvertently become a personal issue.

"Whether it is intentional or not, evaluations that are made public could get into personal issues. It could become a privacy issue," Gorrie said. "Something inadvertently could get into personality and affect a personnel decision. You'd be surprised how easily it could happen."

If the Board votes in favor of the proposal it would have to be approved by University President William Bulger and the collective bargaining committee.

The committee is comprised of student representatives, union and faculty members.

"Collective bargaining can take a year to negotiate a contract so it's hard to say when it would take effect but it could be next fall," Court said.

If the proposal is adopted it would have different questions than the evaluation forms currently use.

The formulation of the questions would be decided through the collective bargaining committee. The members would participate in writing the questions on the evaluation form.

Turn to EVALUATION page 10

Amherst may condemn Hobart Lane apartments

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

A proposal has been introduced to condemn Hobart Lane as a public nuisance.

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Frustrated by the irresponsibility of management and the tenants at Gilreath Manor Condominium Apartments on Hobart Lane, Vince O'Connor, a member of the Amherst town meeting, has filed an article to have the apartments condemned as a public nuisance.

In addition O'Connor is asking the Amherst Select Board to acquire the 14-unit complex through eminent domain and then sell it to a non-profit agency making it available to low-and-moderate-income families.

"The small apartment complex has a history of outrageous behavior and the landlord is not able to control it. It has become a public nuisance," O'Connor said.

Hobart Hoedown, alcohol abuse and unruly behavior

"The problem is not just a one year event, it is about a pattern that has been formed for a number of years. It is poor management by the landlords and the inability of the town of Amherst to resolve the problem," O'Connor said, referring to "Hobart Hoedown," a party that traditionally occurs at the end of spring semester.

Last year, the annual "Hobart Hoedown" attracted over 2,000 students, most of whom attend the University of Massachusetts. Forty-five students were arrested and several people were injured during a mud fight.

Turn to HOBART, page 7

UMass student, 24, dies in Mill Valley

University of Massachusetts senior, John E. Orsak Jr., 24, of 170 East Hadley Rd., died Sunday Jan. 11 at Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.

Police and the Amherst Fire Department ambulance responded to a residence in Mill Valley Apartments at 1:05 a.m. Upon arrival, they found Orsak, a sports management major, unresponsive. Attempts to revive him by medical personnel were unsuccessful.

Foul play is not suspected in Orsak's death, according to Amherst police who are following up on the investigation along with State Police investigators assigned to District Attorney Elizabeth Scheibel's office.

An autopsy was performed on Monday Jan. 12 at the Medical examiner's office in Holyoke, however the cause of death and toxicology reports are "still incomplete" according to a spokesman for the office.

Orsak was born in Dallas, Texas, July 28, 1973. He was currenly working as an intern with Legg Mason Wood Walker Inc., a brokerage firm in Hartford Conn., where he planned to continue after graduation in May from the University.

While at UMass, Orsak played football for two years before he suffered a serious injury.

He is survived by his father John Orsak Sr. of Woodstock Valley, Conn. his mother Donna DePasquale of Ocala, Fla., two sisters Catherine McMahon of Mesa, Ariz., and Laura Underwood of Fayetteville, Ark., a brother Steven Orsak, of Roswell Military Institute, N.M., his maternal grandmother Catherine DePasquale of Ocala, Fla., and his Paternal grandmother Margaret Holman of Alvin, Texas.

A Mass of Christian Burial was held on Friday, Jan. 16 at Our Lady of the Lake Church in Sparta, N.J. Cremation followed the service.

—Leigh Faulkner

SOM's George Spiro dead at 49

George W. Spiro, 49, associate dean for Undergraduate Matters in the School of Management at the University of Massachusetts died Dec. 16 of cancer at Cooley Dickinson Hospital, Northampton.

Spiro worked at UMass-Boston before coming to the Amherst campus in 1981 as an associate professor and Chairman of the Department of Management. He became a full professor in 1985 and acting dean until 1987.

Spiro was a major influence in the SOM department. He influenced efforts to improve academic support services and also helped develop SOM's minority Management Education Program.

Born on Dec. 30, 1947 in New York City, Spiro graduated from Patchogue High School in N.Y. and earned his bachelor of science degree in personnel and industrial relations from Syracuse University in 1969. He earned a master degree in science labor studies from UMass in 1971. Later, he returned to Syracuse University where he earned a Juris Doctor in law with a labor relations concentration.

Spiro began his teaching career in 1974 at Kent Sate University in Kent, Ohio.

He was a resident of Amherst and is survived by his wife Lucia (Diano) Spiro, son Jeffrey Spiro, his parents Julius and Gertrude (Bauer) Spiro of Patchogue, a sister Rochelle (Spiro) Hyatt, of Bayport, Long Island, N.Y.

Funeral services were held on Thursday, Dec. 18 at Temple Israel in Greenfield. He was buried at Wildwood Cemetery in Amherst.

Donations may be made to the American Cancer Society. —Leigh Faulkner

UMass first to clone calves

COURTESY UMASS NEWS OFFICE

George and Charlie (l-r) are the first two genetically cloned calves.

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Staff

Two scientists from the University of Massachusetts shocked the scientific community last Tuesday, Jan. 20, when they announced the first successful cloning of two genetically engineered calves.

The two calves, George and Charlie, who are not identical, were born at a ranch in Texas in early January.

George is about 20 pounds heavier than Charlie and they have different markings on their bodies.

"They're genetically identical but that does not mean that they're going to look identical," said Dr. Steven Stice, Chief Scientific Officer of Advanced Cell Technology (ACT) Inc., and a staff member of the UMass Veterinary and Animal Science department, who directed the project.

"We're surprised with how identical they look," said UMass professor Dr. James Robl of the Veterinary and Animal Science department.

Stice and Robl, who led the cloning project are co- founders of ACT.

ACT is a biotechnology company in Worcester with close ties to the University. Robl and Stice developed the combination of cloning and genetic engineering, or transgenics, on campus in Paige Laboratory.

"All the embryo work was done here [on campus]," Stice said.

This was not the first time that Robl and Stice have cloned an animal. In 1987 they cloned a rabbit on campus.

The newborn cows were engineered to have a "marker" gene, which confirms that they are the product of

Turn to CLONE, page2

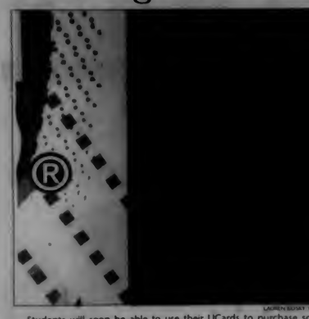
DuBois honored in new postage stamp

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

The W.E.B. Du Bois stamp was unveiled at the Du Bois library by the United States postal service.



By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

The new W.E.B. DuBois postage stamp was unveiled earlier this month at a ceremony in the W.E.B. DuBois Library at the University of Massachusetts.

In its only stop in New England, the United States Postal Service's "Celebrate the Century" series was launched at Ellis Island and will consist of 30 ceremonies introducing 30 new stamps depicting such

Turn to STAMP, page 8

Vending machines enhanced for UCard

Students will soon be able to use their UCards to purchase soda and snacks from vending machines on campus.

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

By the end of this semester, students will be able to make almost all of their vending and Coca-Cola machine purchases by using their debit card accounts on their UCards.

Currently, debit card readers are being installed on Coke machines and vending machines. Card reader installations will begin later this spring.

Bartlett Hall and Whitmore Administration Building already have Coke machines that have functioning card readers. The Graduate Research Center, Conte, Campus Center/Student Union, School of Management, have the card readers installed, but have not been connected to the mainframe computer.

Following the connection of those buildings, residence halls are next on the agenda according to Linda Overing, University of Massachusetts Card office manager. Coolidge, John Adams, Washington, Brown, Cashin, and Gorman Residence Halls are among the first to have Coke machines connected to the debit card system.

"We are working with Coke first, then later on in the Spring we will begin connecting the snack vending machines," Overing said.

By allowing students to make purchases on vending machines with their debit card, the amount of money that a student needs to carry may decrease. However, there are concerns are rising about the theft of ID's with debit accounts.

Overing explained that the debit card system is capable of shutting down if several purchases are made within an allotted time period, however she is weary about allowing the system to do that.

"Theft is not an issue at the moment and our preference would not be to connect that option," Overing said.

To open a debit account, students must go to the ID office in Franklin Dining Common. A minimum of $10 is required to open an account but a minimum balance is not required once the account is opened.

Students can add money to their card by going to the Campus Center Cashier, Bursar's office, or an unmanned machine in the Campus center.

Last semester 3,400 students opened debit accounts.

Southwest, Orchard Hill now locked 24-hrs

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

In an effort to increase campus safety, Southwest and Orchard Hill Residential Area residence halls are now locked 24-hours a day. Residents living in the halls must have their I.D cards to gain access to their building.

By spring of 1999, the remaining three residential areas — Central, Northeast and Sylvan — will be joining the 24-hour lock down program.

Residential Life employees recognize that many students may see the 24-hour lock down as an inconvenience instead of safety precaution.

"We have been trying to anticipate problems. While students may be upset with the inconvenience problems, we have been trying to focus on the security aspect," said Hiza N. Hiza, Assistant Director of Residence Life.

University of Massachusetts Chief of Police John Luippold said in a December interview, "this system will minimize the opportunity for individuals to wander around residence halls for the purpose of stealing, soliciting and peeping."

In addition, Hiza said property damage should also decrease due to the 24-hour lock down of the residence areas.

"A majority of damage that is done in residence halls is not done by the residents but by people who don't belong there and cannot be accounted for," Hiza said.

Anticipating that most of the problems residents will face is students being locked out of a building or forgetting their I.D.'s, Hiza said, "We are putting out a lot of information on the Housing Cable Service Network and flyers to remind students to carry their I.D.'s with them at all times."

Despite the entrance doors being locked 24 hours a day, Hiza said the program won't be effective if residents choose not to cooperate by propping doors and ignoring housing policies.

"It doesn't matter what security system is operating, if people in the building choose to compromise it then it isn't going to work," Hiza said.

"Don't let others tailgate when you walk into a building, if you don't know the person behind you don't let them in," he said.

Students who have problems gaining access to their building because of a malfunctioning I.D. should go to the I.D. office in Franklin Dining Common or to their Residence Hall Cluster Office.

UMass professor awarded NSF grant in engineering field

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts engineering professor Robert Gao has received the CAREER award grant from the National Science Foundation (NSF) totaling $310,000 to continue his research on "smart bearings" which could prevent airplane, helicopter and car accidents.

Bearings are doughnut-shaped mechanical components widely used to provide support for pipe-shaped mechanical parts that rotate, such as the rotor on a helicopter. A microsensor embedded in the bearing sends a signal to a remote computer by sounding an alarm if a problem occurs.

"This integrated diagnostic technique enables continuous monitoring of the machinery's condition, and the prevention of catastrophic failures," Gao said.

The four-year CAREER award is a prestigious grant given in support of young university faculty members. This specific grant will help Gao pursue his work in these microsensors.

"We consider this to be quite a measure of the quality of [Gao's] work, being recognized at the highest level," said Thomas Blake, dean of the College of Engineering.

The award's educational component consists of Gao teaching students about the "multidisciplinary field of mechatronics," an integrated design approach involving mechanical engineering, electronics and microcomputers.

"The industry is in increasing need of engineers who have a broader and multidisciplinary background, who think critically, and communicate effectively in a team environment. These qualities make them more employable when they are in the job market," Gao said.

Gao's other research has included the invention of "smart" canes which assist those who are visually impaired. The development of this cane included an embedded ultrasonic microsensors that warn users with a voice signal when an overhanging object is blocking the way.

Gao had to custom-design and miniaturize the sensors so that they could fit into canes half an inch thick.

"Miniaturization is a technology that not only provides insight into manufacturing processes, but also can help create a better living environment," Gao said.

A growing number of inventions are being targeted towards making machines "smarter" than they currently are, according to Blake, who cites auto focus camcorders as one example.

"This is an area that is important... we're very pleased that [Gao] got this award," Blake said.

Gao earned his Ph.D. at the Technical University of Berlin, Germany and joined the UMass faculty in 1995.

clone

continued from page 1

genetic engineering. This new process will enable scientists to engineer the traits of certain livestock and to make unlimited clones of the animals with the new trait.

The scientists, who have been working on the project for four years, said they had been in contact with scientists in Scotland who cloned three sheep, Dolly, Molly and Polly, earlier this year.

However, Stice explained the cloning process of the two projects are different because sheep and cattle have "different systems."

"We had been working on a parallel track," he said.

The scientists have cloned these calves with a commercially viable product already in mind. The scientists said they are already working to genetically engineer cloned cows who have a gene to produce human serum albumin, a protein, in their milk.

This product is taken from pooled human plasma, but taking it from cow's milk may be a safer and more efficient method. ACT had an agreement last year with Genzyme Transgenics Corp. to produce human serum albumin.

The scientists said they are currently working on cloning pigs, which would be useful for transplanting organs, by making transplants safer and preventing organs from being rejected by the body.

VOTE YES FEB. 3rd
A VIABLE DOWNTOWN MAKES A BETTER AMHERST
YES TO PARKING COMPROMISE!
Polls open 2pm - 8pm
Students Vote in Hamden Dining Hall
Political Advertisement paid for by Larry Kelley, West St. Amherst

AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Lowest Monthly + Start Rates
Lifecycle • Nautilus • Aerobics Hoist • Free Free Weights
www.amherstathletic.com
S. Amherst 256-0080

STUDENT accounts welcomed
UMass Five College Federal Credit Union
UMASS CAMPUS EXPRESS BRANCH
EXPRESS SERVICES AVAILABLE:
~ FREE CHECK CASHING ($500 maximum)
~ DEPOSITS (no rolled coin)
~ WITHDRAWALS ($500 cash maximum)
~ TRANSFERS
~ LOAN AND VISA PAYMENTS
HOURS
Monday - Thursday
9:30 am - 3:30 pm
Friday
9:30 am - 4:00 pm
LOCATED IN THE STUDENT UNION
(in the old Post Office space)
Equal Housing Lender NCUA National Credit Union Administration A U.S. Government Agency

Southwest peeping tom found guilty

A 28-year-old Chicopee man who was found guilty of accosting two University of Massachusetts women after he entered two residence halls was sentenced in Northampton District Court on Monday, Dec. 22.

Brian T. Gibbons was sentenced to six months in the Hampshire County House of Correction, suspended for three years with probation and ordered to receive counseling for annoying a person of the opposite sex.

Gibbons was also found guilty of disorderly conduct in which he was sentenced to six months in the Hampshire House of Corrections, suspended for three years with probation and ordered to stay away from college campuses unless enrolled.

On Sept. 27, according to court documents, Gibbons "entered Patterson Dorm and entered the women's bathroom. While inside he intentionally looked under a shower stall and viewed a women taking a shower, thus placing her in alarm and fear."

The documents also stated that on the same day Gibbons entered Washington Residence Hall and "knocked and entered a female's dorm room. While inside he insisted the join him in sexual-related activities, thus annoying her and placing her in alarm and fear."

Gibbons is not a UMass student.

Public Safety officials encourage all campus residents to keep their doors locked at all times. All suspicious people and activities should be reported immediately to Public Safety at 545-2121.

— Leigh Faulkner

Campus Police Log

Accident— Leaving the Scene
Dec. 17
An Individual reported damage to a vehicle which may have been involved in a past hit and run accident.
Jan. 10
A vehicle was found in a ditch on the side of the road on Stadium Drive. No operator was found at the scene.

Accident — Pedestrian
Dec. 18
A pedestrian in a crosswalk on Massachusetts Avenue was struck by a vehicle. The individual was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.

Accident — Property Damage
Dec. 16
A two vehicle accident occurred on Massachusetts Avenue. One operator was issued a citation.
Dec. 17
A two-vehicle accident occurred on Clark Hill Road. No Injuries were reported.
Dec. 19
A minor two-vehicle accident occurred in parking lot 22 on University Drive.
A truck struck a vehicle and left the scene on Kennedy Road. The offending operator was identified and cited.
Dec. 23
A vehicle struck a piece of curbing in the roadway on Chancellor's Drive.
Jan. 8
A minor two-vehicle accident occurred Furcolo Rd.
Jan. 10
A minor two-vehicle accident occurred in parking lot 25 on Commonwealth Avenue.

Annoying Behavior
Dec. 16
William S. Elsasser, 49, was arrested for trespassing in Herter Hall.
An individual from Bartlett Hall reported receiving threatening letters.
Dec. 20
Intoxicated individuals were reported on the third floor of Emerson Residence Hall.
Dec. 22
An employee received a needle puncture wound while cleaning a bathroom in Cashin Residence Hall. The needle was glued to a bottle.
Dec. 23
A threatening letter was sent to a faculty member in Holdsworth Hall.
Jan. 6
A small child on a bicycle struck a rope tied between a tree and a light post at North Village Apartments.
Children were playing with emergency help phones at North Village Apartments.
Jan. 8
An individual reported receiving threats.
Jan. 15
An individual disturbing the peace in an office was escorted out the Whitmore Administration Building.

Area/Building Check
Dec. 19
Kit Hay Lee, 21, of 23 Priscilla Rd., Brighton, Anthony G. Soohoo, 21, of 28 Van Wart Path, Newton, Ricky Chan, 19, of 27 Long Ave., Boston, and Laura P. Mok, 19, of 38 Murray Hill Rd., Scarsdale, NY were arrested on Sylvan Drive for malicious destruction of property greater than $250.

Assist Agency
Dec. 26
Housing Services was notified of low temperature alarm in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.
Jan. 8
Graydon L. Destromp, 29, of 13 Pine Brook Cir., Granby, was arrested at the Worcester Dining Common on a warrant.

B&E/Burglary
Dec. 15
Two paintings were reported stolen from a conference room in Johnson Residence Hall. Estimated value $300.
Dec. 16
A vending machine in Gorman Residence was broken into.
An apartment at North Village was broken into.
A battery was stolen from vehicle in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.
An individual from Greenough Residence Hall reported keys and a credit card stolen.
An individual from John Quincy Adams Residence Hall reported his room broken into. A stereo and CD's were reported stolen.
Dec. 17
An office was broken into at Worcester Dining Common. Entry in the building was made through a broken window.
A resident of Patterson Residence Hall reported that his room was broken into and personal items were stolen.
Dec. 19
A radio and sunglasses were reported stolen from a vehicle parked in the Campus Center Garage.
A vehicle was broken into in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive. Interior damage was reported.

Drug Law Offenses
Dec. 17
Keith Dacosta, 19, of 19 Beechwood Dr., Acushnet, was arrested in John Adams Residence Hall for possession of a Class D drug.
Dec. 18
Kathryn L. Martin, 19, of 6 Herrek Pl., Wilbraham, was arrested in Kennedy Restdence Hall with a warrant.

Family Offenses, Domestics, Fraud
Dec. 30
An Individual attempted to pass a counterfeit $50 bill at the Franklin Munchie store.

Health and Safety Hazard
Jan. 1
A water leak in the ceiling of Worcester Dining Common was reported to Environmental Health ad Safety.
Jan. 12
Environmental Health and Safety was called to check on a nitrogen tank in the Conte Building.
Jan. 14
A light ballast was smoking in Thompson Hall.

Larceny
Dec. 16
An individual from Brett Residence Hall reported $200 in cash stolen from room.
A wallet was reported stolen from Thoreau Residence Hall. Estimated value $250.
An individual reported personal items stolen from room in Kennedy Residence Hall.
A resident reported a wallet from Washington Residence Hall.
A resident reported a credit card stolen from a room in Washington Residence Hall.
An individual reported keys stolen from Van Meter Residence Hall.
Dec. 17
A self-contained breathing apparatus was reported stolen from a laboratory cabinet in Lederle research. estimated value $2300.
Dec. 18
An individual reported luggage stolen from his room in Gorman Residence Hall.
Dec. 19
A telephone was reported stolen from the New Africa House.
Classrooms in Lederle Research tower were entered and 10 computers were stolen. Estimated value $20,000.
Dec. 20
A bike rack was reported stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.
A computer was reported stolen from Bartlett Hall.
Dec. 22
A telephone was reported stolen from the Whitmore Administration Building. Estimated value $125.
Dec. 30
A license plate was reported stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.
Jan. 5
A telephone was reported stolen from the School of Management.
Jan. 7
An individual from John Q. Adams Residence Hall reported fraudulent use of his bank account.
Jan. 9
A laptop was reported stolen from Whitmore Administration Building. Estimated value $2500.
Jan. 12
A generator was reported stolen from Stockbridge Hall roof last November. Estimated value $1100.
Jan. 14
A piece of sheet metal was reported stolen from Marshall Hall.

Recovered Stolen motor Vehicle
Jan. 8
A vehicle reported stolen from UMass was recovered by the New York Port Authority Police Department.
Jan. 15
A vehicle that was reported stolen from a UMass parking lot was recovered in Bennington. VT.

Missing Person
Dec. 17
A individual from Webster Residence Hall reported roommate missing since Dec. 15.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Jan. 11
A peeping tom was reported by an individual from North Village Apartments.

Traffic Stop
Dec. 29
Daryn A. Hill, 24, of 990 N. Pleasant St., Amherst was arrested on N. Pleasant St., for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license.
Jan. 2
Mutassem Abu Diak, 24, of 23 Puffton Village, Amherst, was arrested on Campus Center Way for operating a motor vehicle without a inspection sticker, a suspended license and a license plate violation.
Jan. 14
Faisal S. Ansari, 21, of 222 Cliffside Apartments, Sunderland, was arrested on University Drive for operating a motor vehicle without a inspection sticker a suspended license, and a license plate violation.
Jan. 15
Joshua R. Campora, 24, of 6 Winston Ct., Amherst, was arrested on Commonwealth Avenue for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license.

Vandalism
Dec. 17
A rock was thrown through a window of a vehicle in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.
A handicap stall in the Conte Building was damaged.
Racist graffiti was written on bathroom walls in Washington Residence Hall.
Dec. 18
A vehicle in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive was damaged.
A vehicle in parking lot 11 in Stadium Drive was broken into. A CD player was stolen.
Dec. 20
A chair thrown from the 8th floor of Brown Residence Hall was destroyed. Estimated value $230.
A window in the doorway of the Textbook Annex was broken.
Dec. 30
A window was smashed near the Bluewall in the Campus Center.
Jan. 5
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 29 on Chancellor's Drive.

Warrant Service
Dec. 17
Mircha King, 19, of 208 Fearing St., Amherst was arrested in John Adams Residence Hall on a warrant.

Weapon Violations
Dec. 19
UMass Police received a report of an individual entering John Adams Residence Hall with an observed handgun. Upon investigation, no weapon was found.

THE COLLEGIAN IN CYBER SPACE CHECK IT OUT AT:
WWW.UMASS.EDU/RSO/COLEGIAN

AEROBICS
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
* Classes Daily
* Certified Instructors
* Suspended Wood Floor
* Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst. 256-0050

CopyCat PRINT SHOP
We Appreciate Your Business
37 East Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
Phone (413) 549-2854
Fax (413) 549-4418

CIGARETTE ADVERTISEMENTS EMPHASIZE YOUTHFUL VIGOR, SEXUAL ATTRACTION, AND INDEPENDENCE

"but hey looks aren't everything."
Tobacco Free Hampshire County Coalition
CDC
For more information call the GazetteLine at 584-3200 ext.1311

The Daily Collegeian: It will point you in the right direction!

Someone misses you.
1-800-COLLECT®

Letter from the editors

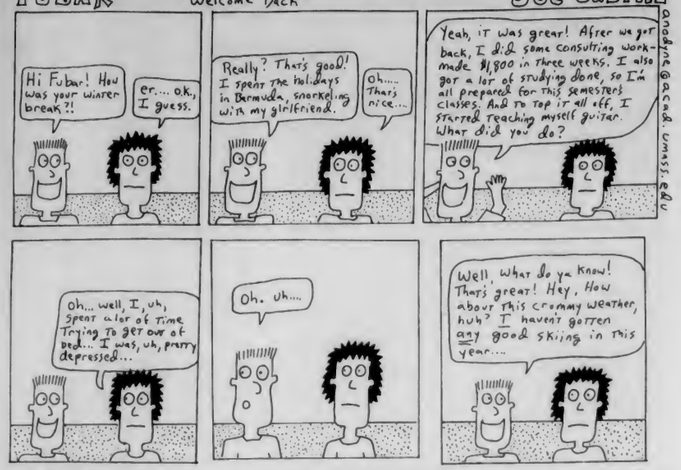
Welcome back, everyone. We hope you had a relaxing and rejuvenating vacation.

There have been a few changes at the Editorial/Opinion page — Tamar Carroll joins last semester's editor, Daniel Bodah, as co-editor. Elsa Allen remains as our editorial associate. We intend to provide the University of Massachusetts community with a forum that expresses diverse views on current events, University life, and other relevant topics.

We need your participation to accomplish this. We welcome commentaries and editorials from all members of the community. As the undergraduate newspaper of the UMass, our first priority is publishing UMass undergraduates. However, we also recognize the importance of expressing the viewpoints of other members of the community — graduate students, staff, faculty, alumni, local residents and Five College students.

We have several features in mind for this semester. We will continue to print Point/Counterpoints, twice every month. We're always happy to print editorial cartoons from student artists, and hope to bring you more of them this spring. We are recruiting guest columnists from Smith, Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Hampshire Colleges for a rotating weekly Five College Commentary.

You will also be seeing more policy editorials. These unsigned editorials express the official opinion of the Collegian. They are written by the five members of the Collegian Editorial Board: Editor in Chief Chris Stamm, the Editorial/Opinion page editors, and one representative each from the Collegian business office, newsroom, and production department. The Editorial Board welcomes your suggestions for topics of discussion.



As always, we thrive on your input. We're easy to reach: phone 545-1491; fax 545-1592; e-mail "letters@oitvma.oit.umass.edu"; or just come by our offices in 113 Campus Center basement. You can also mail us: Editorial/Opinion editor, Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst, MA 01003

Sincerely,

Daniel O. Bodah

Tamar W. Carroll

FuBAR "Welcome Back" Joe Gabrial jgabrial@acad.umass.edu

Would you like fries with that?

College is great. A chance to make new friends. Pick up some new hobbies. And, so we're told, a chance for intellectual growth.

When I first came to school I had this idealistic notion that I'd be introduced to the philosophical foundations of our society. I believed that during these four years, I'd acquire the knowledge necessary to become a responsible and active citizen. And I guess I'm beginning to. But not by reading De Toqueville or Aristotle. No, I'm learning something far more important: how to be a consumer.

Until now, my consuming endeavors have been pretty feeble. As a mere tyke it was He-Man figures and Cocoa Puffs. When I got a little older, bikes and the right clothes were on the scene. In junior high it was Mennen Sport Scent (I'm still a loyal customer — it pays to get us when we're young.). In high school: CDs, movies, and of course more of the right clothes.

Gerrit DeYoung

But now I've hit college, the buying big leagues. No more $20 action figures or $10 pizzas. We're talking plane tickets, $100 phone bills, $1000 credit lines, cars, apartments, computers — we've become pledges of the biggest frat in the world: shoppers.

And the University of Massachusetts is preparing us well for full membership. Corporate America knows this campus better than I do. We're exclusively provided with AT&T long distance. Coca Cola, Inc. is now the only company allowed to sell beverages from vending machines on campus. I'm bombarded daily with offers from Sprint and Visa. Advertisements for cheap film development from Kodak and spring break drink-athons from various travel agencies hang in just about every one of my lecture halls. Even Christmas and New Year's were co-opted. Forget about spending the holidays with friends and family. Check out Molson's Sun & Snow Fest instead.

I'm starting to doubt that being a student at UMass has anything to do with becoming educated. Sure, we acquire a certain amount of knowledge here. Some of us even develop skills that will one day be directly useful at our jobs. But still, I don't know if we can really call ourselves students. I think of myself more as one of UMass's investments. They've worked out a killer deal for themselves: they have us for four years, during which they can sell our considerable buying power off to the highest bidder. The Coke deal is a case in point. I don't think someone in the business office is taking sides in the cola wars; Coke gave the University a quarter of a million dollars for exclusive selling rights.

The kicker is, they make money off of us after we're gone, too. As soon as we join the corporate world — which is conveniently facilitated by on-campus interviews — we're hit up by the annual alumni fund. Having struck it rich at GE or Microsoft or wherever, we should feel we have to give back to our University.

With Chairman of the Board of Higher Education James Carlin's booting and hollering about UMass's need to become more like a business, I feel like corporatization is cutting too close to my education. If UMass is going to become a business, it's got to have a product to sell. As long as we pay our tuition, and do a modicum of work, we'll be the proud new owners of a UMass diploma. The professors would be the real losers.

Forced to play slicked-out salesmen and mouthpieces for the administration and its assorted corporate interests (which we've already seen are well-established on campus), if they refuse to get on board the administration could be quick to offer them a non-optional invitation to find employment elsewhere. Tenure stands in their way right now, but they're trying to make sure that doesn't continue for much longer.

Call me idealistic, but I don't want my education sold to me. And I don't want to be viewed by the administration or any of its corporate cohorts as nothing more than another potential market. Until the golden arches of McMass are erected, I want to actually earn my education — and have it provided by professors who don't have to fear the next round of downsizing.

But a diploma from McMass could be worth something. It'd probably come with a toy from the latest Disney movie, fries — and a Coke.

Gerrit DeYoung is a UMass student.

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words long, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst, MA 01003; by e-mail to letters@oitvma.oit.umass.edu

The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity and style.

Letters Letters Letters

Save on general books EVERY DAY at UStore's NEW Book Department

New York Times Bestseller
Hardcover
Save 35%

New York Times Bestseller
Paperback
Save 25%

All other
Hardcover Fiction
20% Off

Any other book*
10% Off

THE University Store
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
University Store
On the UMass Campus Center Concourse
Hours:
M-F 9 to 5
Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545-2619
We accept AMEX, Discover, Mastercard, Visa, and the UCard!

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

The off season
The bright afternoon sun over the empty lower Boyden fields.

Ambassadorship for Davidow?

Alum awaits State Department nomination to Mexican post

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Jeffrey Davidow, Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American affairs and member of the University of Massachusetts class of 1965, is expected to be nominated to the post of United States ambassador to Mexico, although a representative from the U.S. State Department would not confirm it.

Davidow was named in an "action memo" sent to President Clinton for final approval, and is a career diplomat who formerly served as ambassador to Zambia and Venezuela.

White House spokesman Mike McCurry could not be reached for comment, but made remarks regarding President Clinton's choice for the position in a press release.

"The president's been interested in finding someone who would ably represent the interests of the United States government at a time in which we are building a very strong partnership with the government of Mexico and, of course, Assistant Secretary Davidow has been involved in exactly that," McCurry said.

Davidow, who grew up in Boston, and attended the University of Massachusetts for his undergraduate education has repeatedly cleared Senate confirmation proceedings during a 27-year career in the foreign service.

Last October Davidow gave the inaugural Leonard J. Horwitz Memorial Lecture on Latin America at UMass. His talk was titled "Preparing the Americas for the 21st Century" and was sponsored by the UMass Latin American Studies Program and the department of political science.

The United States has not had an ambassador to Mexico since former Oklahoma Representative Jim Jones left the post this past June. Clinton failed to gain confirmation by the Senate for his nomination of former Massachusetts Governor William Weld when Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Jesse Helms (R-North Carolina) blocked Senate action on the appointment. Weld later withdrew his candidacy for the post.

NEW AEROBICS NEW
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst, 256-0080

UMass Ticket Office

UMASS STUDENT TICKET PICK-UP SCHEDULE
7:00 AM - 3:00 PM - Curry Hicks Cage

PICK - UP DATE	SPORT	DATE OF GAME/OPPONENT
Tues. Jan. 27, 1998	HOCKEY	JAN. 30 VS. PROVIDENCE
	(M)BASKETBALL	FEB. 1 VS. DAYTON
	(M)BASKETBALL	FEB. 3 VS. TEMPLE
	HOCKEY	FEB. 8 VS. UMASS/Lowell
Tues. Feb. 3, 1998	(M)BASKETBALL	FEB. 14 VS. LASALLE
Tues. Feb. 10, 1998	(M)BASKETBALL	FEB. 18 VS. RHODE ISLAND
	(M)BASKETBALL	FEB. 21 VS. ST. JOSEPH'S
	HOCKEY	FEB. 21 VS. NEW HAMPSHIRE
Tues. Feb. 17, 1998	HOCKEY	FEB. 27 VS. BOSTON UNIV.
Tues. Mar. 3, 1998	HOCKEY	MAR. 7 VS. MAINE

PICK - UP & GAME DATES SUBJECT TO CHANGE.
VALID UMASS STUDENT ID CARD NEEDED TO PICK - UP TICKETS.

■ Hobart

continued from page 1

Twenty-seven police officers responded to the party.

In 1996, approximately 1,000 people attended the end of the semester party and Amherst police arrested 22 people.

According to O'Connor, "Hobart Hoedown" is not his main concern. His main concern is the "out of control situations which involve not just alcohol but improper behavior of many of the tenants throughout the year."

Lawrence Farber, the lawyer representing Gilreath Manor landlord Peter Grandonico, said O'Connor cannot attack just one place in the community because the behavior O'Connor is referring to occurs all over town.

"This is an extremely naive knee-jerking reaction for a complex problem. It is a scapegoat to blame the landlords," Farber said. "This is a community-wide problem; it is a problem of underage drinking and abuse, but it is easier to blame the landlords than problem itself."

Farber said if the apartments were taken by eminent domain, then "Hobart Hoedown" and many other problematic parties on the Lane would simply relocate to another apartment complex.

"Students need to live somewhere," Farber said.

"As long as people are allowed to distribute large amounts of alcohol to anyone willing to pay, it is going to be a problem," he added.

However, O'Connor said the issue of alcohol abuse is a "smokescreen" for Farber and Grandonico. They are not dealing with the "real issue" — the disruptive behavior through out the year that is a public nuisance.

O'Connor said he is not denying that other apartment complexes have tenants who party and abuse alcohol, but he said, "none of the tenants' behavior is as problematic and overcrowded as it is on Hobart. And it is the landlord's responsibility to see that this doesn't happen."

O'Connor said the three-bedroom apartments of Gilreath Manor encourage over crowding because they are rented to large groups of undergraduates at low prices.

Although in his written proposal O'Connor recommended selling the Hobart apartments to a non-profit organization, he said town members are willing to give Grandonico a chance to change the reputation of the apartments if he agreed to cooperate.

Who is really responsible?

"The landlord has the power to rent to families. He has the power to change the situation there. Changing the mix of tenants will resolve the problem," O'Connor said.

However, O'Connor said, if the apartment manager is not willing to comply or cooperate then town meeting members would have to vote on what action to take next.

According to O'Connor, Grandonico has until the town meeting which begins Monday, April 27 to decide what course of action he is going to take.

Through the entire controversy, the question remains who is responsible for the tenants' disruptive behavior: the landlord, the tenants or the University? All parties involved disagree.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Controversy continues between Peter Grandonico, the manager of Gilreath Manor Apartments and Vince O'Connor, a member of Amherst town meeting.

According to O'Connor it is the landlord's responsibility, and according to Farber the tenants should be held accountable. Farber also questions how much responsibility the University should claim for its students.

"The University has no responsibility in this matter, it is the landlord's responsibility," O'Connor said.

According to Farber, the problem is not with the landlord, but the problem lies in the lack of action that occurs when a party is occurring or being planned.

"The landlords have done every conceivable and legal available action to try to deal with this problem," Farber said "Action needs to be done before the party starts because there are not enough police to deal with 2,000 people at a party, that is a very serious and potentially dangerous situation."

Farber said he believes that UMass should have a policy that would affect a student's academic standing who is caught drinking underage on or off campus.

"There must be greater consequences for those who throw parties or are involved in underage drinking," he said.

Farber explained the lack of consequences for students involved in "Hobart Hoedown," which usually occurs in late April or early May, is one of the biggest reasons the party often loses control.

"There is no adverse effect because most of the students are moving out anyway. Eviction isn't a threat. The only potential consequence for students is being tracked down and force to pay for damages," he said.

Usually the landlords end up paying for the expenses of the damages themselves. According to Farber, $10,000 in damages occurred from last year's Hobart Hoedown.

One resident of Gilreath Manor, Kate Lavallee, a UMass senior English major, said most tenants are responsible for the damages that occur because of their parties.

"Everyone pitched in for grass seed after Hobart Hoedown last year," Lavallee said.

Despite all the damages that occur during the parties, residents of the Gilreath apartments voiced their disapproval of O'Connor's proposal to condemn Hobart Lane as a public nuisance.

While the tenants agree that they should be held responsible for damages done while partying, they said there are plenty of other places to find a party.

Senior Brian Tetreault said if Hobart Lane is condemned, "The parties will just get moved somewhere else. But at least it is safer here because it's in walking distance [from campus]."

Town of Amherst and police involvement

Because of the growing negative reputation of the Hobart Hoedown, Farber and Grandonico have attended meetings with the Amherst police to discuss ways to prohibit the Hoedown as well as other parties that may become out of control.

"Police don't often make arrests," O'Connor said. "They disperse the parties and wait them out."

According to O'Connor, non-student residents often call Grandonico complaining about noise and unruly behavior. They refuse to call the Amherst police themselves for fear of retaliation by party-goers.

O'Connor then explained when Grandonico calls the Amherst police, they will not respond because he is not a resident of Hobart Lane.

Grandonico could not be reached for comment.

Amherst Police and non-student residents of Hobart Lane refused to comment.

Graduate program's success spurs potential undergrad linguistic major

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

Due to an increasing interest and a strong graduate program, students at the University of Massachusetts may soon be able to major in linguistics.

Recently the UMass Board of Trustees approved a proposal to create an undergraduate linguistics major.

"It has to be approved by the Board of Higher Education this spring for it to take effect next fall," said Ellen Woolford, head of the department of linguistics.

The new major would offer a specialization in theoretical linguistics, which focuses on the nature of language and the human capacity for acquiring and processing language, Woolford said.

The creation of the linguistic major comes with growing interest in the field.

According to Woolford, there has already been two inquiries about joining the major and there is anticipation that many students in the Bachelor's Degree with Individual Concentration (BDIC) will change to the new major, Woolford said.

Currently undergraduates can only major in linguistics by combining it with another major or by creating a special concentration. While this program is adequate for some, others would prefer to concentrate on linguistics exclusively, Woolford said.

According to Woolford, there is a growing need for undergraduate linguistics majors because fields such as computer science and law have a large demand for linguistics majors. Graduate programs in linguistics increasingly expect entering students to have an undergraduate degree in linguistics, Woolford said in a press release.

"To help prepare our students, we really need to offer an undergraduate degree," she said.

The UMass graduate linguistics program was rated first in a recent National Research Council (NRC) report. The prestige of the graduate program and the diverse course offerings already available would make the major available with no additional costs.

"Since we already have an excellent graduate program, and a full range of undergraduate course offerings, we are able to establish an undergraduate major with no additional cost to the University," she said.

If passed by the Board of Higher Education, Woolford expects that students will be able to major in linguistics by next fall.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Under construction
The computer science department's new home in its beginning stages.

The Collegian photo department is looking for photographers with good shooting and developing abilities. Any interested photographers should come down to 113 Campus Center and speak to Lauren.

NEW AEROBICS NEW
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst, 256-0080

Spirit Haus
YOU HAVE TO SEE IT TO BELIEVE IT!
Largest Selection of Wine in the Area!
Over 500 Different Beers!
Largest Section of Single-malt Scotches around!
Micro Kegs In Stock
DISCOVER, VISA, MASTERCARD ACCEPTED OPEN 9am to 11pm
RT. 9 339 COLLEGE ST (413)253-5384 / TAKE I-91 TO EXIT 18 / RT. 9 east
Full Redemption Center

HAMBURGERS
HOT DOGS
CLAMS
FRIES
SHAKES
ROUTE 9 HADLEY - 585-0241
Home of 2 Burgers for 2 Bucks everyday!
PETE'S DRIVE IN
http://www.javanet.com/~mrburger/
PETE'S
▲ Dragon Fries
▲ Chicken Fingers
▲ Fried Chicken
▲ Fish Sandwiches
▲ Fish & Chips
▲ Philly Cheesesteaks
▲ Garden Burgers
▲ Turkey Burgers
▲ Sausage Grinders
▲ Curly Fries
▲ Mozzorella Sticks
▲ Onion Rings
▲ Coca Cola
▲ Snapple
▲ 26 Flavors Softserve
▲ Shakes
▲ Floats
▲ Sundaes
▲ Malts

WANT A SODA OR SNACK FROM THE VENDING MACHINE?
USE YOUR Card
UCARD VENDING IS COMING FOR SPRING 1998 AT THE:
Campus Center ™
Student Union
Lederle GRC
Conte
Bartlett
Whitmore
Herter
SOM
and selected residence halls
WITH YOUR UCARD, NO CHANGE OR BILLS NEEDED
IT TAKES JUST $10 TO OPEN A UCARD DEBIT ACCOUNT
VISIT THE UCARD OFFICE @ FRANKLIN DINING HALL
OPENING WEEK HOURS, M-TH 8:30-7, F 8:30-5
CALL 545-0197 FOR MORE INFORMATION

Workers vote to keep Local 1776

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

In a union election last week, workers at the University of Massachusetts voted overwhelmingly to keep their union, Local 1776 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME). The election was held to determine if workers wanted to retain their current local union, or form an independent association.

Local 1776 represents blue collar workers in service and trade job classifications across the Amherst campus.

By a margin of 11 to one, workers voted in favor of keeping their union affiliation with AFSCME, representing a 90 percent approval rating.

The secret ballot election was conducted by mail and votes were due back by Jan. 14. Charlotte Coates, president of Local 1776 was pleased with the outcome of the election, over 80 percent of union members voted.

"The general membership exhibited an informal vote, and it showed they are pleased with AFSCME and the job they're doing. It was a strong team effort. People worked hard to ensure that the members were informed with the truth and facts when they cast their votes," Coates said.

Vice president Francis Martin was also very pleased with the outcome.

"The whole campaign really showed the members that they already had an effective organization on campus, and I think they are more respectful of that fact now. When they evaluated what was going on, they realized they had to look no further," Martin said.

"This is what I was hopeful for. I really didn't expect [the total vote in favor of AFSCME] would be that high, but I was confident AFSCME would prevail," Coates said.

The signing of a new contract that had been ratified before the election took place was postponed until election results were received. The new contract will certify AFSCME as the exclusive bargaining agent and be sent to the governor for his signature and legislative approval. The one year extension will run until June 30, 1998, and will give workers a three percent wage increase.

LAUREN ROSSY \ COLLEGIAN

Back to work

Resident Assistant Tyanne Muto, a junior anthropology major, and Vanessa McMahon, a senior sociology major and administrative assistant, get back to work in the Van Meter/Butterfield cluster office.

■ briefs

continued from page 1

Nugent is an adjunct professor in the UMass School of Nursing and a professor of Child Development. The award celebrates those who, within their countries have achieved nation wide or international distinction and prominence for their contribution in to the advancement of nursing. Nugent is the founder and director of the Brazelton Institute at the Children's Hospital in Boston.

Five College area

Amherst College has received a three-year $365,000 grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation to help faculty make use of World Wide Web materials more effectively in their teaching. The grant will allow Amherst College to create annual seminars for 90 faculty members drawn from all departments. Beginning mid-1998, the college will begin a series of week-long summer and January intersession seminars at which faculty will be exposed to innovative classroom and laboratory uses of the Web.

Hampshire College nearly doubled its size thorough the purchase of 380 acres of land on Dec. 30. The property was purchased for $1.5 million from the Kendall Family Foundation which had generously allowed the college to use the land for the last 20 years. The land includes Hampshire's Farm Center and buildings as well some additional land on the east side of Route 116. Hampshire plans to continue using most of the land to support the Farm Center which is a working farm and an agricultural research center.

Do you have a news tip? We want to know about it. Call Leigh Faulkner, News Editor, at 545-1762

■ stamp

continued from page 1

honorees as Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, and Charlie Chaplin as well as DuBois.

The event took place in the Special Collections and Archives room on the 25th floor of the library which is home to the DuBois Papers.

The DuBois Papers, which UMass acquired in 1973, document his long career as a writer, teacher and major figure in many of this century's racial, literary, and social reform movements.

A native of Great Barrington, DuBois became the first African-American to earn a Ph.D. from Harvard University. He also founded the Niagara Movement, the precursor to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).

"We are always pleased and proud to focus on DuBois and his contributions," Director of Libraries Margo Crist said.

This stamp is the second one the U.S. Postal Service has issued honoring DuBois, the first of which was part of an earlier Black Heritage Series.

This stamp will go on sale Feb. 3, when two sheets of 15 stamps each, paying tribute to the 1900's and 1910's and include the DuBois stamp will be issued.

"We are pleased to be selected by the Postal Service as the site for this special ceremony. W.E.B. DuBois was an extraordinary thinker and spokesperson for open learning who recognized the value of new ideas. As a knowledge resource for the academic community and residents of the commonwealth, our library supports the quest for learning that he valued," Crist said.

The Postal Service's Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee decided on the subjects for the stamps representing the years 1900-1949. The topics for stamps representing 1950-1999 will be selected through public ballot.

DuBois's stepson, David G. DuBois is a visiting professor of Afro-American Studies and Journalism at UMass and could not be reached for comment.

UMass' Board of Trustees voted to name the campus library in honor of DuBois in 1994 and official dedication ceremonies were held in 1996.

LAUREN ROSSY \ COLLEGIAN

Snow angel

Bennett Prater enjoys exploring the snow covered campus.

Want to write for News?
Come see us at 113 Campus Center Basement or call 545-1762. Ask for Leigh, the News Editor.

Ski or Ride just
Bus + Lift Ticket Included
Daily Bus Leaves: UMass 9:55 am
Amherst Center 10:00 am
Arrive: Mt. Tom 10:35 am
Leave: Mt.Tom 4:30 pm
Arrive: UMass 5:10 pm
Mt. TOM Ski Area
Peter Pan

In Support of the UMass ALUMNI
Exclusively at R&P Liquors
305 West St. S. Amherst
University of Massachusetts Amherst
Old Chapel Wine
California Cabernet Sauvignon
Wines & Bottled by Hawkesbury Vineyards Expressly for your UMass Alumni Association

MDC MDC MDC MDC Collegian MDC MDC MDC MDC

AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
www.amherstathletic.com
Indoor Tennis • Racquetball • Squash
Lockers • Sauna • Jacuzzi • Aerobics
Nautilus • Free Weights
S. Amherst 253-9080

VALLEY FRAME WORKS
CONSERVATION & MUSEUM QUALITY FRAMING
Monday-Friday 9:30-5:30
Saturday till 4:30
256-0949
20% off w/ coupon & Student ID: good for 1 Framing

Join QPE Queer Peer Education Today
1, 2, or 3 credits available
Need to add a class?
Do you like to give workshops?
Are you creative and energetic?
Are you committed to educating others about health and wellness issues?
How about hosting safer sex parties?
Want to make a difference for you and your peers?
If you answered yes to any of these questions, call QPE Lauri today at 7-5252 or email lauri@educ.umass.edu
1, 2, or 3 credit independent studies are available.
Open to all 5-college students.

ANIMAL CRACKERS
AQUARIUM & PET SUPPLIES
TROPICAL FISH
PETS
LIVE + FROZEN FOOD
....and much more
Located: 44 Deerfield St / Rt.5+10, Greenfield, MA.
(413) 774 - 7348

THE CLUB
Tennis & Fitness Center
549-3638 659 Amherst Road, Sunderland
DOUBLED IN SIZE
STATE OF THE ART FITNESS & TENNIS CENTER
NEW CARDIO EQUIPMENT LOCATED ON OUR NEW BALCONIES
• Treadmills Life Stride, Star Trac, and Trotters
• Stairmasters New 4400pt's
• Recumbent Bikes by Stairmaster
• Precor EFX Crosstrainer a Cardio Workout without any weight impact on joints
• Weight Training Machine Circuits including the GRAVITRON
• Nautilus Equipment
• Complete Free Weight Area Doubled in Size! New benches & bars; New plates & weights; New lat pull down, leg press, & T-bar; New STRIVE Plate loading machines & much more!
• Let's not forget the AREA'S ONLY TREADWALL an assimilated rock climbing wall - WHAT A WORKOUT! You'll love it!
• Also introducing POWER PACING the area's only Exercise Bike Classes that are guaranteed to burn TONS of calories! Classes offered 10-15 times a week by certified Power Pacing Instructors. Pick up your schedule today!
NEW AEROBICS CLASSES INCLUDING EARLY A.M.
JOIN OUR MEMBERS CLIMB TO MT EVEREST ON THE TREADWALL!
POWER PACING PROGRAMS AVAILABLE YOUR FIRST RIDE IS FREE!

Gallery features multimedia exhibit

COURTESY UNIVERSITY GALLERY

Diana Thater's exhibit, "Electric Mind" and recent works will be on display in the University Gallery from Jan. 31 – March 13.

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Staff

Two new art exhibits are opening at the University Gallery, including a multimedia exhibit which has been touring the country from the Portland Museum of Art in Portland, Oregon.

Diane Thater is the artist who created the video projection exhibit called, "Electric Mind."

"It's loosely based on a screenplay about a chimpanzee given the mind of a girl," said Betsy Siersma, director of the gallery.

According to Siersma, the exhibition uses six projectors, three on each side facing each other which will create a panoramic view. Sometimes there will be different scenes and different colors coming from different projectors, she said.

"What you're going to see is a chimpanzee on a ranch for displaced animals," Siersma said. "When you're in this space, you're going to feel like you're in the middle of this film."

Siersma said that time is not linear in this exhibition and that sometimes the time of the projectors is different. Due to the distortion of time, the exhibit will run continuously and people may enter at any time the gallery is open to view the exhibit.

According to Siersma, Thater likes to use real space to project her exhibitions. She does not care if the images are projected on doors. However the gallery is building temporary walls to keep the light out during the exhibit.

Siersma said that she once saw Thaters work at a medieval castle in Germany. The images of the particular exhibit were being shown on the cracked walls and windows of the castle.

In addition to "Electric Mind," Thater will also have seven other single and double projectors for viewing.

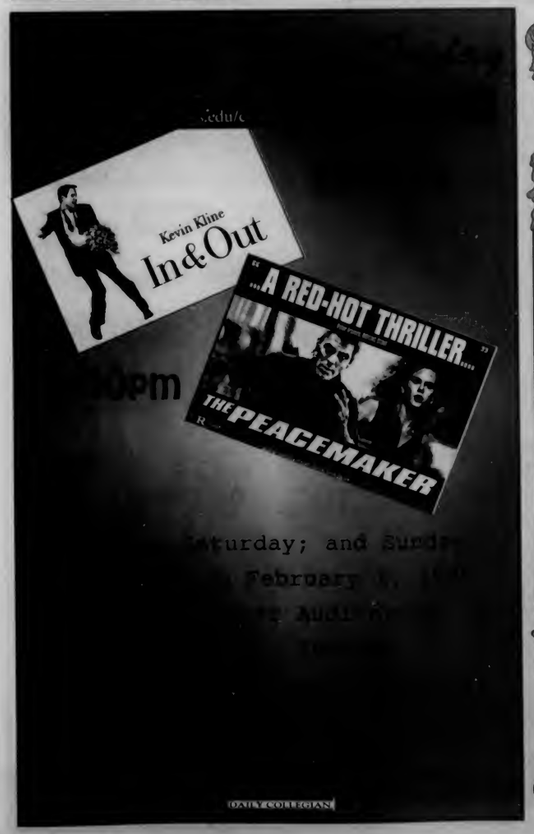
The second exhibit being shown at the gallery features local artist, Lorna Ritz, an abstract painter from South Amherst.

"Color is the most important thing to her," Siersma said. "Color creates the structure of the painting."

Siersma said that she paints abstract images of nature. She called Ritz's work "representational," and said the artist creates images using blocks of color.

Siersma said that both Thater and Ritz are similar, although they work with different media. Both artists use scenes of nature, and use strong colors.

"Electric Mind and Recent Works," by Diane Thater will run from Jan. 31- March 15. "Recent Paintings and Drawings," by Lorna Ritz will run from Jan. 31-May 7.



Both exhibitions will begin with an opening reception which will be held on Friday, Jan. 30, 5-7 p.m. The University Gallery is open Tuesday through Friday 11a.m.- 4:30 p.m., and weekends from 2-5 p.m.

The Collegian is currently accepting applications for the following editorial positions:
Production Assistants
Copy Editors
Columnists
Cartoonists
Applications for students with experience in [illegible] within the community are encouraged.
Come to the Collegian office [illegible] 9 a.m.–5 p.m. or 113 Campus Center Basement.
All inquiries should be directed to Laura Arena, Managing Editor.
Collegian

TOTAL FITNESS Without Waiting In Line!
NORDIC TRACK Upper and Lower Body
GRAVITRON Total Upper Body Training in 4 minutes
CROSSROBIC Strength & cardio combined
STAIRMASTER 4400 Advanced Ergonomic Design
VR BIKE The ultimate merging of computer & exercise technology
LIFESTRIDES Shock Absorbing Decks
PRECOR EFX 544 Combines cycling, walking and cross country skiing
BEST AEROBICS! BEST MACHINES! BEST PRICES!
"Big Enough To Own The Best Equipment But Small Enough To Know Your Name"
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0000 460 West St., Amherst

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Paid officials Needed for Basketball, Ice Hockey & Wrestling
Basketball #1 - Jan. 28 @ 6pm (Boyden 249)
Basketball #2 - Jan. 29, 30 @ 7pm (Totman Gym)
(you must attend both clinics)
Ice Hockey - Feb. 2 @ 6pm (Boyden 223)
Wrestling - Feb. 9 @ 6pm (Boyden 223)
Still time to enter: Basketball & Ice Hockey
More Info: 215 Boyden, 5-2693
On the Web: http://www.umass.edu/umim/

VOTE YES FEB. 3rd
A VIABLE DOWNTOWN MAKES A BETTER AMHERST
YES TO PARKING COMPROMISE!
Polls open 2pm - 8pm
Students Vote In Hamden Dining Hall
Political Advertisement paid for by Larry Kelley, West St. Amherst

Alfredo's
PHOTOGRAPHIC GALLERY
The Trend is Toward Photography
Put Some Life and Atmosphere Into Your Room or Office
A WIDE SELECTION OF POSTERS
CUSTOM FRAMING GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE
FINE ART PHOTOGRAPHY
SPORTS PHOTOGRAPHS AND POSTERS
SPECIAL ASSIGNMENT PHOTOGRAPHY
39 South Pleasant Street
Amherst, Mass.
413-253-1707

Chapel facelift begins with tower reconstruction

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Staff

The preparation is done, the area around the Old Chapel has been paved and fenced, and the restoration of the Old Chapel is now ready to begin.

However, project managers are waiting for private contractors to bid for the job.

The restoration of the chapel has been broken down into two stages, said James Cahill, University of Massachusetts Director of Facilities Planning.

According to Cahill the first stage is complete.

First the site had to be prepared for the disassembling of the chapel, and now the actual disassembling and reassembling of the chapel can proceed.

Project Manager Richard Nathhorst said one contractor was used for paving the area in front of the Goodell Building, and another contractor was used to put up the fence.

The pavement in front of Goodell is needed to support the weight of the stones which will be placed on the pavement when they are brought down, according to a University press release. Once on the pavement, the stones will be numbered and identified. They are so heavy that the pavement is needed for the forklift which will move the stones. After the reconstruction the grass will be restored.

Nathhorst said that the work done to prepare the site cost about $50,000.

Now he is waiting for the bids for the actual restoration contract to come in.

"You advertise it, and award it to the lowest qualified bidder," Nathhorst said about the bidding process.

Cahill said that he expected the winning bid to be about $1 million.

Besides waiting for the bids, Nathhorst explained the preparation was a long process because measured drawings and plans had to be made. The original plans from the 1884– 1886 construction do not exist anymore, he said.

According to Cahill, during the original construction the University ran out of money, and were forced to stop construction until enough money was earned to continue.

Once the construction begins, the stones will be taken down "course by course," Nathhorst said.

He estimates that 10,000 stones will be taken from the chapel.

Cahill said that the stones will be taken down to the point that the original construction stopped.

Once the stones are down, they will be put back into place with steel tabs and a reinforced steel frame, as well as a concrete skin on the inside.

Nathhorst said that the chapel is "unstable" right now, because of the harsh New England weather and its effect on the mortar that was used during the original construction. Because it was not reinforced, gaps of 6–8 inches have grown between the stones and the brick wall on the inside, causing the instability.

The alternative to the restoration of the chapel is to tear it down.

"That is unacceptable to everyone," Nathhorst said.

"We want to finish the project by December of '98," Cahill said.

This date is tentative because of all the preparation work, but Cahill said project bids will be in on Feb.18. A contract will be awarded by mid March, and work may begin on April 1.

Reconstruction is expected to take about nine months once the stones are all down.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

A view of the Old Chapel and the paved area which will be used in the reconstruction of the clock tower.

■ evaluation

continued from page1

questions on the evaluation form, Court said.

The evaluations would be posted on a Web site, which could be accessed with an identification number and Personal Identification Number (PIN). In addition, they might also be put into a booklet available in the University library, Court said.

According to Court, Board Chairman James F. Carlin is in support of the proposal.

Carlin was out of town and unavailable for comment.

Mike Bastedo, Policy Analyst for the Board of Higher Education, said the Board had no comment because it is a collective bargaining issue.

"We realized as a group that we didn't have enough information and needed more discussion. I want to make sure we understand everyone's position," Board member Howard Jacobson said.

The proposal would make the evaluations standard and public throughout the 29 public campuses in Massachusetts.

"Some private schools already do it and some public universities do it on just the campus level but this proposal would make the evaluations system wide, meaning all state and community colleges and the UMass campuses," Court said.

Successful implementation in Florida universities

The proposal is modeled after the professor evaluation program in Florida public universities.

Professor evaluations were standardized and made public in there in the spring of 1996, said Jim Parry, Executive Assistant Vice Chancellor of Academic Affairs at Florida State University.

Parry said there is a "lively debate" that started in the '60s that still goes on concerning making the evaluations public.

"The first six months [after the evaluations became public] it's a big deal. People are saying 'Wow! Look at this!' but after a year or so it becomes institutionalized and people aren't as excited about it," Parry said.

Florida's professor evaluation forms contain a required eight questions. The responses to these questions are made public. In addition the Institution is allowed to supplement their eight questions with other questions. However, responses to these additional questions are kept confidential, Parry said.

Parry commented on the overall attitude of faculty toward the public evaluation.

"Since we told them they could supplement the form it has not been that big of a deal. Some people have criticized it saying it is not proper for evaluations to be in the public domain but I'm not aware of anything really brewing in opposition," he said.

According to Parry, each school has to make the evaluations "easily accessible to the public." Some schools make them available on a Web site, others have them in print in the library.

Parry said he has not studied trends in grading to know if the public evaluations have changed professor's teaching.

"I'm not aware it has happened but I'm sure some professors 'cook' the grades or play to students to get better evaluations but public or not, evaluations have always affected faculty members jobs so being made public wouldn't change that," Parry said.

Court did not feel the opposition's concerns about grade inflation and privacy were an issue.

"We're doing this to help the students — not to go after the teachers" Court said.

The board postponed voting on the proposal until March.

Court presented the proposal to the board was on behalf of the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA), a ~~student~~-led committee that advises the Student Government Association (SGA), and the Student Advisory Group (SAG), an advisory body of public college student government representatives.

12 Taps of Fresh Ales & Lagers
WELCOME BACK TO WHERE THERE IS ALWAYS SOMETHING BREWING IN AMHERST...
Daily & Seafood Specials
Free Live Entertainment Thursday, Friday, & Saturday
Serving Lunch, Dinner & Late Night Menu till Midnight
Fully Stocked Bar
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
36 North Pleasant St, Downtown Amherst, 253-4400
We Accept All Major Credit Cards

GREAT PLACE WITH GREAT PRICES
Mike's Welcomes Back Its Students
WITH OUR 16 OZ. BIG ONE
This Week's Beer of the Week Is ROLLING ROCK
and our Surprise Cocktail of the Week
MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE

Coupon required at time of order.
Your Art!
Thats Right!
Screen Printed T-Shirts On 100% Cotton!
COOL DESIGN HERE
Only $5.60
Many Colors to Choose From!
PRINTSHACK APPAREL UNLIMITED
322 Russell Street • Hadley Mass.
Call Today 586-6933
Coupon required at time of order.

OCMP
THE OFF CAMPUS MEAL PLAN
BRUEGGERS Fresh Bagels BAGEL BAKERY
DELANO'S
d'angelo sandwiches
THE BLACK SHEEP Deli & Bakery
Charlies tavern
The Ground Round
Amber Vodka
PASTA Y BASTA
Applebee's Neighborhood Grill & Bar America's favorite neighbor
ANTONIO'S É SEMPRE BUONA
SUBWAY
Bueno Y Sano
Friendly's
Newman Center Cafeteria
TOC
Amherst DELIVERS Deli
Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
PANDA EAST
SUPERIOR PIZZERIA
the hatch
WALKER'S GRILL
BANANARAMA Yogurt
VARIETY IS THE SPICE OF LIFE.
Supplemental Plans Available for those On Campus
FOR MORE INFO: 1-888-211-6267

ARTS & LIVING

Year ends with few duds, several Oscar contenders

By Bryan McAllister
Collegian Staff

An "unsinkable" ship, a British secret agent, a mailman, a fake war and a cell phone all had something in common this winter.

Yes, it's an unlikely grouping, but each of the above managed to take on a prominent role in Hollywood's end–of– the–year movie race. Second only to the summer in terms of box office competition, the winter also typically offers smaller films fighting for Oscar nominations. In fact, usually it's the smaller pictures which become gems and the bigger films that fall hard.

But quote such wisdom to the producers of Titanic. While the ship suffered a tragic fate, Titanic managed to avoid any icebergs at the box office and sailed right to the top. By combining stunning special effects with climactic emotion, James Cameron's epic left little doubt that it was the best picture of the winter season and one of the best films of 1997.

Of course there were other small gems, too, such as Matt Damon's star–making turn as a troubled genius in Good Will Hunting, a film which will deservedly score big come Oscar time. Also worthy of attention was the comedic combination of Jack Nicholson and Helen Hunt in the Golden Globe (Best Comedy) winning As Good As It Gets and the fiery duo of the Boxer's Daniel Day–Lewis and Emily Watson. Good acting on the parts of Dustin Hoffman and Robert DeNiro helped make Wag the Dog the most clever comedy of 1997.

If there was a connecting theme this winter, it was history. Steven Spielberg's Amistad gave a moving, powerful treatment of the true of a slave mutiny; Martin Scorsese poetically explored the life of the Dalai Lama in Kundun.

Hollywood also finally discovered that nothing is completely original anymore. Therefore, the obvious choice is to resurrect our past. Quentin Tarantino brought back '70s blaxploitation queen Pam Grier in his old–fashioned mediocre crime caper, Jackie Brown. James Bond returned in Tomorrow Never Dies. And the horror genre was once again turned upside–down in the witty Scream 2.

The following is a survey of those aforementioned movies, and a few more, from the best to the worst. But in sum, it was a good winter, plagued only by werewolves,' a guy named Mr. Magoo and Kevin Costner.

TITANIC
Directed by James Cameron with Leonardo DiCaprio, Kate Winslet, Billy Zane

Sometimes "event movies" actually live up to their name. But in early 1997, both The Lost World and Batman and Robin disappointed audiences with their meager plots and heavy reliance on spectacle.

But when done correctly, the spectacle has a chance of working. And there is no example of a spectacle better done than James Cameron's $200 million Titanic.

A throwback to the epic film making of the '40s and '50s, Titanic not only sunk the competition and set a box office record, it also took home the Golden Globe award for best dramatic motion picture. No other movie this year produced the wonder, awe and heart–break on such a grand scale.

Titanic has a layered texture that was significantly helped by some of the most astounding special effects ever to grace the screen. An almost true–to–life replica of the ship was built for the movie and the underwater scenes in the movie's prologue are indeed footage of the real Titanic. Perfectionist Cameron (Aliens, Terminator 2) even went so far as to request that the ship's chilled passengers be given digitally– created icy breath. Such demands made for a plagued shooting schedule, an inflated budget and delayed release date. Somehow though, the film managed to steer clear of the metaphorical iceberg and reach audiences with every dime visible on screen — a master achievement from a master craftsman.

Much help was provided from the chemistry of Leonardo DiCaprio and a stunning Kate Winslet. This kind of ill–fated love story has been told many times before, and told better, but never in a more powerful a venue than the sinking ship. Titanic, which often sports stilted dialogue and cardboard characterizations, is by no means a perfect film. But its little touches and grande escapades keep it floating. Halfway through the film, Jack (DiCaprio) and Rose (Winslet) share a majestic kiss at sunset, and it's fittingly the last time the Titanic will ever sail in daylight. This scene, and others around, inside and throughout the boat, capture the excitement and innocent that Jack and Rose feel.

Titanic is kept together by a back story involving a 101–year–old Rose and the quest for a precious blue diamond. The cuts between the two stories are completely seamless, put together in the greatest of detail. Meanwhile, Cameron has a sheer delight in

Turn to FILMS page A3

Spice Girls cross the pond to promote Spice World

MARTY KEANE / COLLEGIAN

The Spice Girls hit Chicago to promote their new flick, Spice World. The film opened last Friday.

Making the most out of a gimmick

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Why the Spice Girls are such a hit owes more to marketing genius than talent. And as with any fad (and surely, no one expects to hear about the Spice Girls in another year or so), it is necessary to deluge consumers not only with an image but also with a variety of paraphernalia that will rapidly open wallets and fill the coffers. Not surprisingly, the Spice Girls' feature film debut, Spice World, is being promoted endlessly in the hopes of adding to the already dubious "Spicemania."

Having an aspirations for the movies is not new news in the music industry; both Madonna and Whitney Houston did it with varying degrees of success, and rapper Vanilla Ice thunked painfully at the box office. But when you're hot, lessons about the audience's fickle attention can fall by the wayside.

Spiceworld, based on a concept by The Spice Girls and writer Kim Fuller, makes fun of the stereotypical stuffy British films, a sort of A Hard Day's Night mixed in with This Is Spinal Tap, plus the adventure of Speed. According to the press release for the film: As for any kind of plot, Fuller claims that the script is a sense of the Girls "in

Turn to SPICEMANIA page A2

Perfecting the art of scam with dash of Spice, pinch of plastic

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

CHICAGO — Created out of an almost identical mold that gave us such blink–and–you–missed–it pop culture phenomena as the New Kids on the Block and the Monkees, England's Spice Girls clearly know their fame clock (15 minutes and counting) could ring at any time, sending their Girl Power! t–shirts into the clearance bin at J.C. Penny's.

If my scientifically–calculated estimates are correct, they've got about 3 minutes, 24 seconds left. At that rate, their planned summer concert tour should be playing to crowds small enough to fit downstairs at Pearl Street. Wow, there's a thought. But hey, if Marilyn Manson can play there, so can... forget it — Scary's hair will incinerate under those stage lights.

In town to appear on "Oprah" and to promote their newly released feature–length movie — Spice World — a flick done in an eerily similar vein as the Beatles parody A Hard Day's Night — the Spice Girls landed at the Planet Hollywood restaurant in a flurry of flashbulbs and a cacophony of screams from the (very young) crowd that Chicago police estimated at 9,000. Not bad considering the kids were back in school and the wind chill rated a not–so– balmy 28 degrees.

Arriving on the top of a double–deckered English–style red bus (just like the one used in the movie), Posh, Baby, Scary, Ginger and Sporty did little and said even less of any substance, but still managed to show that any true bona–fide phenomenon only needs a smile and a gimmick in order to appease a public eager to embrace them as "heroes" and "inspirations." Heck, the crowd spent an entire day standing around just for the chance to gawk at this brilliantly orchestrated public relations charade.

The proof of their Girl Power lies in that many in the icy throng waited several hours for a passing glimpse of their idols, some lining up as early as 4:30 a.m. in bone–chilling temperatures. Even the crusty and old–fashioned Chicago media became engulfed in a tabloid frenzy that would do the English tabs proud. One outlet even went so far as to report a supposed "lesbian encounter" between two of the spice cadets while at O'Hare Airport.

Pulling up in their "Spice Bus" right on time (30 minutes later than the 5 p.m. start mentioned in the press release), the spicy fivesome greeted the gathering on a small makeshift stage set up on the sidewalk. After whooping it up with a couple of stereotypical lame local DJ's (think of a second–generation cross between Opie & Anthony and Howard Stern) and engaging in some inane banter with the adoring masses, the Girls did the sensible thing and got the hell out of the cold by running inside. Elapsed time: four minutes, 50 seconds.

After eating dinner with a lucky contest winner, the Spice Girls made another brief appearance for the real

MARTY KEANE / COLLEGIAN

Ginger Spice

MARTY KEANE / COLLEGIAN

Scary Spice

purpose of this visit (besides of course the free publicity and overrated food). Geri and Mel B. presented the celebrity–themed eatery with a pair of those outrageously high–heeled shoes each of the girls wear. A random observation: after meeting them in person, I think they should all be renamed Shorty Spice as they are all only about 5'1.

What was learned from all this pomp and circumstance? I can't really say for sure except to note that an "event" such as this (which received coverage on "Entertainment Tonight" and "Access Hollywood") really was little more than a glorified photo opportunity, the results of which can be seen above.

Will Spice World be a hit at the box office? Nobody but the pre–pubescent youth of America know for sure.

Turn to SPICE, page A5

Music, dance, theater and more at FAC

By Emily Trask
Collegian Staff

Kicking off another exciting season, the University of Massachusetts Fine Arts Center's spring schedule is filled with a variety of visual arts, music, theater, poetry, film, and dance events. Through the combined efforts of the Off Center Series, the New WORLD Theater, the Center Series and the Asian Music and Dance Program, the Fine Arts Center schedule promises to be entertaining as well as enlightening.

The season begins with the acclaimed Saint Louis Symphony under the new direction of Hans Vonk. Guest violinist Hilary Hahn will perform Prokofiev's Violin Concerto. The orchestra will also be performing Harbison's Symphony No. 1 and Brahm's Symphony No.1. The Saint Louis Symphony will be performing on Saturday, Feb. 7 at 8 p.m., in the Concert Hall.

Fires in the Mirror is a compelling account of the Crown Heights incident in 1991. Written by Anna Deavere Smith, the play chronicles a conflict between African–Americans and Hasidic Jews sparked by an accident. This account of the incident is told through thought–provoking monologues by real–life characters from a Jewish house–wife to the Reverend Al Sharpton, performed respectively by Barbara Meek and Becky London. Fires in the Mirror will be performed at Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. through Feb. 10– 11.

Voices in the Rain, a series of dances, songs, and monologues which vocalize the stories of African–American men in prison today, will be performed by the author of the piece, Michael Keck. The performance is an attempt to display the many facets of the story of incarcerated African– American men. Keck explores the poet–rapper, prison–inmate and small–town hustler through this one–man show. Keck asks the question "are criminals born, made, and unmade?" through his presentations of the cases, the evidence, and the witnesses. The audience is asked to provide the verdict. This performance will be on Feb. 20 at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Combining elements of theater and dance, Tap Dogs, the new tap dance show from Australia, will be performing in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall from March 24–25 at 8 p.m. This unique experience composed of six male dancers in Blundstone's — Tasmanian–made work boots — and jeans combines intricate rhythms and a steel and wood set to produce a spectacular show.

On April 7, the New York City Opera National Company will present Donizetti's The Daughter of the Regiment. The New York Times has called it "a masterpiece full of wonderful melodies and joie de vivre. It's a grand evening of fun." This performance will be held in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 8 p.m.

Also in April, check out Global Divas, a showcase of

Turn to FAC, page A2

~ INSIDE THIS ISSUE ~

- Stephen King Book Review 12
- Upcoming Concerts 14
- Soap Chat 15
- Music News 16
- Trax 17
- Calendar of Events 18
- Megadeth Concert Review 19
- Album Reviews 19
- New Year's NYC Style 20

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

They may be empty now, but come the opening of the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall for the spring, these seats will be filled.

~ ART GALLERIES ~

Amherst College — Mead Art Museum. Closed for display The Bold Art of Two in the Century (through July 19). Hours: Mon.–Fri. 10 a.m.–4:30 p.m., Sat–Sun 1–5p.m. Call the Museum at 542–2335.

Jones Library — The Burnett Gallery. Upcoming exhibitions: A Voyage of Connections (runs Feb. 2). Public is invited to the opening reception on Feb. 7 from 6:30–8:30 p.m. Hours: Monday–Wednesday, Friday & Saturday 9 a.m.–5:30 p.m., Thursdays 9 a.m.–9:30 p.m.

Hampshire College — Main Gallery. Harold F. Johnson Library. Hours: Mon.–Fri. 8:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m., weekends noon–4:30 p.m.

Mount Holyoke College — Art Museum. Current exhibitions: Shouts from the Wall. Posters and Photographs Brought Back from the Spanish Civil War by Americans Volunteers (through March 15), Modern Painting and Sculpture from the Collection (through April 19). Hours: Tues.–Fri. 11 a.m.–5 p.m., Sat.–Sun. 1–5 p.m. Call 538–2245 for more information.

Smith College — Print Room, Museum of Art. Hours: Tues.–Fri. & Sat., 9:30 a.m.– 4 p.m.; Wed.–Sun., noon–4 p.m.; Thurs. noon–8 p.m. Call 585–2770 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Augusta Savage Gallery, New Africa House. Hours: Mon.–Tues. 1–7 p.m., Wed.–Fri. 1–5 p.m. Call 545–5177 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Hampden Gallery, Southwest Residential Area. Upcoming exhibitions: Green Tara Shrine Room, the first step of an installation which will be a visualization of Tantricism's journey from India to Tibet. Programs and workshops are scheduled for various dates in February. A closing reception will be held Feb. 20 from 5–7 p.m. Hours: Mon.–Fri. 5–7 p.m., Sun. 2–5 p.m. Call 545–0680 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Herter Art Gallery, Herter Annex. Hours: Mon.–Fri. 11 a.m.– 4 p.m. Call 545–0976 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space, Student Union Building. Hours: Mon.–Thurs. 10 a.m.–5 p.m., Fri 10 a.m.–3 p.m. For more information, call 545–0792.

University of Massachusetts — University Gallery Fine Arts Center. Hours: Tues.–Fri. 11 a.m.–4:30 p.m. Sat–Sun. 2–5 p.m. Call 545–3670 for more information.

The University of Massachusetts — Wheeler Gallery, Central Residential Area. Upcoming exhibitions: The Secret of Place — Honoré Culture, Natalie Loomis (Feb. 19). Opening reception will be held Feb. 19 from 5–7 p.m. Hours: Mon.–Thurs. 4–8 p.m., Sun. 2–5 p.m. Call 545–0680 for more information.

— Compiled by Seema Gangatirkar

■ Spicemania

continued from page A1

the eye of the media storm with a bit of art imitating life, and the other way around."

Fuller's description of the movie begs for more description, but none is really available except that the film is a parody of sorts. But sorry, folks, as Fox television says, if you want to know, you have to watch.

It's hard to imagine many will want to hit the theaters and dish out $7 to check out Emma Buntion (Baby), Geri Halliwell (Ginger), Melanie Brown (Scary), Melanie Chisholm (Sporty) and Victoria Adams (Posh) in what appears to be a two-hour long music video.

There are no less than 16 songs performed by the Spice Girls in this movie, leaving very little room for a story of any substance. The Spice Girls say they write very well together as a group — so well that they were able to write five songs in two weeks. As for quality of those songs, let the listener judge for himself.

As for the film, it faces serious competition from a strong winter season; Titanic, As Good As It Gets, Good Will Hunting, Wag the Dog and others may hurt Spiceworld's chances even before the critics have their say.

But as a marketing gimmick and an image builder, what is more powerful than the media? The Spice Girls have already worked their way through music and the press, leaving film the only genre left to conquer.

Will the movie "Spice Up Your Life?" Who knows, but for five enterprising ladies with their eyes on the buck, it's more than art; it's a finely calculated campaign to make the most of their fame before time runs out.

COURTESY MGM/UA

Maybe hip and not at all stylish, the Spice Girls (from left), Baby, Scary, Ginger, Posh and Sporty look to make a killing at the box office with Spice World.

King returns with a pleaser

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

THE DARK TOWER IV: WIZARD AND GLASS
Stephen King
Plume (A Penguin Publishing Group)

Finally, King has ended what could be the longest cliffhanger of all time and published the next volume in his Dark Tower Series. The previous volume, The Waste Lands, published in 1991, left our heroes Roland, Eddie, Susannah, Jake and Oy about to meet their doom riding the deranged computer-train, Blaine the Mono.

King began work on the series, which was inspired by the Robert Browning Poem Childe Roland to the Dark Tower Came, over 25 years ago. The series, a dark fantasy richly based in metaphor and allegory has been a departure from the work he is best known for.

The protagonist, Roland of Gilead, is a gunslinger on a quest to find the dark tower. The epic began in mid-world, a macabre world similar to our own, but has taken Roland to many different realities including strange versions of our own world. Wizard and Glass is no different, combing intense sensuous prose with an intricate plot and continuously developing characters.

The first part of the book concludes the suspense that was begun in The Waste Lands. This takes the reader through the fascinating process in which the heroes challenge the train to a ridding contest, with the prize being their lives.

Readers who expect the rest of the book to be as fast paced will be disappointed. A large part of the book is a sort of digression. Roland tells his companions about events that are buried deep within his past.

This digression could more accurately be described as a book within a book. The reader learns of the circumstances surrounding Roland's first love, the beginning of his obsession with the dark tower. King avoids the cliche of the dangerous first love by combining aspects of mysticism and the traditional. Roland's story functions as a tragedy: the reader is aware when it begins that it will not end happily.

Not until the very end of the book do we rejoin the story in the present tense. The book could have used some editing. King provides more details than is necessary to understand or enjoy the plot. On the whole, the work is one of King's better efforts in recent years and should more than satisfy fans of the Dark Tower.

Along with the recent serial project The Green Mile, the book seems to indicate a creative rebirth after such stale novels as Insomnia. The book also demonstrates that at his best, King should be recognized as a good writer and not simply a popular one. Anyone needing convincing of King's literary validity should check out this series, as well as his several collections of short stories (Different Seasons, Four Past Midnight) a genre at which he excels. B+

■ FAC

continued from page A1

the finest female talent from around the world. Some of the performances include the Stella Chiweshe Trio from Zimbabwe, the Susana Baca Quartet from Peru and the Tish Hinojosa Trio from Austin, Texas. Global Divas will be performing on Thursday, April 2 in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m.

The musical Damn Yankees joins together the American pastimes of baseball and theater to create a memorable theatrical experience. Featuring the musical classics, "You Gotta Have Heart," "What ever Lola Wants" and "Who's Got the Pain," this musical is loaded with fun for everyone. Damn Yankees will be performed in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 7 p.m. on May 3.

For more information on the Spring 1998 season contact the Fine Arts Center Box Office at (413) 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

Violinist Hilary Hahn will perform with the Saint Louis Symphony Feb. 7 at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall.

Horoscopes
Weather
Arts
Swell Ads
News
Letters
Sports
Classifieds
Editorials
Comics

Walt Disney started a media dynasty, but he never read the Daily Collegian. Now he's frozen... don't make the same mistake! Get your free copy every weekday.

VOTE YES FEB. 3rd
A VIABLE DOWNTOWN MAKES A BETTER AMHERST
YES TO PARKING COMPROMISE!
Polls open 2pm - 8pm
Students Vote in Hamden Dining Hall
Political Advertisement paid for by Larry Kelley, West St, Amherst

Write for Arts and the world will be your Spicerack
Icy Spice?

UMass Best! 1997
YOUR NEW ROCK ALTERNAT
FOR YOUR MUSICA
EDUCATION

SUGARLOAF ESTATES
SUNDERLAND, MA 01375
We Make the Grade!
A+ Luxury 1 & 2 Bedroom Apartments
A+ Free Heat & Hot Water
A+ New State of the Art Kitchens
A+ Washers + Dryers Available
A+ In-ground Pool, Barbeque Areas & Sand Volleyball Court
A+ Free Bus to 5 College Area
ALPINE COMMONS
133 Belchertown Road
Rte 9, Amherst, MA 01002
(413)-256-0741
Newly remodeled 4 bedroom apartments · All utilities included · Sliding glass doors onto private balcony · On PVTA Busline · 2 miles from Campus

Growroom techno breaks trance house jungle trip-hop
RECORDS BOARDS
CLOTHING
snowboards (starting at $199 w/o bindings), skateboards, accessories, etc...
Growroom 255 N. Pleasant St. 42 2nd Floor in the Carriage Shops Amherst, Ma 01002 www.growroomrecords.com

■ films

continued from page A1

showing the ship from a every angle. In addition, a lush music score by James Horner (Braveheart) and dazzling blue and white hued photography give the film both a sense of adventure and one of tragedy.

The writer-director has almost as much fun showing the ship's passengers. In a wonderfully timed scene, the wealthy take part in a political debate while Jack and Rose go to a party thrown by the second-class, below-deck dwellers. Class conflict is constantly pounded into the viewers, especially in the movie's tragic finale.

Which brings us to the last act. Cameron intelligently chose to edit the sinking sequence in almost real time, taking a full hour to show the disaster. The choice more than pays off. Ultimately, Titanic becomes a metaphor for our own cultural chance and fascination with technology. And in its last hour — as Cameron shows us the best and worst of human nature — Hollywood has never been better. A

GOOD WILL HUNTING
Directed by Gus Van Sant with Matt Damon, Robin Williams, Ben Affleck

The story behind the making of Good Will Hunting is almost as good as the movie itself. It started back while Matt Damon was attending Harvard and he wrote a short story that roused a professor's interest. Damon soon quit Harvard to try his hand in Hollywood, but he didn't forget his story. With the help of friend and fellow Cambridge- native, Ben Affleck, Damon spent five years working on the screenplay that becomes this sometime-heavy-sometimes- funny, but always a touching drama about a confused genius. A little help from Robin Williams doesn't hurt either.

When we first meet Will Hunting, he is beating up old elementary school enemies for no reason, working as a janitor and asking girls to eat caramels with him. Why caramels? "Caramels are just as arbitrary as having coffee," Will explains. And that's exactly how Will's life is at that point — arbitrary. He has no motivation, lives in his own world and anything more scares him.

It's Will's troubled past and chaotic home life which have made him this way, but Good Will Hunting makes the inspiring suggestion that help from the right people can change anyone. Will gets help from three people in particular — a therapist, a girlfriend and a best friend. Late in the film, the best friend (Affleck) tells Will he doesn't want to see him living in Boston all his life because it would insult Will's talents. The best friend calls Will's intelligence "a winning lottery ticket," but Good Will Hunting also makes the correct proposal that the winning ticket is in Will's heart.

It's just a matter of healing and that's when some superb acting takes over. Williams has his best role in years as an equally troubled therapist. Damon's performance is nearly flawless. The love story between Damon and Minnie Driver is significantly enhanced by the fact that the two became romantically involved in real life while shooting the film. And the supporting characters, especially Will's friends, are worth a movie on their own.

It's the screenplay though, which sets Good Will Hunting above the competition. There is not a single scene that doesn't work within the context of the film. The film is occasionally as biting and funny as Chasing Amy and as moving as Rain Man. More over, it contains many messages. Robin Williams asks Will late in the film, "What do you want?" Will doesn't know at the time. He's still living the arbitrary life. He ends his relationship and turns down job offers. In the end, however, Will knows exactly what he wants. Intelligence and therapeutic healing aside, nothing or no one can save Will but himself. It's just a matter of playing another hand — or in Will's case, a first hand — in the poker-like game of life. A

COURTESY RALPH NELSON

Jack Nicholson and Helen Hunt star in the quirky comedy, As Good As It Gets.

WAG THE DOG
Directed by Barry Levinson with Dustin Hoffman, Robert DeNiro, Anne Hecht

What's the difference between a Washington spin-doctor and a Hollywood producer? Very, very little presumes Wag the Dog, the biting new satire from Barry Levinson. Dustin Hoffman plays the producer, and late in the movie, he arrives at the White House to do some business with the President. Walking triumphantly around the oval office, Hoffman taps on the hard wood of the President's desk and later says, "I could do this." Indeed, he could. Because when you think about it, a presidential election and a major motion picture are, these days, all about marketing. It's all one big campaign or "a pageant," as De Niro says.

